Commence with 30 ch, 1 d c into sixth ch. from hook, 5 ch, miss 4 ch, 1 tr into each of next 4 stitches, 5 ch, miss 4 ch, 1 d c into next ch, 2 ch, miss 1 ch, 1 d c into next, 6 ch, miss 5 ch, 1 d c into next, 3 ch, turn. Second Row.—13 tr into loop of 6 ch, 2 ch, miss loop of 2 ch in previous row, 4 tr into next loop, 2 ch, 4 tr into next loop, 5 ch, 1 d c into next loop, 5 ch, turn. Third Row.—1 d c into first loop, 5 ch, 4 tr into loop between group of tr, 5 ch, 1 d c into next loop, 5 ch, 1 tr on first of 13 tr, * 1 ch, miss 1 tr, 1 tr into next, repeat from * 5 times, making 7 tr altogether over scallop, 5 ch, turn. Fourth Row.—1 d c into every loop, 5 ch between, 5 ch, turn. Fifth Row.—1 d c into first loop, 5 ch, 4 tr into next loop, 5 ch, 1 d c into next loop, 2 ch, 1 d c into next, 6 ch, 1 d c into next, 2 ch, turn, and repeat from commencement of second row, until there are 43 scallops. Join into a circle and work round the inside of the strip to draw it into shape.

First Row.—Work 3 tr into every loop of ch along inside of strip, 1 ch between groups, 1 ch, slip-stitch to top of first tr to join up row. Second Row.—3 ch, 1 tr into first loop of ch between groups, 5 ch, 1 tr into top of tr just made, * 2 ch, cotton twice over hook, insert hook into next space between groups, draw cotton through, cotton over and draw through 2 loops, cotton over hook, insert into next space between groups, draw through, cotton over and work off by twos all the remaining stitches on hook, 3 ch, 1 tr into junction of stitch just made, and repeat from * all round, joining with 2 ch and a slip-stitch into third ch of loop of 5 ch made at commencement of row. Third Row.—Slip-stitch to center of first loop, 5 ch, * 1 tr into next loop, 3 ch, repeat from * all round joining with 3 ch, and a slip-stitch into third ch of loop of 5 ch worked at commencement. Fourth Row.—Slip-stitch to center of first loop, 5 ch, * 1 tr into next loop, 2 ch, repeat from * all round, joining with 2 ch and slip-stitch into third ch of loop of 5 ch first made. Sew evenly to the damask center.

Variable.

Mary had a little waist,
Where nature made it grow,
And everywhere the fashion went
The waist was sure to go.
—New York Times.

SHIRT FOR 7-FOOT WAIST.

Costs 495 Pound Man $11 and Is Biggest Ever Made.

What is believed to be the biggest shirt ever made has been turned out by a factory at Parsons, Kan., for George W. Nicklor of Ames, Ia., who is the biggest man in that state and is said to possess the biggest waist of any man alive.

The shirt is cut with a waist which lacks one inch of being seven feet. The collar is twenty-three inches and the chest sixty-six inches, with a twenty-eight inch arm. The shirt is made of cheviot and will cost Nicklor $11.

Nicklor has turned down numerous vaudeville offers. He weighs 495 pounds and is five feet six inches tall.

NELSON ESTATE FOR PUBLIC.

Farm Left as Money and Trust to Buy Works of Art.

William R. Nelson, editor and owner of the Kansas City Star, left a farm of 1,750 acres in Jackson county, Mo., to be a model farm for thirty years for the purpose of instructing neighbors in stock raising and farming. On the death of both Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Kirkwood, the editor's daughter, the management of the property is to be placed in the hands of a board of trustees.

The trustees are required to set aside for each of the children of Mrs. Kirkwood, if any, property "of the reasonable value of $1,000,000." The residue is to be managed by "The William Rockhill Nelson Trust," to purchase works of arts which will contribute to the enjoyment of the public generally.

EATS NOVEL BREAKFAST.

Farmer Enjoys Two Ostrich Eggs Almost Every Morning.

Louis Sands of Spring Lake, Mich., enjoys the distinction of being the only man in the United States who sits down to two soft boiled ostrich eggs for breakfast every morning. Not every morning in the year, maybe, but every morning when the ostriches are laying well. An ostrich egg is about the size of a grapefruit and is pretty well stuffed with meat. Two of them make "some breakfast."

Mr. Sands owns a herd of ostriches.

Regarding Environment.

A study of sound educational principles shows that the greatest perils as well as the greatest opportunities present themselves largely during A B C age and that therefore a careful study must be made of all requirements when providing a child's environment.

Specialists point out that at the start every child is greatly handicapped. Therefore he should be so nourished that every part of him works with a minimum amount of friction. We must rid ourselves of the idea that the youngest child requires the teacher of the least ability and skill. This is a viciously harmful idea. If children are wisely directed in the beginning there will be less cause for complaint afterward, less cause for men like Herbert Spencer to condemn the method upon which the advancement of the community rests.

Seguin tells us that we must educate the study of the senses, train the faculty of speech, the art of receiving, storing and expressing impressions, which is the natural gift of infants, and then we shall not need books to fill up the emptiness of our teaching until the child is at least seven years old.

If the education of the senses is neglected all after education partakes of a haziness, an insufficiency, which it is impossible to cure. Here, then, is a chain of reasoning that mothers and teachers of the very young child cannot escape. Examine the Montessori plan or Hillyer's or any one of the methods based upon the fundamental principles advanced by Froebel, Seguin—indeed by educators that reach back to the beginning of all things—and you will find in every instance that the greatest reliance is placed upon the sense training accompanying these methods. These students of education grasped the underlying principles and then worked out their own methods for action.

Cruelty a Trying Fault.

One of the most trying faults to combat in nervous children is cruelty. Fortunately it is not a common one. The difficulties of its early eradication are made possible by the many examples that the child sees of what is apparently deliberate cruelty carried on by adults. He cannot see why it is not wrong to trap and kill mice, to kill fowl, to use worms as bait or to catch flies. He justifies his own acts by those of others. This is what makes the problem a particularly hard one to solve, and it requires the most patient handling to set the child right. Single acts of cruelty in the child need not be a cause for alarm, but persistency in such acts or their occurrence in later childhood should attract attention to both moral and physical needs.

Precious Manuscripts.

Considered one of the finest manuscripts in this country, the "Evangelistarium sive Lectiones ex Evangeliis," illuminated and of French-Carlovingian origin, may be seen in the New York Public library. The manuscript is of vellum and consists of 200 leaves. Its date is set in the neighborhood of 870 A. D. The late twelfth and thirteenth centuries are also represented, and among the works from the fourteenth century is the oldest extant complete manuscript of the Wycliffite version of the New Testament in English.—Argonaut.

EVENING GOWN.

This Creation Shows Draped Tunic and Surplice Waist.

SMART FROCK.

That the tunic has not been entirely replaced by the wide skirt is shown quite plainly in many beautiful creations this season. The gown pictured here is of apricot colored pussy willow taffeta, wonderfully draped over an accordion plaited skirt of chiffon to tone. The bodice is simplicity itself, it being a draped affair which ends at the right side under a corsage bouquet of morning glories and foliage.

Be Ever Ready.

There is scope for chance everywhere; let your hook be always ready. In the eddies where you least expect it there will be a fish.—Ovid.

Seventy-eight Years Young.

John Burroughs, who recently passed the seventy-eighth milestone, tramped a mile and a half on the occasion to see his grandchildren and in an interview made this statement: "I feel as chipper as twenty-five, and I put in a young man's day's work before I started out for my walk. I cleaned out my furnace, chopped a stack of cordwood, raked the yard and did all the chores. I live a very uneventful life, going much more to the woods than to the cities."

Making Flags of Cotton.

Flags used in the American navy have hitherto been made of imported wool. A new process of carding and weaving American cotton is being put to the test on two revenue cutters, and it is believed by the inventors that the cotton flags so made will be superior to the old ones in that they will not fray so quickly.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Children and Diet.

Small children who suffer from constipation should have fruits and fruit juices in the morning of every day. Let the child begin his breakfast with orange juice or stewed prunes. During the summer pineapple juice may be given instead of the orange juice. After he takes his fruit then give oatmeal and cream, bread and butter and milk to drink. During the day encourage him to drink water. Give him a glass of fresh water as soon as he wakes up in the morning. Restless and cross children become quiet and sweet tempered if they have plenty of water to drink. Infants and small children have feeble digestive organs. This is one reason why they require a great deal of water to drink. The water dissolves the food thoroughly and divides it, so it is easier of digestion. Water is also needed in large quantities for the rapid elimination of the waste of the body. In proportion to its weight an average infant during the first year of life requires a little more than six times as much water as an adult. During the time when the child is upon an entirely fluid diet the addition of water other than that supplied by the food is unnecessary, but when the number of feedings become less frequent and solid food is given in larger quantities water should be given freely between the feedings at all seasons, especially in the summer.

D/34

184TH REGT.

This Year's Celebration Exceeds in Interest Those of Other Years

June 29 will be the fiftieth anniversary of the day when "Johnny Came Marching Home," that is for the 184th Regiment, N. Y. Vols. The same date in this month will be as well the twenty-seventh annual reunion of the same regiment. These two events will be celebrated at the Oswego County Agricultural Fair grounds. An excellent program is being prepared, consisting of brief addresses and music.

It is especially desired by the officers of the association that all surviving comrades of the 184th be present at this fiftieth celebration of the muster-out of the regiment, and all other comrades have a cordial invitation to be present.

Robert Simpson, jr., is secretary of the association, and he requests that survivors of the regiment who cannot be present shall so notify him, at the same time enclosing 50 cents for one of the beautiful badges and an engraved picture of Harrison's Landing as it was when the regiment encamped there.

Dinner will be served at the fair grounds at noon, for which the women are requested to furnish cake or pie. John W. Distin is president of the association; Amos Youmans is treasurer, and the secretary, Robert Simpson, jr., may be reached by addressing R.F.D. 4, Fulton.

BATAVIA MAN GETS OSWEGO SEWER JOBS

A Batavia man has walked away with all contracts for Oswego's sewer work.

The five sewer contracts embrace over a mile and a half of sewers and the total cost is $22,529.80 divided as follows: East Bridge street, $10,782.07 Mercer street section, $4,922.27; Lynn street section, $2,359.26; West Utica street, $1,507.70; West Schuyler street $2,958.50.

PARIS CHURCHES BAN ABBREVIATED SKIRTS

Paris, June 4.—Notices have been posted in several Paris churches that communion will be refused to women wearing the new Spring fashions.

Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, has condemned the rage for short skirts and deep "V" shaped decollete corsages.

We Employ Good Mechanics

in our Plumbing and Tinning Departments.

Your Plumber
L. P. SMITH CO.

We are Agents for
CHASE & SANBORN'S
Fine Teas and Coffees
LA PORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida St. Hello 75

FITTED ON 30 DAYS APPROVAL BY
ROBERTS & WOOD

New York.—The labor market in May, the City of New York Public Employment Bureau reports, showed substantial improvement in the number of orders for highly skilled help, compared with preceding month. Large industrial concerns in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut are now applying to the bureau.

The bureau has more than 25,000 persons registered for employment, representing practically every trade, profession or calling. Better co-operation by non-fee placement bureaus of Greater New York is noticeable.

Business is exceedingly good where activities are due to manufacture of munitions of war. The demand for building tradesmen and machinists has steadily increased. There has been a very slight improvement in the demand for culinary help, due mainly to increased activities at summer resorts.

The demand for help in the garment trades is quiet. A considerable number of store, mercantile and industrial female workers help are idle.

In May 278 employers' applications were received, calling for 358 persons (281 male and 77 female); 1,679 (1,266 male and 413 female) individuals were registered for employment; 709 persons were referred to positions and 287 positions were reported as filled.

BROWN & LOWE'S, LOWEST BID

Difference in One Instance Between High and Low Bid is $16,867

The State Highway Commission received bids yesterday in Albany for constructing two highways in Oswego county. Proposals were wanted on road No. 1287, 7.75 miles, Pulaski-Williamstown; and road No. 1288, between the same points, a distance of 5.12 miles.

In both instances the Brown & Lowe Co. of Schenectady appear as low builders.

Road No. 1287

Brown & Lowe Co.	$62,846.50
F. A. Biggi	63,989.00
P. H. Murray	64,621.00
Stanley Cons. Co.	65,642.00
Semper Brothers	65,835.35
Thos. Grady	66,006.50
McNerney Cons. Co.	66,591.50
Sullivan Cons. Co.	66,714.85
H. B. Sproul Cons. Co. Inc.	67,212.50
Fred E. Gross & Son	67,455.50
J. H. Weidman	68,090.50
Criswell & Mallory, Inc.	68,602.20
Ahrarn Cons. Co.	71,096.48
John A. Jova, Inc.	71,946.51
Brady-Oltarsch C. C., Inc.	72,008.88
Dana W. Robbins Co. Inc.	72,045.00
Conroy & Nixdorf	72,545.75
Richard Hopkins	73,767.50

Road No. 1288

Brown & Lowe Co.	$37,343.50
P. H. Murray	41,722.00
Thos. Grady	43,438.80
Spellman-Oliver Co.	43,985.00
H. B. Sproul Cons. Co. Inc	44,327.40
J. H. Weidman	44,420.30
Ross-Hallenbeck Cons. Co.	45,006.10
Stanley Cons. Co.	45,116.30
J. A. Culkin	45,265.40
Semper Brothers	45,875.00
Criswell & Mallory, Inc.	46,911.00
Weed & Walsh	46,940.80
Sullivan Cons. Co.	474,13,30
F. A. Biggi	47,434.25
Dana W. Robbins Co. Inc.	47,496.40
Chambers & Barnes	47,611.95
McNerey Cons. Co.	47,866.20
Thos. Hucknall & Co.	48,060.95
The Ahearn Cons. Cor.	48,555.54
Richard Hopkins	48,681.20
Fred E. Gross & Sons	49,182.25
Greece Cons. Co.	49,775.40
Fulton Eng. Co. Inc	50,433.29
John A. Jova, Inc.	50,554.41
Conroy & Nixdorf	54,210.30

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
The Romantic Melodrama
"THE THREE MUSKETEERS"
in
6 Parts and 160 Scenes,
AND OTHERS

SUNDAY
Two-Reel Keystone Comedy with FORD STERLING
"OUR DARE DEVIL CHIEF"
AND 6 OTHERS

The manufacturing industries of England, France and Germany are adjusting themselves with surprising ease and rapidity to war conditions, according to H. B. Schadd, of the Aeolian Company, who had just returned from abroad to New York, says Mr. Schaad:

"I had expected to find industry demoralized and factory organizations broken up. Instead I found every available workman employed, factories being pushed to full capacity and indications of unusual prosperity on the part of the workers.

"A layman cannot understand how a leather factory, for instance, can be converted into a plant for the manufacture of war munitions without great loss of efficiency. It is just as easy for that factory to turn out leather cartridge belts for soldiers as it is to turn out the ordinary leather belts sold everywhere by haberdashers.

"This is what has been happening in manufacturing plants all over Europe. This is particularly true of Germany, where a most exhaustive study of national resources had been made far in advance of the war.

"Vast numbers of workers of the highly skilled class are at the front, and accordingly there appears a shortage of such labor. Women are being employed as never before dreamed possible.

"Before the war great numbers of pianos and phonographs were imported into England from Germany. Now England is still buying such instruments, but they are all being produced in England by English labor.

"Industrial conditions in neutral countries such as Holland and Switzerland present a decidedly more difficult problem than in England, France.

JOHN BURROUGHS MAY ATTEND ALBANY HEARINGS

The Conservation Committee of the New York State Constitutional Convention announces two public hearings to be held in Albany, one on Wednesday, June 9, and one on Friday, June 11, beginning on each day immediately after the adjournment of the session of the Convention, which will probably be about 11 a.m.

The place of hearing may be learned by inquiry at the Committee Room No. 234, in the Capitol, on the day of the hearing. The public will be admitted as auditors, but the speakers will be limited by invitation.

The hearing on Wednesday will be devoted to the representatives of certain prominent civic organizations like the Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks, the Empire State Forest Products Association, the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, etc., and corporations and individuals practically engaged in business depending on natural resources

To the hearing on Friday have been invited John Burroughs, Gifford Pinchot, certain professional teachers of forestry connected with universities, and former and present forest and water officials.

These hearings are expected to be notable on account of the prominence of the speakers.

ARONECK'S LIABILITIES GREATLY EXCEED ASSETS

Utica, June 5.—Abram Aroneck, involuntary bankrupt clothing merchant of Fulton owes $7,073 and has assets of $425, accorrding to his schedules of debts and assets, filed today in Federal Court at Utica. Secured claims are put at $2,503 and unsecured at $4,548. The secured claims are secured largely by notes. The assets consists of stock valued at $400 and accounts at $25.

The Fulton creditors include Citizens National Bank, $365; Oswego County Telephone Co., $18; T. E. Marvin, $43; G. F. Emeny, $105; A. Alderman, $25, and M. Hafter. Among the creditors of Oswego are Second National Bank, $345; Harry Solow, $133, and A. F. McCarthy, $237. Syracuse creditors include S. Weirman, $500, and Samuel Weisman, $1,500.

BOSTON DOCTOR MAKES ANGRY WOMEN DOCTORS

Philadelphia, June 4.—When Dr. Richard C. Cabot, professor of medicine at Harvard, told the graduates of the Woman's Medical College today that women physicians should avoid taking up general practice and research work, and interest themselves in social service, he stirred up a hornet's nest.

Dr. Clara Marshall, dean of the college, declared Dr. Cabot's ideas were very narrow.

DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By FREDERIC T. CARDOZE

Albany, June 5. — Twenty-four amendments to the State Constitution have been endorsed by organized labor and many of the delegates have been requested to give careful attention to the propositions advocated. Organized labor is fully convinced that if the amendments it stands firmly for are made a part of the fundamental law of the State of New York a long step will have been taken for the protection of its residents.

The twenty-four amendments in question have been submitted in the form of a resolution and the most important of the proposed changes follow:

An amendment to Article One, Section 19, providing that nothing contained in the Constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws for the protection of the lives, health, safety, comfort or generral welfare of employes.

For power to enable the State to insure workers against accident, sickness, invalidity, old age and unemployment.

To provide a State fund to insure employers against risk of workmen's compensation, to the exclusion of every form of compensation insurance

That there shall be a department of labor and also a compensation commission, each to perform separate functions.

Empowering the State and its several political divisions to undertake suchp ublic worrks and engage in such industries as they deem necessary to the public welfare, for the purpose of relieving distress from unemployment or other extraordinary emergencies.

Stress is laid upon the importance of rigidly observing the eight hour law throughout the State both as regards contracts for labor and supplies.

Organized labor also voices its protests against the so-called "short ballot." In this respect it has adopted the following resolution.

Resolved, That inasmuch as the so-called short ballot is a proposition to vest greater powers in the hands of the chief executive of the Nation, States and Municipalities, it is in violation of the fundemental prinicpless of justice, democracy and freedom. The proposition should therefore not be endorsed but condemned and opposed, and itis hereby condemned.

The abolition of capital punishment is recommended by organized labor, yet on the other hand it advises against the abandonment of the annual sessions of the legislature in this State and against the extending of the terms of elective officers.

One year terms of State senators, is another recommendation which is made.

Organized labor is also in favor of abolishing the power of the courts to nullify laws regularly passed by the legislature or the voters of the State by means of referendum, on the ground of alleged unconstitutionality.

The extention of popular rule thru the medium of the initiative, referendum and recall is another amendment urged.

WATER FROM LINCOLN WELL AT LAUNCHING

Chicago, June 5.—Spring water from the homestead of Abraham Lincoln, instead of wine, was used at the christening of the first hydro-aeroplane registered under the new volunteer aviation service. Miss Mona Dunne, daughter of the Illinois Governor, broke the bottle as the craft dipped the water. Adjutant-General Frank S. Dickson, of the Illinois National Guard, formally accepted the craft, the gift of Stuart A. McDonald and A. M. Andrews.

The machine carries a new automatic aerogun.

SHERIFF FAILS TO GET CLUE

Sheriff W. L. Buck continues to wage war upon the thief or thives who assaulted and robbed Morris Pierce in Oswego Town Monday night. But the Sheriff has not yet seen as much as the clue of the whereabouts of a coat-tail of one of the men.

It is evidant that our very own Chief Dyer is needed on this latest job.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Cincinnati.
New York at Chicago.
Brooklyn at Pittsburgh.
Philadelphia at St. Louis.

Results Yesterday

St. Louis, 6; Cincinnati, 1.
Brooklyn, 8; Pittsburgh, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	23	16	.590
Philadelphia	21	18	.538
Brooklyn	21	19	.525
Boston	20	19	.513
St. Louis	21	22	.488
Pittsburgh	18	21	.462
Cincinnati	17	21	.447
New York	15	20	.429

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Chicago at Boston.
St. Louis at Philadelphia.
Detroit at New York.
Cleveland at Washington.

Results Yesterday

Detroit, 3; New York, 0.
Washington, 6; Cleveland, 1.
Philadelphia, 4; St. Louis, 3.
Chicago, 2; Boston, 0.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	28	17	.651
Detroit	27	17	.614
Boston	19	16	.543
New York	19	18	.514
Washington	17	19	.472
Cleveland	17	22	.436
St. Louis	17	24	.415
Philadelphia	14	27	.341

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Chicago.
Buffalo at Newark.
Baltimore at Brooklyn.
Pittsburgh at Kansas City.

Results Yesterday

Kansas City, 5; Pittsburgh, 3.
St. Louis, 8; Chicago, 3.
Brooklyn, 9; Buffalo, 3. 1st game.
Buffalo, 6; Brooklyn, 3; 2d game.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Pittsburgh	24	18	.571
Kansas City	24	18	.571
Newark	22	17	.564
St. Louis	20	17	.541
Chicago	23	20	.535
Brooklyn	21	20	.512
Baltimore	15	24	.385
Buffalo	14	29	.326

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Syracuse at Wilkesbarre.
Albany at Binghamton.
Troy at Elmira.
Utica at Scranton.

Results Yesterday

Wilkesbarre, 6; Syracuse, 3.
Utica, 3; Ccranton, 2.
Troy, 6; Elmira, 1.
Albany, 7; Binghamton, 6.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Troy	14	8	.636
Elmira	15	12	.556
Utica	13	11	.542
Binghamton	11	11	.500
Wilkesbarre	12	13	.480
Albany	11	13	.458
Scranton	10	12	.455
Syracuse	9	15	.375

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Montreal at Toronto.
Buffalo at Rochester.
Newark at Jersey City.
Providence at Richmond.

Results Yesterday

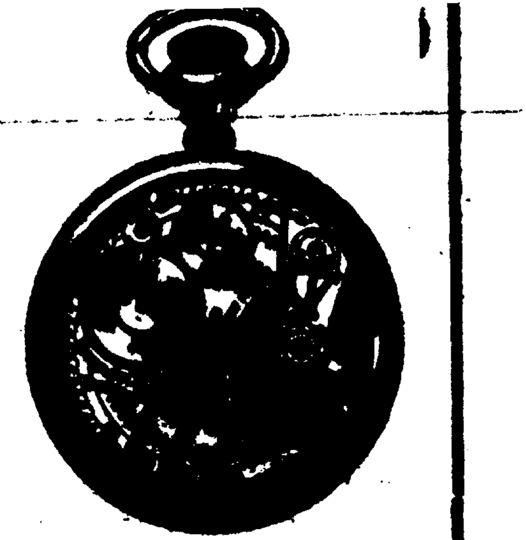
Providence, 3; Newark, 0.
Jersey City, 7; Richmond, 3; 1st.
Richmond, 9; Jersey City, 5; 2d.
Montreal-Toronto; postponed.
Rochester-Buffalo; postponed.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	16	9	.640
Richmond	18	13	.581
Montreal	17	15	.531
Rochester	15	14	.517
Providence	15	15	.500
Toronto	14	17	.453
Jersey City	12	18	.400
Newark	11	17	.393

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA



Have You Seen
THE LATEST STYLES
of
SOLID SILVERWARE
G. B. FARLEY
21 First Street
Can show you a full line. Just the kind for WEDDING GIFTS

Purchase or Exchange
17 N. Seventh St.—All modern and in fine condition at a special price. Good reason for selling.
311 W. Second Street—Just off Broadway. In good repair, now $1150.
Four Good Farms to exchange for City Property.
Whitaker & Bogardus, Inc.
REAL ESTATE INSURANCE
FULTON, N. Y.

All Kinds of
GARDEN SEEDS
by the ounce or pound at
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

FOR SALE
CASH GROCERY STORE
210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY
A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of 340 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

FRESH VEGETABLES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

THE CONCRETE RESULT OF 1000 OPINIONS

One thousand housewives' suggestions have made the MOSS SPECIAL A-B Gas Range Right.

The plans and ideas of this range have been gathered together from actual suggestions solicited from those who are practically and intensely interested in cooking and kitchen efficiency.

Year by year, these ideas have been sifted out—assorted, tested, and the result is that this range is exactly the range you would build for yourself, practical in every respect, and the one you should have in your kitchen.

Its special features are: Rust proof finish that cleanes like a china plate; sanitary in every detail of construction; elevated oven and broiler for convenience; non-rusting oven lining—no hidden dirt; automatic lighter which does away with matches; open stand for easy cleaning below range; white enamelled broiler pan and dirt trays, and white tile lined sanitary burner box and top.

Every one of the large number owned by Fulton housekeepers is giving the best of satisfaction, and with a gas water heater one would make your kitchen the room of the whole house of which you would be proud. Your Gas Company has one for you.—Adv.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

	R.	H.	E.
At Columbus—
Milwaukee	4	4	0
Columbus	0	5	5
At Indianapolis—
Minneapolis	5	12	1
Indianapolis	4	7	3
At Cleveland—
St. Paul	3	7	1
Cleveland	8	10	1
At Louisville—
Kansas City	4	11	3
Louisville	7	12	1

A PROPERTY SALE

M. Ernest Mead has bought the house and lot at 605 Ontario st. from Mrs. Rose Bishop of Pennellville. The sale was made through the Streeter & VanSanford agency.

For Sale, 1914 Twin Excelsior motorcycle with side-car; fully equipped; lights, Klaxon, speedometer, saddle-back, etc. Just overhauled, better than new. A bargain for quick sale. E. J. F., Trolley Sta. 142eod

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

For Sale—1 good sound work horse, weighs about 1300 pounds; has been working on muck land. Inquire G. L. Pratt, 177 S. 1st st. Phone 56. tf

Lost—West Side Book Club book, entitled, "Saturday's Child." Finder please return to C. W. Streeter's office 110 Oneida st. 143

For Rent—Downtown flat for small family; modern conveniences; $10 per month. Inquire Wirt R. Barker, 34 S. 2d st. 145

Upper Flat—Moderate rent, 214 Walradt st. 6 rooms and all modern conveniences. H. L. Crandall. Phone 252. tf.

Wanted—Girl for general housework in family of three. Apply 404 Park st. tonight. tf

To Rent—7 room house in Fay st. near chocolate works. G. J. Emeny, 414 S. 4th st. 148c

For Sale—Push cart and baby carriage; both cheap. 513 Buffalo st. 14

To Rent—Furnished rooms for light housekeeping. 312 E. Broadway. 143

FRESH STRAWBERRIES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

FEDERAL BAGGAGE LAW PRODUCED A TEMPER

A word of warning will save the summer traveler much inconvenience, for by the new Federal Baggage law, just passed, persons traveling with trunks will have to sign a blank telling the value of their baggage.

Fulton travelers can look for scenes like this during the summer months:

The Man.—"Darn the cussed law, anyway. How in thunder do I know how much the stuff in my trunk is worth? My wife packed it. Let me get out of this, I've got to catch that train."

The Baggageman.—"Don't make no difference. You have got to fill out this blank telling how much your baggage is worth if you want to check it. That's the rule."

The Wife.—"Now, Will, don't get excited. Let me see: there's my pink crepe dress that I got for $4.98; then there's those white pumps of mine that I got last year down in Syracuse. I think they cost me $2.39 but I'm not sure. My underwear, stockings and all that stuff cost let me see—well, they didn't cost a cent less than $10 if I hadn't bought them at a sale. Then there's your blue suit that you bought last fall, how much did that cost? Then, there's—"

The Man.—"Oh, thunder, I can't wait until you go through all the junk you've got in your trunk. Here it is train time and we've got to give an inventory and answer more questions than the census man asks. Put 'er at $100 and let 'er go at that."

The Baggageman.—"You know it is against the law to over-value your stuff, and there's a fine of a hundred hitched to it."

The Man.—"Oh, thunder, make her $25, that's a safe bet, and let me catch that train."

ONEIDA SEES NEED OF PUBLIC MARKET

Oneida, June 3.—Residents have brought to the attention of the Chamber of Commerce the advisability of establishing a public market in Oneida. The proposition has not been officially considered but officers of the Board of Trade have the matter in view.

If the chamber attempts to increase the country business and make Oneida the center of a trading community a public market would be the greatest improvement that could be inaugurated, it is pointed out.

There are a number of sites available. The trade question with farmers is uppermost in the minds of the chamber authorities and a farmers census is to be taken this year if a sufficient appropriation for the project can be raised.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

W. C. T. U.

Edited by Women of Fulton Union

Tentative Program for the Fulton Convention, Saturday Morning, July 3d.—8.30. Evangelistic service.

9.00. Convention called to order by President, Mr. Mason Stratton.

Annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer.

Greetings from the Mother Organization, Mrs. Ella A. Boole.

Report of Study Course.

Report of Croup Leaders.

Saturday P. M.—Annual address of President, Mr. Stratton.

Welcome Hour—

From the City by the Mayor—Dr. F. E. Fox.

From the Suffrage League—Dr. H. M. Doane.

From the Churches—Rev. Charles Olmstead,

From the Y. P. B.—Miss Mildred Hart.

From the W. C. T. U.—Mrs. Wm. Sylvester.

Response—Miss Amy Huggard.

Address, Health and Heredity—Dr. C. E. Breese, Cortland Hospital.

Demonstration of Publications—Miss Maude Pratt, Tompkins County.

Saturday Evening.—Diamond Medal Contest and Silver Musical Contest.

Sabbath Morning.—By vote of the Executive Committee, the pastors will be invited to preach in their respective churches, sermons appropriate to young people.

Sabbath 3.00 p.m.—Mass Meeting to be adderssed by Mrs. Boole.

Sabbath 6.30 p.m.—Young People's Hour—Miss Edna Conkling, Y. P. B. Superintendent of Co-operation with other young people's societies, will have this meeting in charge.

One minute speeches by the representatives of the church young people's societies of Fulton.

Address—Mr. Neal Dow Cranmer, Elmira, N. Y., Vice-President of Intercollegiate Prohibition Club.

Sabbath 7.30 p.m.—Platform Night. Address—Ideals—Miss Mildred Moody, Federation Vice-President.

Address—The Forward March of National Constitutional Prohibition—Mr. Percy Dunn, Ithaca, N. Y.

Monday a.m.—Reports of Superintendents.

Relation of Y. P. B. to L. T. L.—Miss Helen Root, L. T. L. Secretary of New York State.

Installation service for local branches—Sandy Creek Y. P. B.

Election of Officers.

Paper—Value of Pledge Signing, Miss Bossard, West Groton.

Monday p.m.—Grand Parade—All interestd in the Prohibition movement will be invited to participate. The Prohibition Party of the State will furnish a speaker for the occasion.

Monday Evening, Demonstration Night.

"Wind the Ribbon Round the Nation" Broome County Delegation.

"Aunt Columbia's Wash Day"—Yates County Delegation.

"National Funds"—Mrs. Fannie R. Danser, promoter of National Y. P. B. Funds.

"Anti-Narcotics"—Tompkins County Delegation.

"Franchise"—Leader, Mrs. E. T. DeSilva, Onondaga County.

Tuesday A. M.—Debate—Heredity and Environment—Kenwood versus Lowville.

Address—Value of Y. P. B. to a Community.—Rev. Mr. Crocker, Angelica, N. Y.

Plans for coming year—State Officers and State Superintendents.

Sunday School Work

Mrs. Della A. Jones, Worcester, Supt.

The special attention of the Temperance Sunday School workers is called to the observance of Anti-Cigarette day, June 20th. Let this day be duly announced so that pastors and Sunday school teachers may be prepared to help in observing it. Since Anti-Cigarette day comes so near to July 4th, a touch of patriotism may be given by having the Sunday school room decorated with flags and during the opening exercises having the Flag Salute given. Secure literature and pledges to be distributed on this day. Get some for use in the Home Department. Let us secure 50,000 Anti-Cigarette pledges this year.

Let me recommend for use a wonderful little booklet prepared by Henry Ford of Detroit, Mich. It is known as "The Case Against the Little White Slaver." Mr. Ford will be glad to send this little book to all who are interested.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

Iowa City, Ia., June 5.—Helen Bradford of Ottumwa, ten years old, has made arrangements to enter the University of Iowa in September.

She was graduated from high school and is heralded as one of the best mathematicians among grade students of the State. She will be the youngest girl to attend Iowa in more than ten years.

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. William Jones and daughter of Rochester st. and Mrs. Seamons and son of Syracuse have been guests of their sister, Mrs. Thos. Newton, of Schuyler st.

* * *

Orrin Beebe left today for Sandy Creek to spend Sunday with his parents.

* * *

Miss Katherine Moore of Syracuse is visiting her parents in this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Newton of Schuyler st. have been entertaining their cousin, Mrs. Wilhelm, and uncle, A. Barker, of Buffalo.

* * *

Mrs. Seamans of Oswego has been the guest of Mrs. Eugene Drury, of Gansevoort st.

* * *

Attorney and Mrs. F. G. Spencer, Academy st., have been entertaining Mrs. Belle King of Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Murphy of Erie st., are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. Arthur O. Leary of New York.

* * *

Jessie May Terpening entertained yesterday, thirteen girl and six boy friends, the occasion being the seventh anniversay of her birth. Mamma Terpening provided a dainty luncheon including a whopper cake in which appeared just seven candles, and the little hostess and her nineteen guests had the time of their lives.

* * *

Mrs. Cecelia Sanford of S. 3d st. has returned from a short visit with friends at Albany.

* * *

Mrs. E. S. Brown of S. 3d st. is at Clifton Springs for a short time.

* * *

William Carr of Oneida is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Murphy, of Erie st.

* * *

Rev. J. W. Barrett is today attending the North Shore Sunday School Association at Constantia Center and will deliver an address, "The Child, the Church."

* * *

Mrs. F. E. Goodjon was the guest of friends in Syracuse today.

* * *

Miss Evelyn Markland, Rochester, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brooks.

* * *

The local Court of Amaranth will send delegates next week to the annual meeting of the grand court of the Order of the Amaranth of New York State which meets at Syracuse.

* * *

The Junior class of Fulton High school will entertain the Seniors at Pathfinder Island Monday.

* * *

Miss Imogene Paddock of S. 4th st. is spending some time in Boston.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Goodrowe have been guests of out of town friends.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth Huie, superintendent of the Lee Memorial hospital is guest for a few days of Syracuse friends.

* * *

Mrs. Butts entertained the What-So-Ever Society of the First M. E. church Friday at her home in S. 4th street.

* * *

Mrs. William Coville of Erie st. is seriously ill.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Jones of 515 N. 5th st., is visiting C. J. Parish, at Bowens corners.

* * *

No change in the conditions of Mrs. F. W. George, who is seriously ill at her home, 31 S. 2d st., has been reported.

* * *

Mrs. G. B. Deuel has returned from Binghamton.

* * *

Mrs. E. E. Morrill and Mrs. J. A. Morrill are guests of Watertown friends.

* * *

O. S. Bogardus is gradually recovering from the effects of the operation he recently underwent at Clifton Springs.

* * *

The Boy Scouts left the city at 1:30 today on their hike to Lewis Corners.

STATE GATHER

Brilliant Assembly Will Meet in Syracuse Wednesday and Thursday

Syracuse, June 5.—When the annual meeting of the grand court of the Order of the Amaranth of New York State is held in this city next Wednesday and Thursday, it will bring here many of the most brilliant women affiliated with the Masonic fraternity.

The sessions will be held at the headquarters of Syracuse Court in the Greyhound Building and the banquet and reception will be at the Jefferson Hotel. The social events are being arranged by a committee consisting of Mrs. Elizabeth Raymond, Mrs. Grace Scheninger, Miss Anna Gregg, Charles Scheninger, Frederick Grieb, and Charles A. Johnson, chairman, all of this city; Mrs. Harriet Horn and Frank H. Horn of Rochester, past royal matron and patron of this court.

Mrs. Elizabeth Patchen, grand royal matron, and Richard F. MacNair, grand royal patron of New York, and their staffs will arrive Tuesday evening to confer with the committee regarding final plans.

Sessions Open at 10 O'Clock

The sessions will open at 10 o'clock and will consist of routine business, the grand royal matron's and patron's addresses and reports of officers. At the end of this session, petitions will be presented and resolutions considered.

The evening will be devoted to initiatory degree work, which will be exemplified by the Syracuse court officers:

Royal matron, Mrs. Nora McKinley; royal patron, Charles Scheninger; associate matron, Mrs. Lillian Mardin; conductress, Mrs. Elizabeth Grieb, associate conductress, Mrs. Verna Klumbach; secretary, Mrs. Mary Reasoner; treasurer, Mrs. Jessie Coplin; marshal in the east, Mrs. Mary Wilcox; marshal in the west, Mrs. Minnie King; historian, Mrs. Blanche Spire; warder, Mrs. Eva Robinson; prelate, Mrs. Anna Harrington; Truth Mrs. Emma Moore; Faith, Mrs. Anna Hobbs; Wisdom, Mrs. Grace Lough; Charity, Mrs. Lulu Rice of East Syracuse.

The Syracuse court members are elated over their selection by the state court to exemplify the degree work as this means that its work is considered the best of any in the organization. The drill work for that evening will be done by the officers of Stirling Court, No. 31, of Watertown.

Social Features in Evening.

At the end of the evening session, the delegates and visitors will march from headquarters to the Jefferson Hotel, where the social feature of the sessions will be held. The grand officers and some of those from Syracuse chapter will be in the receiving line at the reception.

Thursday will be devoted to election of officers, reports of standing and special committees, new and unfinished business, installation of the new officers and appointment of standing committees.

The order is an advance organization of the Order of Eastern Star, only those having gone through the latter being eligible to the Amaranth. Its position in the women's society corresponds with that of the Knights Templar to the Masonic orders.

SCOUTS OUT ON JOLLY BIG HIKE

This afternoon more than one hundred Boy Scouts of this city met at Central Park in anticipation of their hike. Scouts from nearby towns joined the line of march, the whole representing a lot of live, eager young Americans out for the "time of their life."

Scout Commissioner Willis Morin and his assistants, Lewis Rice, Grove Gilbert and James Robinson accompanied the boys on the trip, Lewis Corner's spring hole being the objective point.

After arriving the experts in scout ways will prepare good things to satisfy the appetite which the scouts find a hike produces. Later on an exhibition will be given of the craftsmanship in which a good scout is proficient, many of the local scouts having worked overtime to attain skill in one or more of the crafts.

The return trip will be made in the early evening.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

During June, July and August

it isn't very pleasant to face the task of using stove-heated irons, is it?

As soon as you begin to use an electric iron the real hardship of ironing day disappears.

Electric irons become hot without heating the air. They save you the usual steps from ironing board to stove. You iron straight ahead with the same iron until your work is done.

The iron is ready for use a minute after the switch is turned and stays hot until the task is finished. Let us show you one.

THE ELECTRIC CO.

103 Oneida St. Phone 144

Pulpit and Pew

Zion Church

Rev. Minor J. Peters, Rector

Sunday, June 6, 1915, 1st Sunday after Trinity. Services as follows:

Holy Communion .... 7.30 a.m.
Sunday school .... 9.30 a.m.
Holy Communion & Sermon 10.45 am.
Evensong and Sermon ...... 7.30 a.m.

Free Methodist Church

C. C. Watson, Pastor

Sunday services as follows: Preaching by the pastor at 10:30. Sunday school at 11.45. Young Peoples' meeting at 6:30. Preaching in the efening, 7:30. Class meeting Thursday evening. Prayer meeting Thursday evening. The work is moving ahead encouragingly. We are enjoying prosperity in every department. You will find a cordial welcome to all of these services.

Presbyterian Church

Charles S. Robertson, Pastor

Morning prayer at 10 o'clock led by William J. Lovejoy.

Worship by families at 10.30, with sermon, theme, "God's Help in the Stress and Strain of Life."

Bible school at noon.

Vesper service at 5, when the pastor will give a practical exposition of the "Parable of the Unjust Steward."

First Methodist Church

Pastor, Rev. J. W. Barrett

The pastor will preach morning and evening tomorrow: Morning subject, "Mr. Smith and the Church; Why Mr. Smith Does Not Go to Church."

Object sermon to Juniors.

Bible school and Brotherhood at noon.

Junior League at 3.30, the last meeting before vacation.

Senior League and class meeting at 6:30.

Evening worship with sermon, "Why Smith Should go to Church." The Brotherhood and Boy Scouts will attend this service in a body. The Brotherhood chorus will sing.

Everyone without a church home cordially invited to worship in this church.

First Baptist Church

Milton George Buck, Minister

"Come thou with us and we will do thee good," was said by a wise man many years ago, and that is true of the Baptist church. Not that we are the only Christians in the city, for we are not. There are many of other faiths. We are just a regiment of the great Christian forces.

The services for tomorrow are as follows:

Morning worship, 10:30, subject of sermon, "The Christian Message in Isaiah." Bible school at 12 m. Christian Endeavor, 6:30 p.m. Evening worship, 7:30, subject of sermon, "Knowing and Doing God's Will." The ordinance of baptism will be administered at the evening service.

The "Church of Cordial Welcome" invites all strangers to come and enjoy its hospitality, Corner Third and Utica sts.

made of the observance of Children's Day, next Sunday, June 13.

Congregational Church

Charles Olmstead, Pastor

The Brotherhood classes of the Congregational church attended the monthly meeting and supper of the Brotherhood of the First M. E. Church last evening.

The topic for the Sunday morning discourse by the pastor tomorrow will be "The Faith of a Free Church." The evening subject will be "The Best Things of Life."

The Women's Missionary Union will meet on Wednesday at 3 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Nicholas Mansfield, 372 S. 3d st. The topic will be "The

THOMAS H. MARVIN
HEADQUARTERS FOR
BUILDERS' SUPPLIES
Some of our specialties are:
Lehigh Portland Cement.
Peerless Wall plaster
Robinson Sewer Pipe
Onondaga Vitrified Brick
Fire Brick, Fire Clay, etc.
Land Plaster Hydrated Lime.
Yard:
Corner First and Broadway

WATER GLASS
EGG PRESERVER
By the Quart or Gallon
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Red Man and His White Neighbor." Leader, Mrs. F. E. Chubb.

The second Sunday in June will be Children's Day. There will be special exercises at all services; in the morning by members of thep rimary department, with a concert in the evening by the boys and girls of the main school.

Christian Science

35 E. First Street

Christian Science services held on Sunday at 10:45 a.m. and at 8 p.m. Wednesday, in the VanWagenen block. Mrs. H. A. Allen, first reader; Mrs. Noah Merriam, second reader. You will be welcome and interested to attend one or both services.

The subject for next Sunday is: God, The Only Cause and Creator. Golden Text: Isaiah 41:4. Responsive Reading: Job 38: 1-7, 12, 13, 16, 19, 20, 22, 31, 33; 42: 1-2.

MAYOR COX WANTS TO BECOME GOVERNOR

Mayor Cox of Middletown wants to be Governor of New York. He said so to a group of Democratic mayors attending the Troy Mayors' Conference.

Mayor Cox is remembered by many men of Fulton as the junketing mayor who was the means of causing taxpayers to part with enough money to pay for a dinner at the Clark House. At the time of his visit here Mayor F. E. Fox endeavored to show the state-wide traveller just how hospitable the city could be—when it had to be, and the $200 dinner with comparatively few taxpayers present, was the result of Fulton's efforts.

It is not known whether Mayor Fox at the time of the $200 dinner knew of Mayor Cox's political aspirations, but if he did he never disclosed to his many acquaintances in the Republlican ranks what his Democratic mayoralty friend desired to secure.

WINFIELD BEST CITY IN KANSAS FOR CHILDREN

Topeka, Kan., June 5.—Winfield is the best city in Kansas in which to rear children. So decided the judges after visiting fifteen cities which claimed first place. To Winfield will go the $1,000 prizes offered to child welfare. Independence drew second place and the $500 offered by Charles Horner.

The contest was organized by Professor William A. McKeever, of the Child Welfare Department of Kansas University. Decision was based on six conditions: Opportunity for play and athletics; school work and industrial training; social and recreative activities; physical and moral safeguards; activities of child fostering organizations; attendance in Sunday schools.

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

D/34

The Fulton Evening Times

"The Paper of Results"

The Only Newspaper Circulating in Fulton and Vicinity

Published in the Real True Interest of the 12,000 Plus Population

Daily Average Gain in Paid Circulation is 21

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

A Submarine's Torpedo

I am the sea devil's daughter,
Spawned where the dead men dwell.
I shoot through the hissing water,
A lance from the prince of hell!
And ever I come to slaughter
As mermaids ring a knell!

The pride of the seas of Britain
Is the wreck of a huckster's cart—
Smitten as whales are smitten
When the swordfish dares to dart!
The little gray shark has bitten
A hole in the kraken's heart!

I am the eel of lightning;
I blast whatever I strike.
The sea top fishes frightening
As the shark affrights the pike!
Oh, but the bones are whitening
Of things I did not like!

I am the babe of the devil!
Deep hidden I skulk and lie,
Till a liner laughs in revel
And then I dart on high
And kiss with the kiss of evil,
And what I kiss must die!

—John O'Keefe.

AMERICAN LEGION WANTS ALL THESE TO JOIN IT.

"Be Ready For War" Body Seeks to Register Available Men.

The American legion, whose headquarters are at 10 Bridge street, New York city, is registering men who could help their country in a national crisis. It is classifying them under seventy-two heads, as follows:

1—Ex-soldier.
2—Ex-sailor.
3—Ex-marine.
4—Master.
5—Navigator.
6—Mate.
7—Yachtsman.
8—Merchant seaman (steam).
9—Merchant seaman (sail).
10—Diver.
11—Rigger.
12—Shipfitter.
13—Machine gun experience.
14—Powder man (experience with explosives).
15—Topographer.
16—Lithographer.
17—Photographer.
18—Surgeon.
19—Physician.
20—Nurse (trained, male or female).
21—Pharmacist.
22—Miner.
23—Engineer, mining.
24—Engineer, civil or marine.
25—Engineer, mechanical.
26—Engineer, hydraulic.
27—Engineer, sanitary.
28—Engineer, electrical.
29—Electrician.
30—Dynamo tender.
31—Surveyor.
32—Radio operator.
33—Radio mechanic.
34—Telegrapher.
35—Telephone operator.
36—Lineman.
37—Stenographer (male).
38—Motorboat.
(a) Operator.
(b) Owner.
39—Airship.
(a) Operator.
(b) Mechanic.
(c) Owner.
40—Balloonist.
(a) Operator.
(b) Owner.
41—Motorcar.
(a) Operator.
(b) Mechanic.
(c) Owner.
42—Motorcyclist.
(a) Operator.
(b) Mechanic.
(c) Owner.
43—Machinist.
44—Plumber.
45—Railroad personnel (state exact nature of service).
(a) Operation.
(b) Construction.
(c) Repair.
46—Stationary engineer (gas or steam).
47—Transport driver.
48—Mule packer.
49—Blacksmith.
50—Veterinary.
51—Farrier.
52—Horseshoer.
53—Saddler.
54—Wheelwright.
55—Carpenter.
56—Lumberman.
57—Cook.
58—Baker.
59—Butcher.
60—City police.
61—City fireman.
62—Constabulary.
63—Cowboy.
64—Explorer.
65—Guide.
66—Scout.
67—Trapper.
68—Hunter.
69—Chaplain.
70—Dentist.
71—Printer.
72—Construction foreman.

BRITISH WOMAN WINS HIGH MILITARY HONOR

Freed From Jail, She Builds Hospital For Wounded.

London.—Though Britain flung her into durance vile before the war, it is doffing its cap to Miss Louisa Garrett Anderson, who now holds authority equal to that of a major in the British army. Her work has to do with great things for the wounded.

She had been jailed for a suffrage demonstration, and in the early weeks of the war she and the British government felt mutually shy of one another. Her first hospital was opened under French authority.

The shyness having been dispelled, the war office asked Miss Garrett Anderson to come home and make a hospital in London. Out of her own resourcefulness, experience and initiative she is making her hospital. It has 500 beds. It is to be in working order in record time.

The family record is an extraordinary one. Her mother, Dr. Elisabeth Garrett Anderson, was one of the first of women doctors. She began her medical studies in 1860, and though the College of Surgeons and the College of Physicians refused to admit her to their examinations, she obtained a license to practice from the Society of Apothecaries in 1865.

Paris had fewer prejudices than London, and, passing the medical examinations of its university, she received her M. D. degree. Later on, when England realised that she was not to be denied, honors were not lacking, and her daughter's degree is a London one. After a long career in London Dr. Elizabeth Garrett Anderson retired to her native town of Aldeburgh and was elected mayor.

In Demand.

"See that man?" said one of the two people who were talking about success in life.

"Yes."

"He has left behind lots of people who struggled to overtake him."

"Who is he?"

"Conductor of an omnibus."—Wisconsin State Journal.

INTEREST CENTERS ON WATERLOO AS CENTENARY NOW DRAWS NEAR

Great Battle in Which Napoleon Lost Struggle For World Rule Was Fought June 18, 1815.

Fiercest Fighting in New World War Is Now Taking Place Within Sight of Historic Field.

WATERLOO—a century long this name has stood the synonym for defeat overwhelming and disaster irretrievable. In that sense the term was born June 18, 1815, near the then obscure crossroads in Belgium, a few miles south of Brussels, where now stands, or did stand, the great mound commemorative of Napoleon's fall.

Today the interest in great historical battles of a hundred years ago is as keen as it was when the first news of it was carried into the Belgian capital and made known that the peril of world dominion had passed.

At Elba Napoleon dreamed and plotted while his conquerors debated and quibbled over a new political destiny for the French people. Counting upon republican hatred of the restored Bourbon regime, he stealthily embarked on Feb. 26 in his private brig with three small troop vessels filled with his bodyguard, 1,100 strong. Landing was made near Cannes and march begun to Paris, more than 300 miles away, and with 200,000 Bourbon soldiers between the invaders and their goal.

Gathers His Own Army.

Lyons was reached, and France was in an uproar. His old marshal, Ney, brought a Bourbon corps into his camp, and in twenty days Napoleon entered Paris at the head of 100,000 soldiers.

There were no railroads or telegraphs to spread the news, but Napoleon learned somehow that the Duke of Wellington had assembled an army of 106,000 English, Dutch and Belgians, with Antwerp for its base. He also learned that his old foe, Marshal Bluecher, with Liege and the lower Rhine as his base, was preparing to march 117,000 Prussians to join Wellington. A third army, he learned, was on the upper Rhine ready to cross the border east or southeast of Paris and strike in unison with Bluecher and Wellington. This army would be supported after June 27 by a Russian contingent and number 250,000 men.

A map of the seat of war in Belgium in 1914 will serve as a guide to the Waterloo campaign of 1815. Napoleon led his army rapidly from Paris and on June 14 was at Beaumont, twenty miles southeast of Mons. The allies had been warned of Napoleon's coming and tried to meet it, but were nevertheless surprised when on the morning of the 15th the French attacked Bluecher's outposts on the Sambre.

Napoleon anticipated Wellington's column some hours at Quatre Bras by having Ney there with a corps early on the 16th, but Bluecher was already at Ligny, six miles southeast of Quatre Bras, on the Namur road. Napoleon hoped to wipe out the Prussians before Wellington's superior forces could beat Ney. In a five hour battle, beginning at 2 p. m., the 16th, Napoleon defeated Bluecher and bowled him off north toward Wavre, a divergent course from Wellington's.

Ney had two corps, and his orders were to carry Quatre Bras, then swing to the right, coming in upon Bluecher's right flank and rear at Ligny. With the First corps Ney attacked and almost won the fight. The second took the wrong road, and just as Napoleon was about to give the order for a grand charge at Ligny the columns of this corps appeared coming from toward Quatre Bras. They might be Wellington's troops hastening to aid Bluecher or they might be Ney's.

Wellington Repulses Ney.

Napoleon called a halt. The new troops proved to be the Second French corps, and Napoleon allowed it to return to Quatre Bras. It reached there too late, for Wellington had repulsed Ney.

Napoleon sent Grouchy with 30,000 soldiers to look after the fleeing Prussians while he marched to a junction with Ney and pushed after Wellington, who was also in retreat. The march ended at Waterloo, where Wellington, with 67,000 men and 156 guns, occupied a semicircular ridge south of the village.

About noon of the 18th Napoleon attacked Hougomont, a brick chateau serving as the key to the right flank of the enemy. Then followed the charge which answers to that of Pickett at Gettysburg. A battery of seventy-four guns rained missiles upon Wellington's center and left center. Ney led out 18,000 soldiers in four columns, three striking the enemy's left center at La Haye Sainte, a cluster of brick buildings, and a fourth the right, toward Hougomont. The main body swept away the Dutch and Belgian allies and plunged among some abandoned guns on the crest.

Wellington's second line, the division of Picton, only 3,000 strong, stood below the crest. Its leader was another Ney. Spreading his line out two deep to cover the wide front, he charged the mass of Frenchmen. For a moment the French halted and Picton gave the order to use bayonets. He was shot down as the French reeled and staggered down the hill.

Instantly the British cavalry of Somerset and Ponsonby rode in on either flank of Picton's line and dashed among the fleeing French, chasing them beyond the great battery. Life guards and dragoons sabered Ney's gunners and cut the throats of the horses, so disabling the entire armament that it was useless for Napoleon the rest of the day. Milhaud's French cuirassiers rode at the guards and drove them back up the hill, but victory had been wrung from the grasp of Napoleon.

Ney's grand infantry attack began about 1 o'clock and was ended in an hour. At that time strange troops were beginning to appear away off on the French right. They were Bluecher's. A mass of cavalry mustering all told over 12,000 sabers was brought forward by Ney. The space available for the movement was about 900 yards abroad, extending west of the Brussels-Charleroi road, near the Wavre crossroad, and the column moved in five lines.

In front rode the cuirassiers, wearing bright plates on their breasts. As the leading squadrons approached the British guns these were double shotted with canister and at every discharge tore great gaps in the French ranks. Some of the guns were fired when touching the breasts of the horses.

When the cuirassiers reached the crest they struck into a gallop and disappeared from view of their fellows behind, leading them to suppose the English had fled. They, too, set out at a gallop. But in an instant the tables were turned by Wellington's infantry. His third division, numbering 6,000 men, stood as if rooted to the ground in nine squares, five in the front row and four behind them, covering the intervals. Not a musket was fired until the cuirassiers got within thirty paces. Then the slaughter was awful.

French Charge to Death.

Although the force of the charge was broken, the French did not retreat, but rallied again and again—twelve times Wellington and other authorities declare—from 4 to 6 p. m. and rode forward in as many separate and desperate charges. It ended in the total destruction of Napoleon's magnificent corps of horsemen.

In the meantime General Buelow of Bluecher's command had got so close to the right flank and rear of the French at Planchenoit with a division of troops that Napoleon was compelled to detach the Young Guard and go in person to head him off. In the chief's absence Ney was to continue his attacks upon the English center.

With the infantry of the First corps Ney stormed and took from Wellington the position at La Haye Sainte. Ney planted some guns so as to rake the English line from right to left, and the French infantry made such use of the chance that they actually broke up some of Wellington's famous squares, according to French reports. Many of the leading officers were killed or wounded, and it was then that Wellington sighed for "night or Bluecher." The hour was 6:30. Ney held La Haye Sainte. Wellington's ranks were exhausted, and the danger was grave.

Having repulsed, as he supposed, Bluecher's attempt to turn his right, Napoleon returned to Ney's battleground. Eight battalions of the Old Guard and Middle Guard were formed in column, with Ney at their head. He was to charge diagonally across the battle front between La Haye Sainte and Hougomont. At the same time French infantry established at La Haye Sainte stormed from that vantage ground the British center. But the columns did not co-operate.

Grouchy had failed to keep Bluecher from throwing his weight upon Napoleon, doubling the opposition at Waterloo. When Grouchy overtook Bluecher at Wavre, the point where he must decide to fight or turn westward on a lateral route to unite with Wellington, the Prussian marshal left a single division to be sacrificed in holding off Grouchy, and with his main army hurried to Waterloo.

Last Dramatic Stand.

The last fight of Ney was dramatic at every stage. For some reason he marched so far to the left that he lost touch with the infantry from La Haye Sainte that broke Wellington's center and also carried his line under the fire of the English still occupying Hougomont.

However, his horsemen pushed on over the crest. There Wellington stood in person behind Maitland's English guards. Maitland's men were lying down out of sight of the French, who rode on until within fifty yards of the concealed foe. Suddenly Wellington, or a subordinate, roared the famous battle cry, "Up, guards, and at 'em!"

Springing to their feet, Maitland's men, four ranks deep, poured their fire into the intrepid horsemen and drove them down the hill. The Fifty-second British infantry lay along the angle formed by Hougomont on the flank of Napoleon's guard as it stormed the slope. With a left wheel, it poured bullets into the guard, ending it with a bayonet charge that sent the horsemen flying back in confusion. Wellington threw forward his cavalry reserves just as Bluecher's leading division struck the wavering French at La Haye Sainte, and the last die was cast for Napoleon on the field of Waterloo.

ITALY BY JOINING WAR CUTS OFF KAISER'S BIG SUPPLIES SOURCE

Deprivation of Raw Materials Is What Germany Most Fears From Latest Addition to Her Foes.

Labor Market In United States May Be Greatly Affected If Italians Here Are Called Home.

WHAT Germany fears most from Italy's entrance into the war is not so much an addition to the number of her foes in the field as the completion of her isolation from the rest of the commercial world, dispatches from Berlin say. Misgivings as to Roumania are based on similar apprehensions.

All the military contingencies in relation to Italy's intervention have long since been foreseen and provided for, it is declared. But through Italy Germany has had access to many neutral sources of supplies, especially the two Americas. The anxiety of Germany touches its growing shortage of raw materials.

The offices of the Hamburg-American line and the North German Lloyd throughout Germany have been branch agencies of all the Italian shipping companies since August. The trade in imports by this means was enormous before the declaration of the British blockade and even since then has been considerable. With Italy in the field on the side of the allies this door for the entrance of raw materials has closed with a bang.

Raw Materials Grow Scarce.

Despite all efforts and notwithstanding the efficiency of the German organization it is undoubtedly true that the important raw materials are becoming increasingly scarce. Thus the textile industry in the Chemnitz district is affected by a lack of cotton; the electrical industry is affected by a lack of copper and other metals. There is no real lack of copper for the manufacture of ammunition yet, but the considerable stock of that must soon begin to feel the drain.

Recently the authorities ordered an inventory of the stock of copper and other metal articles in the empire which may be used for ammunition. It has been ordered that none of these articles be sold without authority, but this measure was thought chiefly precautionary.

As the famine of raw materials grows German industries will not improbably be reduced to the condition of Hamburg, which today is a dead city. The country is now consuming its stored commodities, which cannot be replaced, while production is gradually slackening except with regard to the materials used in military operations. Even among manufacturers and business men who regard the military situation with complacency there is a keen perception of the danger impending.

Use Violent Language.

The German newspapers were not allowed to attack Italy editorially or in their news columns. But the private vituperation and violent doctrine of hate against England, preached even in pulpits, are nothing compared with the unmeasured language used privately against Italy.

In many respects Germany has been able to call upon her scientists for help where the pinch of the embargo was felt, and she did not call in vain. Her scientists have literally reached out into the air and done their importing from the atmosphere.

Thus when the embargo on the importation of Chilean saltpeter threatened a shortage of nitrates for the gunpowder industry the "mobilized scientists" of the empire promptly worked out a way by which the necessary nitrates could be produced from the nitrogen of the atmosphere by means of electricity. Two plants now produce more than twice the amount needed for Germany's great consumption of explosives, and the remainder is used for fertilizer.

One of the results of the efforts of the allies to starve Germany has been to cut off her large imports of nitrogenous food for her farm animals. Germany has plenty of forage, but the supply of oats, barley and other grains has always been dependent on Russia and even America. For months the feeding of horses and cattle has been a problem.

But the scientists of the Berlin Institute of Fermentation have now discovered a method of getting the necessary nitrogenous foods out of the atmosphere. Before the war few dreamed that such gold mines existed in the air.

New Food From Sugar.

Sugar, of which Germany has a superabundance in the form of sugar beets, is the basis for the new food. The sugar is mixed with ammoniac, lime and magnesium salts. To this is added yeast—just such as mother puts into her cakes—and the whole is exposed to a strong current of air. The yeast cells begin to work at once and convert the compound into a product that is called 50 per cent pure albumen.

The product, it is asserted, is an excellent substitute for oil cake, barley and other rich and rarer cattle foods. It is said to be especially valuable for horses.

But the scientists cannot provide everything which has been going in through the ports of Italy, and soon the effects must be felt.

On the other hand, Italy looks cheerfully forward to making her share in the war more than pay its cost. According to dispatches from Rome, the Italian cabinet estimated that taking up arms would mean an outlay of at least $400,000,000 and the loss of probably 500,000 men. That did not dismay them, though the country was still paying off the cost of the Tripoli war and could not afford further expenditure. They foresaw profit in the present war.

Italy's wealth is estimated at about $15,000,000,000, of which 2 per cent is used for the payment of national debts and military expenses or defense. The wealth of Trent, Trieste and Istria, with Fiume, is estimated at about $1,000,000,000.

To Regain Italia Irredenta.

Thus after the war, should these provinces become Italian and the same system of taxation be applied, they will contribute $20,000,000 a year toward the expenses incurred by Italy for their redemption. The yearly contribution from the recovered provinces will be sufficient to cover a debt of $400,000,000 at 5 per cent interest.

With the possession of Trieste and Pola and Fiume, Italy will dominate the Adriatic, her mercantile navy will be doubled, her commercial activity will penetrate toward the east, where a new economic era is dawning and new fields for Italian emigration will be opened.

However great the sacrifices in men and money may be, the Italian enthusiasts for war say they will always be out of proportion to the results obtained by the recovery of Italia Irredenta and in other directions.

Entrance into the war will have a farreaching effect upon economic conditions in the United States also. Statisticians in various departments of the government are making a special study of the immediate results noticeable in this country.

Will Affect United States.

The first effect to be felt in the United States will be upon the labor market, especially along the Atlantic coast. The labor "liquidation," which has been progressing in the United States for several years as a result of the worldwide depression, may end immediately and be followed by a shortage in certain branches of the labor market as a result of the decision of the Italian government.

Many great projects throughout the country and several in New York may be interfered with as a result of the drain upon the labor market consequent upon the transportation of Italians of fighting age.

In the United States there are more than 2,000,000 men of Italian birth. It is estimated here that at least 35 per cent and probably 45 per cent of this number are Italian reservists, who are honor bound to join the colors. The names of this legion are contained in the files of the Italian embassy and the various consulates throughout the country.

General Ricciotti Garibaldi is reported to have said to a correspondent at Rome: "We shall not call Italians from the United States. You can say to the Italians in America that if they desire to fight for liberty they must come of their own free will."

But if the reservists are called, and it is assumed they will be, all who should refuse to honor the call to the colors would thereafter be unable to return to Italy. This stipulation is expected to have great weight in determining their course. Thousands have already registered as ready to go back.

Nearly All Return Home.

It is generally conceded that most of the Italian immigrants who come to the United States do so in the expectation that a few years of hard work will enable them to put aside enough to return home and live in virtual independence. Statistics gathered by experts in the department of commerce show that many Italians who come to the United States do so for the purpose of saving $1,000 or $1,500, so that they may go home and live in comfort.

The census of 1910 enumerated 1,343,125 Italian born people in this country, and since that time about 700,000 have come over and are now residing here. In 1910 there were 340,770 Italians in New York. It is estimated now that there are about 450,000 in New York city and more than 500,000 in New York state, 40,000 in Newark and 4,600 in Jersey City.

There is naturally considerable speculation over the probable effect on American trade, both export and import. Italy has already become a purchaser of vast quantities of supplies in the United States, and it is expected these will be increased as her operations proceed. It has been suggested that the probabilities are that Italy's exports to the United States will be decreased with the absorption of so many of her productive laborers into the field armies. This of course would have the effect of further lessening the United States customs revenues, which already have decreased to an extent that may require a special session of congress.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Mounting Largest Telescope.

The last annual report of the Mount Wilson observatory states that all the larger parts of the mounting for the 100 inch reflector, which will be much the largest telescope in the world, will probably be assembled at the Fore River shops, where they have been constructed, in time to permit shipment to Pasadena via the Panama canal early this year, says the Scientific American. Meanwhile the smaller parts and accessories have been under construction at the observatory. The driving clock, which is nearly completed, required more than half a ton of bronze castings and nearly a ton and a half of iron castings, in addition to the two ton driving weight. The circular steel building for this instrument is complete up to the rails which are to carry the dome. The latter has been built in Chicago and is about finished. The building and dome will probably be completed next summer so that the mounting may be set on the pier in the autumn. Meanwhile good progress has been made with the capital task of grinding and figuring the great mirror.

The Pigment Lithopone.

Lithopone is produced by mixing solutions of zinc sulphate and barium sulphide. The resulting precipitate consists of zinc sulphide and barium sulphate. It is filtered off, heated to a high temperature and dropped into water, whereby it is thoroughly disintegrated. It is washed and filtered again, dried and ground. All of these operations require a good deal of care and attention to produce a satisfactory pigment. Lithopone is very stable and is probably the whitest pigment known, being very widely used in high grade enamels. Exposed to light and dampness it darkens, but will often regain its whiteness again. It is therefore not suited to outside use by itself, but needs to have a large amount of some stable pigment combined with it.—Engineering Magazine.

Improved Automobile Sod Pan.

The usual type of sod pan used in automobile construction is fastened to the frame side members of the car and passes under the engine crank case, as shown by the full line in the sketch, says Popular Mechanics. This is not only a very heavy and expensive construction, but the pan often jars loose and must be removed from the chassis when being cleaned. The sod pan substituted is shown by the dotted lines and simply consists of metal sheets, fastened on one side to the flange of the lower crank case and on the other to the frame side members of the chassis. This construction is cheap, very light and can easily be cleaned. The lower part of the crank case is exposed, but the dirt collected on it can be easily removed without disturbing the sod pan.

EASILY CLEANED SOD PAN.

New Telltale Spark Plug.

A novel type of spark plug for internal combustion engines has been invented by a British company, says the Scientific American. The plug has a tubular central electrode, which carries a block of quartz serving the purpose of a window through which one can observe the "color" of the explosion in the combustion chamber. A dark purple spark shows the mixture to be correct; a light blue or white explosion signifies that it is too weak, while a red color indicates too rich a mixture. By simply detaching the quartz "window" and substituting a milled nut the plug is transformed into a "priming" plug, through which gasoline can be injected directly into the combustion chamber.

Fish Oil in Paints.

Menhaden, or fish oil, is used in special paints which are required to stand heat and light, as on smokestacks. Such a paint is considerably more expensive than a linseed oil paint, so it can be seen that menhaden oil is a valuable aid and not an adulterant, as often claimed. Proper treatment of the oil is very expensive, as the loss by evaporation is large and certain volatile products are formed which are very offensive to the workmen. Mixed with linseed oil it is used to some extent for making waterproof paints for various purposes and seems to give good satisfaction.—Engineering Magazine.

Inflation of Automobile Tires.

It is no doubt a fact that more tires are ruined through under inflation than from all other causes combined, says Automobile Dealer. If one would keep his tires inflated to a pressure of eighteen or twenty pounds to every inch of cross section of the tire he would be quite free from blowouts. Even during the hot weather this pressure should be maintained, as it has been conclusively proved that the extra pressure caused by friction is so small it need not be considered. But care must be taken to see that the tubes are of the best quality, for in reality the tube is the "heart" of the tire.

The Job Uncle Ben Did

By SADIE OLCOTT

"Uncle," asked a little white child of a septuagenarian negro in Alabama, "were you in the war between the states?"

"Yes, honey, I war in de wah. Leastaways I war dar."

"Did you kill anybody, uncle?"

"No, I didn't kill nobody, but I saved somebody's life."

"How was that? Tell me about it."

"Well, honey, when de wah broke out all de niggers on de ole plantation"—

"Why do you say 'the old plantation?'"

"Case de plantations now ain't what dey was den. Now dey all cut up, some of 'em owned by de niggers. Den dey wah big and lots o' niggers on 'em. As I wah a-sayin', honey, most all de niggers wo'kin' on de ole plantation dug out 'cept me. My mars', yo' great-grandpop, wah mighty kind to me, and I wasn't a field hand. I did jobs about de house. I wah a carpenter and could make anything dat wah needed on de premises.

"Yo' great-grandpop went off to de wah, and yo' grandpop went off to de wah. De Yankees cum down hyer and took persession. De ole plantation didn't look like it did no mo' atter de Yanks cum. Dey used up de fences fo' firewood and run off all de stock.

"Yo' grandpop wah gwine to marry yo' grandma 'bout dat time. Yo' grandpop when he went to de wah lef' Missy Lucy what he war gwine to marry with his mudder. One day when de Yanks war hyer yo' grandpop, Marse Edward, cum through de lines fo' to visit Missy Lucy. He wah dressed in common folks' clothes, case he had no business, bein' an ossifer in de south'n army, to be in among de Yanks. While he wah visit'n' his ma and his sweetheart one o' de ole plantation hands cum in and said dat somebody tole de Yanks dat he war dah. Dey wah comin' some time in de night to take him.

"Marse Edward wah cotched like a 'possum in de trap. He dassen't light out, fo' de Yanks had cum dat day and camped all about, and he dassen't stay where he wah. Yo' grandma sent fo' me and she says, says she:

"'Ben, Marse Edward come hyer to see me. Ef de Yanks cotch him hyer dey hang him fo' a spy. Can't yo' make somep'n what he kin hide in dat dey won't suspec'?'

"I scratched my head and done a lot o' thinkin'. Den I said, 'I don't know, missy, wot I kin do unless I make a double bottom to de wood box, wha he kin crawl in.'

"'De berry t'ing,' said missy, and I went to wo'k right off. De wood box wah in de kitchen and wah a great big un. I cut up some boa'ds and put in a bottom high 'nough fo' a man to lay down under, leabin' plenty o' cracks fo' breathin'. I hadn't mo'n got it done when Miss Lucy seen de Yanks surroundin' de house. Marse Edward got in under de wood, and dere wah a loud rap at de do'. Missy tel' me to go to de do', and I went.

"'Who dah?' I axed.

"'Open de do' right off,' said a man. I opened de do', and without askin' leave dey scattered all ober de house, lookin' fo' yo' grandpa, Marse Edward. Dey sarched from de garret to de celler, lookin' into de closets and under de beds and in de cubberd in de dinin' room. When dey cum to de kitchen I wah dar, and I had de lef' hand corner ob my right eye lookin' right at 'em. De rest ob my eyes was on de wood box. Dinah wah cookin' de supper on de stove. Seein' an ossifer lookin' at de wood box, I went to de stove, pulled open de do' and says to Dinah:

"'Wha' fo' you let dis fire go out?' And I goes to de wood box and throws up de lid, and I tak' out an armful o' wood and puts it in de stove.

"Ef dat ossifer had any idee dat anybody war hidin' in dat wood box I put it out ob his head right off. De ossifer kep' right on a-huntin', gwine down celler. After huntin' all ober de house he comes up to me and he say:

"'Yo' niggers know yo' own folks, don't ye?'

"'Reckon,' I says, with a wink in de lef' hand corner ob my right eye.

"'Den tell me whar de spy is hidin'.'

"I put my mouf down close to he year, and I says sof'ly:

"'Look in de smokehouse.'

"With dat he drawed off he men from de house, and I reckon he went out to de smokehouse, fo' I didn't heah nothin' mo' from him.

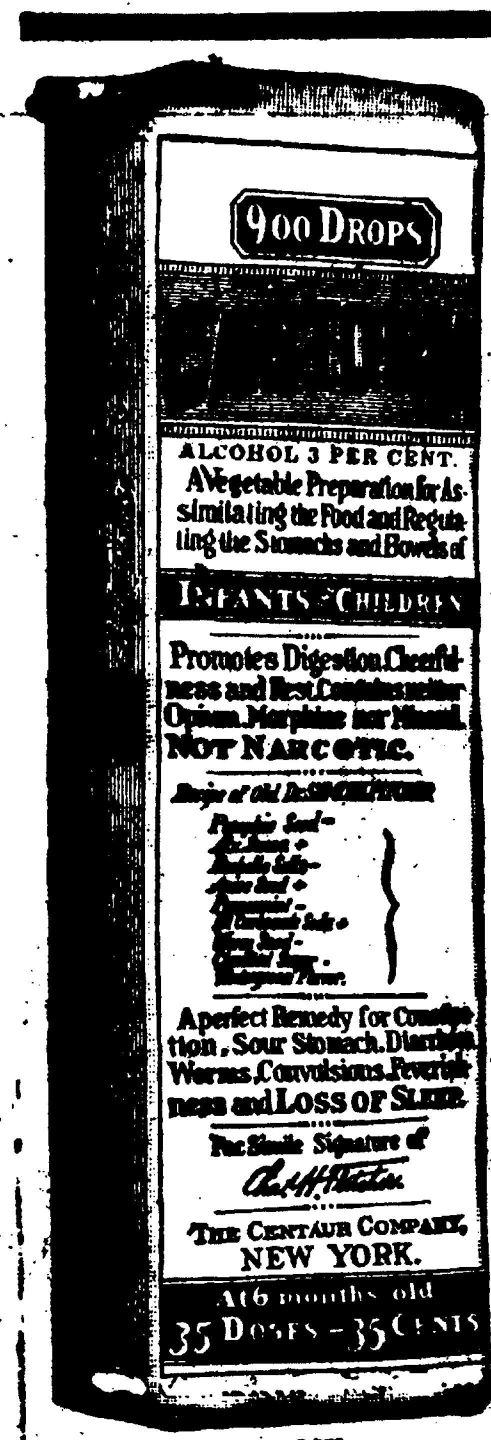
"When de Yanks had gone away we uns had a con'ul'ation how Marse Edward gwine to git out o' de trap. De way he done it war to rub he face with soot, and Missy Lucy she kinked he hair with her curlin' tongs, and he put on darky clothes, and he jist walked through de Yankees as ef he war as much a Yankee as any ob 'em. Nex' day he rode into de Yankee lines under a white flag with some south'n prisoners.

"Who d'y' s'pose war de fust Yankee he met?"

"I don't know, uncle; tell me."

"De ossifer wot wah huntin' fo' him de day befo'. Marse Edward had saw him through a crack and knowed him right off. Marse Edward larfed and tole him 'bout it all, but said he wasn't a spy; he only cum to see his ma and Missy Lucy.

"No, honey, I didn't kill nobody durin' de wah, but I did a mighty good job savin' yo' grandpop's life. If I didn't do dat yo' wouldn't been hyer nohow."



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of [signature] In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

EXPORTS OF COTTON DECREASE 50 PER CENT

Wheat and Flour Nearly Trebled In Last Fiscal Year.

Washington.—The value of American cotton exports has been cut in half and the shipments of wheat and flour have nearly trebled during the eight months of the present fiscal year, ending with February, which period embraces the first seven months of the European war, when compared with the corresponding period of the year before.

The value of the cotton exports for the eight month period ending with last February was $243,900,000 against $498,900,000 for the same months of the year previous, showing a loss of $255,000,000. The wheat and flour exports jumped from $106,200,000 to $288,000,000, a gain of $181,800,000. Meat and dairy products gained only $11,600,000, increasing from $102,700,000 to $114,300,000. The value of horses showed a big gain in comparison with the year before, the increase being from $1,800,000 to $32,600,000.

A comparison of the value of the principal exports during the eight months of the 1914 fiscal year and the 1915 fiscal year, the latter period embracing the first seven months of the war, as furnished by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, is as follows:

Commodity.	1914.	1915.
Cotton	$498,900,000	$243,900,000
Wheat and flour	106,200,000	288,000,000
Meat and dairy products	102,700,000	114,300,000
Horses	1,800,000	32,600,000
Cotton manufactures	24,300,000	42,700,000
Harness and saddles	1,600,000	17,100,000
Cars and carriages, all	23,500,000	21,700,000
Chemicals, drugs, etc.	17,500,000	22,900,000
Upper leather	14,300,000	20,300,000
Explosives	4,100,000	12,300,000
Cottonseed oil	3,300,000	12,100,000
Commercial automobiles	300,000	14,100,000
Boots, shoes, slippers	12,300,000	12,300,000
Woollen manufactures	3,300,000	17,400,000
Sole leather	4,700,000	14,300,000
Refined sugar	1,300,000	19,600,000
Mules	[illegible]	[illegible]
Copper and manufactures	96,300,000	[illegible]
Lumber and wood manufactures	63,400,000	33,600,000
Agricultural implements	26,300,000	4,600,000
Mineral oils	99,700,000	85,600,000
Naval stores	13,300,000	6,300,000
Passenger automobiles	14,800,000	7,600,000
Coal	42,300,000	35,300,000
Iron and steel manufactures	171,600,000	121,300,000
Electrical machinery	17,700,000	12,300,000
Tobacco and manufactures	43,100,000	33,300,000

FOX HOUNDS HAULED FOOD.

Larder Empty, Horses Unshod, Dogs Filled the Gap.

Camden, Tenn.—John Hundley, a farmer, awoke one morning recently to be advised by his wife of a serious deficit in the pantry—neither flour nor meal. Hundley's horses were not shod, the sleet and ice were too rough for the animals, the family's strong box was empty, and the farmer resided six miles from town.

But John met the emergency. He constructed a large sled, hitched nine fox hounds to it, loaded on five bushels of stock peas and hit the trail for Camden. After a couple of hours' rest Hundley returned home, the dogs pulling a bag of meal and a barrel of flour through the snow.

Cruel.

He—Man are descended from monkeys. She—Some haven't descended yet.—Judge.

TOWN EXTENDS "GLAD HAND."

All of Asbury Park's Citizens, Young and Old, Join Reception Committee.

Hereafter when the visitor to Asbury Park, N. J., gets off the train he will not be met by a self appointed joint committee representing the jitney bus interests, the associated peanut venders, college pennant barkers, post card dealers with six views of the ocean for 5 cents, and such people. The town is now going to be made hospitable, cheerful, genial, interesting and different, for the mayor has ordered it. The genial mood was released for immediate publication by the mayor, C. E. F. Hetrick, says the New York Evening Post.

Mr. Herrick has organized the Glad Hand society, "in which all the citizens of Asbury Park, high and low, young and old, are charter members." The badge of the society is a celluloid button about half an inch in diameter, with "Ask Me" in white letters on a vermilion background in the middle. Around the outside it says, "Asbury Park, N. J., Glad Hand Committee."

"Co-operation for general good is being freely secured," according to the mayor. But this must be a press agent's slip, as co-operation for general good is only found in things fundamentally gloomy, like sociological surveys, where nothing meets with approval. The Asbury Park movement, remember, is one of scintillating smiles and cheerful chinnings.

Mayor Hetrick has lent the movement his own personal slogan, "There's no frown in our town." This was translated (somewhat freely) from a Persian poet, the same who wrote "There's no use talkin', we like Weehawken," and "Stop in Jersey City a while; somebody there is sure to smile."

"Already the effect is magical," says the mayor. Ministers have preached sermons pointing out that all visitors to Asbury Park should be welcomed with a smile and be asked to come back.

COAL AT PANAMA.

Mammoth Storage Plants Planned For the Canal Route.

Coal storing plants of mammoth magnitude are being planned on the Panama canal route. One of the storage plants is to be situated at Cristobal and another at Balboa.

It is planned to have a coal storage basin at Cristobal with a capacity of 290,000 tons and one at Balboa with a capacity of 160,000 tons. In each place the storage will be within a large basin made of re-enforced concrete, in which approximately half of the coal will be stored under water for use in time of war and the other half above water to be added to and taken from continually for the ordinary uses of commercial and government vessels.

It also is planned if the policy should be approved to be able to lease parts of the storage basin to such private coaling companies as may wish to maintain their own coal stores on the isthmus, but in such cases all of the handling will be done by the government plant, a suitable charge being made for the service.—New York Press.

Our Cotton.

The United States department of agriculture reports that both long and short staple cotton in California yields 500 pounds to the acre, while in the next best record—that of Missouri—the yield runs 325 pounds of long staple and 265 pounds of short. The price of short staple in California is about the same as elsewhere, but that of long staple is higher than in any state.

D/34

EXPECT 200 AT GREAT COUNCIL MEETING

Watertown, June 5. — Delegates from all the councils of the Daughters of Pocahontas in New York State are expected to attend the Great Council to be held in this city June 7 to 10. Elaborate preparations for the entertaining of the guests are in the course of perfection and arrangements will be completed at the regular meeting of [illegible] Council this evening.

The local daughters have rented the Kiva hall for the place where the Great Council may be held and plans for 200 guests are being made. Among the cities, which will sent delegates to the state convention are New York, Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester, Oswego and others.

The delegates will arrive in Watertown on Monday and will be registered at the Hotel LeRay, where special arrangements have been made for them. An open meeting will be held Monday evening at Kiva hall and Mayor I. R. Breen is expected to speak at the meeting, Mrs. Van Alstyne, Great Chief, will preside at the gathering.

On Wednesday afternoon the guests are expected to go to Sackets Harbor to witness the dress parade at Madison Barracks, by automobile, which will be secured for the Daughters by the chamber of commerce. The two tribes of Red Men are planning to provide some of the entertaining of the visitors and it is expected that a dance will be given Wednesday evening in the Kiva hall in honor of the visiting Daughters.

BIRDS TO FLY

Watertown.—Those interested in homing pigeon flights will likely have their first treat of the season Sunday when it is expected that a flight will be conducted from Syracuse to this city.

W. R. Case, a local tailor and pigeon fancier, is now negotiating to conduct a flight Sunday, and if his plans mature he will ship 15 of birds to Syracuse Saturday night with instructions to release them Sunday. The birds will be sent to a liberator there representing the national association and he will notify Mr. Case by wire immediately after the birds are released.

Case has already written the Syracuse representative regarding the flight and says that it will be conducted if the Salt City man has no other flight that day which might prevent him from taking care of Mr. Case's birds.

The air line distance from Syracuse is about 70 miles and Mr. Case expects that some of his birds will make the flight at a rate of a mile a minute.

UNDERTAKERS

YOUNG & HILL. Open day and night at 117 Oneida. Phone 2172.

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

LEGAL NOTICES

STATE OF NEW YORK—Supreme Court, Oswego County.

Nora Kane vs. Nancy C. Heatherington, individually, and Nancy C. Heatherington as Executrix of the Last Will and Testament of Leroy S. Sweet, deceased, Henry Heatherington, Nancy Sweet, Eugene A. Sweet, Ida E. Sweet, his wife, Charles Hair, William Sweet, Martha Lowe, Jennie Lowe, Henry Sweet and all unknown persons having an interest as heir at law or otherwise, under the Last Will and Testament or the estate of said Leroy S. Sweet, or to the estate or under the Last Will and Testament of Henry Sweet, if deceased, his widow, heirs at law, next of kin, devises, grantees and assignees, if any, all of whom and all of whose names are unknown to the plaintiff.

To the above named Defendants:

You Are Hereby Summoned to answer the complaint in this action and to serve a copy of your answer upon the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service; and, in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Trial to be held at the County of Oswego.

Dated this 21st day of May, 1915.

LOUIS C. ROWE,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P. O. Address,
1 and 2 Grant Block,
Oswego, N. Y.

To William Sweet, Henry Sweet and to any unknown persons having an interest in the property or estates of either Leroy S. Sweet, deceased, or Henry Sweet, if deceased, as above specified.

The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of Honorable Irving G. Hubbs, Justice of the Supreme Court, dated the 26th day of May, 1915, and filed with the Complaint in the office of the Clerk of the County of Oswego, at Oswego, N. Y.

Dated, Oswego, N. Y., May 28, 1915.

LOUIS C. ROWE,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P. O. Address,
1 and 2 Grant Block,
Oswego, N. Y.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair tonight and Sunday; moderate to fresh east winds.

MASS MEETING HED IN ROCHESTER FOR FRANK

RoChester, June 5.—Rrepresentative citizens were in charge of a mass meeting to protest against the execution of Leo M. Frank, at Atlanta. Mayor Edgerton presided and resolutions asking that Frank's sentence be commuted to life imprisonetmnt were adopted unanimously. Former Mayor Jame G. Cutler presented the resolution, which are to be sent to the prison commission and the Governor of Georgia.

Professorr George M. Forbes of the University of Rochester, reviewed the case; holding that the supreme court did not touch the essential facts of Frank's guilt in considering the appeal.

BIBLE CLASS MEETS OVER LIVERY STABLE

Crawfordville, Ind., June 5.—The theory that religion and ethics are "over the heads" of the lower animals is supported by the fact that Professor J. L. Leonard, head of the department of economics of Wabash College conducts a Bible class on the second floor of a livery stable here on Sunday.

Professor Leonard has been teaching the class of young men at the First Baptist Sabbath school for some time, but the class has outgrown its room in thec hurch. A large room over the livery stable, ust across the street from the church, was rented, and here the 111 members of the class assemble each Sunday.

FED MEAT TO PET DOG; LET WIFE GO HUNGRY

Pittsburg, Pa., June June 5.—"When Charley thought more of a dog than he did of me I decided it was time that we separated," said Mrs. Bessie M. Golden when told that a decree of divorce from Charles Golden had been recommended.

"One evening I had only ten cents in the house with which to buy meat for our dinner," she said, "I went to a butcher shop and bought two pork chops. My husband came home, and when he saw I had only enough meat for the two of us, and there was none for his dog, he took the chop from my plate and gave it to the dog and told me to go hungry."

WANAMAKER GIVES AD. LESSON TO CHURCHES

Hartford, June 5.—John Wanamaker wrote to the convention of Episcopal Church Clubs of the United States, here today, telling how a church should advertise. He said:

"First it should clean up its buildings, jog up its different departments, remedy its system of financial support and see to it that its minister is fairly, adequately and completely paid.

FORMER CLASSMATES BOOSTED EXERCISES

A number of Fultonians, former classmates, of Miss Nina Russell, who graduated from the local high school, with the class of 1912 and is now teaching at District School No. 1 at Maple Lawn, went last night by automobile to attend the graduation exercises of the school.

The program consisted of recitals and a playlet entitled "Fairies," in which ten pupils took part. Each student received a certificate, and during the exercises, Miss Russell was presented with a silver fork.

FULTON CONTRACTORS GET RE-SURFACING CONTRACT

DeBarber & Hill received a telegram this morning from Albany, which announced to the firm that contract No. 701, or the Fulton-Bowens Corners road, is awarded to them. Mr. DeBarber gives the contract price as between $10,000 and $11,000, which must include scarifying the roadway and paving it with screenings and giving it a pebbled surface.

THIS little woman, with true motherly instincts, wants to bring her boy up to manhood with a clean record, proper tastes and with the best possible prospect of success.

But, say, do you see that pistol in his hand? That little codger has been to some carnival sideshow where the wild eyed broncho busters were shooting up things.

And he wants to be one himself. Consequently he is doing his best to imitate them now. He can scarcely wait to grow up.

Say, folks, herein lies the worldwide difference about the Chautauqua. It is practically the only form of popular amusement that the boy and girl may see in full and go home and tell mother about it without a blush.

The Chautauqua inspires youth, but it inspires them in the right direction. It is a man builder, a home builder, a nation builder and a destiny builder.

The Redpath Chautauqua, opening here soon, commands your respect and invites your presence.

YOUNG MAN HAD TOO LONG NOSE

A Mr. Sawyer, from Oswego, who is seen frequently in this vicinity, driving in his Overland car of a racing type, drove up to The Quirk last night and, before entering the show, reached down in the innermost parts of the automobile and made some adjustment to prevent the starting of the automobile. A local young man, interested in the proceedings took it upon himself to investigate Mr. Sawyer's act, doing so in such a way as to offend the owner of the car. An altercation resulted in which several blows were struck drawing a crowd to the scene. The row ended quickly, however, by both participants going their respective ways.

TWO AUTOMOBILES HAD SCARE MEET

Two automobiles, one a touring car containing a party of Fultonians, the other, a large touring car, the occupants of which are unknown, collided on the road to Three Rivers late last night, inflicting slight damage to the Fulton car but damaging the other automobile considerably.

No one was injured, owing to the fact that one auto was at a standstill, while the other was moving slowly at the time of the collision. Only the fender of the local automobile was broken. The driver of the unknown car being at fault for the accident tendered payment for the damage done.

THE QUIRK

Today there is presented the romantice melodrama by Alex Dumas in six complete parts and 160 scenes. It is not necessary to dwell on the story that is so familiar to readers. The film is of the A No. 1 class and an all-star cast is used in its making. Tomorrow a splendid program has been prepared including a Keystone Two-reel comedy featuring Ford Sterling.

GOVERNOR HEARD SON'S CRY BY 'PHONE

Albany, June 5.—Charles Seymour Whitman, jr., the Governor's baby, cried so loudly in the executive mansion last night that his father, who is in San Francisco, heard him.

The Governor listened to his baby over the telephone. A transmitter, held near the child's mouth, caught the sound. It required several minutes to induce the baby to utter a cry.

A hundred and fifty persons assembled at the mansion to talk with the Governor's party in the New York State Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Lawn Mower Hospital at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair, 110 Cayuga st.

MISS SEYMOUR TO ATTEND WEDDING

Miss Helen Seymour, of 307 Cayuga st., will act as a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Esther York and Mr. Robert W. Kemp, which takes place tonight at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. York, 115 Harvard Place, Syracuse.

Miss York's bridal party will be made up of Delta Gamma girls, with the one exception, that of Miss Seyour, who is not a member of the fraternity. Dr. E. J. Donohue, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvanie, and a newcomer to Fulton, practicing with Dr. H. S. Orchard, will also be one of the ushers. The sister of the bride, Miss Florence York, will attend her as maid of honor.

The Misses York have a wide acquaintance in Fulton, having been the guests of Miss Seymour here for lengthy periods.

After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Kemp will reside in a new home at 108 Judson st., Syracuse.

DOUBLE-O LEAGUE MEETING POSTPONED LAST NIGHT

Delegates from Baldwinsville, Fulton, Phoenix and Oswego did not get together last night to make plans for the operation of the Double-O league on account of the absence of the Oswego and Baldwinsville representatives.

Preliminary arrangements made several weeks ago calling for the opening game in this city on Saturday, June 12th, necessitates the representatives of each team getting together some evening next week so that there will be no hitch in carrying out the original plans of the league. Mr. Ingamells, representing the Fulton team announces that the local men are awaiting the signal for an early get-to-gether, and suggest an evening during the coming week.

RUSSIANS HERE TO GIVE BIG WAR ORDER

New York, June 5.—On the steamer Bergensfjord yesterday arrived six eminent Russian engineers, commissioned by their Government to visit the United States and Canada in connection with a $100,000,000 order placed with American and Canadian manufacturers.

The party will stay in this city about two weeks and then make a tour of inspection of various plants that already have begun the manufacture of rolling stock, machinery and general railroad equipment for Russia.

Upon their arrival they were met at the pier by representatives of a dozen manufacturing companies, one of whom said the purchases already contracted for and those now in negotiation would total one of the largest sums ever spent in a lump by a foreign Government in the United States for such supplies.

Bowser's Shoestring

He Can't Find It, and There Is a Row.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

There are two standard complaints that a husband can urge against his wife whenever he gets a grouch on.

One is her extravagance, and the other is her way of running the house.

Husbands the world over are more extravagant than their wives, and as for system in running the house, no husband could do it a tenth as well. Even an old bachelor living alone is a dead failure as a housekeeper.

Sometimes Mr. Bowser urges one complaint and sometimes the other, just as it happens. He can assume dramatic poses in either of them.

He can also be the martyr, while Mrs. Bowser is the guilty party.

The other morning when he was ten minutes late at the breakfast table he had that martyred look that Mrs. Bowser had learned to connect with a row, and she was keeping very quiet when he began:

"I would like to know if this house is run on a system, or is everything supposed to take care of itself?"

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean that I have been looking for a shoestring for the last half hour and that nothing of the sort is to be found."

"No, I don't believe there is one in the house."

"I presume not. I presume the 200 pairs I bought a month ago have all been chewed up by the cat or sold to the rag man. If there's a worse run house than ours in America I'd like to see it!"

"I FOUND A BOY WALKING OFF WITH THIS MAT."

"Why, Mr. Bowser, you only brought home three shoestrings, and you used two of them to tie up your papers."

"Well, where is the other?"

"I can't tell. We may have lost it in the housecleaning."

"Don't doubt it in the least. While a shoestring is not as big as a piano or as valuable as a clock, the loss of it shows a want of system, a reckless extravagance truly discouraging. Have you got a piece of clothesline in the house?"

"I—I don't think so," she stammered.

"Probably not. Probably gone to join the shoestring. I must have something to tie up my shoe with, however, and I will use a piece of stovepipe wire."

After breakfast, when ready to go out, he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I hope you will take this lesson to heart. Carelessness in a wife is a very, very reprehensible trait."

"You are just as careless as I am!" she protested.

"No, ma'am; no, ma'am. I never mislay anything, forget anything or lose anything. Very few husbands do. I will go around the world with a pin in my vest pocket and bring the same one back with me. If you go out on the street today you had better have a policeman with you. If not, you'll lose your purse or be robbed of your coat."

When Mr. Bowser came home to dinner he entered the house with a smile on his face and the doormat in his hand and said:

"I found a boy walking off with this mat. Has any one taken the range out of the kitchen? It's a wonder to me they haven't come in after the carpets."

"That's a mat the girl put out in the barrel to be carted away," she explained.

"Oh, it is! More reckless extravagance, I see. Mrs. Bowser, I want to sit down with you some day and have a long talk. I think you mean well, but you are deficient in judgment, and your knowledge of the world is very, very limited."

"Do you know everything?" she sarcastically queried.

"Mrs. Bowser," he replied as he folded his hands under his coattails and assumed his favorite attitude, "there are probably one or two things I don't know. I don't claim to know it all, and I don't say you know nothing whatever. The husband who does not, however, know forty times as much as his wife would be considered a stick of a man. Did you go out this morning?"

"I did."

"Was your bonnet taken off your head?"

"No, sir."

"Lucky—very lucky. You are to be congratulated. I didn't"—

"Mr. Bowser, where's your watch?" she interrupted.

"My watch? Mrs. Bowser, my watch is—great Scott!"

He dropped his hand to find the chain, but it was not there. He felt for the watch, but it was gone.

"Did you leave it at the jeweler's?" she asked as he stood with open mouth and stared at her.

"Jeweler's? No; it's gone! I've lost it! I've been robbed!" he shouted as he danced around.

"It can't be. Feel in your pockets."

"Pockets! Pockets! Do you s'pose I carry my watch in my coattail pocket? I tell you I've been robbed!"

"Well, don't take on so. Your wallet is safe, isn't it?"

"G-gone!" he gasped as he put his hands up. "Watch and wallet both gone!"

"You must have been robbed in some crowd," she suggested.

"Robbed! Crowd! Robbed! Why, of course I've been robbed!" he shouted as he pranced about. "Get that infernal cat off the lounge and lemme lay down, for I'm so weak I can't stand up! Where's that camphor?"

She ran for the bottle as he flopped down, and for the next three minutes he had his nose in the opening.

"You ought to go to the police at once," she finally said.

"G-gone! G-gone!" he gasped.

"But how could you have been robbed?"

"I dunno. Hold the bottle a little higher."

"You are so careful, you know!"

"Yes."

"You never mislay anything or forget anything!"

"No."

"And never lose anything and have so much worldly wisdom!"

"Oh, my head!"

"I cannot make it out. I am so careless that I might lose a shoestring in the hustle of housecleaning, but you"—

"Don't talk to me! Over $600 gone!"

"A woman tried to steal my reticule in Buffalo, and I had her arrested, but it seems that you"—

"Gone! Gone!" he groaned.

"Haven't you any idea of when it was taken?" she asked.

"No."

"Well, I'm sorry, but this will be a great lesson to you. You will be more"—

"Mrs. Bowser," he interrupted as he suddenly sat up, "I see through it all now. It's as plain as daylight."

"What do you mean?"

"I thought it necessary this morning to give you a little advice. I felt it to be my duty as a husband. This is your way of getting even."

"Why, Mr. Bowser!"

"Don't 'Why Mr. Bowser' me! It's as plain as that chair over there."

"How could I rob you or tell any one else to?"

"Never you mind! I see it all! It's all right, Mrs. Bowser—all right. Just let go of this camphor bottle and take a seat in the other room. A husband will bear a great deal from the woman he loves, but when crowded too far he turns at bay. I have turned. As soon as I feel a little better we will have an understanding and you can probably take the noon train for your mother's in Buffalo. Robbed! Plundered! But I see through it all, and I know my duty."

"Do you think you will expire before I go upstairs and return?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Woman"—

When she returned she had the watch in one hand and the wallet in the other, and as she held them out she said:

"Being afraid that I would rob you in the night, you hid them under the bureau and forgot them this morning. It's a wonder that you didn't miss them. You never mislay nor forget, but here they are."

"You—you"— stammered Mr. Bowser as he dropped the camphor bottle on the floor and sat up.

"Oh, I haven't taken any of your money or stolen any of the wheels of the watch."

He didn't beg her pardon. He simply grunted and passed down the hall and out of doors. Just outside the gate he met a neighbor, who said:

"Good evening, Mr. Bowser. I believe I made a fool of myself a few minutes ago."

"And I'm sure I did," was the lugubrious reply.

Dinner Topics.

SOUP	The Anti-Noise Society
FISH	Scaly characters
MEAT	Roasting your friends
SALAD	Lobsters we have met
ICES	Interior friezes
COFFEE	Grounds for complaint

—Philadelphia Ledger.

Explained.

She—Why do they paint the inside of a chicken coop?

He—To keep the hens from picking the grain out of the wood.—Lehigh Burr.

His Name.

She ransacked every novel
And the dictionary, too,
But nothing ever printed
For her baby's name would do;
She hunted appellations
From the present and the past,
And this is what she named him
When they christened him at last:

Julian Harold Egbert
Ulysses Victor Paul
Algernon Marcus Cecil
Sylvester George McFall.
But after all the trouble
She'd taken for his sake,
His father called him Fatty
And his schoolmates called him Jake.
—New York Sun.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 144 | Established Dec. 17, 1914. | MONDAY, JUNE 7, 1915 | Price One Cent

Connecticut Seeking 12,000 Skilled Mechanics for Great Arms Works.

OUR NEED OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

It is Paramount to That of Everything Else in Development

Yesterday morning the Rev. C. C. Watson, pastor of the Free Methodist church, preached to a large congregation in the following words:

Text Luke 11-13. In these days of reform movement and evangelistic effort it is essential that we emphasize the necessity of possessing and honoring the greatest divine instrument sent to seal the ministry of His word and make the work of the church effectual.

Your attention is invited first: To the relation of the Holy Spirit to the new birth.

The great purpose of Christ's advent was to impart divine life. All created intelligences have separated themselves from the restoring center of life. The rejection of divine life involves the imperative consequences of moral death. The loss was not the destruction of those powers which constitute him a man, but the sad loss of the true sphere of action for those powers. Outside of God's will he cannot make right use of these powers, nor apply them to the divine life. Having invited his own ruin he cannot encompass his own salvation. Therefore, the Holy Spirit is sent to awaken; the point of pressure being the conscience. Man's apparent undisturbed inward life must be aroused. The Spirit comes to strive, to awaken, to convict. And now the soul passes through a great inward struggle, and at times the work of the Spirit becomes so intense that external indcations of a great battle are manifested. Motives are used, decisions are made, that mean the weal or woe of this soul. No man whatever his outward life may be can escape the searching questions of the Holy Spirit. It is not a by-law that he has broken, or a regulation that he has violated, but a collision with the holiness of God. Sin is seen to be not a violation of conscience but an unnatural rebellion against the Holy God, who is intensely concerned about it. He does not excuse himself, nor trace it to the law of heredity, nor blame his parents; he actually joins in the divine condemnation. As a noted divine has said, "Let the law of God glare upon him."

The Bottom of Faith

In building up a Christian character this awakening of the man to his moral obliquity and personal accountability to his God is one of the corner stones. The searching question of the Holy Spirit is not to ascertain the number of my transgressions but to disclose to my self-consciousness the relation of my soul with its Maker. Here is one abiding and eternal Interrogater that cannot be evaded. These facts being true the test under the Holy Spirit is final. Man stands in the midst of motives knocking at the door of his will for a decision that will bring him into the kingdom. Jesus said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." There is a human and divine side to conversion or the new birth. Two great acts enter into the conversion of every soul, and these are wrought by the Spirit, the decision of the will to live for God and obey Him, and the incoming divine life that regenerates and helps him to keep his covenant. His desires and ambitions have entirely changed. At last Christ has come, not to re-inforce but to re-create; not to re-arrange but to regenerate. His faith has brought to his heart more than an impression of personal influences—the personal God. The Spirit has wrought more than a few external changes; he is changed. He knows God. And this knowledge is as intimately connected with feelings, as that of the intellect with thoughts. Let me illustrate from Sophocles. The presence of a god was knownto the prrincess of Attica by the change in her feelings as well as her thoughts. O Iole said one to the fair daughter of the king of Attica, how did you know that Hercules was a god? Now mark the answer. Because I was content the moment mine eyes rested upon him. He conquered, whether he stood or walked or sat. Let me say that conversion is that vital, revolutionary work by the Holy Spirit of God in that moral region where he is as sure that God has come as that he lives. He is brought at once in the actual presence of God, the crowning wonder of his life. He may not know the philosophy of the change, or stop to analyze the cause of his exhilarated emotions; but he looks his doubting critics in the face and exclaims, "This one thing I know whereas I was blind now I see."

Again, the Spirit supplies the needs of this new nature. The second reference that Jesus made relative to the Spirit and its work on the heart you will find in the Gosepl of St. John. "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Our Lord revealed the fact that when a man is by the Spirit born again, the result is perfect satisfaction. Emancipation from perverted appetites, and no longer the thirst that agonizes for something that is never found. The word well in the above verse translated from the Greek is very significant. It is: source of supply, enjoyment. Therefore the Holy Spirit is the dynamic force that opens a fountain in the soul, and affords perpetual enjoyment to the pilgrim. The great apostle said, "Our citizenship is in Heaven." Therefore as a stranger and pilgrim he joyfully presses on, his companions, his joys and pleasures all comef rom that country. The natural man has desires that correspond with this earthly life. He who has been born from above has desires that correspond with that country from whence he came. We are therefore absolutely and perpetually satisfied with this springing, laughing, living water that gushes up and meets all the infinite longings of the Spirit. God is the only world in which the soul can find itself and be satisfied. That life can be counted a success and

(Continued on Page Four)

NATIONAL BANKS TO BETTER LAWS

Many Banks Want to Eradicate Politics From the National System

Special Correspondence.

Washington, June 6.—One effect of the suit which Riggs Bank has brought against the treasury department has been a noticeable attempt on the part of the Federal Reserve Board to curry favor with the bankers of the country.

Soon after this suit was filed it became evident the banking interests throughout the states where the National banks are the most numerous and the strongest were intending to make common cause, in moral support at least, with the Riggs Bank against the comptroller's oppressors, which they had all felt in some degree. It was also plain that it would be easy for the bankers to pass from an attitude of mental aloofness to one of active hostility to the Department—in which case there woulld be much to fear for the success of the Federal Reserve Bank system, depending as it does upon the whole-hearted co-operation of the bankers.

Accordingly, Comptroller Williams and his associates entered upon two sets of operations designed to allay the feeling against the McAdoo methods of using the National fiscal system for the paying off of old scores—personal political and sectional.

The first movement of this sort was a rearrangement of the boundary lines of the regional reserve bank districts, thus justifying criticism which arose when these lines were originally fixed in a manner to favor the home territory of the members of the Reserve Board and with an evident purpose to penalize New York for having become the financial and commercial center of the country.

This was heralded to the country as a great concession on the part of the Reserve Board; and it was intended that it might be taken as proof of the Board's desire to meet the wishes of the banks which pay the Board's expenses.

But there welled up from the banks no sounding psalms of praise such as the Board has so evidently expected. The banks utterly refused to look upon the Board's action as a gracious favor but maintained that it was,

(Continued on Page Five)

WHAT CHILD WELFARE WORK IS DOING

As one feature of the 1915 educational campaign for the saving of babies' lives, the State Department of Health has designated Sunday, June 20, as "Child Welfare Day." Pastors of all denominations have been asked to co-operate and are receiving from the department data upon which to base sermons or short talks at one of their services on that day.

The educational campaign of the Division of Child Hygiene of the Department of Health last year brought about a decrease in the infant death rate from 137 to 112 per thousand births. This means that approximately 1400 deaths of infants were prevented.

The campaign was almost entirely educational. Mothers were shown how to care for and feed their children, and communities were aroused to the necessity for child welfare work. Forty-five cities were visited by exhibits and 150 popular health lectures were given. Exhibits were also sent to country fairs and the smallest villages.

In his letter to the clergymen of the State asking for their co-operation on June 20, Commissioner Biggs says:

"As an indication of what it is possible to accomplish by public health education, and through the agencies developed thereby, there were 1,453 fewer deaths in New York State of infants under one year of age in 1914 than 1913. An aggregate of 1,453 mothers and fathers have been spared the grief which the loss of a child must surely entail in the home. Moreover, the State has gained 1,453 potential citizens, and the actual savings in dollars based on the earning capacity of a single individual amounts to a very large sum."

DEMAND FOR SKILLED LABOR GROWS IN EAST

New Haven, Conn.,—June7.—Twelve thousand additional machinists and toolmakers are needed in the munition plants in this city, Bridgeport, Waterbury, Hartford and New Britain to fill more than $100,000,000 in new war orders which were received yesterday.

Three-fourths of the new orders were placed through the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, of this city; the Waterbury Barrell Foundry and Machine Company, the Scoville Manufacturing Company and the E. J. Manville Machine Company, of Waterbury, and the Remington Arms-Union Metallic Cartridge Company and the British-American Artillery Company, of Bridgeport,. The North & Judd Manufacturing Company, of New Britain, has a $1,000,000 orderf rom the British government for soldiers' equipment straps.

Appeals for skilled workers, which the munition workers have issued from time to time, have resulted in flooding Connecticut cities with hordes of unskilled laborers and adventures. All who are willing to work have been absorbed through the demand for unskilled labor of all kinds that the war orders have caused. But the crying need now is for skilled labor.

The new war business is principally from Russia. The British, French and Italian governments are waiving the filling of orders for them on time to facilitate shipments to Russia. Only one-twentieth of the Connecticut shipments for Russia have reached their destination, it is said.

The Remington Arms-Union Metalllic Cartridge Company celebrated the completion of one of its twenty new factories last night by opening its five floors for an entertainment for its employes. Two floors were given over to dancing, one to vaudeville and one to a dinner. Ten thousand employes and their families attended.

CZAR'S FORCES TRY TO STOP RETREAT IN POLAND

Berlin, via London, June 7.—Advices from the Galician front continue to be extremely favorable to the Austro-Germans. According to a dispatch from the Austrian headquarters, the Russians are being manoeuvred oue of one position after another and are already in full retreat from Medyka, east of Prbemys. It is considered doubtful if they will be able to make a stand at Mosciska.

The line of the lakes running north and south through Grodek, which would be the next natural line of defence, is being taken on

(Continued on Eighth Page)

MESSAGE GOES TO BERLIN OFFICIALS EARLY TOMORROW

Way Open for Germany to Make Concessions—"Freedom of the Seas Main Issue"

Washington, June 7.—When the President returned to the White House this morning from the country it became known that his note to Germany will go overseas early tomorrow morning.

The belief grows stronger that if the diplomatic door is left even half way open to Germany she will take advantage of it to make a friendly reply. American diplomats clearly understand a friendly reply means another communication from this Government. The rejoinder of Germany is expected to make an argument and give her views, on international law and obligations in answer to those of President Wilson. The conviction is becoming rooted in the minds of American diplomats and some important members of the Diplomatic corps that Germany will need and may make sacrifices to get the support of the United States in favor of the ",freedom of the seas.'

All the intimation from the highest authoritative German sources abroad are that the final settlements in Europe must be based on "an open sea."

It is noted by American officials that in Germany's answer to the note, in which the clearing of the seas from mines was suggested, Germany in her answer indicated her agreement with that proposition.

Similarly, it is known by the previous notes of the President to Germany that he is aiming ultimately at the freedom of the seas. It is equally well understood that this postion of the President will be maintained in any settlement for bringing about peace in Europe.

The common sentiment of the United States and Germany on this fundamental doctrine is said here to be an intimation at least that there is no desire on the part of either nation to provoke a conflict which would impair the value of the United States as a most important factor in negotiations for peace in Europe.

It is announced today that the German Embassy has rented a summer house at Cedarhurst, Long Island. This is taken here as an indication amounting almost to a certainty that Count von Bernstorff has no expectation either of being ordered home or being handed his passoprts.

Administration officials are becoming restive and worried over the constant publication in the press of the country of stories that large orders for ammunition and other war materials are being given and filled, to be used against Germany.

The Administration is being informed by German-Americans that this information is being disseminated in Germany and is doing more to stir up feeling against the United States in Germany than anything else. It is pointed out that Germany has officially taken the position that the presence of such stores on passenger ships are, in part, a justification for attacking them, and in addition to that Germany has officially called the attention of the United States to the reports that new plans were being erected in the United States for turning out vast additional stores "to be used against Germany." This is regarded by her as incompatible with strict neutrality.

One of the stories which has stirred up American officials is that orders for one billion dollars' worth of munitions are "being rushed through in this country." It is alleged that "the Allies" have present contracts for supplies with thirty-seven American companies.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
E. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Monday, June 7, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Planter and Farmer

"They ought to raise less hell and more cotton." This comment of a breezy American statesman upon a turgulent district in the South was long ago deprived of its point by changed conditions.

Then followed a propaganda for diversification of crops, and the cry became, "Raise less cotton and more corn." None of the arguments presented, however, had an effect comparable with that of the object lesson presented by the recent relatively low price of cotton and the very high prices for grains.

As a result of these the Southern planter is growing less of his favorite staple—there will still be enough to go round—and producing more foodstuffs for his own consumption and for the markets, and he is going to share in the vast prosperity enjoyed by the Western farmer.—N. Y. Herald.

The Ideal of Bigness

James J. Hill the other day saw a locomotive on the Great Northern Railroad hauling 134 loaded cars, and said, "That is my ideal of the grandest thing in the world."

The railroad man was expressing an American ideal—the ideal of size. Largeness appeals to an American He lives in a broad-guaged country which measures thousands of miles around it, which has lofty mountains and huge rivers. Dwelling in a land of big things, the people have come to build things to match. There are few things which impress an American more than size, for it is one of his first standards by which he judges a thing. High skyscrapers, great cities, long railroads, big coaches, broad ranches and a train 134 cars long, all naturaly appeal to the imagination of an American.—Utica Observer.

This Generous City

Senator Wagner's proposal that the new constitution provide for a refund to New York city—or the counties within it—of their proportional share of the highway funds may not strike upstaters as desirable. If New York city had been more fairly, more considerately treated recently in legislative discussions of state financial problems such a suggestion probably would never have been made, for the sum of money the city could get from it would not be great. As matters stand, it is a good thing that it has been made, for too much emphasis cannot be laid on the fact that the metropolis considers itself victimized in the appropriating and spending of state moneys.

Under the operation of the highway laws state funds pay for the building of streets in country communities. There is not an upstate county which does not get some benefit from the huge highway funds. No state money helps New York city to maintain its streets. There are no state highways laid out in populous Manhattan, or even in the less populous regions of Brooklyn.

Yet New York city contributes its share—more than half the taxes which stand back of all this expenditure. And New York has not even its proper legislative representation so that it may have its say about the making of appropriations or the passing of laws bearing on the distribution of highway funds. New York, because of the concentration of business and property values here always expects to give more than it gets, but it also expects to serve notice from time to time on the rest of the state that there are limits to the pleasure of giving.—N. Y. Tribune.

WATER GLASS
EGG PRESERVER
By the Quart or Gallon
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

LET US PROFIT AT ONCE

Reverses in business and in other things should have their good effect upon us. During the last six months, or more, Fulton has surely suffered its reverses. While manufacturing in a general way has been satisfactory, the one particular exception to the rule, the dullness that has amounted to almost a complete cessation of work at the plant of the American Woolen Company should teach us its lesson. It should teach us that it is high time for the merchants through the Chamber of Commerce to look about for other sources of income and trade.

Industries are of course desirable but they are not the most staple things in the world. They take their place in line and when times are good they are very good to have indeed, but when times are bad silent machinery has a woefully depressing effect upon the average merchant.

The weekly payroll of the American Woolen Company affords a pretty sum of money to be spread around among the merchants of this city, but why be forever pinning our faith to the unstable thing? Usually it is with us when we miss it less, and we have it not when we need it most. The reverse is true of the trade and patronage of the farmers whose prosperous places dot the hills and valleys of the miles and miles of rich, fertile country surrounding Fulton on its four sides. Towns there are of the size of Fulton wherein there are no manufacturing establishments of note, yet there prosperity reigns twelve months of the year, because everything possible is done by the merchants to interest by giving bargain days, etc., to the farmers of the surrounding country.

Fulton lies in a particularly fortunate position. It has fertile land on its four sides. The people who till this land are blessedly prosperous. They make money and therefore have it to spend for the necessities of life, but like other people in other walks of life, they look for modern business methods to be adopted to get their interest. The big merchants are in most all cases big because they adopt big methods for securing big business. They are not afraid to spend $10 in an honest effort to win $1, believing that to get the trend of trade in their direction they will have done their best bit of salesmanship.

The Evening Times does not advocate the old time dishonest, catch-penny sale idea, but the modern, straight-from-the-shoulder idea of inducing by every fair means the bringing into the city the people of the rich farming country round about us, and if there is no better way than by offering $2 worth of merchandise for $1, and actually giving the value to the customer, then let us adopt the method.

INDUSTRIAL GERMAN POWER

It may be a little comforting to Americans to know that England was caught napping in its preparation for war about as much as America would be, but England's trouble ought to be our warning. David Lloyd-George has been stirring up the English and especially the labor employed in the manufacture of arms and munitions. He declared that if the allies in the west had been as well equipped with ammunition as the Germans, the latter would now be out of France and Flanders, fighting to protect their own borders. "Our Russian allies have suffered a severe setback," he continued. "The Germans have achieved great success. Why? Not because of the superior valor of their soldiers or the superiority of the German generals. The soldiers have fought well; they are commanded by one of the most brilliant generals in the battlefields of Europe. It is not owing to the superiority of German numbers, for the Russians have unlimited numbers." He attributed the German triumph entirely due to an overwhelming superiority of munitions and equipment. Victory has been won not by the strategy of German generals, or greater gallantry of German troops, but by the use they have made of skilled industries and especially by superior organization of the German workshops. He paid a tribute to German thoroughness.

Lloyd-George declared that it was industrial England that was deficient. Industrial Germany had well prepared the German empire for war. The allies were short of arms and ammunition. If, he said, the allies could have concentrated the fire of 200,000 shells an hour on the Germans in France, as the Germans did on the Russians at przemysl, they would have driven the Germans half way back to their borders before this. It was industrial Germany that has enabled the German armies to endure.

Industrial America, because of the European war, will be able to supply itself with sufficient arms and ammunition as, in fact, it now is supplying the allied armies in Europe. Lloyd-George's statement shows why the great demand of the allies for arms and ammunition in this country and justifies the German statement that if we did not furnish those supplies they would win a quick victory over the allies. But our defense is our navy and it isp retty evident that, while it is good for parade purposes in New York harbor, it is out of date as a fighting force to defend our coasts. Arms and ammunition and men we have aplenty. We can provide them quickly, but an effective navy cannot be created in a day.—Watertown Times.

The Scrap Book

One Way to Win a Stake.

In the old days they used to tell a story in New York about Fitz James O'Brien and Fletcher Harper, then the head of the Harper publishing house. O'Brien had a habit of always finding his way down to the Harper office when he was unsteady, as you call it, and borrowing money. One day the poet went down to Franklin square and begged Fletcher Harper to let him have $25. Harper refused, and this made O'Brien mad. He swore around, and finally, seeing a large placard with "Livingstone's Africa" printed on one side, he took it, turned it over and on the blank side drew in large black letters the words: "One of Harper's Authors. I am Starving."

PARADED UP AND DOWN.

Before any one was aware of his intention O'Brien had attached a string to the cardboard, hung it about his neck, walked down to the street and paraded up and down before the publishing house. Of course a large crowd gathered, but O'Brien was obdurate against all entreaties.

"Won't stop 'till I get some money from Harper," said he, and he didn't.

A compromise was soon effected through the medium of a five dollar bill, and O'Brien went on his way for that day.

Apparitions.

At noon of night and at the night's pale end,
Such things have chanced to me
As one by day would scarcely tell a friend
For fear of mockery.

Shadows, you say, mirages of the brain!
I know not, faith, not I.
Is it more strange the dead should walk again
Than that the quick should die?
—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

Nat's Wonderful Memory.

Nat Goodwin's Memoirs and the remarkable fidelity with which the famous actor has been able to recall in them so many things out of a long life crowded with rich and rare experiences, had been under discussion.

"Things he never could have made a memorandum of," said an admirer, "but pleasing things which must have impressed themselves on his mind, are set down in such a bright way as to show that they must have been written out of a remarkable memory."

"Does he remember all of his marriages?" lisped a sweet thing—all of this happened in a parlor of a Chicago hotel—"I should really like to know."

"Yes," was the enthusiastic answer. "He hasn't forgotten one."

"Then he has a remarkable memory indeed," sighed the voice.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Concrete Beds.

At the time when concrete beds for guns were being found—according, at least, to rumor—all over the allies' territory, an American in Paris went up to a policeman and said mysteriously: "Pst! Are you looking for German spies?" "Mais oui!" said the policeman, taking from under his cape his notebook and pencil. "Then," said the American, "go to the Hotel de Blanc and arrest the proprietor. He's put up at least two concrete beds there. I know, because my wife and I slept in 'em last night."

A Family Industry.

"Now," said Mr. Jones energetically, "I think it's high time, Jimmie, that you began to learn something, and I am going to teach you. We will begin by counting the people in our family."

"Yeth, thir," said Jimmie.

"Now, mother is one and I am one, so that makes two, doesn't it?"

"Yeth, thir," said Jimmie.

"And now, grandma is one, and she makes how many?"

Jimmie looked interested, but doubtful.

"Three, isn't it?" prompted father.

"Yeth, thir," said Jimmie.

"And now, there's grandpa. He makes—how many? Four, isn't it?"

"Yeth, thir," said Jimmie.

"And then there's Aunt Ellen. She makes—how many? Five, isn't it?"

"Yeth, thir," said Jimmie.

"Then there's Uncle Stephen. He makes"—

"But, daddy!" exclaimed Jimmie, "do they all make hominy?"—Youth's Companion.

What a Fall Was There!

The Criminal Law Magazine vouches for the following:

A young lawyer employed to defend a culprit charged with stealing a pig resolved to convince the court that he was born to shine. Accordingly he proceeded to deliver the following brilliant exordium: "May it please the court and gentlemen of the jury, while Europe is bathed in blood; while classic Greece is struggling for her rights and liberties and trampling the unhallowed altars of the bearded infidels to dust; while America shines forth the brightest orb in the political sky—I, with due diffidence, rise to defend the cause of this humble hog thief."

WITH THE STATE EDITORS

Secretary Hugo evidently isn't afraid of work and it's a very good quality in a servant of the people. He says there are too many state jobs and his office can easily take over the work of some of the present board. A cahnce for practical demonstration might serve a profitable purpose.—Gloversville Leader-Republican.

* * *

After completing his task of passing upon the appropriation bills of the Legislature for the next fiscal year and giving his approval to the bill for a direct tax of $19,500,00, Governor Whitman issued a statement in explanation and justification of the Legislature in relation to this matter and the confusion of counsel that appeared regarding the need of the appropriations and the necessity for the direct tax, it must be said that the Governor's statement is on the whole convincing. The appropriation bills, apart from those reappropriating funds already provided and held over, amounted to $65,199,898, and he succeeded in cutting them down only to $63,370,982.—Journal Commerce.

* * *

The Press calls attention to the article headed "What the State Must Pay, and Why," to be found elsewhere in this issue. It is Governor Whitman's explanation of his action on the appropriation bills, and is intended for the information of the taxpayers. They should peruse it carefully, if they wish to obtain accurate information on the subject of appropriations, for the memorandum is full, complete and exhaustive. It gives the facts and nothing but the facts, and these are what ought most to concern those who pay the taxes.—Plattsburgh Press.

* * *

Looked at from the large and independent viewpoint, the Governor deserves well of the State, and can comfort himself with the reflection that the more the people study his record in office, the better pleased they will be with the results.—Brooklyn Times.

* * *

If it had not been for the war, foreign cheap-made goods under a Democratic free trade tariff would have absolutely overwhelmed the country, and poverty and idleness and want would have been far greater than they are today. While our imports have increased, our revenues have decreased. The falling off of the revenue is not due to lack of imports, but to lack of tariff. The advantage of the tariff is now going to the foreigner, and the American people are paying a direct tax to make up this sum that a Democratic administration has given to our foreign rivals.—Daily Saratogian.

VARIETY TEST FOR SEED CORN GOES ON

The Farm Bureau has placed seed corn of ten leading varieties in four sections of the county in an effort to find the most suitable ensilage corn that can be raised.

The Farm Bureaus of the northern counties of the State are co-operating in this work. Last year it was found on the average that the flint varieties of silage corn out-yielded the dent varieties in green matter.

The following is the report of the variety test for the season of 1914:

S. Lawrence county, Dent Variety, 16.8 tons; flint variety, 17.1 tons.

Jefferson county, dent variety, 11.33 tons; flint variety, 9.61 tons.

Clinton county, dent variety, 13.8 tons; flint variety, 13.6 tons.

Franklin county, dent variety, 13.9 tons; flint variety, 15.8 tons.

Oswego county, dent variety, 13.4 tons; flint variety, 13.8 tons.

Average, dent variety, 13.8 tons; Average, flint variety, 13.98 tons.

As the food value is in the dry matter and not in the water, a variety of corn should be selected which will at least reach the glazing stage in an average year.

The varieties being tested this year are Bailey's Early Dent, Eureka, Longfellow, Early Huron, U. S. No. 133, Leaming Hall's Golden Nugget, King Phillip, Angel of Midnight and Sanford.

In order to secure an average for this county the corn has been placed in the towns of Granby, West Monroe Parish and Mexico.

NEW YORK CLERGY AT WORK TO SAVE FRANK

New York, June 5.—A score of New York clergymen of all denominations have appended their signatures to a petition to Governor Slaton to commute the sentence of Frank.

Among ministers signing the petition are Charles E. Jefferson, Charles S. MacFarland, William Pierson Merrill, S. H. McKinney, Orville Reed, William P. Schell, C. L. Thompson, John Dixon, Moses Breeze, Jeesse C. Bruce, Dana G. Wylie, Adam Campbell, Stanley White, Ralph A. Felton, Harrry Wade Hicks, Nolan R. Best, Wilbert W. White, George Alexander, Robert F. Y. Peirce and Arthur J. Smith.

Miss Grace E. McConnell of No. 56 West 17th st. who is at the head of the movement to send the petition to Governor Slaton, yesterday issued a special call for prompt action.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer.
adv

THIS little woman, with true motherly instincts, wants to bring her boy up to manhood with a clean record, proper tastes and with the best possible prospect of success.

But, say, do you see that pistol in his hand? That little codger has been to some carnival sideshow where the wild eyed broncho busters were shooting up things.

And he wants to be one himself. Consequently he is doing his best to imitate them now. He can scarcely wait to grow up.

Say, folks, herein lies the worldwide difference about the Chautauqua. It is practically the only form of popular amusement that the boy and girl may see in full and go home and tell mother about it without a blush.

The Chautauqua inspires youth, but it inspires them in the right direction. It is a man builder, a home builder, a nation builder and a destiny builder.

The Redpath Chautauqua, opening here soon, commands your respect and invites your presence.

THINKS NATIVE DRAMA ON WANE

Edwin Arden Blames Directors For Decadence of Stage Art

NOT ENOUGH ORIGINALITY

Actors Become Mere Puppets and Managers Pull Strings, View of Noted Player—Pessimistic As To Future.

Edwin Arden, the famous actor now starring in pictures with Pathe, has some interesting things to say about the decline of modern dramatic art, and lays the blame upon the stage directors.

"I would infinitely prefer to be a poor original than a good copy," he says with emphasis, "and now after many battles with directors who wanted to do my thinking for me and make me imitate some one else, I am left alone to play my parts in the way I conceive they should be played. I had a lesson early in my theatrical life upon this very question, and it made a lasting impression upon me, coming as it did from the great Edwin Booth himself. At the time of which I speak I was a member of Mr. Booth's company, playing Shakespeare in the old Boston Museum, that great school of the best dramatic art. One day I was to play a part in Othello and went to Mr. Booth asking him how he wanted me to play Cassio, and if he had any ideas for my instruction. 'No, I have not,' said Mr. Booth very gently, 'but the part must be played well or tomorrow some one else will play it.'"

Edwin Arden.

Mr. Arden, considerably disturbed but put upon his mettle, went home and studied the part as he had never studied before. He analyzed it until he had gotten a clear conception of Cassio's character, of every emotion of which he was capable. He played the part and in a way to meet Mr. Booth's approval, and then and there became convinced that to play a part properly one must take no second-hand knowledge, but really think and live the character.

Not long afterwards the young actor was out of an engagement, and starving in a hall bedroom in New York. He denied himself food in order to keep his clothing presentable, and thus make it easier to place himself. Finally he was offered a small part with the Madison Square Company, at that time the most prominent of all the New York companies. He was given his part, studied it carefully, and then went to the rehearsal. After he had played the character as he conceived it, the director yelled at him. "Here, you," he said, "I won't have you play it that way. Do this and this and this," and showed him what he meant. Young Arden replied "do I understand you to say that you want to do my thinking for me, and that you leave me no option as to how I shall play my role?" The director replied that that was correct, and that he was paid to do the thinking, and the actors were merely to carry out his ideas. "Then you want another man for this part," said young Arden, "I refuse to be a parrot," and he left the stage and the job which meant so much to him. As he was leaving the theatre a man sitting in the darkness in the back of the house stopped him and asked him where he had played before. Mr. Arden told him with Thomas M. Keen and Edwin Booth. His questioner then told him to go back on the stage and play his role his own way, and informed him he was Mr. F——————, one of the owners of the company. From that day to this Mr. Arden has always insisted upon a free hand where it came to his own work.

Mr. Arden is frankly pessimistic as regards the future of the American stage under present conditions. He says that since directors do not want originality and initiative in the actors these qualities are becoming atrophied. When the few real stars of the stage are gone there will be none to take their places, for the newer generation, with few exceptions, has not been permitted to develop its own talent.

HIS OWN LIFE A MOVIE DRAMA

Rise of Donald Mackenzie Reads Like Film Play

BORN AND BRED IN SCOTLAND

Poor Boy of the Highlands Now Famed as Screen Director—Many Successes in America for "Gillie" of Seventeen Years Ago.

Some sixteen or seventeen years ago, in one of those sections of the Scottish Highlands so remote that Gaelic is still spoken and the old men still tell legends their fathers told them of "Prince Charlie," an English nobleman leased several thousand acres of land for the shooting.

Arriving at the tiny village on the property which he had leased he sought information as to the best man available for him to hire to accompany him on his shooting trips. The answer he received was the same from each man he asked—"Donald Mackenzie is a guid mon." The Englishman sought out the popular favorite and found a square jawed, square set young fellow of some seventeen or eighteen yars old, who vowed with quiet confidence that he could give satisfaction. That was the parting of the ways for the Scotch boy. Sprung from godly parents who had taught him the best they knew how with the few books at their command he knew as well as they that the ambitions which controlled him could find no attractive goal in his native village—that neither wealth nor fame lay for him among the frowning mountains, along the flashing streams or where the heather empurpled the upland pastures. The Englishman took a great interest in the lad. The long days of close companionship on lonely moors brought them together in a way unusual between employer and employee, and when the season ended, the young man bade farewell to home and parents, turned his back upon the foggy mountains and accompanied the nobleman to London.

There the education of the Scotch boy went on apace. Treated as a friend by his patron he enjoyed all the advantages that good society could give. It was found that he had a splendid bass voice, and he was much in demand at private musicales. One day a prominent theatrical man heard him and offered him an operatic engagement at Daly's Theatre in London to play the part of Lord Enchester in "The Country Girl." He accepted and made good in the role, and so was secured by the late Augustin Daly to play the same part in the United States.

Engagements with Lulu Glaser in "Dolly Varden," the W. T. Carleton Opera Company, "The Mayor of Tokio," and "The Time, the Place and the Girl" followed. Mr. Mackenzie tells with gusto how he got his first big chance. He made it a rule to understudy every big part to which he was suited, and one night he was playing in "When Johnny Came Marching Home," when W. T. Carleton, who was playing the general, became seized with heart failure in the biggest scene of all, staggered to the wings and then fell. Quick as a flash our Scotchman shot out of the front, took up the part where it had been left off, and to the amazement of the company finished the act in that part without making a single error. At the close of the act, while the doctors were attending to Mr. Carleton, Mr. Mackenzie changed to the sick man's costume and finished the performance as the general.

The next day Mr. Carleton showed his gratitude by raising Mr. Mackenzie's salary and giving him the part. A friendship sprang up between the two which has endured through the years and which was shown by Mr. Mackenzie giving to Mr. Carleton the part of the governor in his fine picture, "The Pardon."

Mr. Mackenzie has been associated with Pathe for over three years as actor and producer. In the "Perils of Pauline" he not only appeared in several episodes as "the pirate" (a part which made a big hit), but he directed the production of many of the episodes himself. Today he is reputed to be making big money by producing pictures which are released through Pathe. His most recent production the fine three-part Pathe drama, "The Pardon," has received flattering reviews and has been booked by the Loew theatres for fifty days solid.

NOVELS TO BE FILMED

William J. Locke's "The Beloved Vagabond," and Richard Harding Davis' "The Galloper," are to be picturized by Pathe.

"The Beloved Vagabond" is one of Locke's most successful novels and was presented on the London stage by Mr. Beerbohm Tree, England's most famous actor.

"The Galloper" was played by Raymond Hitchcock for a number of seasons, and was then made into a musical comedy. It is a highly amusing farce detailing the adventures of a young millionaire who finds himself compelled to take upon his shoulders the identity of a much-ly married war correspondent, Kirke Warren. The story has a Graeco-Turkish atmosphere, and the millionaire while dodging bomb shells and divorced wives goes through many uproarious situations.

ANIMATED CARTOONS IN MOVING PICTURES

Interesting Description of Tedious Process—Thousands of Drawings Required for One Film—Latest Idea in World of Motion Photography Explained, in Interview, by Originator J. R. Bray

Mention the name "Colonel Heeza Liar" to almost anyone and you'll see his or her face light up and a smile spread all over it. Who doesn't know the funny little Colonel—who hasn't laughed at his antics as he hunted wild beasts in Central Africa, outwitted cannibals on the River of Doubt, cultivated his farm with the aid of some strange assistants, and hunted ghosts in Castle Clare? The Colonel's friends are legion—probably no films made have as large a following young and old alike as these, and speculation has been wide as to how these pictures are made—what gives the drawings those life-like motions, and who is the genius who creates them.

J. R. Bray, Film Cartoonist.

J. R. Bray is the originator and creator of these drawings, and he was the first to put motion into the drawing itself. That there is no royal road to success is again proven by the fact that Mr. Bray started his experiments over seven years ago, and that was when motion pictures were still very young. Years of careful, arduous work were necessary before the results satisfied him. Today he is the head of an organization devoted to making his pictures, has a corps of artists working under his supervision and has patents on his process which cover the use of transparent material or material made transparent by any agency whatever in the making of animated drawings.

Col. Heeza Liar's African Hunt.

Topical Cartoon from Pathe News.

Mr. Bray was found in his sunny New York studio engaged in conducting Heeza Liar through another series of escapes. Tall, slender and blond, he looks more like a successful business man than an artist. Mr. Bray readily consented to talk about his work.

"The public," he said, "demands drawn illustrations which reveal the personality of the artist. The newspapers and magazines all prove that. It is easily seen that to illustrate fiction, for instance, a photograph rarely can be well used. The artist's drawing, on the other hand, can be idealized to fit the situation. This value of the illustration was recognized in everything but motion pictures, and now there too it has found its place. It is well to remember that an artist can draw that which is a physical impossibility for an actor to enact before a camera. The artist's possibilities are unlimited. The opportunity for real humor may be seen when one reflects that the humorous is almost invariably the unusual.

"Very few artists have the ability to make drawings that move. An extraordinary imagination is absolutely essential, as is also a perfect knowledge of the science of motion. Problems come to the artist in this work that never arise in ordinary art. I have employed some very able artists to assist me in this work, and find that very few of them can get the knack. For instance, one of the hardest things in the world to handle in these animated drawings is perspective. To have a figure come from the far horizon straight toward the observer—to have it grow from a dot to the proper size and preserve the 'balance'—makes an almost insurmountable problem. I think I am correct in saying that not one artist in a thousand can put motion into drawings."

Few people would have the patience to do Mr. Bray's work. It takes between four and five thousand drawings to make 1,000 feet or one reel of film. In addition to the colossal toil of the art work it takes a week to photograph the drawings one at a time. Great speed united with unvarying accuracy is essential. Every stroke of the pen must count. Mr. Bray works so fast that he is able to keep four trained artists "inking in" the outline drawings which he makes. The necessity for accuracy is evident when it is learned that the drawings are magnified on the screen at least 25 times.

Mr. Bray spent years in study before he attempted to make an animated cartoon film. For months he haunted the Bronx Zoo in order to study the animals there and analyze their motions. He even bought a large farm across the Hudson from Poughkeepsie and stocked it with various animals in order to further extend his knowledge of animal anatomy. The result of these studies finds expression in the life-like motions of the various animals which move across his films.

He was born in Detroit, Michigan, and has lived in New York since 1901. He was for seven years a newspaper artist, being also a steady contributor to the humorous weeklies, such as "Life," "Puck," and "Judge." He took his ideas to Pathe Freres over three years ago, since he felt that such a house, with its many foreign branches, could give him a larger international circulation than any other. The Pathe officials at once saw the value of his work, and from that day to this he has dealt only with Pathe. Millions of persons have laughed and are laughing at the "Heeza Liar" and "Police Dog" series, and his political cartoons in the Pathe News, the motion picture weekly, have attracted widespread newspaper comment. Mr. Bray has truly originated a new school of art.

BARRYMORE NOW A PICTURE STAR

Lionel, Brother of John and Ethel, Featured on Screen

STUDIED PAINTING ABROAD

Now Finds That Making Pictures Is More Profitable Than Painting Them—Added to "Romance of Elaine" Star Company.

Lionel Barrymore, nephew of John Drew and celebrated brother of the famous John and Ethel Barrymore, will be featured in motion pictures this summer.

This is not Mr. Barrymore's first appearance on the screen—he has had important parts in several big productions, but it is with the legitimate stage that his name has been most associated. He was broken into the profession by his uncle, John Drew, with whom he played for a number of years. Among the famous plays with which he was identified were "The Mummy and the Humming Bird", "The Other Girl", Barrie's play "Pantaloon", "The Best of Friends", and "Sag Harbor", with James A. Hearne. After playing in "The Other Girl", Mr. Barrymore fulfilled youthful aspirations by going to Paris to study painting, an occupation so fascinating that it held him in France for three years. Mr. Barrymore says that when he returned to America he found his fellow artists in the cast of "The Other Girl" all famous—Richard Bennett, Wally Eddinger, Doris Keen, and Tully Marshall, which caused him to think hard upon the old saw about the cobbler sticking to his last. Then he decided there was more money in acting in pictures than in painting them and worked in a number of feature productions.

Lionel Barrymore

Mr. Barrymore owns a fine summer home at Rocky Point, Long Island, but says that he has been trying in vain for years to get acquainted with it. No sooner does he start to leave town than he is offered a fat engagement which no sane man could refuse.

History repeated itself with him this year since on the eve of his departure for Rocky Point he was offered an engagement with Pathe to play the "heavy" in "The Romance of Elaine", a well known serial photoplay. The fact that his work would take him to Ithaca, N. Y., where his lines would be cast in pleasant places, reconciles Mr. Barrymore to another summer's exile from the mansion he cannot use.

U. S. REGULARS IN BIG FEATURE

Mackenzie Uses Cavalry in Stirring Scenes.

Donald Mackenzie, the Pathe producer, has just finished making a four-reel feature called "The Fortunes of Peter," which has all the earmarks of a notable success. Mr. Mackenzie had a cast of well-known players, most of whom have already achieved fame on the screen.

George Probert, who won golden opinions as Oskar Von Guggen in "Innocent" and the Cadet in "The Lure," has the lead and this picture marks his debut before the camera. Mr. Probert confesses that his first two days of picture acting were little less than torture to him. The sight of the lens staring at him all the time was infinitely more dreadful than the batteries of critical eyes on a big "opening night."

Paul Panzer, after weeks of successful vaudeville touring, returns to the screen again in this picture. Mr. Panzer, it will be remembered, made himself the best-hated villain in the country through his work as "Owen" in "The Perils of Pauline."

Other members of the cast are Miss Alma Martin, a popular favorite in the "legitimate," Sam Ryan, who has been in many Pathe pictures, and Charles Bunnell, who was with the Pathe St. Augustine Company in the winter of 1913-14.

The picture required hundreds of supers and Mr. Mackenzie made arrangements for a troop of cavalry, regulars of the United States Army, to appear in a number of stirring scenes.

George Brackett Seitz wrote the scenario.

CAMERAMAN SHOT AT FRONT

Intrepid Movie Photographer Hurt Taking War Pictures

PRESENT AT PRZEMYSL SIEGE

Shrapnel Hits Photo Man With Besieging Troops—Petrograd Grants Him Russian Decoration for Bravery.

It's a long, long way from New York to the place with the unforgettable, unpronounceable name, Przemysl, but it seems less when one sees certain very fine pictures of the siege in the Pathe News pictures and learns that the special correspondent, Ercole, who took them, has been wounded and decorated for bravery under trying conditions.

When it was learned that Przemysl was destined to become famous in spite of its name, the Pathe News sent its special war correspondent in Russia, Mr. Ercole, straight to the Galician front to the Russian army besieging the city. He was sent there to get pictures, and he did so. While he was turning his camera he was hit by a piece of shrapnel and painfully wounded, but he did not cease to turn and in consequence has been decorated by the Imperial Government of Russia with the Cross of the Order of St. George.

His films were rushed by way of the Pathe Agencies in Moscow, Stockholm and London to the United States, so on the very day the newsboys were using their 57 different ways of pronouncing Przemysl to tell the public that the Austrian fortress had fallen, all over the United States people were seeing in the "News" one of the big scoops of the year.

Mr. Ercole is not resting on his laurels. He has been sent to another place, where important things are going to happen, and in consequence expects shortly to put over another big scoop.

PEARL WHITE, FAVORITE

"World's Champion Movie Fan" Calls Pretty Star Best.

Mrs. Barbara Guentert of St. Louis is called by the "Post Dispatch" of that city, "the world's champion movie fan," and with good reason. It seems that Mrs. Guentert has missed only two evenings in over five years in seeing the picture show at the Fairy Theatre on Easton Avenue.

Every night Mrs. Guentert and her little son are to be found in the same seats watching the pictures with as much interest as though it was their first experience. Together they have spent 1,800 evenings at the theatre, have paid $180 in admissions, and have seen 9,000 different films.

Pearl White.

Mrs. Guentert, it may be seen, can certainly lay claim to being a picture expert. When asked to name the players she thought the best, she mentioned only four, all of them famous, one of them being Pearl White, the Pathe star.

SPLENDID STUDIO SITE

Secures Extensive Property at Ithaca, N. Y., for Filming of Dramas.

The Pathe producers, Wharton, Inc., have leased with option of purchase, Renwick Park, a well-known lakeside resort at Ithaca, N. Y. The property has been used as an amusement resort for some years and comprises 45 acres of land situated at the head of beautiful Cayuga Lake and lying between the lake and the city. A city trolley line runs into the park and furnishes excellent service.

A number of large buildings such as auditoriums, pavilions, etc., on the place needed only a little remodelling to make them very well adapted to picture work. There are frontier settlement streets, log cabins, —all the locations necessary to western work, as well as a splendid 400 foot pier extending into the lake.

Equally beautiful locations would be difficult to find anywhere in the East.

D/34

Have You Seen
THE LATEST STYLES
of
SOLID SILVERWARE
G. B. FARLEY
[illegible] First Street
Can show you a full line. Just the kind for WEDDING GIFTS

We are Agents for
CHASE & SANBORN'S
Fine Teas and Coffees
LA PORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida St. Hello 75

GOVERNMENT PROSECUTES BILLBOARD TRUST

Chicago, June 7.—The Federal authorities are preparing to bring a criminal prosecution against the Billposters' trust, as a result of revelations made of its methods in the civil suit brought against the association before Judge Landis in the United States District Court.

Subpoenas were issued May 24 and 25 in the name of the grand jury citing a number of witnesses who have appeared for the government in its civil suit to appear before the jury forthwith.

United States District Attorney Clyne, who, with the aid of Morgan L. Davies, special prosecutor, is conducting the civil suit, is expected to conduct the investigation before the grand jury in person. He will have, it is believed, all the aid necessary from the office of United States Attorney Gregory, whom he has frequently consulted as to the merits of the government's case.

LOCAL WOMEN ATTEND DINNERS

A number of local women, mainly graduates of Syracuse University, wereg uests on Saturday at their respective chapter houses at the university.

Dr. H. M. Doane was a dinner guest at Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority chapter house. Mrs. L. P. Smith at the Gamma Phi Beta house and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon and Mrs. Ethel Dunham attended the general alumnal dinner on the hill.

CITY SHOULD SHAVE FUND

Senator Wagner Wants New Apportionment for Five Counties

Albany, June 5.—Senator Robert F. Wagner introduced a proposed amendment to the Constitution to permit New York city to get its share of money paid for state highways. He said that the city last year contributed to the highways fund $13,000,000 out of a total of $18,000,000, and received nothing in return.

"The city supports, at its own expense, about 23,000 miles of streets," said Senator Wagner. "The rest of the state does not contribute to our street system, but we contribute $13,000,000 to upstate highways, in addition to bearing the entire expense of our own streets.

"The people of the City of New York do not wish the people of the rest of the state to share in the expense of their streets, nor do they wish to avoid their obligation as citizens of the state to contribute to the improvement and maintenance of the entire state. But we ought to insist that we share in the benefits accruing to the state as an entirety to which we contribute about 73 per cent of the money.

New York Gave $13,000,000

"My amendment provides that the city of New York shall receive for each county situated in it the average amount apportioned to the other counties of the state. Thus, if $18,000,000 be apportioned among fifty-five counties, the average would be about $330,000 for each county, and New York city would receive a refund of five times that amount, or about $1,650,000. When it is considered that $13,000,000 was contributed, the sum of $1,650,000 is not a greater return than New York city should receive.

"In other words, the constitution authorizes the raising of $50,000,000, to which New York city contributes about $36,500,000 and which, divided among fifty-five counties, gives about $900,000 to each county. New York city would receive back about $4,500,000, thus lessening our net contribution to $32,000,000 and saving the difference for our own people."

An amendment proposed by Ray B. Smith, of Syracuse, would take from the Governor the power of removing county officials and vest it with the Appellate Division.

Would Change Conservation Scheme

A board of twelve members, to be vested with discretionary powers relative to the state's future conservation policy, would be created by a proposed amendment introduced in the Constitution Convention by Ferris J. Meigs, of Tupper Lake.

"The policy now in force and followed since the adoption of the present constitution," said Mr. Meigs, "has increased the ownership of the state in forest lands, has increased the timber and preserved it from spoilation, but has discouraged the use of lands by camping parties, has prevented the building of many roads and has permitted heavy waste."

The proposal provides for constitutional safeguards for the forest preserve, but would permit the conservation board to direct the state policy as to disposition of waterpower, second growth and dead timber and reforestation. The board members would be elected by the Legislature and serve without compensation.

SPECIAL TAXES MUST BE PAID THIS MONTH

Liquor dealers, oleomargarine dealers, dealers in tobacco, proprietors of billiard rooms and moving picture theatres are required to pay special tax on or before July 1st. Doctors, druggists and veterinarians who sell or dispense narcotics are also required to register on or before that date. The taxes imposed under the Emergency Act (dealers in tobacco, billiard rooms and theatres) are to be collected for six months. The regular and Narcotic Law taxes will be collected for the full year. Deputy Collector Kernan will be at the Clark House, this city, Wednesday, June 16, for the purpose of advising taxpayers regarding the law and will assist applicants in the preparation of their returns.

NEW LABOR LAWS IN THE STATES

Statutes Relative to Employment of Women Most Numerous

Washington, June 7.The labor legislation of 1914 is reviewed in a bulletin issued by the United States Departmetn of Labor, which says that although this was an "off year" for the legislatures of many states a total of 17 law-making bodies met in regular or special session during 1914.

"As at other times," says the department's summary of legislation, "the laws relating to the employment of women and children are most numerous, 26 separate enactments affecting 12 jurisdictions falling under this head. One of these was the eight hour law for women in the District of Columbia, which was enacted by Congress.

"If to this number be added the factory regulations that are often indirectly due to the presence of women and child workers in industrial establishments, the public interest of employes would appear to be great and influential.

"Occasionally, however, a bit of regressive legislation action is found, as in the Maryland statute reducing the age for children in street trades, or that of Mississippi fixing a lower age for the regulation of hours of labor of children in cotton and knitting mills than is provided in other industries.

"But on the whole there is a steady advance in the States named, as well as others, in the direction of better protective legislation for the classes of persons who are, as the Supreme Court has pointed out, in need of special legislation that their rights may be preserved and on whom the future of the race depends.

"Masculine interests were looked after in 1914 in laws requiring frequent wage payments by public service corporations, and the redemption of script or coupons in Mississippi, the weighing of coal before screening in Ohio and regulating the working time of stationary firemen in Louisiana and of workers in compressed air rin New Jersey.

"A railroad full-crew law was enacted in Mississippi and one was repealed by referendum in Missouri Kentucky adopted a new mining code and the Wisconsin Industrial Commission drew regulations for the protection of working men engaged in building operations. Workmen's compensation received attention from three or four legislatures by way of amending acts, while new laws were enacted in Kentucky, Lonisiana and Maryland."

SCOUTS HIKED AND HAD BIG EATS

Saturday a host of scouts hiked to Rice's corners and there 'mid rolls, baked beans, bacon, "doggies," cookies, coffee and marshmallows life took on a rosy hue.

After a few [illegible] demonstrations were given the dusty, [illegible] organization arrived in the city about 9 o'clock.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By FREDERIC T. CARDOZE

Albany, June 7.—Prominent representatives of corporations which are under the jurisdiction of the public serivec commissions, will be in Albany on Wednesday of the present week to attend the hearing to be given by the committee on Public Utilities of the Constitutional Convention. The hearing will be upon three proposed amendments to the article five, which relates to public service commissions, introduced by Delegates Jacob Gould Schurman, William M. K. Olcott and James M. Foley.

Since the legislative probe into the workings of the public service commission of the first and second districts has resulted in nothing more serious than the discovery of laxity on the part of some of the first district commissioners, the deelgates who have offered the proposed Constitutional amendments have evidently taken the step to insure better administration of the public service commissions law by strengthening the statute.

The amendment offered by Delegate Olcott creates a public utilities commission by abolishing the present public service commissions after January 16, 1916. All their jurisdiction are to be vested in the new body which shall be divided into two parts, each with five members to serve the first and second districts respective Each member is to serve five years, is to be appointed by the governor and receive a salary of $15,000 a year. Decisions of the commissioners are to be subject to review by the Appellate Division and by the Cuort of Appeals, under such reasonable regulations as the legislature may prescribe and until action by the legislature such decisions and orders may be reviewed by a writ of certiorari.

The proposed amendment by Delegate Schurman creates Constitutional officers of the present public service commissioners who shall hold office for ten years. A commissioner may be removed by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. No commissioner shall be removed except upon charges specified in the recommendation of the governor personally served upon such commissioner and upon which he shall have an opportunity to be heard before the Senate.

Delegate Foley's proposed amendment embraces the text of the proposal of Delegate Schurman with reference to the creating of Constitutional officers of the ten public service commissioners. Delegate Foley was a Democratic member of the Legislative committee which investigated the two public service commissions.

It is not at all unlikely that when the hearing is held some of those who speak upon the merits of the three propositions will be plain spoken. It has been hinted that attempts will be made to have the salary of public service commissioners reduced, since judges of the Court of Appeals receive less than do the commissioners. Delegate-at-lare Alphonso T. Clearrwater has open criticized the practice of making the compensation of a business man sitting in a quasi-judicial capacity, more than that of a mem ber of the highest court in the State.

Hon. Ledyard P. Hale, counsel for the public service commission, second district, is chairman of the Constitutional Convention committee on Public Utilities which will hold the hearings the day after tomorrow.

NORTH HALF OF BRIDGE REMOVED

Today the workmen, who are engaged in removing the old canal bridge at the foot of Oneida st., will have finished entirely the north half. Mr. Alderman, under whose supervision the work is being done said this morning that the space left vacant by the removal of one-half of the bridge will have to be filled in with dirt and graded so that traffic over the lower bridge will not be interfered with. The trolley tracks will also have to be laid there and the portion of the bridge now being used cannot be taken down until the dirt road is constructed.

The rapidity with which the demolishing of the bridge has been carried on is due to the use of the new oxyacetelyn process, wherein a heat of 2,000 degrees is generated, and the flame [illegible] its way through the iron rapidly.

OUR NEED OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

(Continued from Page One)

well spent, and the world well lost, that faces life's problems and meets its experiences, and comes to the close with nothing to show but the acquisition of a real, living, humble faith in Jesus Christ.

The Second Thought

Again I call your attention to the second thought:

2. The relation of the Holy Spirit to the Church.

There has been a dispensation of the Father and of the Son; the present one being that of the Holy Spirit. When we speak of the dispensation of the Spirit we do not mean that Jesus is now less in emphasis, nor that the Spirit has been inactive until now. But by the atonement a new race has been founded and the Head of this new race has given the work of building up this race to the Holy Spirit. Listen to the words of Jesus. And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high, Luke 24-49. This is a special wife for the church. Not for the unregenerate. Listen again to the Word of life, speaking of the same gift he said, "Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not neither knoweth Him; but ye know him for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you." John 14-17. This gracious gift has been bestowed on every earnest and honest seeker since the day of Pentecost.

The key to the book of Acts is found in the first chapter and second verse. It also reveals the great plan by which He purposes through the Holy Spirit and the call of the Gospel to call out a people for His name. The risen and ascended Lord is still working, revealing, teaching, but all thru the Holy Spirit. "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost," is a revelation of God's will to all. And that individual or church so endured holds the Gospel, and effectually brings it to the world. Clothed with this dynamic force the Gospel does not fail. The plan of our Lord and the purpose of His gospel is to call out and separate unto Himself a holy people zealous of good works. In this it has gloriously succeeded. The Scriptures do not teach the conversion of the world during this age. If it did then it has lamentably failed. The present dispensation shows no prospect of the millenium until Jesus comes. Theosophy, occultism, spiritualism, practical infidelity, political fermentation, financial inequality and social unrest are ot trending towards holiness, nor evolving millennial glory. A century ago minerals for implements of war were bought by the pound; but now they are eagerly sought in hundred ton quantities. Is the Gospel a failure? No. "Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." This does not at all reflect upon the power of the Gospel or the work of the Holy Spirit. A faithful man may preach a full Gospel, rejoice over them that believe and are saved, and weep over the majority of people unsaved. The Jews rejected Christ and turned away from Paul. Men now reject the Gospel and "are lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." Wherein then is the work of the Holy Spirit and call of the Gospel a success? The Holy Spirit through the preaching of the Gospel has gloriously succeeded in calling out from the world: in saving and preserving a holy people who would rather obey God than man. The true church is the ecclesia) the "called out assembly." When Jesus comes to reign on earth, encompassed by shining millions saved by the pow er of the Gospel, we shall see that it was not a failure.

Again, there is no substitute for this mighty and efficient agent. The writer once listened to three strong and eloquent addresses on the work of the church and the winning of souls. Not once did the speaker mention a word about the work of the Holy Spirit in relation thereto. No well organized committees, no amount of smooth running church machinery, no sensational hits, no pulpit slang (called Gospel) can atone for the evident loss in some places of this divine afflatus, this miracle working power. With this gracious influence in her power how glorious would be the consequences. Without it we may be Sampson indeed, but Sampsons shorn of our strength, cheerless and sightless, subjects to the jibes and jeers of a scoffing world. With it the church may lay hold of the strongholds of Satan and bring them to her feet. With the wisdom and power which it bestows the church is able to meet and master all of the perplexing problems of moral reform that have hung their gloomy forms across her pathway. Its breath would bring unction and energy into the services of the sanctuary, it would sweep the resurrection power all through the valley of dry bones; it would transform its membership into a faithful Caleb or a believing Joshua; it would go to the sick room and breath a fragrance as from the trees of Paradise; it would cause its possessor to walk through all the conflicts of life with a heavenly mien and triumphant tread; it would cast o'er the pathway of the erring one in his course of folly, a mighty conviction, Gospel. O the charm that it would impart to the very name of Christianity, causing hungry and eager souls to look longingly forth for the riches of His grace, and bringing to the heart of the worldling the gladdened notes of redemption's song. Through all the earth the bright effulgence of the Son of righteousness would blaze and cast a flame of celestial fire athwart the pathway of her teeming myriads.

O let pulpit and pew receive it, and inflamed with its divinity, from its moral center will radiate rays of light that would burst upon this nightbound earth and from caverns, valleys and mountains, will ascend a volume of praise through the trackless skies that will hasten the coming of her bridegroom, and regenerated nations will sit at His feet and sing Messiah's triumphant song.

BEAUTY IS COMPLETE
only when the teeth are perfect. One ugly or missing tooth will spoil one's whole appearance. There is no need for poor or ugly teeth.
OUR PAINLESS DENTAL WORK
makes the extracting or filling of a tooth no more annoying than sitting for your picture. Our moderate scale of charges makes it possible for everybody to have their teeth looked after as they should be. So don't delay. Come and have us look after yours.
Bring this ad. and get $1.00 worth of work Free.
DR. H. W. WHITNEY
113 Oneida St. Fulton, N.Y.

All Kinds of
GARDEN SEEDS
by the ounce or pound at
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

FOR SALE
CASH GROCERY STORE
210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY
A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of 240 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

FRESH VEGETABLES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

LEGAL NOTICES

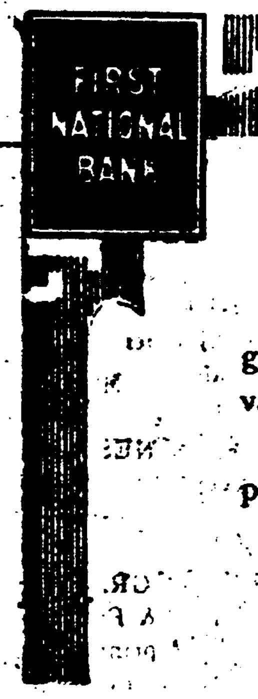
SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF OSWEGO.—Edna I. Sharp, Plaintiff, against Lewlla Newton, J. Clifton Larkin, Bridget Gibbons, Henderson & Thompson Company, Defendants.

Pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale made in the above entitled action, at a Special Term of the Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the City of Syracuse, New York, on the 22d day of May, 1915, and duly entered in the Oswego County Clerk's Office, on the 24th day of May, 1915, I, the undersigned, the referee, duly appointed in and by said judgment for that purpose, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, the 10th day of July, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the City Hall, No. 67 East First Street, South, in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego, New York, the real estate directel by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: ALL THAT TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, situate in the City of Fulton, New York, known and destribel as three rods off from the East end of Lot No. 1 of Block No. 512 of the original Village of Fulton.

Dated May 24, 1915.

H. L. GILMAN, Referee.

FRED'K G. SPENCER, Attorney for Plaintiff, [illegible] East First Street, Fulton, N. Y.



Unnecessary Risk

There is no good reason for taking the great risk of fire or theft by leaving your valuables at home.

Our Fire and Burglar Proof Vault is the place of Safety.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent

$3.00 and Up per Year

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
The Better Master Pictures
"THE QUEST"
Five-part American, Featuring
Margarita Fischer
One Other Reel

TUESDAY
"THE LOST HOUSE"
Four-Reel Majestic Featuring
Lillian Gish
2—OTHERS—2

WEDNESDAY
"BEULAH" in 6 Parts, featuring Henry Walthal

Keep Cool in a
Palm Beach Suit

They're natty, light in weight, and washable. They're the breeziest and most comfortable suit to wear during hot weather.

We have the trim new models.

MacNamara's

WEATHER FORECAST

Probably rain tonight and Tuesday. Cooler Tuesday; moderate to fresh southwest to northwest winds.

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bisnett have been entertaining the past week Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pitcher of Auburn.

* * *

Mrs. W. W. Rowlee has returned to Ithaca after spending a short time with friends in this city.

* * *

Mrs. L. D. Ranger of Syracuse is the guest of Fulton friends.

* * *

Miss Rita Vogel very delightfully entertained the Crusaders of State St. church at her home in Maple avenue Friday evening.

* * *

Ernest Phillips has been the guest of Pennellville friends for a short time.

* * *

Mrs. F. Burrows of Little Falls is the guest of Mrs. C. W. Thompson, West River road.

* * *

Miss Ethel McIntyre of this city has been visiting friends at Central Square

* * *

C. Arthur Ballard of Worth st. entertained recently W. W. Bidwell, district chairman of the order of Railway Telegraphers.

* * *

Mrs. Nicholas Mansfield will entertain the Woman's Missionary Union of the Congregational church Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her home in 5th st. Mrs. Fred Chubb will be leader.

* * *

Mrs. C. E. Dryer entertained the Birthday class of State St church at her home in East Broadway.

* * *

Frank Caldwell was a recent visitor with friends at Central Square.

* * *

Mrs. A. L. McAdam of Rome was the over-Sunday guest of Mrs. C. M. Sabin, Buffalo st.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Suydam of Buffalois recovering from the effects of a sprained ankle.

* * *

Edmond LaPorte is ill at his home, in S. 2d st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chapman of Erie st. announce the birth of a son.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Tucker in company with friends motored to Watertown yesterday.

* * *

G. B. Farley has returned from Big Moose where he accompanied Mrs. Farley and daughter, Miss Ruth.

* * *

Miss Mary Maroney of Syracuse is the guest of local friends.

* * *

Henry Kane of Scriba is in the city, having been called here by the death of his daughter, Sister Henrietta.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Reynolds of Utica spent Sunday in Syracuse.

* * *

Regents' examinations will be held next week.

* * *

L. P. Smith has purchased a new automobile, a Cole 8, which is to be delivered to him in about a week.

* * *

I. Rosoff is the owner of a motorboat, which he will use on the river here.

* * *

Reuben Root, of Syracuse, was a guest Sunday of S. Waldhorn, of Oneida st.

LOCAL LODGE OF ELKS TO SEND DELEGATES

The Fulton order of Elks will be represented by a large delegation at the convention in Troy tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday.

An excellent program has been mapped out which includes the awarding of prizes for the best appearing delegation in the line of march, a prize of $25 ofr the largest Elk present, $10 for the smallest, etc. It is expected that Fulton will make a strong bid for these prizes.

A number of members will motor to the convention. George Walker and L. J. McQuade will drive, going by way of Syracuse. Before returning to Fulton, Mr. Walker and Mr. McQuade intend going to New York.

Madame Olga Petrova in "The Tigress" at the Happy Hour theatre Wednesday. adv.

Finish the evening meal by eating [illegible] ... "good as mother's."—adv.

SPORT CLOTHES AND OTHERS

Motor Coats, Sweaters, Golf Skirts and Bathing Suits in Latest Made

New York, June 7.—If ever the world outdoors calls irresistibly, it is on a typical June day, and as women on this side are almost as much addicted to life in the open as their English cousins, no part of the well-balanced outfit is more important than the sport clothes.

In selecting a motor coat it is well to have in mind the many uses for it in other directions. One can find a whole host of smart coats in this category capable of giving the utmost service, yet pretty enough to top a frilly frock on a cool evening at a resort when a dressier and more dainty wrap would be neither as comfortable or appropriate. Golfine coats with pretty flowered silk linings are among the best garments of this class. The golfine is like corduroy, only finer and more flexible and it comes in rather prettier shades in all the fashionable colors, from Mandarin yellow, and vivid coral tones to dull rich amethyst and olive greens, that appeal to those who like quieter tones. Blues of all shades, and copper browns and grays are all in the running and fashionably worn. These are rivalled by wools with soft velvety surfaces in checks and plain colors which are the ideal selection where a really warm weight is desired, though sweaters are usually donned for this purpose under the lighter weight wraps.

McCall Design

Silk Stripes Faddish

The silk sweater in striped effects is perhaps most favored this season, though solid colors with contrasts in belts, collars, cuffs or vests, come in the greatest possible variety of attractive styles. The mercerized kinds which look exactly like real silk and cost half as much, are extremely popular and copy every wrinkle of the more aristocratic sweaters.

Following the general trend of fashion bathing suits are more elaborate in cut and coloring than ever before. Apparently no material is too elegant, no trimming too fine to tempt the dancing waves, and make a picture of itsp retty wearer. Silks and satins, in plain tones, vivid contrasting stripes, or printed floral effects are all used for these costumes, and every conceit employed for milady's dry land get-ups, is repeated from scalloped edges, pipings, braids and fancy buttons to contrasting lacings and Puritan collars in scrim that stands the salt spray reasonably well. Small ruffles in over-lapping rows, three on the skirt and two at the edge of the fichu collar trim a taffeta suit in black, purple or navy blue that has wide plaid ribbon girdle while the silk cap worn with this has a bewitching garniture of rubber cherries, that defy sun and wave to do their worst, but always come out fresh and new as do the rubber flowers that mimic almost every known blossom.

Bathing suits are matched in variety and attractiveness by the many accessories made to go with them, and which add greatly to their effectiveness. An ill-selected cap, hose that does not match up with the suit, shabby, clumsy shoes or worst of all, careless grooming that allows unsightly hairs to remain on the arms or face when it is no trouble at all to get rid of them, spoil anyone's appearance. For over sixty years the select few have been using X Bazin depilatory powder, which works perfectly for this purpose and can be had at any well-stocked toilet department.

Golf Skirts and Beach Dresses

For the extra skirt that fittingly accompanies a tailored skirt topped by a sweater or sport coat, there are practical models to suit any taste, and in these times when the flare has taken all the world by storm it is remarkable how many plain skirts of very modest width are worn by people who can buy whatever they desire. Pleated styles with the pleats either at front and back, or grouped at either side are smart and one sees of course, full circular models in this class, but not as a rule so well carried as the moderate cuts.

The simple, well made type of dress variously known as a Palm Beach or Porch Dress, is coming to be a great favorite with discriminating women who like simplicity combined with style in cut and perfection of finish. These gowns take the place of the smart utility serge which is the standby of almost every Frenchwoman as well as a host of Americans, for between season wear.

Verona Clarke.

Let Us Do It!

The younger members of the family vie with each other to relieve you. Thousands of families throughout the country are using ELECTRIC FLAT IRONS

Let Us Send You One for Trial

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY
Phone 144

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

UNDERTAKERS

YOUNG & HILL. Open day and night at 117 Oneida. Phone 2172.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

For Sale, 1914 Twin Excelsior motorcycle with side-car; fully equipped; lights, Klaxon, speedometer, saddleback, etc. Just overhauled, better than new. A bargain for quick sale. E. J. F., Trolley Sta. 142eod

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

Lost—West Side Book Club book, entitled, "Saturday's Child." Finder please return to C. W. Streeter's office 110 Oneida st. 143

For Rent—Downtown flat for small family; modern conveniences; $10 per month. Inquire Wirt R. Barker, 34 S. 2d st. 145

Upper Flat—Moderate rent, 214 Walradt st. 6 rooms and all modern conveniences. H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf.

For Sale—Good extra heavy double work harness; $20. G. L. Pratt, 177 E. 1st or phone 56. 149

Wanted—Girl for general housework in family of three. Apply 404 Park st. tonight. tf

To Rent—7 room house in Bay st. near chocolate works. G. J. Emeny, 414 S. 4th st. 148c

Stenographer wanted; Dilts Machine Works, Inc. 144

For Sale—Push cart and baby carriage; both cheap. 513 Buffalo st. 145

FRESH STRAWBERRIES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

THE QUIRK TODAY

Ship Dynamited for picture. In one scene of "The Quest," five part Mutual Masterpiece, a steamer is seen burning at sea.

A great steamship was blown up by dynamite to make one scene of "The Quest," the first of the series of Mutual Masterpieces, the new series to be shown in behalf of the better motion picture movement. Dynamite in large quantities causes numerous explosions which set the ship ablaze, and it is burnt to the water's edge. When all hope is given up Harry Pollard flings himself from the burning deck into the sea and swims to a broken mast. This floats him till he is washed ashore on an island belonging to a lost tribe. Then he has some astonishing adventures.

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

OSWEGO POLICE WORKED HERE

Sought in Vain for Man Who Fired Two Bullets Into Countryman

Chief Dyer and his band of sleuths who comprise the police department kept their weather eyes open all of today, in their efforts to assist the police department of Oswego, to land the Italian who attacked Andrea Fontoni, late last evening at the injured man's home, 16 W. 10th st.

An officer of the Oswego department was in the city early this morning taking a survey of the foreign element. This officer was given valuable assistance by the Fulton department, but the difficulties that beset their path were many.

A little excitement was created at the trolley terminal last night when Patrolmen Norton and Smith surrounded a car and arrested a suspect, who was discharged upon the arrival here of Chief Richardson.

Quarreled About Money

Andrea Fontoni, 45, fell into a quarrel last night with a countryman, and the result of that quarrel is Fontoni has two bullet wounds in his body.

Fontoni's condition is said to be critical. One of the bullets entered the right side of his back and glanced downward into the hip. The other is lodged in his right leg near the knee. Immediately after shots were fired it said Fontoni was picked up and thrown overa high board fence close by.

Although the reports of the gun were heard several block away, the police were unable to find anyone who actually saw the shooting. Many, however, were on the scene immediately after. A call was sent to Police Headquarters, and Chief W. A. Richardson and Patrolmen Mowatt and Edland hurried to the scene in the motor patrol. Although not more than five minutes had alapsed before the police arrived, the man guilty of the crime had made good his escape.

WAR-LIKE SOUND IN FIRST STREET

East First stree this morning thought the Teutonic allies had arrived.

The explosive sound which usually accompanies a tire blowout, severely jarred Lee Edgarton this morning when the rear tire on his automobile blew out while being filled with air in front of the VanWagenen garage. Mr. Edgarton was standing close at the time, and the explosion was strong enough to blow his hat forty feet in the air.

A team of horses, attached to a Standard Oil Company wagon, tried a retreat and "even a new tire was seen rubbering from a near-by window," according to one observer's account.

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE TO MEET TOMORROW

A meeting of the Division of Membership and Entertainment of the Chamber of Commerce will be held at 7.30 o'clock at the Chamber rooms tomorrow night.

NATIONAL BANKS TO BETTER LAWS

(Continued from Page One)

perhaps, ag rudging concession wrung from the oBard by inexorable facts.

Accordingly, the Board has now made special effort to bring in the state banks and trust companies. These institutions have thus far declined to have anything to do with the reserve system because they knew how to go in but they didn't know how to get out. So the Board now asks them to come in and assures them that they can go out any time if they do not like it.

Just how this will affect the National banks is hard to say. They will have to stay in the system whether they like all its burdens or not. While some of them, impatient with the management of the system, have thought seriously of surrendering their Federal for state charters, the probability is that practically all will retain their status as National banks and strive not only to perfect the law but to secure a management of the system free from politics, personal antagonisms, and local interests. It is generally felt that the basic idea, originated by Republicans, has so much of merit that its mutilation by the Democratic Congress should not preclude ultimate realization of all the benefits which future amendments and better management may yield.

JUNIORS GIVE TREAT TO GRAVE SENIORS

The Juniors of the High school will give a supper tonight to the senior ulass at Pathfinder Island. A program has been arranged for entertainment of the guests.

The grave old Seniors will on doubt give [illegible] the occasion will merit.

PARISH AID TEA

The ladies of the Parish Aid, Zion Episcopal church, will hold a silver tea at the home of Mrs. George Hackett, 309 Cayuga st., on tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 6, to which a general invitation is extended to the ladies of the parish and their friends.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

1914 FORD RUNABOUT FOR SALE
Has been run 1500 miles.
GARRETT BROS.
Livery and Sales Stable
North 2d Street

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

GOSSARD CORSETS
They Lace in Front
These Corsets anticipate the styles in Suits and Dresses.
Sold at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

MILLINERY
The Latest in Summer Hats
A number of Sample Hats at Half Price
MRS. F. F. JONES
210 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
R. E. HENRY 210 [illegible]

BUSINESS IS GOOD
Because we serve The [illegible]
Dinner [illegible]
Supper Specials [illegible]
FOLEY'S
Up-to-date Restaurant

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE [illegible]
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

Second-Hand Machinery
New and Second-hand I-Beams and Pipes, all kinds and sizes,
For Sale Pipe Cut to Order
I. ALDERMAN
[illegible] Phone 2242

D/34

The Newspapers Published in Fulton

Are the real and only legitimate means to secure the kind of publicity that will work in true harmony with the elaborate program mapped out by the

New Chamber of Commerce

¶ The protracted dullness in retail business circles is positive proof that the merchants of this city must invest their advertising appropriations in the papers that have the "home touch"—the papers that are welding in concrete fashion the buying public in the fertile farming country lying contiguous to this city.

MR. BUSINESS

Has been very sick. He should recover, and the way to recover is to turn our faces from the fixed starings we've been giving to a popular idol, a single ndustry, and fix our eyes upon the farmer and the buyer from the North, the South, the East and the West of us. The farmer of today is the man who can do a lot toward making Mr. Business in this city a well man, but you must use your home papers—the papers that are near to the people—to reach the great buying public living beyond the city's limits.

MR. MERCHANT

The Fulton Evening Times is "A Herald of Progress"

MONEY MIXUP IF AMERICA FIGHTS

Two Billions Owned by Aliens Here and In Germany.

SITUATION IS COMPLICATED

Forty-eight German Ships In American Waters Would Have to Flee or Be Seized—This Country Would Probably Give Them a Chance to Get Away and Land Where They Could.

Washington.—The precise legal status of many hundreds of millions, perhaps of billions, of property in this country and others would be brought into question if the United States were to become involved in the war in Europe.

Vast properties in the United States of European ownership would be liable to confiscation.

Great properties, though much less in aggregate value, owned by Americans in Europe would be in the same position.

American corporations would not be permitted, it is assumed, to pay dividends on securities held by citizens of the countries with which the United States was at war.

The German ships now interned in this country would be under the necessity of leaving American waters at the risk of being captured on the high seas or else being confiscated in the ports where they are now held.

In all the history of warfare there has probably never been so complicated a financial situation in international relationship as that which would ensue between the United States and Germany if the two countries by any chance should engage in hostilities.

Germans have long been large investors in the United States, particularly in securities of railroad and industrial corporations. It is now pretty well known that these investments were to a considerable degree liquidated in the last year before the war began. During that period Germany was systematically turning its investments into forms most available for quick use, and the conversion was made so skillfully and quietly that the world of business did not fully realize what was afoot until the war had actually broken out.

Consequently it is impossible at all accurately to appraise German holdings in this country today. It is believed, however, that they are largest in railroad securities, then in industrials and finally in real estate and miscellaneous forms of property.

On the other hand, American property interests in Germany are larger than is generally understood, because in recent years a number of American industrials have been forced to establish plants in Germany.

It was estimated that $2,000,000,000 worth of various alien owned investments in both countries would be involved if the two countries should go to war. What would be their standing?

This question is decidedly important to people on both sides who have such holdings. But it is easier answered than the next one.

With the two countries at war unnaturalized Germans in this country would become, before the law, "alien enemies." No matter how loyal to this country or how determined that their conduct toward and in their adopted country should be exemplary, that would be their legal position.

This class of people own great aggregates of property in this country, and to involve them in any general conflagration measures would be so farreaching in their effects that it is recognized as quite impossible that any such would be undertaken.

The declaration of war between two countries has the effect, under long established international practice, of suspending, but not wiping out, debts of a state or its citizens to the citizens of another state.

The reasons are manifest. In the first place, to pay debts to a foreign state during war would be to furnish the sinews of war to the enemy. In the second place, if the debtor declined to pay, there would be no chance to enforce collection, because the debtor, an enemy alien, would have no access to the country's courts to enforce payment.

The forty-eight German vessels interned in this country, appraised as worth nearly $200,000,000, are in a peculiar status. Interned here because the United States is a mutual friend, they would suddenly be found to be in the complete power of a new enemy.

It is explained that the peculiar obligation which the United States has assumed toward them raises questions not before broached—whether it would be violating a very special and unusual faith to appropriate the ships now if this country and Germany were at war.

The procedure which the authorities believe correct would be to notify the vessels that they must leave American territorial waters and to give them a fair chance to do so. After that they would be liable to seizure by American war vessels or by the vessels of America's allies.

Or, if the Germans preferred, they could decline to leave, the United States government could take possession of and formally confiscate the vessels and let the whole business be settled after the war's end.

PAID IN HIS OWN COIN.

Knox Gave Unto Root What Root Had Passed Out to Depew.

Some years ago Senator Depew told a little story on himself and Senator Root in a speech at a dinner in Washington to Mr. Root by the New York Republican congressional delegation.

"When Root was secretary of state," said Senator Depew, "I went over to see him and asked him if he couldn't do something for me in the line of consular appointments. He said: 'Senator, I'm sorry. I would like to do something for New York, but'—and Mr. Root picked up a paper from his desk—'I see that New York's quota is now exceeded by 14 per cent.'

"Well," continued Senator Depew, "I kept going to see Senator Root for a year. Every time I went to see him he would remind me that New York's quota was exceeded by 14 per cent. Finally I said, 'Mr. Secretary, I think you're a great statesman, but your mathematics are inclined to be automatic.'

"However," said Mr. Depew, "all things change, and after a while Mr. Knox became secretary of state and Mr. Root became senator. And then one day Senator Root went up to see Secretary Knox about some consular appointments. 'I'm sorry,' said Mr. Knox, 'but'—and he turned to a document file—'I find that New York's quota is now exceeded by 14 per cent.'"—New York Sun.

Punctuality.

Unfaithfulness in keeping an appointment is an act of dishonesty. You may as well borrow a person's money as his time.—Horace Mann.

Well, He Deserved It.

According to an eminent botanist, plants are so sensitive that they resent neglect and are susceptible to kind treatment, showing their gratitude in charming ways. We are therefore the more ready to believe a story told us not long ago by a lover of nature. He was watering a fern on a cold morning. He forgot to temper the water. The fern, incensed by the shock, leaped from the pot and bit him savagely in the leg.—Philip Hale in Boston Herald.

Spoiling a Hat.

At the obsequies of a Quaker in Brooklyn a grave looking gentleman with an unusually tall hat entered and, seeing no rack in the hall, placed his hat on the floor just behind the door. Presently another grave Quaker entered with a large, dripping umbrella and, peering anxiously for the usual receptacle, saw in the gloom the hat resting on the floor. His eyesight was probably poor, for he mistook the hat for an umbrella holder, and in it he deposited his dripping parachute. This was an example for those who followed, and in a short time the tall hat was holding a dozen umbrellas. At the end of the services the grave gentleman found an inch of water in his hat and looked graver than ever.

SETTING AN EXAMPLE.

Said at Last.

On one occasion a highland minister called upon Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh for some financial assistance for the work in the north. Dr. Whyte regretted that he could not afford to assist the highlander, but advised him to visit a wealthy layman in the city.

Going to the house of the wealthy layman, the highlander found him disinclined to give and ungracious in manner. Nettled at his reception, the highlander answered brusquely. Resenting the tone, the rich man asked, "And whom do you take me for?"

"A fire deserving sinner, like myself," came the quick retort.

Returning to Dr. Whyte, he explained the circumstances.

"You did not say that?" eagerly asked the doctor.

"Aye, I did," replied the other.

"Well, well! I've been wanting to say that to him for the last fifteen years. Here's a five pound note for your fund."—Dundee Advertiser.

The Way Out.

Uncle Zeke had confined in a pen two pigs of the "razorback" variety. One morning when he went out to feed them they were not there.

"What's the matter, Uncle Zeke?" asked a neighbor, noticing the deep dejection with which the old darky was looking down into the empty pen.

"My hawgs is done gone."

"Stolen?"

"No, suh! I don' see no signs dat anybody stole 'em."

"Did they climb out over the top?"

"No, suh! Dey couldn't do dat."

"How do you think they got away?"

"Well, suh, my 'pinion is dat dem hawgs kind o' raised theirselves up on edge an' crope through a crack."—New York Post.

EDISON INVENTS PHONE RECORDER

New Device Permanently Fixes Words of Both Speakers.

IS ATTACHED TO TELEPHONE

Will Hold Message For Absent Person, and Inventor, Who Has Devoted Thirty-seven Years to It, Says Instrument Will Save Writing Millions of Business Letters.

Thomas A. Edison says his new invention, the telescribe, as he has named it, cost him thirty-seven years' work. It is a device which combines the telephone and phonograph, a long distance dictating machine that doubles back.

Two persons, even though 3,000 miles apart, may hold a telephonic conversation, and the instrument will give each a record of what both said. It will also take down a message for an absent person and tell it him when he returns.

A small box connected with his telephone on a business man's desk will be his guarantee against misunderstanding language used by him to others as well as an insurance that he got messages to himself accurately. Keen as the human ear and highly sensitized, the recorder does not miss the slightest vibration.

Saves Millions of Letters.

Mr. Edison regards its commercial possibilities as almost unlimited, for he believes it will do away with millions of letters a year in the making of business agreements. The phonograph makes voices easily recognizable and Mr. Edison is confident that telescribe records will be as eloquent arguments for good faith on the part of business men as signed letters.

"Science provided the telephone for rapid transmission of intelligence," said Mr. Edison discussing his latest work, "and with the telescribe we can now project our spoken words into wax records that will be permanent. The world will soon recognize it as a commercial asset, and it will not only make the telephone more useful and the phonograph more valuable; it will make both more necessary."

Mr. Edison began work on his idea in June, 1878, and patiently for hours, despite pessimistic statements of associates, he has labored with the secrets of telephony and phonography in his task of combining the two. Now he has added it to his patents, the total of which have passed the 1,500 mark. This is the largest number of brain products of any one individual, yet Mr. Edison is by no means "through," for he is only in his sixty-eighth year yet.

"They Can't Come Back at You!"

The inventor humorously remarked that the telescribe can end for all time the mooted question involved when an interviewed person denies, following their publication, remarks attributed to him in a newspaper.

"They can't 'come back' at you when you have their statements in cold wax," he told the reporters, with a smile.

Mr. Edison's telescribe is not the first invention for its purpose. In 1900 Valdemar Poulsen, a Danish inventor, contrived the telegraphone for the reproduction of conversations at a distance. Its principle was the retention of magnetic impressions by a copper wire. The length of wire for an ordinary conversation was about three and a half miles. Each impression on a fraction of the wire represented a sound, and when the machine was reversed the talk was reproduced. William J. Burns, the detective, gave it prominence in 1912, when he reproduced a conversation by the president of the common council of Detroit in which the official was alleged to have offered to sell his vote. It was used to record the debates of the medical congress in Boston in 1912. Speeches by former President Roosevelt were several times reproduced by the telegraphone.

Strength In Hollowness.

The stems of bamboos, grasses, wheat and oats are hollow, although they grow to great heights in comparison to their thickness. It might naturally be supposed that to gain strength as they grew the stems ought to be solid at the base, but it is not so. Careful experiments have proved that a solid column subject to bending strains is no stronger than a hollow one. Consequently all iron shafts are made hollow, and the steel shafts which drive the screws of steamships have a hole bored down the center to reduce the weight. But this does not reduce the strength. The thickness of the branches of trees is in proportion to the weight to be borne. Horizontal branches, such as those of the cedar and elm, are much thicker than the almost vertical branches of the poplar. The average natural factor in breaking is about one in ten, exclusive of wind pressure, and engineers employ a factor of six in building with timber.

Bound to Be Obeyed.

Some years ago a bridge was built in Japan which was so slight that a notice was put up, "No animals allowed to cross." But rats were seen crossing on it, and as they could not be stopped the sign was changed to read, "No large animals allowed to cross."

Scrubby M'Ginnis' Dues

How a Delinquent Club Member Paid a Debt.

By JOHN BARTON OXFORD

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Seven simultaneous and rather noisy games of pitch, a four cornered altercation over one ball on the pool table, the tinkle of an ancient square piano, sadly out of tune, to say nothing of a heated and ten voiced discussion of contemporary ward politics, is not conducive to that calm and placid frame of mind with which an executive committee should go about its business.

But since the regular monthly session of the executive committee of the Three Points club was always held in the midst of such an uproar, its four members had long since learned to make the best of things, and at their little table in the corner with its imposing array of ink stands and pads of paper, blotters and record books, to pass upon matters revelant to the club's welfare with a judicial mien, on which the clatter and noise all about them made seemingly no impression.

Mr. Horrigan, the committee's chairman, cleared his throat several times.

In the manner of a man who is about to broach an unpleasant subject, he nervously opened the black book, wherein were kept the treasurer's records, and haltingly asked of his colleagues, not without certain uneasy and apprehensive glances at the big frame lounging at that moment on the piano stool:

"Well, wot cher goin' to do about Scrubby—huh?"

It was red headed Mr. Dorgan, at the end of the table, who finally plucked up courage to inquire:

"Then he ain't come across wit' nothin'?"

The chairman slowly and reluctantly shook his head.

"His dues is now over three months unpaid," he announced. "The rules says that any member wot don't come across wit' his dues for that length of time shall be cut off from all the privileges of the club till he makes good."

Mr. Horrigan took another uneasy look at the man at the piano and then leaned confidentially across the table toward his fellow members.

"I've got a hunch he don't never intend to come across wit' nothin'," he declared meaningly. "I'm willin' to bet that Scrubby McGinnis intends to keep right on comin' here and usin' this club and bangin' away at the pianny wit'out never payin' a cent for it.

"He's bankin' on the rep he's got in the ring, and outside, too, for that matter, for bein' a bad one wit' his dukes, to throw a bluff inter us here.

"He thinks he's got us scared tame and that we won't dare do nothin' to him, that's plain."

"He ain't goin' to get by wit' nothin' like that," said Mr. Mullen darkly, yet

"WELL, WOT OF IT?" SCRUBBY SHOT OUT AGGRESSIVELY.

with very apparent mental reservation, as he took a swift glance pianoward.

"Dead sure he aint!" acquiesced Tinker Devlin, the fourth member of the committee.

"Well, wot cher goin' to do about it?" Horrigan demanded again.

"Tell him if he don't come across wit' them back dues it's nix for his here," said Mullen.

"Sure, that's wot!" chimed in Devlin. "Yer gotter live up to the rules. Let him get away wit' anything like that and half the other ginks in the club wouldn't be payin' no dues, neither."

"Anybody told him what the rules is?" queried Mr. Dorgan.

"They don't have to," said Horrigan. "He knows' em as well as you or me."

"Well," said Dorgan, "I'd like to suggest that yer tell him that he can't come here no more till his back dues is paid, Horrigan, and then if he don't pay no attention to it"—

He paused.

"Wot then?" Horrigan demanded.

"T'run him out!" said Dorgan with a grin. "He's gotter be made a example of!"

"Yah, t'run him out for sure!" mocked the chairman. "Yer can have the job for the askin', Dorgan. No one's goin' to try to butt in on yer on that!"

"Oh, I ain't lookin' to hog no such job as that," said Dorgan cheerfully. "We gotter let this gink know that even if he is Scrubby McGinnis he ain't goin' to put nothin' over on us like he's thinkin' to.

"Yer tell him how things stands. Maybe he'll go peaceable, more likely he won't. If he wants to get nasty about it, well and good. We'll reenforce the fightin' ability of this executive committee a bit to meet the occasion.

"Wot's the matter, Horrigan," Mr. Dorgan leaned across the table to continue in a lower voice, "wit' ringin' in that big Swede that lives down the street from you—that Eric Nilssen that's been makin' good at all the pug shows lately?

"He could put it all over Scrubby wit'out half tryin'. Make him a member here; put him on the executive committee for the time bein'. Then see'f Scrubby won't go!"

"Yer'll have to come up wit' somethin' to Nilssen—maybe ten or twenty; but it 'ud be well worth it for the sake of example and keepin' the runnin' of things here in our own hands."

Immediately a lively discussion was under way, sotto voce, at the executive committee's table in the corner, and even as Scrubby McGinnis rattled out throaty baritone songs before the decrepit piano the four at the table plotted his undoing.

"All right," said Mr. Dorgan at length when the matter had been thoroughly thrashed out. "Yer go tell him, Horrigan, that it's either pay up or get out, and if he don't see it that way, why, the Swede for his, that's all."

Whereupon Mr. Horrigan, not without a certain show of hesitancy, left his seat at the committee table and advanced toward the piano.

Picking his way between the tables of pitch players, Horrigan made his way to the side of the trouble making Scrubby, who at that moment was bawling out a joyful and suggestive song to three highly appreciative satellites grouped about him.

"Excuse me," said Horrigan, realizing with disgust how servile were his tones, "but yer owe six dollars for three months' back dues, Scrubby."

"Well, wot of it?" Scrubby shot out aggressively, at the same time swinging around on the piano stool and pushing out his lower jaw unpleasantly.

"Yer see, Scrubby," said Horrigan meekly, "this club is supported be the dues the members pays in. We can't let no member get more'n three months behind wit' 'em.

"It's the rules that any member that gets three months behind wit' his dues can't come here nor have none of the privilege of the club till he pays up."

"Is that so?" said Scrubby with a smile, and Horrigan reflected with a sinking heart that Scrubby's smile was more menacing in its suggestion than had been his protruded lower jaw.

"So ye'll either have to come up or"—began Horrigan, but before he could get farther McGinnis cut him short.

"Yer don't tell me," said he, and swung back to the keyboard, up and down which he ran his nimble fingers.

"Now, the third verse goes something like this— I may not get 'em just right. I've pretty near forgot 'em. But tomorrow night I'll bring the music over and sing it right to yer," he ended, glancing across the shoulder of a grinning satellite to Horrigan.

The latter retreated to the committee table in the corner.

"Yer see how it is," he quavered wrathfully, as he sank into his chair. "Just like I told yer."

"The Swede for ours," said Dorgan between tight set teeth. "Let's appropriate twenty dollars for the job. That oughter be enough and more."

There was an extra chair at the executive committee's little corner table at the Three Point club the following evening when that august body was called to order by the grinning Mr. Horrigan.

In the extra chair sat a huge, sleepy-looking individual, very pink of cheek and very blond as to hair.

"Twenty dollars, it cost," Horrigan whispered to Mullen, who sat beside him. "Had to pay him in advance too. But I guess the word of this committee means somethin' from now on—wot? D'yer ever see such a whale?"

At that moment the door opened, and Scrubby McGinnis, a roll of music under his arm, entered the smoke filled room.

Horrigan grinned more broadly, and then nudged Nilssen, who seemed in imminent anger of dropping into a doze.

"That's him," he whispered. "Yer to go up to him—see? Tell him you're the new member of the executive committee, and ask him for his back dues. If he don't come up wit' 'em—$6 it is—t'run him down the stairs—see?"

Mr. McGinnis had already opened his music and put it on the rack before him.

Nilssen stirred sleepily, blinked a couple of times and glanced in Scrubby's direction.

"That's him," Horrigan was repeating in the big cauliflower ear. "Go on, now. Earn yer money. Git to it!"

"Why haf you not told me it iss Scrubby McGinnis dot I t'row outs?" he demanded heavily. "Ay bane tank somebody else!"

"Wot difference does that make?" Horrigan demanded.

"All der difference in der world," growled Nilssen, looking accusingly at the chairman, as if he had just purchased a very choice gold brick of that grinning and expectant gentleman.

"Der job is worth der $10 more," Nilssen went on after another period of thoughtful staring. "You have not told me der man was Scrubby McGinnis. Ay bane der big fool to do it for less."

"Say, yer agreed to take twenty," Horrigan reminded him sharply.

"You haf not told me it iss Scrubby McGinnis," the other reiterated monotonously. "Der $10 more and Ay gets busy."

"Ten nothin', yer blamed grafter!" hissed Horrigan. "Yet got yer money, and in advance too. Now go do what yer agreed to."

"Ay guess I don't do it at all," he observed. "Ay guess Ay bane go home."

Horrigan grunted his disgust.

"Scared?" he sneered. "Aw, all right. Go on home, then. We can find some one else easy enough. But wait a minute," he went on as Nilssen reached for his hat and got cumbrously to his feet, all but upsetting the table in the process. "Just hand over that twenty before yer go."

"Ay guess I yoost go home," Nilssen chuckled, kicking a chair out of his way and starting for the door.

But Horrigan clutched at his coattails and held fast.

"Yer come up wit' that twenty, yer

THROUGH THE OPENING REELED THE PAIR.

big, graftin' stiff!" he muttered. "Yer come up wit' it—darned quick too!"

Mr. Nilssen put on an expression of pained and weary surprise.

His right hand was passed slowly behind him, and Mr. Horrigan landed in an awkward heap in a far corner.

But instantly the latter was up again and with a rapidly growing discoloration beneath his left eye sped toward the door, the knob of which Nilssen was just clutching in his big paw.

"Gimme back that money!" Horrigan fairly wailed.

The commotion rose above even McGinnis' bellowed song.

He stopped, swung about on the piano stool and then slipped over to the door.

"Wot's wrong here?" he demanded belligerently.

"Ay yoost go home," said the bored Mr. Nilssen.

"He's got $20 of my money he won't give up," said Horrigan.

"Aw, whyn't yer give it to him?" sneered McGinnis. "And, say, whyn't yer scrap wit' a fellow yer size and not a little runt like him?"

"Gimme it!" yelled Horrigan.

"Yer ain't goin' to give him his money?" demanded Scrubby.

"Make me," Nilssen invited.

"All right, you're on!" howled Scrubby delightedly as he drove out straight with his right.

The members of the Three Points club are not fully agreed as to what immediately took place.

And since most of them were scurrying madly about the room in their endeavors to get out of the way of the two whirling, clutching, smashing bodies, perhaps they are not in a position to give an adequate account of the affair.

Somehow, panting, grunting, uttering weird oaths, interspersed with short arm, but telling blows, the two swayed up against the door to the hallway without.

Crash! It split off its hinges, and through the opening reeled the pair. Followed the sound of rending banister supports and a prodigious bumping as they rolled down the stairs!

It was some few minutes later and the first of the members were beginning to crawl from their places of safety and take sad eyed account of the damage wrought when Scrubby McGinnis, battered and very ragged as to his usually immaculate garments, came panting into the room.

Calmly he picked up the overturned piano stool, straightened its badly bent supports, coolly adjusted it and sat down before the keyboard.

Then he reached into his torn vest pocket and flicked a small roll of bills across the room.

"Say, there's yer twenty plunks yer wanted, Horrigan," said he.

But Horrigan did not hear him.

Having rescued from the debris which littered the floor the remains of the treasurer's book, he was now busily engaged on the tattered and heel marked pages which had been the record of membership dues.

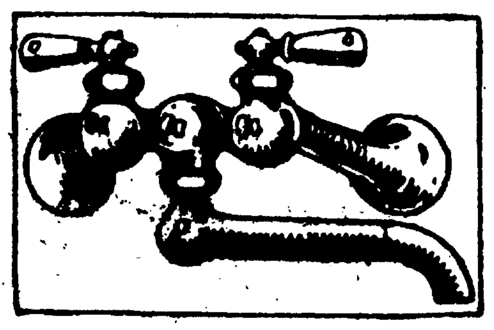
Rapidly he turned the pages, not only those containing the accounts of the last few months, but also the virgin lists of the months to come.

And as he turned the pages he paused opposite Scrubby McGinnis' name to industriously ply a rubber stamp.

The stamp bore the single word, "Paid."

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Combination Water Faucet With Swinging Spout.



Intended to be used over a kitchen sink, a combination water faucet has been designed with a long, swinging spout which may readily be moved from one side to another as desired. In addition to this feature, it has the convenient property characteristic of all similar fixtures of joining the hot and cold water pipes so that the water may be mixed to any specific temperature as it is drawn. The combined functions make the appliance a very convenient one for kitchen use.

Chocolate Rice Pudding.

One quart of milk, half a teaspoonful of salt, a fourth of a cupful of rice, one tablespoonful of butter, a third of a cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful and a half of cocoa, half a teaspoonful of vanilla, and two egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar for the meringue.

Mix the rice, salt, sugar, milk and butter in a wide pudding dish. Add the vanilla and cocoa dissolved in a little hot water and bake in a slow oven till the rice is soft; stirring occasionally. Make a meringue of the egg whites and powdered sugar and bake twelve minutes longer in a slow oven. Serve warm with cream. — Country Gentleman.

Lemon Cream Pie.

Mix one cupful of sugar with three tablespoonfuls of flour; then add three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, the yolks of two eggs, slightly beaten, one cupful of sweet milk, one tablespoonful of melted butter, a little salt and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in one crust in a moderate oven. The white of the egg rises to the top, making a little "self frosting" which adds to the dainty appearance of the pie.

Apple Cream Pie.

Stew good tart apples, rub through a sieve or press through a fruit press. While warm add one large tablespoonful of butter. Beat together the yolks of two eggs, one-half cupful of sugar and the juice of one lemon. Then add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and mix all with the apples. Line a pie tin with a good pastry, pour into it the mixture and bake until done. When cold cover with whipped cream.

Fairy Gingercakes.

One cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of sugar, one heaping tablespoonful lard, one egg, one cupful sour milk with one teaspoonful soda stirred in until it begins to foam over top of cup, one teaspoonful ginger. About a pint of sifted flour, making a rather thin light dough. It will be light like a sponge if not mixed too stiff. Can omit ginger and use spices and raisins if desired.

Pineapple Salad.

Make a dressing of one-half cupful of pineapple juice, juice of one-half a lemon, yolks of two eggs and one-half teaspoonful cornstarch. Cook to a thick custard, and add a little cream before serving. Put two slices of pineapple on lettuce leaves and cover with dressing, then put a little grated cheese and chopped walnuts on top.

Removing Grease Spots.

A grease spot on the carpet may be removed easily if one will act quickly. First scrape off all that can be removed with a knife, then give the spot a thorough coating of cornmeal, rub in well and as this is brushed out it will carry the grease with it. If any of the grease remains, lay a blotting paper over the spot and press with a warm iron.

Paraffining Jelly.

In using paraffin to cover jelly, if one will put a lump of the wax in the glass before pouring in the juice, it melts and rises to the top, doing away with the trouble of melting wax and putting on after jelly is cool. A piece the size of a filbert is enough for an ordinary jelly glass.

Varnish Stains on White Goods.

Varnish stains will be easily removed from white goods by moistening the stain with ammonia. Then put on a few drops of turpentine and roll it up. Leave it rolled for about fifteen minutes, then wash out with soapy water, rinse thoroughly and dry in the sun.

To Clean Suede Shoes.

Put the shoes on shoetrees, but if you do not possess these, stuff the shoes with soft paper. Then rub well with a rag moistened with spirits of turpentine. When this is finished place the shoes in the air to dry and no smell of turpentine will remain.

Ham Balls.

One cupful of boiled potato, one onion and one cupful of ham, chopped. Season with salt and pepper, add a well beaten egg and a little milk. Form into small balls, roll in meal and fry in hot, deep fat. Serve on buttered toast.

PHILADELPHIA RECALLS FROHMAN AS NEWSBOY.

Noted Theater Man Sold Papers at Centennial Exposition in 1876.

Charles Frohman, the eminent play producer, who went to his death on the Lusitania, was a newsboy in Philadelphia forty years ago.

With that same energy and inventive ability that placed him at the head of American producers and a discoverer of stars, Frohman made the New York Graphic, a five cent illustrated daily newspaper, "go" among the crowds at the Centennial exposition in 1876.

Frohman was sent to Philadelphia from the New York office of this publication, which at that time was devoting a supplement to descriptive stories and pictures about the exposition. He took charge of the newsboys at the Philadelphia office.

Frank H. Taylor, who knew Frohman then, says the future discoverer of Maude Adams and Billie Burke "hustled the bundles from the trains, got them to the newsstands about the city, retailed them at the door and over the counter and was everybody's willing errand boy."

Not content with selling the paper to crowds on the streets, Frohman opened a branch office in the Centennial grounds and devised so many ways to get his paper before the crowds that he frequently had to go to New York to get extra editions. He spent the summer doing this work.

GODMOTHER TO FORTY BABIES

Hungarian Countess Takes Upon Herself Strenuous Duties.

The Countess Magdeleine Hunyady von Kethely, the wife of a great landed proprietor of Hungary, is taking under her motherly wing all the posthumous babies born in the county of Estergon, where her husband's principal estates are situated, whose fathers gave up their lives upon the battlefield in this war. Already she has become fairy godmother to nearly forty children. A handsome young matron of thirty-six, with a daughter of her own fifteen years old and a son of twelve, the countess is accepting duties which will extend over many years, involving the dedication of her time and fortune. That she is a Belgian by birth, belonging to the princely family of Caraman-Chimay, which has suffered almost as much at the hands of the Germans as the royal house of Belgium, does not seem to have blinded her to the misfortunes of her husband's country.

Countess Magdeleine Hunyady's sister-in-law, Countess Marie Henrietta Hunyady, has been for some years the wife of Count Emil Szechenyi, and the women of the two famous Hungarian houses will probably divide among themselves the care of the little children for whom Countess Magdeleine will stand sponsor before the end of the war.

A Polishing Glove.

To the woman who cleans and polishes her own shoes nothing is more useful than the "polishing glove." It is made in the form of a mitt. The palm side is sheepskin with the woolly side out to form a polishing surface. The back of the mitt is a piece of leather. After you have carefully anointed your shoes with the paste or polish and let it dry thoroughly slip on the mitt and polish with a will. In a moment your shoes will be shining nicely.

WAR CAUSES PROXY WEDDING

French Lawyer at Front, Friend Takes Weeping Bride to Altar.

The first marriage by proxy ever permitted in Paris has just been celebrated in the city hall, in the Latin quarter. Alfred Lorin, the bridegroom, a Paris attorney who is now a soldier in the Seventy-first infantry at the front, was represented by his friend, Firmin Souq. The bride was Mlle. Marie Martigny.

The ceremony was performed in strict privacy, and the bride wept as she made the responses.

Where Art Ceases.

All art is a matter of nature or life acted upon by man; a part taken out of its accidental surroundings and given artistic form. At either side of the field of true art is a waste place where art ceases to have beauty. And the waste on the one side is reached when the artist becomes so enamored of life that he forgets to interpret, to give artistic form, and only brings forth a photographic image, while the waste on the other side is reached when the artist perfects his form but forgets to put life into it.—Sheldon Cheney.

PICTURESQUE FROCK.

Lingerie Gown That Makes Wearer Look Like Frameless Picture.

PRETTY EVENING DRESS.

"Ah! Isn't she a picture?" is heard once in perhaps a very long while, and immediately every one within hearing covertly or frankly turns to look at what promises to be a pleasant vision. And these "pictures" have not been any too plentiful recently, particularly in the not long gone period of tube skirts. But fashion now holds out the pretty promise that it is the thing to be picturesquely dressed, and the woman who comes nearest to looking like a canvas belle that's lost her frame will elicit the biggest buzz of admiration.

This gown is picturesque in the extreme, being a combination of wonderful old lace and hemstitched taffeta. The underskirt is of accordion plaited pink chiffon. The bodice is decollete and sleeveless. The sleeveless bodice is very becoming to a young girl.

DIES AS HER MOTHER DID.

Woman's Body Taken to Same Police Station Twenty Years Later.

Twenty years after she had identified the body of her mother in a police station in New York city the body of Mrs. Mary T. Cassidy was identified by her two daughters, Anna and Mary, in the same station house after she had fallen dead in a Sixth avenue elevated train.

The two cases were strikingly similar. Mrs. Cassidy, who was a widow, sixty-two years old, was seized with heart disease on the train. Twenty years ago Mrs. Cassidy's mother, who was Mrs. Mary Commisky, was stricken in the same manner on the street.

INSANE, FACES ENDLESS TRIP.

Negro, Taken Aboard Ship, Now Not Permitted to Land Anywhere.

William Raney, an insane negro, deported by immigration officers when he arrived on the steamer Guiana on its last trip, has been brought back to New York on the same vessel. Authorities at Antigua, whence he first sailed, refused to let him land.

Raney faces the possibility of many future trips aboard the steamer until officials somewhere arrange to care for him.

FLYER MOREAU DIES IN FALL.

Was Inventor of Self Righting Device to Make Aeroplanes Safe.

Albert Moreau, French aviator who invented a safety device to prevent aeroplanes from capsizing, has been killed by a fall of 1,400 feet in his plane at Melun, near Paris.

In 1913 Moreau won the Bonnet prize with a self righting air craft, which he drove without touching the levers.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

"CITY OF ERIE" — 3 Magnificent Steamers — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, O.

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge
10 Cents

ONE OYSTER ENOUGH.

He Swallowed It Alive and Had to Kill It After It Was Down.

A farm laborer from the interior on his first visit to London dropped into a small oyster shop where a number of men were eating raw oysters. The extreme satisfaction displayed on the faces of those about him created longings of a gustatory nature in the new arrival, who edged his way up to the counter in anticipation of eating a real live, juicy oyster.

It was the first time he had seen an oyster, and he became at once interested, and when the shellfish had been finally uncased he proceeded to balance it on the end of his fork, then, with a look of extreme satisfaction, gulped it down.

"Great Scott!" shouted a man standing near him. "You haven't swallowed the oyster alive, have you?"

There was a horrible pause.

"That critter will eat right through you!" shouted another.

By this time the poor countryman was shaking with fear and horror. He commenced to have terrible pains in his abdomen and was soon doubled up in his agony. He begged some one to go for a doctor to get the thing out.

DROPPED THE BOTTLE.

He continued to grow worse, when some one suggested that he take a dose or tabasco sauce, which, it was claimed, would kill the object that was creating such terrible commotion in his internal arrangement.

He grasped the bottle with avidity and took a draft. Then he let a blood curdling yell out, dropped the bottle, jumped about six feet in the air, clutched his stomach and gasped. He became blue in the face, and tears were running down his face, when some one thrust a bottle of oil into his mouth, and he was forced to drink copious drafts.

The effect was magical. The oyster was evidently "dead." He became more composed, and when he finally recovered his breath he said:

"We killed it. But when that darned stuff got into my stomach that oyster rushed around as if a shark was after it."—London Scraps.

Be Natural.

Don't try to be somebody else. You were made with a face and a voice and a character not quite like anybody's else, and your manner ought to be your own. It will be sweeter and more attractive for being natural.

It Stung.

They were all sitting around telling funny anecdotes. And they were all good friends but two—the cleverest girl and the runner up for those honors. These two hated each other naturally. The cleverest girl told a humorous story and it was received with great applause.

When the laughter had ceased the deadly rival said: "My goodness! That story is at least forty years old!"

The other one didn't blink. She smiled sweetly and answered: "What [illegible]

CZAR'S FORCES TRY TO STOP RETREAT IN POLAND

(Continued from Page One)

the flank by the Austro-German advance from the south. If this army succeds in forcing a passage of the Dniester, the Grodek line may prove to be untenable. In that case the Russians might have great difficulty in retaining Lemberg. Desperate Russian attempts to relieve the situation in the center by attacks on both wings have been fruitless, according to the German reports.

The General Staff today reports that the Russians have been driven back northeast and southeast of Mosciska, twenty five miles east of Przemysl, while to the south General Linsingen has carried by storm a bridgehead near Zeivwana, and is about to cross the Dniester there. In these operations the Austro-Germans have taken about 11,000 prisoners, six cannon and fourteen machine guns.

The Austrians report that they have stormed Starzawa, east of Przemysl, and in the south have defeated the Russians north of Kalusz.

A dispatch from Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina, says that the Russians to the east and northeast of that city are in retreat, and are being followed by the Austro-Hungarians.

In the north the General Staff reports the Germans are forcing the Russians eastward, in the region of Ravdyuike, where two large German forces have joined, and the number of prisoners taken there has been increased to 3,630.

AUSTRIANS AND ITALIANS BATTLE FOR TOLMINO

London, June 7.—The Italians and Austrians are engaged in force in the first important battle of the campaign, with Tolmino as the prize. At Monte Nero, across the upper Isonzo, the Italians met their first opposition in their advance across the frontier, and although they have established themselves well on the ridge they have not been able to force a way to the east bank of the river.

Military observers here believe the Italian object in capturing Tolmino is to turn the town into a base for an attack on the Gorz fortified line from the flank. Tolmino is about twenty-seven miles to the north of Gorz and on the Austrian startegic railway running through that city from Trieste to Villach. In Italian hands it would be a great tower of strength to all operations in the Isonzo region.

According to an official statement in Vienna the Austrians have repulsed all efforts by the Italians to cross the Isonzo at Sagrad, just west of Gradisca. It has been understood here a crossing had been effected a little to the south of this village, but there has been no official confirmation of the report.

In the Tyrol the artillery engagement is becoming more general, but it persists at long range, without appreciable damage on either side.

Italian warships have been busy destroying cables and lighthouses in the Adriatic and again have bombarded Monfalcone.

FEARING LOSS OF SPEECH HE TALKED ALL NIGHT

London, June 7.—When he found that speech, which had been lost through concussion had returned to him, Private Pointer of the London Rifles, spent a whole night in the general hospital at Lincoln talking to himself. He feared to lose it if he did not keep ti up, yet he did not want to call out to the night sister for fear she might faint. So he waited until the aatendant came around with his morning cup of tea, then remarked: "Shove it down there, old chap." For this he was showered with the tea by the agitated attendant.

MRS. HEATH URGES WAR ON FALSE WEIGHT

New York, June 7.—Mrs. Julian Heath, of Nofi 25 West 45th st., president of the National Housewives' League, issued a call yesterday for women to join the organization, the motto of which is "Every Woman Her Own Inspector."

Referring to the statement that New York women lost $26,000,000 a year by false weights, Mrs. Heath says:

"False weights will never be eradicated until every housewife sees she gets full weight."

LOCAL YOUNG MEN WANT SCHOLARSHIP

In the hopes of winning a free scholarship for four years at Cornell University Matthew Frawley, Bernard Deswick and Markey Pullen were in Oswego Saturday, where the annual competitive examinations were held in the high school.

The person with the highest percentage in each assembly district of the county will be awarded the scholarship.

COMMANDER OF PAPAL GUARD DEAD

Rome (via Paris), June 7.—The death of Prince Camillo Rospigliosi, a member of one of the best known aristocratic families in Rome, accurred today. He was born in 1850. The prince had been ill for some time, and his death was not unexpected.

BRITAIN HOLDS BACK NAVY

Effort Made to Reserve Vessels for Time When Big Battle Occurs

London, June 7.—The statement of Winston Spencer Churchill that the British navy has been increasing in strength by leaps and bounds since the begining of the war is borne out by the known additions to the fleet of superdreadnoughts which were not complete when was was declared. The list of new ships includes such vessels as the Barham, the Malaya, the Ramilliies, the Resolution, the Revenge, the Royal Oak, the Royal Sovereign, the Valiant and the Warspite, each displaceing 27,500 tons and carrying in the main batteries eight 15-inch guns. The Queen Elizabeth is one of this group of superdreadnoughts and is the only one of the new seafighters which has been put forward into the fighting line. The reason for employing the Queen Elizabeth has been to determine any defects in mountings or battery equipment which defects, if developed, could be taken advantage of and guarded against in the final inspection work in the newer ships.

Still a third class of superdreadonughts, each of approximately 23,000 tons displacement, is being kept will in hand. This third class is represented by the Centurion, the Conqueror, the King George V., the Monarch, the Orion and the Thundered. The Audacious belongs also to this class. The Audacious was torpedoed off the North Irish coast, was taken into port and is now again in the fighting line ready for active service. These 23,000 ton ships each mount in their main batteries the same number and same calibre big guns as the 25,000 ton class—namely, ten 13.5 inch pieces.

Not one of the above ships has ben into action since the war began, and all Britain understands that the country is relying on this force of powerful superdreadnoughts to dispute the mastery of the seas in the event that the German high sea fleet ever ventures out of the Cuxhaven entrance. Britain showed in her orders following the loss of the Cresy, the Aboukir and the Hogue that she did notp urpose to risk vessels except in attacks on vessels of the same class.

PHOENIX LOST TO RED MEN

Local Men Gave Phoenicians a Pretty Play

Yesterday afternoon a large crowd gathered at the fair grounds to witness a scheduled baseball game between the Phoenix team and the Red Men team of Fulton. In spots, the exhibition resenbled baseball, but as the score shows, the exhibition could have been made much more interesting for the fans if the Phoenix team had had a strong arm pitcher or two. Notwithstanding the onesidedness of the game, some pretty plays were made, namely the hard one Painter pulled out of the air with two on bases, and Billy Ingamells' sensational catches. Jones of the local team is credited also with a home run.

The Phoenix team used four pitchers in an endeavor to stem the tide of runs, which came in almost as fast as the visting pitcher would send over a clean one.

The final score was 28-3.

The line-up of the teams was:

Red Men—Brown, ss.; H. Ingamells, 2b.; W. Ingamells, lf.; Dingle, 3b.; Paige, 1b.; E. Brown, cf.; Painter, rf.; Fayette, c.; Feeley, p.

Phoenix—Selfer, 2b.; Reagan, ss.; Thomas, 1b.; Kingslow, rf.; Hanlon, cf.; Smith, 3b.; Jones, lf.; Plunkett, c.; Kingslow, p.

PET CAT MOVES BACK INTO HILLS

Santa Monica, Cal., June 7.—Up in the Malibu district lives a rancher, Edward Simmons.

Simmons was the owner of a large female cat. More than a year ago the cat disappeared and Simmons believed it had been shot by some one who mistook it for a rabbit. The cat was soon forgotten. Some time ago Simmons noticed that his chickens were being carried away and blamed the mountain lions.

One night recently, hearing a commotion in the neighborhood of his chicken house, he took his gun and peered through an open window. He counted no less than ten wild cats crouched near the chicken house. Before he could get a shot they disappeared. Traps were set and the following night four of the cats were caught, but instead of being wild cats as frequently seen in the mountains they resembeled more the domesticated cat. They were larger than the domestic cat and of a different color than the mountain wild cat.

The following night the traps yielded three more cats, and among them Simmons recognized his cat that had disappeared over a year ago. Now Simmons fears there is a new brand of wild cats in the Santa Monica mountains.

"A case of back to the wild," says Simmons.

"ZIONISM IS A FACT," BRANDEIS TELLS JEWS

Atlantic City, N.J., June 7.—The independent Order of Brith Abraham opened its annual convention here today with nearly 1,300 delegates from all sections of the country in attendance. Louis Brandeis, one of the speakers, declared that "Zionism is no longer a dream; it is now a fact."

Grand Master Leon Sanders, of New York, reported an increase of 88,000 members since he took office six years ago.

A resolution will be submitted by Judge Alfred Levy, New York, providing for the creation of a congress to use its influence at the coming peace congress "to secure freedom for the Jews throughout the world."

DENMARK GRANTS FULL SUFFRAGE TO WOMEN

Copenhagen, June 7.—The Danish parliament yesterday passed unanimously a radical constitution. The constitution grants universal suffrage to women and abolishes all voting privileges of the highest taxpayers.

During the afternoon the King signed the constitution. A large procession of women of all classes passed saluting the King. Her Majesty received a deputation representing the Processionists. Later a deputation went to Parliament, thanked the Government and House.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Cincinnati.
New York at Chicago.
Brooklyn at Pittsburgh.
Philadelphia at St. Louis.

Results Yesterday

Boston, 5; Cincinnati, 2; 10 ins.
Chicago, 8; New York, 6.
St. Louis, 3; Philadelphia, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	24	17	.585
Philadelphia	22	19	.537
Brooklyn	21	20	.512
Boston	21	20	.512
St. Louis	22	22	.500
Pittsburgh	19	21	.475
Cinicinnati	17	22	.436
New York	16	21	.432

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Chicago at Boston.
St. Louis at Philadelphia.
Detroit at New York.
Cleveland at Washington.

Results Yesterday

Detroit, 6; New York, 4.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	28	16	.636
Detroit	29	17	.630
Boston	20	16	.556
New York	19	20	.487
Washington	17	20	.459
Cleveland	18	22	.450
St. Louis	17	25	.405
Philadelphia	15	27	.357

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Kansas City.
Baltimore at Brooklyn.

Results Yesterday

Buffalo, 6; Newark, 3; 1st game.
Buffalo, 4; Newark, 2; 2d game.
Kansas City, 3; St. Louis, 2.
Chicago, 10; Pittsburgh, 5.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Pittsburgh	25	19	.568
Kansas City	25	19	.568
St. Louis	22	18	.550
Newark	23	19	.548
Chicago	24	22	.522
Brooklyn	21	21	.500
Baltimore	15	24	.400
Buffalo	16	30	.348

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today.

Elmira at Syracuse.
Albany at Wilkesbarre.
Troy at Scranton.
Binghamton at Utica.

Results Yesterday

Syracuse, 9; Wilkesbarre, 3.
Utica, 5; Scranton, 3.
Elmira, 3; Troy, 1.
Albany-Binghamton (postponed).

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Elmira	17	12	.586
Troy	14	10	.583
Binghamton	13	11	.542
Utica	14	12	.538
Wilkesbarre	13	14	.481
Scranton	11	13	.458
Albany	11	15	.423
Syracuse	10	16	.385

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today.

Montreal at Buffalo.
Toronto at Rochester.
Providence at Richmond.
Jersey City at Newark.

Results Yesterday

Jersey City, 9; Newark, 6.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	16	11	.593
Richmond	18	14	.563
Rochester	17	14	.548
Montreal	18	16	.529
Providence	16	15	.516
Toronto	15	18	.455
Jersey City	13	19	.406
Newark	12	18	.400

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

	R.	H.	E.
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	3	9	1
Louisville	4	6	0
At Cleveland—	R.	H.	E.
Milwaukee	5	9	1
Cleveland	6	11	2
At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	4	10	0
Columbus	3	8	2
At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	2	12	1
Indianapolis	3	13	2

WM. HOPPLE WON FELLOWSHIP

Hiram Gee Fellowship in Painting Awarded Brooklyn Man

Syracuse, June 7.—William Clifford Hoople of Brooklyn has been awarded the Hiram Gee fellowship in painting for 1915 by the faculty of this department of the College of Fine Arts, Syracuse University.

Announcement of Mr. Hoople's success in a spirited contest covering four years of work was made Saturday by Jeanette Scott, professor of painting. The Gee fellowship is the highest honor within the gift of the College of Fine Arts and is coveted by all students in painting.

Founded by the late Rev. Hiram Gee of Ithaca, the fellowship fund yields an annual income of $500. As originally planned, the winner as entitled to spend a year abroad in study at prominent art centers, the only condition that copies must be made of two pictures by masters for presentation to the University.

The war interfered with this arrangement last year. Joseph Burgess, on whom the fellowship had been conferred, sailed for Europe July 29. Within a week after his arrival war was declared and he immediately returned to this country. Since then he has been studying in New York.

Three Robin Hood Scenes

Imagination has been the distinctive quality of Mr. Hoople's work in college, Prof. Scott said in speaking of the current award of the fellowship and he has shown marked ability in composing. His graduating painting is a triptch, depicting three scenes of Robin Hood and his romantic, merry band. The panel pictures were painted without models and from Mr. Hoople's own conception.

Miss Mary M. Stevens of Constantia won the post-graduate scholarship in painting, the second highest honor in the painting department. This entitles her to pursue study at the University next year without tuition fees.

A second scholarship created this year was awarded Ruth Hudson Lee of this city for the highest general average in literary and art studies.

The Harriet T. Leavenworth scholarship for juniors, paying $100, was awarded Joseph Davis of this city. Gilbert L. Merritt, Syracuse, won the Roswell S. Hill prize of $50, established by J. Sanford Saltus of Paris, to be awarded to the student in the junior class in painting, attaining the highest merit.

The Leavenworth scholarship for sophomores worth $100, was awarded George Kessler of Brooklyn. Byron Newton won the Eloise H. Nottingham prize of $50 awarded the student in the freshman class, maintaining the highest general standing during the year.

Tie for Scholarship

In the design course for second year students the $100 Leavenworth scholarship was divided between Frances B. Rosenthal and Ewalt F. Glowitz, both of this city.

Diplomas will be awarded seven seniors in the painting department Wednesday, the members beside Mr. Hoople and Miss Stevens being Ruth Lee, aMe Corcoran of Rome and Robert Hier, Howard Burchit and Russel Sambrook of this city.

An exhibition of the work done by the painting students during the year will open today in the college of Fine Arts, continuing through tomorrow. The paintings generaly are above the average in merit, Prof. Scott said last night and some of the pictures would be a pleasing surprise to art lovers and critics.

SISTER HENRIETTA DEAD; BURIAD AT SPARKILL

St. Mary's parochial school mourns the death of Sister Henrietta. After an illness of about two months the sister died at the teachers' home in Rochester st. last night. She is survived by her father, Henry Kane, two brothers and two sisters, all of whom live in Scriba.

Rev. John Lindsman officiated at the funeral services this morning at 9.30 o'clock in the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Immediately following the church services undertaker Cole took charge of the body, removing it to Sparkill, N. Y., for burial.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 145 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | TUESDAY, JUNE 8, 1915 | Price One Cent

LEWIS WILLET OF SYRACUSE DROWNS IN TEN FEET OF WATER IN GRANBY RACEWAY

Young Canadian Dropped Six Bombs on Airship, Sending it to Earth, a Column of Fire and Smoke.

London, June 8.—In the gray light of yesterday's early dawn a young British naval aviator, at an altitude of 6.000 feet, attacked a Zeppelin dirigible and sent it hurtling, a vast, writhing column of flames and smoke, down to the Belgian plain. It was a battle of a David and a Goliath, or, to take a more apt simile, a wasp and an eagle, with victory of the tiny, buzzing, quick darting destroyer of the air.

Surpassing in his exploit all the febered imageries of Jules Verne or H. G. Wells, and providing one of the real romances of the war, Sub-Lieutenant Reginal A. J. Warneford is the first man to destroy a Zeppelin in flight. And the feat is regarded as all the more remarkable, since the aviator less than four months ago made his first voyage into the air. This morning he is a national hero and his lone battle in the skies will take a place alongside the most brilliant tales in British military history.

It was about half-past two o'clock in the morning, when he was returning from a raid over German supply depots north of Brussels, that he described far off to the west, between Brussels and Ghent, what seemed to him to be an airship flying low over the ground.

While still climbing to a good tactical position the young aviator saw the puff, puff of the machine gun mounted atop the dirigible, and above the droning of his motor he heard the whirr of the bullets singing past his ears. Then, glancing earthward, the vast bulk of his antogonist directly below him blotted out the panorama of towns and forests and military camps. He released the trigger holding a bomb. It tore through the Zeppelin's envelope. Only a wisp of smoke followed, but it marked a wound and the aerial dreadnought sought to escape. The little aeroplans, however, regained its position above the great bulk, and the aviator released bomb after bomb. Only minor explosions resulted until the last missle in the rack reached its target. When this bomb was dropped Sub-Lieutenant Warneford was only a few hundreds feet above the dirigible, having gradually descended as he saw his first effort were reaching no vital point. Whether it was his proximity to the target or the fact that his bomb pierced a particularly vulnerable part, it caused a terrific explosion and a burst of flame that spread instantaneously from bow to stern of the Zeppelin.

Caught in the whirlpool of air currents caused by the explosion,

(Continued on Eighth Page)

Buddhist Riots in Ceylon Quelled After Murder of Moslems

London, June 8.—Rather serious riots by Buddhists against Moslems have occurred recently in Ceylon, which have now been quelled. Many Moslem shops in Kandy, the capital, were looted and there have been many Moslems murdered in different parts of the Island. Martial law was proclaimed, several rioters were shot and the disorders are now almost completely subdued.

The Governor of Ceylon reports that on May 28, the birthday of Buddha, Moslem shops in Kandy were looted by Buddhists. The outbreak was quelled in Kandy, but was diffused through the central province, where it was repressed by the arrival of a military detachment.

On May 31 there was a later outbreak at Colombo, which subsequently spread south. Martial law has been proclaimed in the western, central, southern, northwestern and Sabara Gamuwa provinces.

On June 3 the Governor left Kandy quiet and proceeded to Colombo, where he found the town quiet but the district perturbed. He hoped to suppress the disorder in a few days.

The disorder is due to a sudden outbreak of racial and commercial animosity, and is not directed against the European population or the colonial government. Much Moslem merchandise has been destroyed. There have been numerous murders and several rioters were shot.

The latest telegrams state that the situation is in hand and is improving.

KING CONSTANTINE GETTING BETTER

London, June 8.—A dispatch from Athens, dated Monday, from Reuter's correspondent says, concerning the condition of King Constantine:—

"A bulletin issued at eight o'clock this morning says that the King's wound appears to be slightly better, but that the monarch passed a disturbed night and had little sleep. Repeated attacks of vomiting prevented the King from retaining nourishment. His general condition, however, is relatively good. At noon today the patient's temperature was 37.6 degrees Centigrade (99.88 Fahrenheit)."

Does Wilson Note Bar Carranza's Eligibility?

By International News Service.

Washington, June 8.—The military successes of Carranza over Generals Villa and Angelos have brought sharply to the attention of the Administration the question whether he is eligible as Provisional President under the terms of President Wilson's note.

All officials who discussed the question today said the President's note did not exclude Carranza.

News of the defeat of Vila by Obregon was received at the State Department today from Consu-General Silliman at Vera Cruz. Mr. Silliman says the bells of Vera Cruz "were rung upon receipt of news of Obregon's victory." However, the Villa representatives here are making large claims of victories.

The National Capital is now believed to be at the mercy of Carranza, who will lose not time in capturing and garrisoning the city.

Dispatches to the department said 300 men and 1800 women and children were to leave Mexico city today on a special train.

The special train will proceed frrom Mexico City to Tizayuca. From there the refugees will go by caravan twenty-eight miles to the other side of the break. The train will be in charge of American Consul-General Shanklin and officials of the Gritish Legation.

Senor Pedra Dascurain, Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the Cabinet of Francisco I. Madero, jr., and who held the post of President of Mexico for a few minutes, will go back to his country to aid in the work of pacification if it "will prevent intervention by the United States."

Senor Lascurain, who has been hailed in many quarters as the man to carry out President Wilson's program of pacification in Mexico, made this plain yesterday in an interview.

"Every loyal Mexican would give his life to prevent interevntion," said the former diplomat.

Senor Lascurain believes intervention by the United States is practically the only way to unite Mexico. And yet he believes intervention would be a calamity.

"I hope never again to hold public office," he said. "I will throw myself into the Mexican arena only to prevent intervention. I pray God that intervention may not come."

Italian Offensive Tightens Against Austrian Front

Rome, June 8.—A general Italian advance is taking place today across the Isonzo river from Caporetto to the sea, on a front of about forty miles.

Hard fighting is taking place at Gradisca and vicintity. Tolmino, on the east side of the Isonzo, is one of the Italian objectives.

The Italian authorities are drawing tighter the screen of secrecy as to the Italian operations. Nevertheless, it may be said masses of Italian troops have been concentrated on the froads from Cormons, Palmanova and Gervignamo.

The resistance of the Austrians is daily becoming stronger. This, Italian Staff Officers declare, has made their men more determined.

The Italian military authorities have issued instructions to ships and airships to spare from injury the remains of the famous Roman amphitheatre at Pola, the Austrian naval base on the eastern side of the Adriatic.

The Italians say this location is being used by the Austrians for military purposes.

Details of the recent arrest of five Dominical monks, whose monastry windows at Bari looked out over the Adriatic, have been made public.

An army lieutenant, noticing the flashing rays of a strong light, traced them to the monastry. He called two carabineers, made his way to the monastry door and insisted upon entering. The monk in charge, in reply to questions, declared there were only three monks in the building.

A second monk appeared, but the lieutenant could not locate the third. Finally he broke down the door of a cell and found a monk

(Continued on Eighth Page)

Body Disappeared Completely In the Swift Current—Grappling Irons Used by Officials to Find Body

Shortly before noon today, Lewis Willett, of Syracuse, was drowned in the Granby mill race. The drrowned man, in company with a negro and a large man wearing a brown suit, was seen about 11:30 by Will Bass, a driver for the Granby Paper Company, descending the stairway which leads from the lower bridge and proceed north along the pathway which leads from the bridge to a cluster of boathouses about one quarter mile north.

The negro, who was summoned, when questioned by Chief Dyer who drove immediattely to the scene of the drowning, said that Willett removed his coat and hat and deliberately walked into the water towards a boat drifting close by. The bank at this point is very steep and the current swift. The scene of the accident is at the boathouse farthest north and adjoining this boathouse is a smaller shelter intended evidently to house a rowboat. The door of this smaller house was entirely broken off, so that it would appear that the boat mentioned by the negro was the one contained there. No trace of the boat has been found. The coat and hat, which show that the victim was well dressed, were taken charge of by the Chief.

This afternoon the race is being dragged under the supervision of Coroner Cusick, and up to the time of goin gto press, the body had not been located.

The victim, who was a resident of Syracuse, was about 30 years old and is survived by a wife and one child.

PEACE MOVE HINT COMES FROM BERLIN

Washington, June 8.—Van Ghell Geldemeester, son of the religious advisor to Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, by a brief visit to Washington, after conferences in Berlin with high German officials, has aroused much speculation in official and diplomatic quarters here about the possibility of peace in Europe.

Mr. Geldemeester, it became known today, saw Dr. von Jagow, the German Foreign Secretary, and other members of the imperial ministry shortly after the Lusitania was sunk and received certain impressions concerning the German attitude toward the war and the ultimate making of peace.

With the knowledge, though not with the authority of the German officials, he started for Washington in the hope that informally he could portray German feeling in official quarters. On his arrival here last week he visited Ambassador von Bernstorff. The latter, hearing Mr. Geldemeester had been in Berlin and had been at the German Foreign Office, gave his visitor a letter of introduction setting forth the facts.

The Ambassador said tonight, however, that Mr. Geldemeester carried no credentials from Germany and had absolutely no official connection with his Government.

Mr. Geldemeester left Washington Saturday without seeing any prominent officials of the American Government. He started on a trip to New York, Chicago and other cities with the idea of convincing editors of German newspapers of the help they can render in promoting better and more friendly relations between Germany and the United States.

While in Washington the visitor from the Netherlands gave the impression to those with whom he talked that there was a peace party of some importance in Great Britain, as well as in Germany, and that what was most needed at present was a continued pressure by the neutrals for mediation.

(Continued on Eighth Page)

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

Tuesday, June 8, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Wild Flowers

If it is found necessary to have closed seasons for game and fish, in order that the different species may not become extinct, but have opportunity offered to replenish themselves, the same protection, it is held, should be given to the wild flowers.

Blooms, that once were found in profusion are now exceedingly scarce, and some varieties seem to have disappeared altogether. A notable instance is that of the trailing arbutus, once so prolific in the New England states and so popular with wild flower hunters.

Wild flowers are not sought as much as formerly, and this may be due partly to the fact that the greenhouses provide cultivated blooms of much greater beauty and excellence, and partly to the other fact that the places where wild flowers grow are becoming so much more restricted than they used to be. The woodlots have nearly disappeared and the cultivated fields give wild flowers no necouragement to grow.

However, if a closed season will do anything towarrds restoring these shy denizens of what remains of the woodland, then let us have a closed season, for the satisfaction of the botanist, if for nothing else. A flower warden would hardly be required for the enforcement of the law.—Batavia News.

Freedom

In a communication to the New York Tribune William Kerr of East Orange expresses himself with an exceptional clarity of thought. The letter follows:

"Your editorial in which you picture the Allies as the defenders of freedom should inspire every American. But what do you mean by the term 'freedom?'

"We have seen the 'freedom' which England has sent out through the world. Ireland has groaned under it for centuries; its practice in India inspired Mr. Bryan's little pamphlet which fell under the displeasure of the British censor; what Mr. Roosevelt saw of it in Egypt brought forth a speech which threatened international complications. In South Africa the relatives of the 26,663 women and children who died in two years in British concentration camps call it by a different name, and we experienced a little of this type of 'freedom' during our Civil War.

"Belgium, in the Congo, taught "freedom" by means of murder and multilated bodies.

"Russia 'freedom' may be learned from the Jews and the political exiles.

"But this is sufficient to justify me, although I am not an ex-college president, professor English nor editor of a newspaper, in suggesting to Dr. Eliot, Dr. Howells and yourself that it might be an interesting and valuable idea to publish your definition of freedom before urging this nation to its denfence."

A Tipping Fraud

Tips do not always go to the person to whom the tip is given. Often they go indirectly to the employer. In the case of the Pullman company which pays its porters a nominal salary, the tip becomes an indirect profit to the company, for it enables the concern to pay a lower wake than it would have to pay, if there were no tips.

But there are tips which go directly to the employer. Thus, some leading hotels and other places have been known to afford certain privileges such as cloak rooms, shoe-shining stands, wash rooms, etc., and to have attendants in charge of them. Attendants are paid wages in such places where the tips go directly to the employer, and they have to hand the tips over to the employer. The tip-giver thinks that he is making a present to the attendant, but he is mistaken. The practice is so common that the Illinois Legislature thought it worth while to pass a law prohibiting the fraud. The law does not prohibit genuine tips, but it prohibits a conspiracy that fools the giver and deprives the man who gives the service from the profit.—Utica Observer.

WATER GLASS
EGG PRESERVER
By the Quart or Gallon
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

KINGS OF THE ROADS

Each week-end brings its list of automobile accidents from all over the country, and each week more foolkillers come to the front to take the places of those who have gone before them; and yet it does appear to the casual observer of those who are today kings of the road, that there is beginning to be something tangible to the expression, "The Courtesies of the Road." There was a time when the foregoing sentence might have meant the possession of a railroad pass; but not today, in the days when the automobile is no longer a plaything. "The Courtesies of the Road" today as never before seems to mean simply the good-will which gentlemen drivers of automobiles always manifest toward one another when they meet. There may yet remain a few of the fellows who used to be called the Red Devils of the Road, and considered themselves sections of the Day of Judgment, but thanks to the automobile clubs of the land the biggest devils remaining are those who fear.

And for the benefit of such fellows the old Quaker maxim is recommended, which runs thus: "If I can do a kind act or say a kind word, let me say it now, for I may not pass this way again."

Of course, most autoists pass this way again, and thousands of other autoists do the same thing, so it is a good thing for the owners of the buzz wagons to heed the Quaker advice.

With the Medes and the Persians

The Tribune notes that Mr. William Barnes has paid heed to its warning about the flaw in his recently proposed constitutional amendment to shut off social reforms in general. That measure, sweeping as were its terms, inclusive as were its limitations on legislative powers in handling such questions as minimum wages, primary and election reform and the like, still took no cognizance of the fact that the constitution itself might be amended by action of the Legislature and the voters. Mr. Barnes, awakened to a realization of the danger thus disclosed, has now produced another proposed amendment, providing that the constitution may be amended only in conventions, said conventions to be held each ten years, or at such time as the Legislature may decree.

With his former proposal and this one safely embedded in the fundamental law of the State Mr. Barnes could be supremely happy. He would have a constitution worth defending, but one which would need no defence. It would be as strong as Gibraltar, and just as immovable, just as responsive to the needs of humanity and changes in social and economic conditions as that giant crag. It would be a reform-proof, reformer-proof instrument.

Unfortunately, there is a belief abroad now, widely prevalent, in fact, even though it does not meet Mr. Barnes's complete approval, that the laws are made for the people not the people for the laws. There is no general desire to have laws which are unalterable, or constitutions either. Many people, including some eminent lawyers, hold that while the law may never expect to catch up with public opinion it should follow it pretty closely, and the constitution should not lag far behind. It is safe to say that Mr. Barnes will never be one of them, however small a minority he may rally to his notion of a rock-bound fundamental law. He really belongs with the Medes and the Persians.—New York Tribune.

ASTOR CHILD HAS COSTLY LIVING

New York, June 7.—John Jacob Astor, now in his third year, the posthumous child of Colonel John Jacob Astor, who perished when the Titanic went down, has been living at the rate of approximately $30,000 a year, according to the accounting filed today with the surrogate by his mother, Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, who is his guardian.

The court allowed Mrs. Astor $60,000 for the maintenance of the little boy for three years or $20,000 a year. In the accounting filed today, Mrs. Astor asserts that she has spent $23,639 of her own money in addition for his maintenance. Chief items in the accounting are one-third of the taxes of the Astor Fifth avenue home (the taxes approximately $30,000 a year), $8,000 for professional services of physicians, lawyers and others, and $5,000 for clothing, supplies and toys.

Mrs. Astor asserts that she is informed that the income on the trust fund left by Colonel Astor for the child is approximately $140,000 and upon this assumption contends that it was Colonel Astor's wish that his son be amply provided for. Of this income she points out, she has been allowed only $60,000 for three years. The money she has spent from her own funds in addition to the $20,000 was expended from the date of the child's birth to December 31, 1914.

ONLY 9 OF 180 BALD IN HARVARD FACULTY

Cambridge, Mass., June 7.—If baldness is a sign of great brain development, the Harvard faculty is lacking.

There are 180 teacheing men, and only nine are bald. They are Hugo Munsterberg, Thomas N. Carver, Frank W. Taussig, William J. Cunningham, William M. Davis, William F. Osgood, George S. Rayner, Irvan L. Winter and Charles C. Wright.

SHOWS VALUE OF LIFE AND COST OF DISEASE.

Dr. A. L. Light, health officer of Dayton, O., has presented to the annual conference of the state board of health a schedule of the economic cost of preventable diseases and the loss of life due to them. Here is the table:

Value of life of baby at birth, $90; at ten years of age, $2,601; at fifteen, $4,286; at twenty-five, laboring men, $5,448; professional men, $25,808; at forty, professional men, $29,834; at seventy, laboring men, $70.

Average loss by each death due to preventable disease, $3,000. Cost of each case of preventable disease: Measles, mumps, etc., $10; diphtheria, $30; scarlet fever, $50; smallpox, $60; typhoid fever, $200; tuberculosis, $3,000.

BUSINESS IMPROVING, OFFICIAL FIGURES SAY.

Railroads Earn More Than Year Ago. Treasury Balance Expands.

With the decision of the federal court that the United States Steel corporation is not a trust it is confidently expected that business will now quickly take big leaps.

That conditions are greatly improved is emphasized by a statement by Comptroller of the Currency Williams showing that on May 31 the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency still outstanding aggregated only $2,508,940 out of the $383,502,645 originally issued. This outstanding currency is held largely by banks in the cotton states.

A report by the interstate commerce commission shows that the net revenues of the great railroads for April were $33,821,308 as against $30,322,791 for April, 1914. The gross revenues were $2,000,000 less, but the operative expenses were $6,000,000 less.

Secretary McAdoo and other officials of the treasury department are confident that the turning point has come in national finances and that by July 15 there will be in the general treasury fund a working balance of at least $100,000,000.

KAISER HAS PLENTY OF MEN.

But Losses Are Seven a Minute and Flower of Youth Is Gone.

Colonel Repington, the military expert of the London Times, discussing the new German army, says:

"The classes of 1915 and 1916 and part of the ersatz and landsturm will soon be supplying the Germans with their usual quota of good men, and it would be a fallacy to suppose that the German operations will be any more hampered this present year by a lack of men than by a lack of munitions and food.

"The Germans do not lack the means to continue the campaign vigorously. Nevertheless it must not be forgotten that the German casualties have been ten times those of the British, and the strain of fighting simultaneously on two fronts has been immense.

"No nation can go on losing seven men a minute day and night. The original German army disappeared long ago. Their supply of men is not exhausted, but to a large extent the flower of the German youth has withered."

THANKS FOR AID TO RYNDAM.

Holland-American Line Praises Naval Men For Brilliant Seamanship.

Secretary Daniels has received a letter from the Holland-American line expressing the company's appreciation and gratitude for the aid given by the battleships Texas and South Carolina to the steamship Ryndam when she was injured in collision off Nantucket May 26.

The South Carolina took on board the passengers and crow of the Ryndam, totaling 230 persons. Among the passengers were thirty-two women and ten children, including four babies. The accident occurred at 3:40 a. m., and all the passengers and crew were transferred to the South Carolina by 4:30. The Texas convoyed the Ryndam to the Ambrose lightship.

The letter remarks on the efficient work done by the officers and crew of the naval vessels and the hospitality shown the passengers and crew of the stricken ship and states that it will always be remembered as a brilliant example of good seamanship and splendid comradeship.

WAR NO BAR TO RED TAPE.

French Surgeon Checked In Work by Lack of Printed Forms.

One of the best known doctors, who is directing a French military hospital, recently had need of a certain surgical instrument. He wrote to the authorities for it.

"Make your request on a printed form," came the answer. The doctor replied that he had no printed forms. Second reply from the administration, "Make a demand for printed forms." The doctor again wrote and received a third reply, "Make your demand on a printed form."

WAR CUTS DOWN BIRTH RATE.

Paris Has 2,040 Fewer Babies In Month, Statistics Show.

Births in France are beginning to show the effects of the war.

According to the statistics for Paris there were [illegible] births in May, the tenth month of the war, as compared with [illegible] in the same month last year.

A Prayer For Light

Lord God of peace and war,
Thy presence we implore!
Descend from heights afar
And lead us as of yore!

The nations stagger, blind
And perishing in night;
O, let us once more find
The long delaying light!

Deal gently with our sin,
Deal gently with our grief.
Thou who has shut us in
This plane of unbelief.

Thou who has spread a veil
Before our mortal eyes,
So that earth's noblest fail
Thy way to recognise!

Thy pity we invoke
Upon our darkness here.
O lift the battle smoke
And let thy light appear!

—M. E. Buhler.

KAISER, AS PATRIOT, IS MORE LOVED THAN EVER.

Emperor Has Added to His Popularity at Home, Observer Finds.

The "neutral observer" of the London Times in Germany writes that he has noticed a subtle change in the position of Kaiser Wilhelm in the estimation of the German people. He has fallen into the background when compared with Von Hindenburg, Von Mackensen or Von Weddigen, but at the same time he was never so popular before.

"Nobody makes the kaiser responsible for the war," the correspondent writes. "Everybody believes he tried to prevent it and that when it was brought on by the determination of foes the kaiser shouldered the heavy burden with the deepest sorrow.

"He sacrificed all his personal interests for the sake of the country. He willingly accepted a subordinate position to give free play to men able to command a victory.

"He is regarded as having set an example of simple living and is said to have shown the utmost regard for the susceptibilities of the federal sovereigns and their people. He has thus gained a great hold on the affections of the Bavarians and Saxons.

"He is represented as having waived every consideration that might have militated against practical efficiency in waging war. This has greatly added to the love his own people have for him.

"The crown prince, on the other hand, is in a very different position. He was hailed at first as a great leader, but he has gradually faded out of sight and is scarcely ever mentioned. The kaiser's other sons have also ceased to enjoy prominent publicity."

GIRL PREACHER WINS FAME.

Child Who "Died and Came Back" Seems Suddenly Inspired.

Mary McCain, thirteen, of Longview, Miss., a girl evangelist, is leaping into fame all over the south as the child preacher who "died, went to heaven and came back."

Physicians shake their heads when told that Mary died and came back, but her parents are emphatic that Mary was dead. She had no pulse, her heart was not beating, and her body was cold and rigid, they declare.

The following morning, when her body was to be embalmed, Mary McCain came "back to life" when her grief stricken parents entered the room.

The remarkable thing about the young missioner is that Mary had never been to Sunday school, never saw a Bible and seldom heard the name of God except in a curse.

MAIN POINTS IN DECISION THAT STEEL COMPANY IS NO TRUST.

In the suit brought by the government against the United States Steel corporation the federal court decided that:

The corporation had not violated the Sherman law.

It deserved the commendation of the public for fair dealing.

Mere bigness of business does not constitute a trust.

The famous Gary dinners were unlawful, but had been discontinued.

President Roosevelt was justified in refusing to interfere with the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company, the absorption being legal.

Andrew Carnegie is exonerated from illegal participation in the sale of the Carnegie company.

In ten years the steel company had increased its business about 40 per cent, but nine great competing companies had increased from 63 to 3,709 per cent.

And the field of enterprise was as open to competition as before the corporation was formed.

Suit was filed Oct. 26, 1911.
Hearings began May 6, 1912.
Suit argued in October, 1914.
Case decided June 3, 1915.

Testimony filled 15,000 printed pages.

Government alleged that capitalization of $1,402,846,000 contained $600,000,000 of "water" and that plants acquired by the corporation controlled between 60 and 82 per cent of the country's total production.

Suit cost $500,000, of which about $[illegible] was borne by the corporation.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

1914 FORD RUNABOUT FOR SALE
Has been run 1500 miles.
GARRETT BROS.
Livery and Sales Stable
North 2d Street

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

GOSSARD CORSETS
They Lace in Front
These Corsets anticipate the styles in Suits and Dresses.
Sold at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

MILLINERY
The Latest in Summer Hats
A number of Sample Hats at Half Price
MRS. F. K. JONES
210 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

BUSINESS IS GOOD
Because we serve The Best
Dinner 25c
Supper Specials 15c
FOLEY'S
Up-to-date Restaurant

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4246
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

Second-Hand Machinery
New and Second-hand I Beams and Pipes, all kinds and sizes,
For Sale Pipe Cut to Order
I. ALDERMAN
19 W. 3d St. Phone 2242

FRESH STRAWBERRIES EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

MOVIE NOTES

At the largest salary ever paid for appearance in motion pictures Anna Pavlowa and her famous Ballet Russe have been engaged by the Universal Film Company for an eight-reel supreme photo-play.

Auber's grand opera, "The Dumb Girl of Portici," which was presented in grand opera form twenty-one years ago at the Metropolitan Opera House, will be the subject.

Lois Weber, famous as a scenario writer and director, whose "Hypocrites" startled the world, will make the production and write the script.

* * *

The first showing of "The Moonstone," based on Wilkie Collins's famous novel of adventure, wiht Eugene O'Brien and Elaine Hammerstein in the principal roles, was given at the New York Hippodrome yesterday. The story concerns the tragic consequences which follow the theft of a diamond from the eye of an idol in an Indian temple. Orchestral and vocal numbers fere part of the program.

* * *

Miss Geraldine Farrar, who has been engaged by the Lasky Feature Play Company to appear in a series of photodrafas left for Hollywood, California, today.

Miss Farrar is due to arrive in Los Angeles, of which Hollywood is a suburb, Friday. She will be met these by, Mr. Lasky, Mr. Goldfish, Mr. De Mille and other heads of the Lasky organization.

Hints for the Needle Worker

A Crochet Lace Pattern.

Abbreviations.—Ch., chain; d.c., double crochet; st.tr., short treble; tr., treble; d.tr., double treble.

The "large" pattern is sure to become a favorite. Its uses are manifold, while its appearance is at once attractive.

Crochet cotton No. 30 was used for this model, but the worker may vary the width by using coarser or finer cotton as she may desire.

First Row.—17 ch., * 5 ch., 2 d.tr. in first of 5 ch., 5 ch., 1 d.c. in same place, 3 times more work 5 ch., 2 d.tr., 5 ch. and 1 d.c. in same place, 3 d.c. in first 3 ch. of 17 (as they stand), 17 ch., repeat from * for length required, turn.

Second Row.—* 5 ch., 1 d.c. in first point, 7 ch., 1 d.c. in second point, 9 ch., 1 d.c. in third point, 7 ch., 1 d.c. in fourth point, 5 ch., 1 d.c. in centre ch. between two sets of points, repeat from *, turn.

Third Row.—* 5 d.c. in each, 5 ch., 7 d.c. in 7 ch., 1 d.c., 2 st.tr., 9 tr., 2 st.tr. and 1 d.c. in loop of 9 ch., 7 d.c. in next 7 ch., 5 d.c. in 5 ch., repeat from *, turn.

Fourth Row.—1 tr. after the first 5 d.c., * 3 ch., 1 tr. in fourth of 7 d.c., 1 picot (5 ch., 1 d.c. back into first), 1 tr. after seventh d.c., 1 picot, 1 tr. after 2 st.tr., 1 picot, 1 tr. in second tr., 1 picot and 1 tr. in next 5 tr. stitches, 1 picot, 1 tr. in first st.tr., 1 picot, 1 tr. before 7 d.c., 1 picot, 1 tr. in fourth (of 7) d.c., 8 ch., 1 tr. before 5 d.c., 1 tr. between the 5 d.c. and 7 d.c. of next point, repeat from *.

THE "LARGE."

Footing, First Row.—Along the outer side of foundation chain work 2 ch. and 1 tr., missing 2 stitches below.

Second Row.—2 d.c. in each space, 1 d.c. on each treble.

The "Stroma" Crochet Lace.

Abbreviations.—Ch., chain; sl.st., slip stitch; d.c., double crochet; tr., treble.

Crochet cotton No. 40 was used for this model, which measures 1½ inches wide. Crochet cotton in No. 50 is also well adapted.

First Row.—Work a chain for length required, turn and make spaces of 1 ch. and 1 tr., missing 1 ch. below, turn.

Second Row.—5 ch., miss 2 tr., 1 tr. on next tr., 1 tr. in space, 1 tr. in tr., 1 tr. in space, * 3 ch., miss 2 tr. below, 4 tr. on next 4 stitches below, 3 ch., 1 picot (4 ch., 1 sl.st. back into first), 2 ch., miss 2 tr. below, 1 d. c. in next space, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., miss 2 tr. below, 4 tr. in next 4 stitches, repeat from *, turn.

Third Row.—2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., * 3 tr. in ch. just before next block of tr., 1 tr. on first of 4 tr., 3 ch., 4 tr. in next 3 ch. space, 3 ch., 1 tr. on end tr. of next four, 3 tr. in ch. before picot below, 2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., repeat from *, turn.

Fourth Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. in 3 ch. space below (between 2 blocks), 3 ch., 4 tr. in next space. * 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 1 d.c. between 2 picots below, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. between 2 blocks below, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, repeat from *, turn.

HANDSOME LACE PATTERN.

Fifth Row.—Like the third row, but work 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch. and 1 picot instead of 2 ch., turn.

Sixth Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c. between 2 picots below, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, repeat from *, turn.

Seventh Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. between 2 blocks below, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c. between next 2 picots below, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c. between next 2 picots, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 1 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, repeat from *, turn.

Eighth Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 3 d.c. between 2 picots just before first block, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 3 d.c. between first 2 picots directly after block, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c between next 2 picots, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 3 d.c. between next 2 picots, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 3 d.c. between next 2 picots, repeat from *.

Making Them at Home Saves Much Financial Outlay.

This is an excellent time to get the summer slip covers made, for dressmaking will probably be at its height just at the time they will be needed. Making slip covers at home is a most economical procedure, for well made slip covers are usually rather high priced when ordered from a good upholsterer. No special skill is required for the making of such covers, but a great deal of patience and care will be essential. No sketchy fitting or sewing may be tolerated and the finished effect must be distinctly tailored. Choosing slip covers is like choosing rugs or pictures—one makes selection for a lifetime, so good material of substantial weave and attractive color should be sought, and it will be wise to purchase several yards more than the estimated need, so that new chairs added to one's collection later may be covered.

Linen in tan or striped green and tan is delightfully cool for summer slip covers and all edges should be bound with green cotton braid which comes for the purpose. Plain tan linen is liked best by some housekeepers. In some rooms cretonne slip covers will be charming. English drawing rooms are almost invariably slip covered in flower chintz during the summer months, and the effect with light muslin curtains and plenty of fresh flowers about is delightful. A winter bedroom done in pink may be changed to blue or green in summer by fresh slip covers, curtains and bed cover of cretonne.

Cut a pattern for every slip cover first. For this pattern an old sheet or strong wrapping paper may be used—and the tape measure should not be spared, for guesswork is not to be commended in making well tailored slip covers for a formal room. Pin the paper pattern over chair or lounge just as the slip cover is to go, then cut out your material. Snap fasteners are better than buttons and buttonholes, for they prevent gaping and sagging of the fabric. Make long bags also for the portieres and snap fasten them together at the top, between the hooks of the portieres.

GOSSIP AND ADVICE.

Scrap Books Excellent Way of Conserving Much Valuable Information.

Many times you have seen in a magazine or newspaper an article or suggestion that you determined to save—and then either lost the magazine or clipping or threw it away during some cleaning up period. Why not reform?

One woman of methodical habits keeps a series of scrap books for just such articles and finds this a very neat and effective way of preserving ideas for future use.

One book is marked "Garden." In this book she has pasted every illustration or item of information on the subject that has intrested her. There are pictures of trellises, arbors, pergolas, water gardens, benches or bordered paths, which she hopes to be able some time to add to her own garden; suggestions about flower or vegetable culture; advertisements she wishes to keep for reference; garden plans from various garden magazines, etc.

The other half of this book is devoted to notes on her own garden—dates on which she has planted, her success with various plants and seeds, the garden expense account, and any point that she may wish to recall at any time.

Another book is marked "House." In this she keeps articles and suggestions on household decoration. Samples of chintzes, denims and upholstery materials; illustrations of fireplaces, window seats, cupboards, stair railings, etc., that have appealed to her. Here, too, are written down the dimensions of each room, the number of windows and amount of material needed for curtains, the dates on which the last papers, rugs and curtains were bought, and the price of these. This system saves much time and trouble when a room is to be redecorated, for all the necessary information is at hand.

A large part of the book is devoted to the kitchen. In these pages are all the suggestions that have interested her. There is a list of various brands of tinned goods, cereals and other foodstuffs. This is labeled "Pure Food Products," and only tested and approved brands are listed.

In the kitchen pages also are pasted notes on or advertisements of improved utensils and labor saving devices—washing machines, mayonnaise mixers, butter churns, silver cleaning pans, in fact, any approved labor saving device that she may wish to purchase.

In this way every item of household information that has interested her is preserved in accessible form with very little trouble. Recipes are not put in the scrap book, as they occupy little space and are more conveniently kept in a card index box on a shelf.

1873 DIME SELLS FOR $170.

Quarter Dollar of 1866, Only One Known, Brings $210 at Auction.

In the sale of a coin collection in New York city $170 was paid for an uncirculated dime of 1873, Carson City mint, without arrows.

An uncirculated quarter dollar of 1884, only one other in this country being known, sold for $47. An uncirculated quarter dollar of 1897 brought $40. A quarter dollar of 1842, small date, went for $75. A quarter dollar of 1866, without motto, the only known specimen, brought $210. An uncirculated quarter dollar of 1858, San Francisco mint, went for $42.

Taffeta Gown of Delft Blue

Designed by Hickson & Co., New York.

UPON the clever details of the costume depends to a great extent its style appeal to the feminine mind. In the costume pictured here the full skirt has as a finish at the bottom multitudinous slashes, which are bound by narrow black velvet ribbon. The color of the gown is a delft blue, with tiny Martine figures of a deeper blue. The material is a soft pussy willow taffeta, which is extremely popular this season.

Blue, for many reasons, is the most popular color that women wear because it is becoming to almost every age and almost every complexion. But, to return to the description of the gown, the full skirt is attached to a wide girdle of the material, and the tiny bodice is worn over a blouse of wide georgette crape. The front of the blouse is embroidered, and the neck is finished by a wide sailor collar with a frill of plaited net. The long sleeves of the blouse end in a ruffle which comes well down over the hands. It is tied about the wrist with black velvet bows.

The hat worn with this costume is of the broad sailor type.

Its only trimmings are a strip of figured silk, of which the gown is made, around the crown and long black velvet ties coquettishly tied under the chin. White silk stockings and black patent leather pumps complete a costume which has nearly all of the salient style features of the present season, and which, beyond question, is decidedly attractive. ANNA MAY.

LOCKS OR SEA LEVEL.

The Wisdom That Was Shown In Building the Panama Waterway.

The slides in the Panama canal have led some persons to say that it was a mistake not to build a sea level canal. In discussing that criticism Mr. Charles Whiting Baker, editor of the Engineering News, recently said that the few engineers who urged a sea level canal now dislike to be reminded of the fact.

"Bad as the slides are and costly as the work of cleaning them away is proving to be," said Mr. Baker, "they would be vastly greater if the canal at Culebra cut were made eighty-five feet deeper, as it would have to be in order to lower the canal to sea level. But even that is not the worst. In a sea level canal there would be slides to contend with not only in the nine mile long Culebra cut, but all the way across the isthmus—in the deep morasses along the lower Chagres river, for example, where in some places the soft mud is a hundred feet deep. When at Panama I myself saw a slide move into the cut that was being made for the Gatun locks foundation, in which half an acre or so of soft ground flowed down the slope like stiff molasses.

"We owe a great debt of gratitude for our correct choice to President Taft, President Roosevelt, Colonel Goethals and the late Alfred Noble and other great engineers, who threw all the weight of their influence in favor of a lock canal. There is no dissent in the engineering profession from this assertion, and the public ought also to understand it."

Mother Wit.

Mother (to son who has overslept)—You need a self starter to get you up in the morning.

Son (sotto voce)—Not when I have a crank like you to get me going.—Judge.

FOR THE SUMMER PIAZZA.

Yellow and White Daisies Embroidered Upon Brown Holland.

For the piazza tea table colors are liked better than the glaring white spreads. The one pictured here will wash as well as white and gives a rich note of color to the table and does not have to be removed after tea has been finished. The design is done in mercerized cottons.

TEA TABLE SQUARE.

Woman's World

A Woman Who Believes in Universal Suffrage.

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT.

Excerpts of an address delivered by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont at the southern states woman suffrage conference held in Chattanooga, Tenn., November of 1914 are given below. Mrs. Belmont spoke to the southern audience as a southern woman, having been born in Alabama. She is the granddaughter of General Robert Desha of Tennessee, member of congress during the administration of Andrew Jackson.

Mrs. Belmont said in part:

Modern society is undergoing a decided revolution in woman's affairs which a few years ago would have been declared impossible. Each day brings fresh evidence of woman's ability to cope with world problems and effect reforms. We are all familiar with the doleful predictions made from time to time regarding the danger of permitting women to interest themselves in matters pertaining to the public welfare. But we have countless examples of efficient women devoting their talents to the common good, and the world not only survives the shock, but constantly demands more and more of their time and effort. Society has come to recognize the advantages derived from their co-operation, and welcomes the enormous benefits accuring therefrom.

Not long ago the distinguished editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, familiarly known as Colonel Watterson, gave an interview to a New York newspaper, in which he said: "Man has no inalienable rights which woman has not, but God and nature have given her a fixed place which she cannot change." Now, as a matter of fact, the "fixed place," which, according to tradition, God and nature gave woman, was in the garden of Eden, without any clothes, any roof over her head, any cooking stove, or any cradle to rock her baby in. If it had been "impossible for her to change it" all of us would be roaming around in the forest at the present day.

Man simply got themselves mixed up with God and nature, and the "fixed to her some time after Adam had received his first knowledge through her efforts.

Personally, I plead guilty to so strong a desire for the political emancipation of women that I am not at all particular as to how it shall be granted. I have sworn allegiance to the national amendment for woman suffrage, while the southern states woman suffrage conference, of which I am proud to be a member, holds rigidly to the principle of state rights. As a southerner I thoroughly understand the problems which create this attitude, and if that method proves effective I shall gratefully accept the results. In this respect I feel toward woman suffrage as I do about the cotton industry—both should have the undivided support of the whole United States.

Our critics, like those of all times and all places, distort our motives and denounce our efforts, but I insist that woman suffrage is a spiritual movement, for we seek the uplift of the whole dependence, believing that "where the human race is imbued with a desire to promote the principles of self respect and the spirit of the Lord, there is liberty."

Notes About Note Paper.

Pure white stationery is always suitable, but for the debutante an exquisitely tinted paper is in good taste. This can be had in salmon, oyster blue and Dresden. Sometimes the salmon has a dull rose line and the oyster blue a cadet blue line around the edge.

Formerly a monogram was engraved in a corresponding shade in the corner of the sheet, but fashion no longer requires this, for the engraved initials are meant to stay.

The ordinary correspondence card has fallen into disfavor, yet one attractive style for those who prefer the card to note paper is being used. It has about one inch of the card folded back to form a flap, and the monogram is in the center of the flap.

A new style of paper for engraved formal invitations and receptions is the panel sheet. An impressed border about half an inch wide runs around the edge, and the paper itself is long and rather narrow. Although more expensive than the usual formal style, it is distinguished in appearance.

Sealing wax is still in vogue and offers much in the way of charm in the appearance of a letter.

DEAR FRIEND WAS MOTHER.

Girl, Given Away Because of Poverty, Now Knows Parents.

Lacrosse, Wis.—Hazel "West," fifteen-year-old girl, who was taken away from Fred West, her foster father, by Judge Brindley because he had neglected her, has found her mother in a woman she has known all her life as a dear friend. Mrs. Fred Green, the mother, appeared before Judge Brindley and told the remarkable story of how she had given Hazel to the Wests when she was a baby because of her inability to care for the baby.

A mysterious telephone call to the Home of the Friendless, where Judge Brindley placed Hazel, effected the reunion of mother and daughter. The message said that if Hazel would come to one of the downtown stores she would be given a heavy coat. Hazel went downtown alone and did not come back. Investigation revealed her at the home of Mrs. Green, who had met her in the store and told her the story of her parentage.

In explaining the case to the judge Mrs. Green said: "I was the mother of another child when Hazel was born, and we were too poor to care for both of them, and at Mrs. West's urgent plea I let them take her.

"Not a week has passed since that I have not seen her. The Wests were better able to care for her than I, and I have been happy in the thought that she was being brought up in the right way. But since Mrs. West's death I have been worried, and now that she has been taken away from West I intend to keep her."

Mrs. Green is the wife of a railroad engineer. Hazel's father is dead.

FLOWER FANCIES.

The most economical housewives in the world—the French—do not dream it an extravagance to keep always on their dinner tables a few cut flowers. Even the wife of the poorly paid artisan will stop to market and will not be content to go home with her purchases till she has bought a few cents' worth of flowers for her table.

And a good many American housewives feel the same way about flowers for the table. They have found that for a quarter or less flowers may be bought which with a few sprays of green thrown in by the florist will make the table attractive for a week. Yes, for a week, for with proper care cut flowers can be made to last a week—that is, except in the warmest weather, and in the warm weather we are most of us located so that we can get some sort of fresh flowers every day or so, if it is only a bunch of daisies or buttercups.

One of the best ways to keep cut flowers from fading is to see that the moment they are cut from their stems they be placed in water. But of course we cannot be sure that this is done in the case of florists' flowers. The thing to make sure of is that the sap in the stems does not dry out and one way to accomplish this—a way used by many florists—is to put a piece of wax over the stem of the flowers as soon as they are cut.

For the Children

Master Gilbert W. Kahn as an English Officer.

Photo by American Press Association.

Recently there was held in New York an entertainment called a Lafayette fund fete. It was under the auspices of rich and socially prominent people and had for its object the raising of money to aid the wounded soldiers of France. The entertainment was principally of tableaux and living pictures, children dressed in colonial costumes and uniforms being the actors. The boy in the picture represents an English lieutenant of the colonial period, and there were scores of youngsters in equally brilliant and handsome costumes. The boy's name is Gilbert W. Kahn, son of Otto H. Kahn, who is prominent in social and financial circles in New York city.

A Fight With a Cougar.

In company with an Indian a Port Angeles (Wash.) man went fishing for salmon in a rocky river. Suddenly a big cougar appeared at the entrance to a cave and, with a roar, crouched to spring at the Indian.

The white man threw his fish spear at the cougar, while the Indian ran for his life.

The spear entered the animal's neck and ear, and thus the man held him at a distance and tried to drown him. But the cougar was too strong and agile for that, and finally the spear came out of its hold.

For four long hours the man and the cougar fought, the cougar walking around and around and every once in a while making a spring, which the man every time repulsed with the spear.

The combat only ended when the Indian returned, after a twelve mile trip, with a gun. His first shot wounded the beast in the side; the second lodged in its head and killed it.

Arctic Dogs.

Far up north on the wild and snowy wastes is the home of the Eskimo or arctic dogs. Although many of them are half savage, scarcely more than reclaimed wolves, they are wonderfully cunning and enduring. With the reindeer they are the beasts of burden, valuable to their owners and a great help to explorers and travelers in these cold, trackless regions. Over the untrodden frozen plains these dogs can travel at the rate of seven to eight miles an hour, drawing a good sized load and keeping up the pace for several days. In summer they are turned loose to shift for themselves and are far more care free than in the winter season, when they must toil for their masters.

Sheep Intelligence.

However stupid we have learned to consider sheep, they are not devoid of sympathy and charity one for another. A shepherd was driving home a flock of sheep when he noticed one of them lagged behind and bleated piteously. Then he saw another of the flock run back and walk with it until they overtook the rest. On examining the animal that had stayed behind he found that it was blind and must have called for help, in some manner making an appeal that met with immediate response.

Fairyland.

I wonder if a girlie must,
In fairyland, always wear
A dress with lace and trimming fussed
And ribbon bows in her hair.

I wonder when she talks too fast
If some one is there to say
That children always should speak last
And older folks quick obey.

I wonder if she takes the hose
And carelessly wets her head,
If she is robbed of all her clothes
And put at once in her bed.

I wish there was some way to know
About such unpleasant things,
If fairies treat small children so
I'd ask no fairy for wings!
—Philadelphia Record.

D/34

DIVERSITY

distinguishes the smart clothes we have assembled here for our discriminating trade. We've an abundance of beautiful mixtures—the finest cheviots, worsteds and vicunas and handsome blacks and blues. The styles are as diversified as the fabrics. This store is the best place for you to buy your Spring Suit for the values we are offering are unsurpassed at

$15 and $20

STRAW HATS—Every Style . . $1.00 to $3.00
PANAMA HATS—Good Values $5.00

S. LIPSKY & SON
27 FIRST STREET FULTON, N. Y.

FOR SALE
CASH GROCERY STORE
210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY
A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of 340 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

We are Agents for
CHASE & SANBORN'S
Fine Teas and Coffees
LA PORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida St. Hello 75

NO WARRANTS YET FOR FISHERS

If You Must Fish, Then Take the Old Rod and Line

If the activities of the people who spent yesterday picking up with their hands fish which had been left stranded in the holes left by the withdrawing of water from the river, had not been disturbed by the game warden, therre is no doubt but what a larger catch would have been reported today, as a lot of fish can still be seen from the lower bridge. As it is, the river bed is deserted as far as "wholesale fishermen" is concerned. Two men, however, were seen this morning dipping an angler's rod into one of the little pools. The fish could be seen by the men, but to obtain them in conformity with the law, they had to use the pole and hook. Several people who were watching the two fishermen from the bridge remarked, "It's like sitting in your own parlor and angling for gold fish."

Game Warden J. R. Travis of Cleveland, who took the names of more than forty violators, has as yet taken no action in prosecuting these people, as no warrant for their arrest has been sworn out.

ROCKEFELLER REMOVES GUARD AT WIFE'S GRAVE

Four watchmen who have been guarding night and day the John D. Archbold vault in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, in which lies the body of Mrs. J. D. Rockefeller, have been removed, and the guardhous torn away.

It is reported Mr. Rockefeller will leave about July to spend the summer in Cleveland. Ten servants have been sent to Cleveland to prepare for his arrival.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

The following letters remain uncalled for at the post office June 9, 1915. Inquirers will please say advertised:

Men—Benedict, D. M. 2; Kough, Daniel; Mackefty, Frank; Pelo, Henr sCnyder, Geo.

Women—Ferrell, Miss Catherine; Hart, Miss Ellen; Hughes, Miss Helen; Moody, Miss H.; Murray, Mrs Fannie; Skeel, Miss Carrie.

Peter T. Conley, P.M.

Black's Cookies tickle the palates of old and young, because they are right. adv.

DINOSAUR FOUND BY A DENVER MAN

Scientists at Work Trying to Collect All of the Bones.

Grand Junction, Colo.—Coming to Grand Junction to examine the skeleton of the dinosaur found south of the city recently, Professor J. D. Figgins of the City Park museum in Denver found another while searching the hills. He expects to have it excavated and removed to Denver to be mounted in the museum.

Professor Figgins, with two guides, viewed the pile of bones of the petrified dinosaur recently located and found the bones much scattered and disintegrated. Some were carried away by specimen hunters. He found several hard, round rocks which he declared to be the stones a dinosaur swallowed to grind food with, as a chicken swallows pebbles.

He kept on the trail and soon found small slivers of bone and a large joint sticking out of the ground.

He staked the place and returned to Grand Junction and states that he will immediately start the work of having the huge skeleton uncovered.

Judging from the formation where the bones were found, there is every reason to believe that the skeleton can be taken out in more than ordinarily fine condition.

Professor Figgins said it has always been the case that when petrified skeletons of dinosaurs have been found in Colorado some eastern museum has swooped in and captured the prize, while Colorado's own museum stands devoid of any of the specimens found in its own state. If this proves to be a fairly good specimen it will be placed in the Denver museum as rapidly as the work can be accomplished.

While there is no way of determining the size of the saurian until some excavation is made, the size of the joint found protruding from the ground indicafes that the animal was as large as the largest ones found in the valley.

CUPID BROKE UP CLUB.

St. Paul Bachelor Girls' Club Is Now a Name Only.

St. Paul.—The Bachelor Girls' club of St. Paul danced itself out of existence at the armory, Sixth and Exchange streets, after ten of the original thirteen members had fallen before the marksmanship of Dan Cupid. It was the twelfth and last dance given by the club, and at the stroke of 1 a few mornings ago the last vestige of the club as an organization vanished like Cinderella under the spell of the fairy.

The club was organized five years ago, and the members, bound by solemn oaths of bachelorhood, remained intact for a time. Cupid battered at the ramparts, and one after another of the members capitulated until five alone were left. Suddenly two of these fell, and a double wedding announcement carried dismay to the hearts of the remaining three.

If only the war debts which may be estimated in billions even were the only ones to think about!

What if South America, after all, should prove the sole habitat of the peace germ?

Which is the best bet, the war for prohibition or the war against dandelions?

Nowadays it's even sanity to say, "I'd rather be wrong than president."

TO EUROPE

Everybody Had Good Time, Arrving Home In Time for Supper

Rev. Charles Olmstead of the Congregational church spoke at the meeting of the Borrowed Time Club on Monday afternoon. He chose for his theme, "Some Recollections of Three Months on the European Trail." The amusing incidents and sidelights which gave zest to the trip and to the narration given.

It was a June day in the later nineties that the speaker, accompanied by his brother, now a pastor at Homer, embarked upon an Allen State line steamer at New York, en route for Glasgow. The vessel was spoken of as a good place to study character, which often assumes prominent features when people are away from home.

One man was quite willing to forego the pleasures of the sail through New York harbor that he might select and maintain a desirable place at the cabin table.

Another, by his forwardness, was adjudged worthy of some hazing, and according to the Monroe doctrine and McKinley tariff was called upon to answer in a breach of promise suit.

A unique Fourth of July celebration with fireworks and speeches was an interesting feature of the voyage, and the close of the sail up the Clyde at that season when the sun forgets to go down, was set forth in terms which helped to explain why Scotland has long been counted as "nurse for a poetic child." Some Americans spoke deprecatingly of the Clyde, saying, "We wouldn't use it to sponge out the mouth of the Mississippi." To this the Scotchman replied, "You must remember that the Lord Almighty made the rivers of America, but we made the Clyde."

The accidental ramming of a man of war in process of construction in Glasgow harbor, gave a startling finish to the voyage and put the pilot out of a job.

A few days in the great city of Glasgow, spent in part among earlier parishioners and friends, was sufficient to bring to light many customs, and uses of the English language, that seem strange to an American.

A journey through the Grossacks, begun in company with an unsuccessful band of card sharpers who fillled the apartment as the train set not for Ballock, was described, and mention made of many points of historic interest, at Stirling and elsewhere.

Edmburgh was next visited and described as a city of classical note. The scenes associated with Mary Queen of Scots, John Knox and Thomas Guthrie are points of interest there.

The tour of the cathedral towns of York, Durham, Lincoln and Cambridge was next mentioned, followed by three weeks in the vast city of London.

Here the speaker found himself quartered in the same hous with his pugillistic countryman, Fitzsimmons. A run was made through, not upon, the Bank of England, the Royal Exchange, bearing the golden grasshopper, which recalls an incident in the early life of Thomas A. Graham, its founder, and many place of interest were visited.

Under the guidance of a former parishioner the slums of the city were visited on a Saturday evening. A visit to Crystal Palace was made when horseless carriages and moving pictures were in their infancy.

Joseph Parker, Thomas Spurgeon, F. B. Meyer and other noted clergymen were heard in their respective churches, and pleasant interviews were had with most of them. Christ church, to which Dr. Meyer has recently returned, is the descendant of the church in which the erratic Rowland Hill ministered. The Chittendon mission at Great Assembly Hall on Mile End road was visited. Mr. Chittendon was accosted by a fellow who asked him how much he got for wearing the blue ribbon he had in the buttonhole of his coat. He replied that as nearly as he could make out it cost him 500,000 pounds a year to wear that ribbon. He had repudiated the income of a great brewery which he inherited and was devoting himself to missionary work.

The bounds of the great London fire, which began at Pudding Lane and ended at Pie Alley, were noted. Visits made to London Tower, Smithfield, Hyde Park, the British Museum, St. Paul's Cathedral, to a service at which the Bishop of London preached, Westminster Abbey, Jerusalem acres where more than 100,000 people have been buried, were found the graves of John Bunyon, Isaac Walts, Susannah Wesley, Daniel DeFoe and many others.

The crowning incident was the marriage of Princess Maud to Charles of Denmark. It was a gala day throughout the city and Queen Victoria, King Edward, then Prince of Wales, the Present King George and many of the notable people were seen in the royal procession.

Other places in England which were visited and found to be of much intrest were Windsor, Oxford, Stratford on-the-Avon, where Shakespeare lived and wrote; Warwick, Carlisle, Birmingham and other towns where the stay was brief.

From London the journey was made to Holland via Harwick on the Berlin, a comparatively new vessel, which went down a few years later on a stormy night.

Many scenes of interest associated with the Pilgrims were visited in Holland and Belgium and, after a visit to the battlefield of Waterloo, the chosen route led through Liege, the Sheffielld of Belgium, and to Cologne, with its renowned Cathedral. The journey up the Rhine was made by boat as far as Maintz, then by train to Worms, Mannheim, Heidelberg, with its famous university; Appenweir, Offenberg, Carlsruhe and Freiberg on to Schaffhausen and Neuhausen where a day was spent at the Falls of the Rhine. The falls are 82 feet in height and are of much interest. The journey from Heidelberg was madeb y the most picturesque route, where the railroad reaches an elevation of 2,700 feet, 2,000 feet being surmounted in 23 miles. Between Offenberg and Schaffhausen there are 38 tunnels and 142 bridges. An occasional deer could be seen and the night was spent at a rural station, that the entire route might be made in daylight.

After visiting Zug and Zuerich, an interesting trip to the top of the Rigi was made from Lucerne.

Passing over the Lake of the Four Cantons, through places associated with William Tell, a stop was made at the north entrance of St. Gothard Tunnel. From this place a journey was made to the Dama and Rehle glaciers, which wer found to be of much interest.

Most of the prominent cities of Italy were visited, beginning with Milan, Venice, Florence, Bologna and then crossing to the west side. A number of days were given to Rome, Naples, Pisa, Genoa and other places. A walk out the Cia Appia at Rome, a visit the Catacombs of St. Calixtuc, the Ostian gate, the tomb of Shelly and Keats and the Scala Cantu will be long remembered as well as more central scenes. Perhaps nothing of all the journey supassed the visit to Pompeii, under the shadow of Vesuvis. This brand of morals and civilization so suddenly sealed up in the year 79 A.D., and left undiscovered until 1748 has many things to tell. The houses and narrow streets, paved with hexagonal blocks of bisalt, deeply grooved by chariot wheels, can be easily imagined replete with scenes of life.

The return trip was made through the Mt. Benis tunnel and the principal points visited were Geneva, Paris, Ayr and intervening towns. Many friends and acquaintances were met along the various routes, which added muct to the delight of the journey.

Warm greeting were awaiting at the wharf in New York. The erturn voyage was made during the autumn gales, but no regrets were felt for the limited cost and hard work involved.

New Found Asphalt Bed.

An asphalt bed which seems practically inexhaustible is now being developed commercially in Leyte province, in the Philippine Islands. The bed lies near the shore line at Tacloban, at which port ships can anchor and take on cargo of the asphalt from lighters loaded at the mines, with practically no overland transportation. The deposits also contain oil of a high grade. The asphalt is almost pure near the surface and is exceptionally pure at greater depths. The oil deposits—evidenced by oil flowing with water from a spring—contain oil pure enough to be used by the natives for illuminating purposes.

How to See the Sun Spot.

To observe the giant sun spot that is now being watched by astronomers the officials of the naval observatory in Washington direct that the sun be looked at through a piece of smoked glass held over one of the object glasses of an ordinary opera glass, with the smoked side toward the opera glass and using only one eye. The sides of the glasses not in use should be turned away from, instead of toward, the eye, in order to prevent this from being injured by the rays of the sun striking the eye through the glass.

New York Institutions

Backed by the committee which first proposed and secured the establishment of cheap school lunches in New York city, another movement with equal possibililties for good has lately emerged from the theoretical stage of its development into the practical and successful stage. For a number of years community kitchens have been talked of as remedies for many of the ills arising from improper nourishment. On an elaborate scale, something like a glorified delicatessen shop, they have found favor with the well-to-do inhabitants of expensive apartment houses, but the problem was to bring them directly to the class of people who would support them, not as a novelty, but as a necessity for which they could find no comparable substitute.

Taking the bull by the horns, so to speak, this committee decided that the way to find out if the community kitchen was needed was to try it. Accordingly on Washington's birthday of this year, the first community kitchen was opened in New York. It it distinguished from the so-called soup kitchen in several respects, chief of which is that it is not a charity, but a self-supporting business. For, the first kitchen a portion of Tenth avenue, populated by self-respecting working people, was chosen. A small room once occupied by a saloon was fitted up with a twelve-gallon tank for making soup, a range and a few painted tables and benches. On the first day the promoters of the scheme were plleased when it was found that the word had traveled rapidly around the neighborhood, and that instead of 50 customers for whom they had prepared, thed had nearly 300.

A pint of vegetable soup was sold for three cents, a half pint of beef stew for four cents, a half pint of baked beans for three cents and other simple, wholesome foods in proportion. The next day the twelve-gallon soup tank was replaced with one holding 30 gallons, and the business flourished in a manner to exceed the most sanguine expectations of its supporters. In fact, the only sign or disappointment is when purchasers have to be turned away because the supply of food has been exhausted. The committee sells at cost a specal pail divided into four compartments for food and one beneath for boiling water, by means of which a meal may be kept warm for a considerable period of time. In many families where both the mother and father are compelled to work the entire food supply is purchased at the kitchen. All food is inspected by a member of the city board of health, and it is never sent out in receptacles that are not clean. Seven more kitchens will soon be established with a large central kitchen where all the food will be cooked ind inspected. The chief attraction, however, is the saving effected. From testimony voluntarily offered by families in the neighborhood, it is estimated that the cost of living has been reduced one-half, and at the same time the kitchen has shown a substantial profit.

BYRON NEWTON WINS PRIZE AT UNIVERSITY

Mr. and Mrs. F. Jess Newton and their son Byron are being congratulated as a result of the sons' success as a freshman at Syracuse Unicersity. Byron won the Nottingham prize of $50 awarded the student in his class for the highest standing during the year at the College of Fine Arts.

ELIZABETH ROBERTSON'S CLASS TO ENTERTAIN

The Elizabeth Robertson Bible class will hold its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Hammond on Friday evening.

The husbands of the members have been bidden to join the ladies after the business session in a lawn party.

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
"THE LOST HOUSE"
Four-Reel Majestic Featuring
Lillian Gish
and No. 4 of the Paramount Travel Series and 2 others.

WEDNESDAY
"BEULAH"
in 6 Parts, featuring
Henry Walthal

THURSDAY
"THE PRICE HE PAID" in 5 parts, by Ella Wheeler Wilcox and "UNTO HERSELF ALONE" in 3 parts; No. 55 of Who Pays Series Benefit O. U. A. M. of Fulton

FARE THE BEST

Court Upholds Decision That Gives Unfair Advantage to Foreign Vessels

Washington, D. C., June 8.—The Court of Customs Appeals has just added another act to the comedy of errors in which the Democratic administration takes the star part.

The Court has rendered an opinion on the construction of the provision in the Underwood tariff law intended to give a five per cent discount in customs duties on merchandise imported in American vessels, and has virtually declared that the effect of the provision gives a wholesale discrimination in favor of ships of foreign countries.

In a recent article attention was directed to this classic blunder then pending before the Customs Court. The slovenly methods by which it was enacted were referred to, showing that the Democrats had a vague idea about aiding American shipping, adopted a vague method of extending such aid, and by careless guesswork had thrown the whole matter into the courts. It was shown that during the debate in Congress Republicans had given repeated warnings that, apart from its policy, the phraseology of the five per cent section was meaningless and should be corrected to accomplish its purpose.

The decision of the Court of Customs Appeals completely confirms these statements, and rubs it in by saying:

"The wisdom or expediency of the policy is a matter into which we may not inquire nor have we the right to suspend the operation of the statute because we may think its purpose is not adequately accomplished."

It will be recalled that the language of the five per cent discount section provided that "nothing herein shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of our treaties with foreign nations."

It appears from the opinion of the Customs Court that there are at least 5,500 treaty nation vessels in the American foreign trade, and that there are not over fifty American vessels. As a "favor" to our own ships the Democratic Congress, according to this decision, gave an EQUAL BOUNTY to 5,500 competing foreign vessels.

In its decision the Court referred to statistics showing that the discount provisions reduces duties five per cent upon considerably more than oe-half of all our dutiable imports. After all its labored adjutment of tariff rates the Democrats, in this single paragraph proposing a five per cent. discount, practically destroyed the effect of all preceding schedules, and in the same breath conferred upon foreign ships a valuable privilege intended only for our own ships.

In harmony with the decision of the Court of Customs Appeals there will be a refund of customs duties estimated at from twelve million to fifteen million dollars. Who gets the benefit of this refund? Eventually by far the larger part of it will find its way into the coffers of foreign manufacturers.

Unlessthe United States Supreme Court reverses the decision of the Court of Customs Appeals, these millions of dollars must come out of a treasury already facing a huge deficit resulting from gross mismanagement by the present administration.

FRESH VEGETABLES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

on
Bikes, Tires, Supplies
Big Reduction from Regular Prices
BOGUE'S, 61 First Street

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

For Rent—Downtown flat for small family; modern conveniences; $10 per month. Inquire Wirt R. Barker, 34 S. 2d st. 145

Upper Flat—Moderate rent, 214 Walradt st. 6 rooms and all modern cnoveniences. H. L. Crandall, Phone 2520. tf.

For Sale—Good extra heavy double work harness; $20. G. L. Pratt, 177 E. 1st or phone 56. 149

Wanted—Girl for general housework in family of three. Apply 404 Park st. tonight. tf

To Rent—7 room house in Fay st. near chocolate works. G. J. Emeny, 414 S. 4th st. 148c

For Sale—Push cart and baby carriage; both cheap. 513 Buffalo st. 145

Chambermaid Wanted.—Apply Clark House. 147

Hay For Sale. Phone 5819. 140c

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

ARCHDUCHESS AT [illegible]

Daughter of Austrian Commander In Chief Heads Red Cross Corps.

Vienna.—The Archduchess Isabella, daughter of Archduke Frederick, commander in chief of the Austrian forces, is now seeing actual service at the battle front. She is head of one of the Austrian Red Cross corps and spends a great deal of time at her father's headquarters.

The Austrian Red Cross is an admirably organized body of workers and is carrying on its humane work in a quiet but very effective manner.

Photo by American Press Association.

ARCHDUKE FREDERICK AND DAUGHTER, ISABELLA, AT FRONT.

Archduke Frederick has been one of the most conspicuous figures in the war. He has been directing the operations against both the Russians and Italians and is now confronted by another emergency, the possible entrance of Roumania into the war on the side of the allies. It is stated that the Roumanian army consists of 1,000,000 well trained and well armed men, who will be stationed along a 600 mile front in event of her participation in hostilities.

This Player "Quick Study."

For remarkable memory it would be hard to outdo a strolling player of the eighteenth century, of whom Sir William Robertson Nicoll has written. For a wager he once undertook to memorize the whole of the next day's Daily Advertiser and accomplished his task by repeating every line in the journal, news, headings, advertisements and all in perfect order and without a slip.—London Tatler.

ENTERPRISE

Get Busy With Implements to Make Pretty a Plot of Ground

There is joy on the West Side, in the neghborhood of 1st and Worth sts., particularly, for at last the triangular plot of ground has been redeemed form its neglected condition, presenting at last an appearance that is creditable to the enterprise of the people over the Great Divide.

Yesterday, June 7, 1915, the triangle at the junction of the two streets named, was converted into an artistic little park, the work being executed by a number of good neighbors, who arrived at the plot armed with shovels, rakes and spades. The good neighbors worked like a bunch of allies and passersby did not for a long time understand the warlike demonstrations; indeed, why should they, as the actions of the brigade indicated anything but the development that was to come. This development was in the person of George Dumas, florist, whose work indicated peace at any price for the neighborhood. George's arrival was signalled by the appearance of geraniums, cannas and a diversified lot of foliage plants for the shapely mounds that had been thrown up by the sappers. When George Dumas had completed his portion of the work joy reigned among the workers, who felt that nothing had been left undone to make the job complete, with one exception, and that is the installation of a fountain and the scattering about the plot of a few seats. These additions will be added is the information handed out by one of the workers in the cause of civic improvement.

Eugene Drury is the appointed caretaker of the newly improved park, and it is safe to assert that the people who have given of their time and money to make this triangle a pretty spot need have no fears for the care that will be given the place.

INSURANCE COST TO BE LOWER TO MANUFACTURERS

Batavia, June 8.—"Manufacturers in this state now pay $20,000,000 in premiums annually for protection under the workmen's compensation law, but when the Industrial Commission is in working order this amount will be reduced to $12,000,000 a year," declared Louis Wiard, a member of the new commission today. Mr. Wiard added that he believed it would be only a short time before manufacturers could not afford to take any other form than state insurance.

Commissioner Wiard commented on the fact that it was the impression upstate that the compensation department was honeycombed with politics, but he was convinced, after an examination of its workings that the impression was erroneous. The department is working like clock work, in spite of the enormous amount of business it has to transact. When the recent amendments to the law are in full working order Commissioner Wiard said he believed that 70 per cent of the compensation claims would be settled direct.

NATHAN STRAUS 1-CENT MEALS DISCONTINUED

Industrial conditions have so materially improved that Nathan Straus has found it unnecessary to continue the meals he has been supplying for one cent each at five of his pasteurized milk stations. At some of the stations this work was discontinued on April 15 and at City Hall Park it now ceases.

The plan was first put in operation at Tompkins Park, on December 28, and was then extended. At each of the stations a glass of milk and a large roll were served for one cent, or a cup of coffee and a roll, or a large cheese sandwich.

MRS. BOGARDUS BACK WITH GOOD NEWS

Mrs. Orin Bogardus of S. 4th st., returned last night from Clifton Springs where she was called by the illness of her husband.

Mrs. Bogardus stated this morning that Mr. Bogardus is rapidly recovering from the effects of his operation. Elmer Bogardus of thisc ity also spent a day this week with his brother.

Bicycle Supplies at Bogue's.—adv.

Sewing Machines—all makes; priced from $5.00 to $25.00. Bogue's Piano Board, 61 First st.—adv.

warmer Wednesday, with moderate west winds.

FULTON'S ART CENTER TO HOLD RECEPTION

The handiwork department of the Fulton High school has issued invitations for a reception to be given at the High school building from 3 to 6 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Miss Cook, head of the department and her pupils will receive the guests and all of the work of the department during the year will be on exhibit.

The opportunity given those who are so fortunate as to receive an invitation to visit Fulton's art center is of importance. Miss Cook and her pulpils are to be commended for the gracious act.

The departmen has worked out beautiful specimens of real worth in the art crafts. Leather, brass, copper, wood and silver and jewels are matriels that have been used.

NO BOARD MEETINGS HELD LAST NIGHT

No meetings were held last night by the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Works. In the first instance the beacon light of welcome that shone all of the evening from the second floor of City Hall failed to attract to the meeting place a quorum of the representatives of the people of the different wards of the city. Public business could not therefore be transacted.

In the second place the Board of Works was without a job that measured up in importance to a greater degree than private business.

City Clerk Scudder announced this morning that the Board of Aldermen will meet Friday evening, June 11.

HEARING GRANTED BY P. S. C. IN POWER CO.'S PETITION

Commissioner Carr, of the Public Service Commission will hold a public hearing in Albany on Friday, June 11, to consider the petition of the Oswego River Power Transmission Company for permission to maintain and operate an electric transmission line upon the state lands in this city. While the line as already existing on the canal banks is for the purpose of furnishing power to several of Fulton's industries, it is announced that the petition has for its object the closing of state lands to competitive companies.

Battle Averted by Cheif Dyer

Two Italian laborers, employed by I. Rosoff, who has the contract for the filling in of the old canal bed, became involved in an argument with Mr. Bishop, foreman of the work, yesterday afternoon and but for the presence of Chief Dyer, who was near at the time, the argument might have resulted seriously.

The two workmen were supposed to have reported for work at noon, but instead made the rounds about town, and when they reported to Mr. Bishop late in the afternoon, they were in no condition for work. When Chief Dyer came upon the scene, one of the men had picked up a shovel, the other had a pickax, and they looked as though they meant business.

After a little tussle, the Chief got both men started for the police station. Their names were not entered on the blotter, as they were let go after the parties involved had talked things over in the Chief's office.

WILLIAM MOON GOES TO TROY TOMORROW

William Moon, Elk and superintendent of the Oswego River Power & Transmission Co., leaves tomorrow for Troy, to assist in making numerous preliminary arrangements for the entertainment of the Elks during their visit there this week.

AT THE QUIRK

Today Lillian Gish is featured in a Majestic master picture entitled "The Lost House". This is one of the new productions of the better movement motion pictures that had a first presentation in Fulton yesterday and which received unanimous praise from patrons. No. 4 of the Paramount travel series and two other from a program of genuine merit. Tomorrow "Beulah" in six parts by Ell Wheeler Wilcox, will be the excellent attraction.

Madame Olga Petrova in "The Tigress" at the Happy Hour theatre Wednesday. adv.

SUNDAY, JUNE 20

Department of Health Asks Clergymen to Co-operate in Campaign to Save Lives

As one feature of the 1915 education campaign for the saving ot babies' lives the State Department of Health has designated Sunday, June 20th, as "Child Welfare Day." Pastors of all denominations have been asked to co-operate and are receiving from the Department data upon which to base sermons or short talks at one of their services on that Sunday.

The educational campaign of the Division of Child Hygiene of the Department of Health last year brought about a decrease in the infant death rate from 137 to 112 per thousand births. This means that approximately 1400 deaths of infants were prevented.

The campaign was almost entirely educational. Mothers were shown how to care for and feed their children and communities were aroused to the necessity for child welfare work. Forty-five cities were visited by exhibits and 150 popular health lectures were given. Exhibits were also sent to country fairs and the smaller villages.

In his letter to the clergymen of the state asking for their co-operation, on June 20th, Commissioner Biggs says:

"The State Department of Health has been waging a vigorous Child Welfare Campaign during the past sixteen months, for the purpose of reducing infant mortality and conserving the strength and vitality of infants who might otherwise go through life handicapped, as the result of early illnesses or by unintentional errors on the part of those who do not know how to take the best care of the little ones entrusted to them.

"One of the most potent means to this end is the bringing to the mothers, and all others who are interested, such information as will favorably affect the welfare of the child. As an educational force, no body of men is so favorably situated to assist in this work as the clergy, and we therefore write to enlist your co-operation and sympathy for the observance of Sunday, June 20, as a state-wide Child Welfare Day.

"As an indication of what it is possible to accomplish by public health education, and through the agencies developed thereby, there were 1,453 less deaths in New York State of infants under one year of age in 1914 than in 1913, but even if the statistical side of these figures were disregarded the fact would still remain that an aggregate of 1,453 mothers and fathers have been spared the grief which the loss of a child must surely entail in the home Moreover, the state has gained 1,453 potential citizens, and the actual saving in dollars by the preservation of this number of infants, based on the earning capacity of a single individual, amounts to a very large sum. As a great proportion of infant mortality is unnecessary, and its prevention so easily demonstrated, we solicit your earnest co-operation toward making the first Child Welfare Sunday in this State a success."

WOMEN'S WHIMSIES.

Beaded, brocaded and plain velvet or satin bags are the mode, made in reticule shapes, quite large and finished with a long tassel at the bottom or with ribbon drawn tops.

One wrinkle is to wear Egyptian designed amulets done in rhinestones set in flat settings of antique gold or silver or even of jet or ivory, appended to long chains made of the same jewels.

These accompany trailing, scarflike evening gowns made of gorgeously colored chiffons, brocaded crapes or satins of a particularly soft quality.

For those who possess lace scarfs, no matter what the shape or length, quality or type, the season's latest adventure reveals a liking for these frivolous neck or shoulder fixings for wear with the new gowns for dance and evening wear.

Even the fluffs of tulle or maline which have been used all season in clouds of frothy white or in sunset tints of gorgeous colorings have their ends weighted by single metallic threaded tassels or with silk made roses in bouquet forms, each one concealing a silk covered weight to keep it in position.

You can get Black's baked products at the right hour for meals. They are at your grocer's, fresh every afternoon. adv.

Ladies' 10c Initial HANDKERCHIEFS 6 for 29c
On Sale WEDNESDAY, at 9 A. M.

Made of a very fine quality lawn with latest style inlaid embroidered Initials, and a good value at 10c.

Buy enough to last you. All Initials on hand.

VISIT OUR BARGAIN BASEMENT

WHY BUY ELSEWHERE AND PAY MORE WHEN YOU CAN BUY IT FOR LESS AT

M. Katz & Co.'s
DEPARTMENT STORE

FULTON SENDS S. S. DELEGATES

More Than Two Thousand Scheduled to Meet at Auburn

The New York State Sunday school convention will open its sixtieth annual session at Auburn tomorrow morning, and Fulton will send a number of delegates.

The churches will be represented by the following: First M. E. church, Dr. and Mrs. L. F. Joy and the Rev. Mr. Barrett; Congregational church, Charles Chesbro, Mrs. F. E. Chubb and Mrs. Charles Olmstead; Presbyterian church, Rev. Charles Robertson and Harlie VanSanford, will each drive their automobiles which will be well filled with delegates; Baptist church, Rev. M. G. Buck and Mrs. William Slyvester; State St. M. E. church, Rev. H. D. Holmes and Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Redhead.

The theme of the conclave will be "Community Betterment Through Sunday School Efficiency."

At 9.30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church there will be a praise service led by Prof. I. H. Meredith of New York city. The combined choirs of the city will be heard for twenty-five minutes. The invocation will then be given by Rev. Charles Gorman Richards, pastor of the First church, after which Rev. Lewis M. Lounsbury, pastor of the Trinity M. E. Church in Albany will deliver an address in "The Quest of Souls."

An address on "The Challenge of This Convention to the Empire State" will be given by Marion Lawrence of Chicago, international general secretary.

Prof. Luther A. Weigle of the faculty of Yale Divinity School will take as his theme, "As One having Authority."

"The Searchlight" will be the subject of Miss Margaret Slattery's talk, and the announcement of the schools of methods will be given by Rev. Joseph Clark of Albany at noon.

The school will be in session tomorrow afternoon from 2 until 4.20 o'clock. At 7.20 o'clock in the evening, three simultaneous sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian, First Methodist and First Baptist churches. Services at the First Presbyterian will be in charge of C. E. Patterson of Schenectady and the subject will be "An Enlarging Horizon."

Prof. Henry S. Jacoby of Ithaca will preside at the First M. E. church with "The Educational Challenege" a the topic and at the First Baptist "Older Boys' and Older Girls' Section," will be the theme. Percy B. Broomfield of New York presiding.

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

All Kinds of
GARDEN SEEDS
by the ounce or pound at
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Our carload purchases of Plumbing gools and employment of skilled mechanics insure a good job at the minimum cost.

Your Plumber
L. P. SMITH CO.

MEMBERSHIP DIVISION TO MEET TONIGHT

A meeting of the Division of Membership and Entertainment of the Chamber of Commerce will be held at 7.30 this evening at the Chamber rooms.

Community Notes

Misses Evely and Marguerite Sypher, accompanied by their aunt, Miss Marguerite Sypher of Watertown are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. W. C. Lee, of 116 N. 5th st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cook and son of Mexico have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hewitt, Oneida st.

* * *

Miss Kittie Breads will entertain the King's Daughters of the Baptist church this afternoon at her home in S. 4th st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Cornell are in Troy attending the Elks convention.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Putnam and Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Hewitt motored to Weedsport Sunday and called on friends.

* * *

Mrs. W. Edgarton entertained the A. N. P. Embroidery club Monday afternoon at her home in Beech st.

* * *

Miss Nellie Paige has returned to her home in Syracuse after visiting relatives in this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Merton are enjoying camp life on the banks of the Oswego river.

* * *

Mrs. Martha Howe entertained the leaders of the ten circles of the First M. E. church and their helpers at her home in S. 4th st. this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

* * *

Mrs. George Parkhurst and daughter of Syracuse are visiting Fulton friends.

* * *

The June meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. E. Langdon, 52 W. 1st st.

* * *

The women of the Parish Aid of Zion church will hold a silver tea at the home of Mrs. George Hackett in Cayuga st. on Thursday at 3 o'clock.

* * *

The gay young juniors and the grave old seniors enjoyed their frolic at Pathfinder yesterday.

* * *

Mrs. Florence Welch in company with friends motored to Syracuse today.

* * *

Mrs. Della Ogram of Syracuse spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Thomas Dutton.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Hubbard are entertaining Mrs. Ernest Spencer of Gonaque, Canada.

D/34

The Newspapers Published in Fulton

Are the real and only legitimate means to secure the kind of publicity that will work in true harmony with the elaborate program mapped out by the

New Chamber of Commerce

¶ The protracted dullness in retail business circles is positive proof that the merchants of this city must invest their advertising appropriations in the papers that have the "home touch"—the papers that are welding in concrete fashion the buying public in the fertile farming country lying contiguous to this city.

MR. BUSINESS

Has been very sick. He should recover, and the way to recover is to turn our faces from the fixed starings we've been giving to a popular idol, a single industry, and fix our eyes upon the farmer and the buyer from the North, the South, the East and the West of us. The farmer of today is the man who can do a lot toward making Mr. Business in this city a well man, but you must use your home papers—the papers that are near to the people—to reach the great buying public living beyond the city's limits.

MR. MERCHANT

The Fulton Evening Times is "A Herald of Progress"

AVIATION CORPS

National Reserve of Air Fighters Being Formed.

FOR USE IN CASE OF WAR.

Headquarters in New York, but District Bases Are to Be Located In Other Cities—Plans For 1,500 Landing Stations In All Parts of the Country—Other Schemes For Defense.

New York.—The Aero-Military Service Federation of America, a volunteer organization of which August Belmont is president general and Mortimer Delano deputy president general, has announced the proposed formation of a national reserve of aviation volunteers for use in case of war. The program outlined by Mr. Delano contemplated the establishment of district bases in New York, Richmond, Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco, with twenty-eight aero squadron centers and 1,500 landing stations scattered from coast to coast.

Photo by American Press Association.

AUGUST BELMONT.

Mr. Delano explained that under the federal law at present there is no authorization for the formation of an aviation regiment and that therefore his organization is a provisional body. He says efforts will be made to have the next congress authorize the First Aviation corps, the formation of which is the ultimate purpose of the Aero-Military federation. The federation also plans a propaganda to urge upon congress federal control of all aviation.

The prospectus of the organization says its purposes are patriotic and educational. The membership is divided into three classes, aviators, officers of the United States army and navy and civilians who are unable to serve in an aviation corps.

Mr. Delano said that in about 50 per cent of the squadron branches had been formed and were busy recruiting. He expects a membership of 25,000 in three months. When this is reached he plans the establishment of the hundreds of landing stations to make aviation easier and safer in all parts of the country.

About three years ago Mr. Delano attempted the formation of a similar organization, which lapsed into desuetude. Mr. Delano credits this to circumstances over which he had no control, and says that now, with the awakened spirit for national defense, citizens in all parts of the country will join the federation.

Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, received a letter from Alan R. Hawley, president of the Aero Club of America, in which it is proposed that the government establish a squadron of eight aeroplanes at Governors island for the defense of this city. Whenever accounts of aerial attacks on cities appear in the news the Aero club receives inquiries from residents of New York asking how the city would be defended by aeroplanes.

"The aerial attack upon Venice by Austrian aviators, who flew to Venice from a base more than 100 miles away," said Mr. Hawley, "and the recent fight near Brussels, when twenty-seven aeroplanes defended that city from an attack of a Zeppelin, have increased the number of inquiries. The attacks upon cities and ships by aeroplanes which start from distant bases and the use of aeroplanes for range finding compel people to realize that aerial attacks could be made upon New York by aeroplanes starting from ships fifty or a hundred miles at sea, and large guns, delivering 2,190,000 foot tons of metal per minute at a range of 20,000 yards, and aided by aeroplanes, would quickly reduce any coast defense not adequately protected.

"The east is entirely without aeronautical protection. The military centers have no aeroplanes. The troops have never maneuvered with aeroplanes and the men behind the coast defense guns have no aerial eyes to give them their accurate range. I submit that this is an unnatural and shocking condition. I deem it my duty to urge that steps be taken immediately to provide aeroplanes for the defense of this part of the country."

CHASE'S WRONG ARM.

Harry Tuthill, conditioner, tells this story on Hal Chase and the colored trainer of the Chicago White Sox.

Says he:

"A day or so after Chase joined the Sox, back in 1913, he went into the clubhouse with a complaint about the soreness in his throwing arm. Doc, the Sox trainer, bustled around, got his valise containing liniment and bandages and asked Chase to sit down on one of the rubbing boards.

"Chase followed instructions and Doc, being very gentle with such a prize player, took the right arm carefully in one hand and massaged it for fully half an hour.

"Then, stepping back, he grinned and asked:

" 'Theah you are, Mistah Chase. How does that feel?'

"Chase started to laugh. Then noting the bewildered look on the trainer's face, he said:

" 'It feels great, Doc, but I'm left handed.' "

GOT $40,000 FOR $50.

Dead Prospector Leaves Estate to the Man Who Grubstaked Him.

San Bernardino, Cal.—A $50 grub stake given to an aged prospector eleven years ago has returned to A. J. Garner, a young livery stable proprietor of Highland, in the form of a $40,000 estate.

Garner at Jerome, Ariz., received a $50 check from his parents. He met W. H. Hawsnyder, a prospector and friend, who told him he was "dead broke." Fifty dollars, he told Garner, would grubstake him for a prospecting trip. Garner immediately handed over his check. He had not seen Hawsnyder since.

The other day a stranger inquired where he could find Gus Garner.

"That's me," said Garner.

"Did you ever know W. H. Hawsnyder?" asked the stranger, who was H. G. Jamison, a New York attorney.

"He was my best friend," replied Gus.

"That's right," said Jamison. "He's died and left you his $40,000 estate."

Education.

Education is not merely the writing of facts on the mind as one writes on a blank slate. It resembles rather the placing of fresh color on canvas on which earlier colors are not dry. The new colors mix with the old. So the living mind mixes new information with what is already in it, and judges the new in the light of the old.

LANE PLANS CLUB FOR U. S. WORKERS

Would Organize 15,000 Employees at Washington.

Washington.—The national capital will soon have one of the biggest clubs and one of the biggest clubhouses in the world if Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, carries out his plan. Indications are that he will. He has a committee of three at work, and it is meeting with much success.

The secretary's plans call for the formation in one big club of the 15,000 government employees here. He hopes to erect a clubhouse occupying a whole block.

It is not alone the social end that Secretary Lane has in mind. He plans to look after physical needs also. He proposes to establish a chain of co-operative stores in Washington, where the government clerks can purchase their food, clothing and other necessaries of life at a cost very much below that which now prevails.

Secretary Lane is an enthusiastic adherent of the co-operative plan. It is used successfully in the reclamation service of the interior department and on a more or less limited scale in the Home club, of which the secretary is founder and president.

The Home club will be the nucleus of the new organization. It occupies the old Brazilian embassy, in Jackson place, but its membership has grown so fast that, although this house is one of the most commodious in the city, it is almost impossible to care for its 1,700 members, all employees of the interior department.

The Home club has a business manager, who looks after co-operative buying, G. K. Weston. When fresh eggs were selling recently at 50 cents a dozen he distributed several hundred dozen a week to the members of the club at a price approximating 36 cents a dozen. When the best creamery butter was selling at 45 cents a pound Home club members were able to buy it for 35 cents a pound.

At Christmas time candy that was sold for 60 cents a pound was purchased for 50 cents by members of the club. More than 200 retail dealers in Washington have signed agreements to give Home club members discounts of from 5 to 20 per cent on cash purchases. During the winter the club, through the bureau of mines, bought several thousand tons of coal at a saving of from 50 to 80 cents a ton.

HEAVY BURDEN

Leader of Giants No Longer Idol of Gotham Fans.

TEAM'S SHOWING THE CAUSE

New Yorkers Are Beginning to Question His Superlative Qualities and to Demand That He Deliver the Goods. Club Has Too Many Vets.

New York fandom seems to have turned against the Giants and transferred its affections to "Wild Bill" Donovan's Yankee outfit, which has been going at a lively clip recently.

John McGraw is no longer the popular idol he was in his pennant winning days, when he could do no wrong, but was lauded throughout the east as the world's greatest diamond leader. His friends are beginning to question his superlative qualities and to demand that he deliver the goods.

He gave them further cause for complaint in his silly attempt to get Kauff away from the Federal league, one of the rawest and most amateurish tricks the wily Gotham leader ever tried. He has put over a few good ones in his day, but he must have thought the baseball powers had taken leave of their senses when he tried to force Kauff down organized baseball's throat.

This spring has demonstrated that McGraw is no better loser than any other manager. He was a mighty good winner. He stood out fine when things were coming his way and when he had nothing whatever to worry about except the division of world's series receipts. But the tide has turned, and McGraw is now feeling the sting of remarks which have not for years been hurled his way. And he is not accepting the situation with good grace. He is falling back on stereotyped old alibis, which he would not have thought of when his team was a topnotcher.

McGraw's veteran players have gone back. They do not act like the same players who helped him win championships. When he was on the top wave of prosperity it was a favorite saying of New Yorkers, "McGraw is the team." But evidently McGraw was not the team. The men under him did their work well. When they were no longer able to deliver the goods McGraw's reputation suffered, just as much as that of the men under him.

In former years any move made by the Giant manager was accepted as the only thing to do. Now he is being scored for allowing players to escape who are doing good work on other teams, either in the big show or in the minors. In some cases McGraw could not help himself in these moves, as he was forced to get down to the twenty-one player limit, and men he might have let out otherwise were protected by long term contracts, which made solid their positions, even though they could not deliver the goods.

BLOWN UP BY WIRELESS?

Fred T. Jane Suggests Solution of Irene and Bulwark Disasters.

London.—The suggestion has been made in the Evening Standard by Fred T. Jane, the naval author, that the steamer Princess Irene was blown up by a German wireless device. The Princess Irene, an auxiliary in the British navy, was blown up recently in Sheerness harbor, with a loss of more than 300 lives.

"The sudden and complete destruction of the Princess Irene in the Medway," Mr. Jane writes, "at no great distance from where the battleship Bulwark also was suddenly blown to atoms, may be a curious coincidence. Italian experiments have proved it possible to explode a properly attuned charge by wireless from a short distance. If that charge be surreptitiously placed in a magazine everything in the magazine will go the same way. One spontaneous explosion is thinkable enough, but two in the same district demand too much from the imagination."

WHEN CHANCE WOULD HAVE GIVEN EVERYTHING FOR A BASE HIT.

Frank Chance always was a hard loser, and Joe Tinker tells this one on him as an incident of the world's series in which the Athletics cleaned up the Cubs:

"Chance was awfully blue after the loss of the third game. He went home with his head on his chest.

"When he reached his hotel he was a fit subject for the deaf and dumb asylum. Mrs. Chance tried in vain to cheer him up. She talked to him and conned him along, but Frank refused to be cheered. Finally in desperation Mrs. Chance in a tone that would have won the heart of a lion said to Frank:

" 'Now, dear, don't take it so hard. Come on, cheer up. What if you do lose this series. Remember, dearie, you have me.'

" 'Yes, I know I've got you,' said Chance in breaking his speechless spell, 'but there were spots in that game today when I would have traded you for a base hit.' "

On the Hill of Golden Sands

The Good Luck That Came to Grandfather Chang.

By HELEN ROOT

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Just outside the Chinese village near the common well all the men stood listening to faint reverberations from the west.

"Ho!" Grandfather Chang stood with short legs firmly planted, puffing out his fat, old yellow cheeks oracularly. "You hear only thunder. There will be no war. The young men nowadays have neither the wit nor courage for it. Now, in my young day when I went to Manchuria"—

The villagers had heard the tale before.

"Ay, yah!" The blacksmith and the carpenter jeered together. "When you went to Manchuria, grandsire, the women hid the ducks. But show us how you fight on an empty belly before spring."

The indignant patriarch waddled off.

In China war and famine threatened. From the cities came mutterings of a threatened uprising against the hated Manchu rule; while throughout the provinces floods had spoiled the early crops, and now, in autumn, heavy rains were falling and the late ripening millet lay rotting on the ground.

But cunning Chang had found a way to save himself and family from need.

"In Shanghai," he had said to his only son, Li the Lateborn, a gaunt, slow witted, kindly giant, "are secret companies that send men to America. There taels are more plenty than copper cash in China. Ah, if my old legs were young as when I went to Manchuria!"

At the hundredth repetition Li's slow imagination kindled.

"Enough, father," he said, "I will go instead."

Even now Li was returning from Shanghai. His seven days importuning of the wealthy Top-Side tongsman had prevailed, and he would start within a fortnight for America, the forbidden Golden Hill of coolie hopes.

Patiently he trudged the sixty miles toward home, thinking of the approaching parting from his parents, his wife, and five little sons, till on the morning of the fourth day he rounded a jutting chain of hills and came in sight of the village and his own unharvested millet patch.

Strange guests were there before him. The revolution had begun.

A puff of smoke awakened him to danger; a leaden spat against the brick walled praying place sent him leaping forward at a scuttling run, and as he dashed foolishly through the deserted village to the poor shelter of his mud walled home a spray of bullets caught and flung him limp across its threshold.

There old Chang found him when the battle was over, and the villagers came creeping back from the holes and ditches that had sheltered them. His hand still clutched the tongsman's sign, a pledge of secret passage to Tai Fow, the great city which other races call Chicago. He had been dead for hours.

Other villagers had suffered loss, but the Changs faced utter ruin. The house was gone; the crop—poor enough at best—was gone; the breadwinner was gone.

IN HIS BONES HE FELT THE WEIGHT OF EACH CONDEMNING YEAR.

"Now only I, a fat, old, useless hulk," thought Chang, chastened to unwonted humility by his son's dead face, "am left to save the women and the little ones from death by cold and hunger."

"Come," he said to Nai Nai, his wrinkled wife, and to Li's widow as they wailed beside the dead, "salt water mends no broken vessels, and for all other things I can find a way. Let us first take up him who has gone on high and lay him under cover of this shed."

That done they dug amid the wreckage until they found the jar of millet laid away for next year's planting— [illegible] tain the elders and the children for eight weeks at most—then in the corner of the roof and walls still standing they reared a flimsy shelter against the wind and rain.

"And now," said Chang, "I will take this tongsman's sign and go in my son's place to the Golden Hill."

But, for all his brave talk, Chang was heavy hearted. He had no shrewd plans for American success. He even feared he might be refused access to the ship at Shanghai. He filled the wrinkles of his face with powder, eked out his scant gray cue with bits of silk and cotton rags and tried to step with youthful jauntiness, yet in his bones he felt the weight of each condemning year, and he trembled when the eye of Yan Yin, the smuggler, fell upon him.

"Ancient," called Yan Yin, "thou of the jelly paunch and gasping breath, why come you here? America is not for such as you."

Chang played his only trump. He laid the tongsman's order in his questioner's hand:

Whereas, Yan Yin shall convey a valuable thing to America at the cost of $1,000, paid thus: In Shanghai, $200; on arrival in Chicago, $200, and the rest when Yan Yin returns to Shanghai. But if the thing in trust be not landed, but conveyed back to China, the balance shall not be paid and this undertaking shall be as waste paper.

This is a written proof.

MADE BY TAM HIN.

The signature was good, and Tam Hin was a man of money who knew his mind. If he saw fit to stand guarantor for this wheezing patriarch doubtless he had good reasons, neither would he be tolerant of inquiry.

The smuggler waved the old man toward the gangway, and Chang's Odyssey began, an Odyssey that promised no return, for he knew well that it would take all his few remaining days to repay the smuggled passage and send bit by bit the thousand American dollars needed to bring his grandson to maturity.

He found the voyage to the shores of Mexico passable enough.

It was not till the smuggling party—twelve Chinese and three white steerers—began to draw northward overland to the American boundary that Chang's Falstaffian courage failed, and fear seized upon him.

At last the smuggling party reached the border. They hid among the rocks and bushes on the steep side of the Sierra Cucaros while mounted Chinese inspectors, with jingling bridles, cantered past. They toiled across the Arizona desert till a railroad town was reached. There they were stowed away at night in secret places over the vestibules of through express trains—places so little known that the expressmen working underneath had never heard of their existence. Chang and a much younger man were the last to be concealed.

Side by side they lay, with legs bent slightly to fit the short space, and with only room enough above to let them rise on elbow when they fed from the cracker box and water jar thrust in before the outer opening was resealed. Thus, for 2,000 miles, they lay on a procrustean bed that swirled and swayed over half a continent.

Through tiny cracks that gave them air they saw daylight come and go, and come and go and come and go again till far in the third night they came quietly to rest.

In the dark hour that comes before the east begins to glow Chang heard a cautious tapping on the roof above their heads. He answered it as cautiously from within.

The plate that sealed their hiding place was slowly moved aside, and he and his companion, groaning from the pain of their racked limbs, crept through and stood upright on Chicago soil.

And here Chang offered up his final sacrifice to the grandchildren and the ancestral shade. He laid his treasured but telltale cue across his releaser's hand and motioned him to cut.

For a moment the smuggler held the old, rag roughened braid as if pondering, then with a little satisfied grunt he severed it from the white old head, fumbled behind his coat, and then thrust it deep in an inner pocket.

"Come," he said.

Out of the dark a strong hand clutched the waiting Chinmen, driving their heads together. A yellow flame flashed past them. The smuggler with a yell of pain threw both his hands above him and pitched headlong to earth.

"Got you, McElliot," said a voice, "Suspected you this long time, now I've got you with the goods."

"It's you, you sneaking spy." The smuggler loosed a swarm of nasty epithets. "You've cracked my right shoulder. I thought first you were Slim Kelly; but for the few dirty dollars the government pays you'd kill a man as quick as Kelly. Are you alone?"

"What if I am?" asked the Chinese inspector.

"Here's your chance to earn more in a minute than the government pays in a month. I cashed in ten chinks today at a hundred apiece; that's why Kelly is laying to roll me. Let me out of here and half the money's yours. Eight hundred then! The whole thousand!"

"Don't be a fool," said the inspector grimly. "You know I'm going to bring you in. Get up!"

The figure on the ground made an apparently painful effort to rise and fell back.

"Give me a hand," he said: "my shoulder's done for."

The officer bent toward the prostrate figure.

A leaden pellet ripped through his cap. His own revolver ready for suspected treachery cracked an answer. With a bullet through his breast, the smuggler laid his sullen face against the ground and died.

Then Chang, freed from the iron grip on his collar, shrieked and ran.

He ran as one escaping from the clutch of captor fiend might run in hell; hopeless, despairing, from one horrible unknown to another still more horrible, knowing always that flight must prove in vain, but driven on by the inexorable obsession of great fear.

And while he ran a sinister gray figure lurking in the shadows turned and fled the other way.

The railroad yards sprang alive with men and lights the shots had called, and Chang was caught at last in the farthest corner of a high surrounding fence.

"You'll have to give me absence leave," said the Chinese inspector next day. "I'm sick, I tell you; sick. And taking that old Chinaman was nearly as bad as killing McElliot. He was hanging to the fence with his teeth and his toes and his fingers, and when I put my hand on him he—he squealed like a caught rat. I'll have to get away for awhile."

The inspector got his leave of absence, but events went on without him. The Chinaman who traveled north with Chang stood in no fear of immediate deportation. The Chicago representative of the smuggling syndicate furnished him money for bail and legal help.

He was young and strong and, bound by the peon system of Chinese importation, would soon work out the cost of his admittance. But the professional bailer looked at aged Chang with a derisive grin.

SO CHANG STOOD BEFORE THE JUDGE ALONE.

"Old buffaloes give no milk," he said. "You can send this one back to China."

So Chang, a sad and yet a ludicrous old figure, stood before the judge alone. His hands were clasped upon his rotund stomach.

The old gray cue that once had joined it had been found in the smuggler's pocket and now dangled against the mahogany of the judge's bench, mute witness to its owner's duplicity.

The trial was soon ended.

"Deportation to the place from which you came," the interpreter rendered. Some one picked up the disheveled cue, tossed it to Chang and motioned him to move aside.

"Wo, wo!" he wailed to himself as he retreated to a corner. "This is the end of an old fool's errand. Now go I home with lost face to starve before the mockers of the village. Never! I will jump into the sea!"

And yet Chang knew that when the time came he would not jump into the sea. To the very last the bit of boastful boyhood, green in his old breast, would lure him on with hopes that somehow—somehow—he would "find a way."

His nervous fingers plucked at the recovered queue, twitching the bits of rag and string that swelled its bulk. An unfamiliar glint of yellow caught his eye.

He bent a little lower with busy hands and furtive glance to right and left.

Then he threw back his head, thrust out his paunch in the old braggart way and waddled toward the judge and spoke in his native tongue.

"Eh? What's the matter? What does he say?" asked the astonished judge.

"He says," puzzled the interpreter, "'The golden hill has served. Now, great one, send me home that I may crow aloud before the scoffing blacksmith.'"

"Crazy from worry," said the judge. "Take the poor old man away."

But Chang was not crazy—the golden hill had served. Hidden in his own discarded queue he had found the treasure he had come 8,000 miles to seek.

McElliot, the dead smuggler, knew that Slim Kelly, lying in wait among the shadows, would not look for money in an old Chinese braid.

He had rolled his illicit gains, two $500 bills, into small cylinders and twisted them in and out with the strings of the queue. There they lay through all the after events until Chang's nervous plucking fingers lifted them to sight.

So before wrinkled Nai Nai saw the bottom of the millet jar Chang went back with triumph, after all, to raise the house and plant the fields in spring and bring the grandsons up in reverence of their grandsires; also to tell great tales of his achievements in America.

HE DID INDEED MISS HER.

The Professor Admitted It, but He Was on the Wrong Track.

When the intrusive nurse in Bulwer's once famous novel, "The Caxtons," interrupted the professor's studies to announce the arrival of his first born son with an explosive, "It's a boy!" the absent minded parent merely regarded her with puzzled annoyance, and inquired vaguely, "What's a boy?"

But it was a professor in real life who, some time after the marriage of his only daughter, and her departure from the parental roof, was visited by a cousin, who ventured to condole with him upon his loneliness. "How you must miss her!" she exclaimed.

"Miss who?" said the professor, with an air of amiable bewilderment, which presently changed to one of pleased comprehension. "Indeed I do, Margaret! indeed I do!" he declared gratefully. "But I scarcely supposed my complete absorption would be so sympathetically realized. Indeed, you are right; I feel quite lost without her. A most interesting personality. And as to the poisonings, I am sure she has been maligned."

"Poisonings!" echoed his cousin.

"I am quite sure of it!" repeated the professor firmly. "There has certainly been unpardonable exaggeration in their number, and I very much doubt if she ever poisoned anyone at all."

"I am talking," said Margaret, "of your daughter, Mary."

"Oh!" said the professor. "Dear me! I thought, of course, you meant Lucrezia Borgia. She's the subject of a monograph that I began the day after Mary went away and finished a week ago. I felt I needed a little something outside my usual routine to occupy my thoughts, and Lucrezia has proved eminently satisfactory."

The brilliant and dangerous Borgia was a startling substitute, certainly, for a gentle mannered daughter of modern civilization, but one less deadly than that chosen in like circumstances by the great French scientist, Pasteur.

"After all," he was heard pensively murmuring to himself when a beloved daughter had departed with her husband to a distant home, "I shall be able to devote myself to typhoid fever."—Youth's Companion.

Courage and Decision.

Timid wavering of nerveless thought, effeminate irresolution, anxious lamentation, turn no misfortune from thee, cannot liberate thee, but to hold oneself erect, defying all forces, showing original strength, brings down the arms of the gods in aid.—Goethe.

A Minority Report.

A small, meek country negro, who had always lived on one place near Frankfort, Ky., married a big domineering woman and very soon afterward moved into town, where the keeper of the local bar met him on the street.

"Hello, Gabe!" he said. "What made you move to town? I thought you liked country life."

"Well, Mistah Franklin," explained Gabe, "I uster lak de country. But mah wife, she didn't lak it—and I've done got so now dat when she don't lak a thing I jest natchelly hates it."—Saturday Evening Post.

Did Just as He Was Told.

An impecunious constituent of a Chicago alderman called upon the latter at his office one day and requested the loan of a dollar. A two dollar bill was the smallest the alderman had. This he handed to the caller, saying:

Go to the cigar stand downstairs,

PUFFING CONTENTEDLY AT A CIGAR.

get a fifteen cent cigar, keep a dollar and bring me the change."

In a few minutes the visitor reappeared puffing contentedly at a cigar and handed the alderman 85 cents. Noticing a peculiar expression on the alderman's face, he withdrew the cigar from his lips long enough to inquire:

"Did you mean that the cigar was for you or me?"

"Get out of here!" was all the disgusted politician could say.

Lots of Big Ones.

A New York man was crossing the Atlantic with an army officer who suffered greatly from seasickness.

On entering the stateroom one particularly rough day he found the officer tossing in his berth, muttering in what at first appeared to be a sort of delirium.

Stooping over to catch his words, the friend heard him say, "Sergeant—major—sergeant—major—brigadier general—ugh, lieutenant general—a-a-ah!"

"What are you saying?" asked the friend in some alarm as the sufferer looked piteously up at him after his last gasping "a-a-ah!"

"Assigning the waves their rank," said the military man, rolling toward the wall again. "There have been eight lieutenant generals within the last twenty minutes."—Everybody's.

BECKER'S FATE IN HIGHEST COURT

Man Who Sent Him to Death House Has Pardon Power.

NO COMMENT BY GOVERNOR

Prisoner Has Been Quoted as Saying That He Will Not Ask His Nemesis For Clemency — Reports That He Would Reveal Other Graft Doubted. Case Now in Federal Court.

New York.—The taking of the case of Charles Becker to the United States supreme court will automatically act as a stay, and the execution will not take place on the date set.

But if Becker loses in the highest court in the land he will find himself in a peculiar situation. He will be called on in the event of an unfavorable decision by this court to go to the death chair without asking clemency or will have to appeal to the one man responsible for his conviction.

Charles Whitman was district attorney at the time of the two Becker trials, and it was his activities in this case that won him fame and kept his name constantly before the public. Whitman stubbornly fought for the convictions, which he won. He was convinced from the outset that Becker was guilty and spared no pains in fighting the case to a successful termination.

Becker has been quoted as saying that he will not ask the governor for any quarter, that he will go to the chair rather than ask a favor of the man who prosecuted him. The situation is one that is very trying on the man. Governor Whitman has not stated what he would do if a petition for clemency should be formally presented to him. The governor granted a brief respite to Becker because he was scheduled to be in the west on the date the court set for the execution and asserted at the time that he would not consider the matter until after his return.

Photo by American Press Association.

CHARLES BECKER.

It now appears that Becker is in a mood to tell what he knows of graft in New York for a commuted sentence, whereas if nothing is to be gained by "squealing" he is resolved to die game. Those at first inclined to doubt the accuracy of the report that Becker is ready to use any means he has to save himself are now convinced that this may be the case, and interest now centers upon whether or not what Becker has to tell is worth enough to the state to warrant giving him his life.

At the office of District Attorney Perkins it has been officially announced that no confession Becker can make will help him, as evidence against police officials or former police officials could result in their punishment for only a year or two in jail. The official announcement points out that it would not be serving the ends of justice to save Becker from the chair just to send another man or other men to prison for awhile. This is the reiterated view of the prosecutor's office.

Becker, whose nights immediately after the appeal was denied were spent in tortured anxiety, eats and sleeps better. He has better control of himself during the visits of his wife. According to Deputy Warden Johnson, Becker is showing a change for the better. He takes his exercise vigorously and again is an enthusiast for handball. He had been reading aloud to the other men in the death house the most interesting newspaper accounts of the war's progress. After the appeal was denied he stopped this diversion.

Found Ring Lost Forty Years.

Long Beach, Cal.—Mrs. Andrew F. Mitchell, wife of the pastor of the First Friends church, was notified by letter recently that her wedding ring, lost in a pig pen forty years ago on their farm in Park county, Ind., had been found. When the Mitchells moved away from the farm, having sold it, they asked the couple who succeeded them to keep a sharp lookout for the ring, but they had long since given up the ring as lost.

ITALY AND AUSTRIA RENEW OLD STRUGGLE

Adriatic Sea Has Always Been Cause of Great Wars.

Washington.—"Once more the people upon the opposite shores of the Adriatic sea are in a duel with one another for the mastery of the Mediterranean, just as neighbors across this arm of the land locked sea have always clashed, for upon the Adriatic south European supremacy has been contested since the days when Rome fell heir to the sea power of Athens and Carthage. Over this waterway Rome met the pirates of Istria and Dalmatia, aggressive Teutonic tribes and pressing hordes of Slavs, over it the empire of the east sent its expeditions to attack the empire of the west, and Austria a generation ago waged war with a disintegrated Italy over Adriatic paths and for the suzerainty of the sea."

After giving the above brief review of this historic theater for the transport of invading armies and the actions of battle fleets, youngest of the war theaters in the present European struggle, around whose shores the interest of south European battles will center through the months to come, a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society continues in a presentation of the geographic details of the Adriatic sea:

"The Adriatic sea is 500 miles long and about 130 miles wide in its greatest width. Its average width is 110 miles.

"The Austrian, or eastern, coast is broken, strewn with fine harbors and lined with numerous rocky islands, which belong to Istria and Dalmatia. This eastern coast is of great naval and commercial value, well formed for the upbuilding of great, thriving trade ports and by reason of its almost continuously mountainous shores, its deep gulfs and bays and its screening fringe of rocky islands advantageously defended. The western, or Italian, coast, on the other hand, is low, sandy and almost unbroken. It lacks good harbors and offers few natural advantages for defense.

"The commercial importance of the Adriatic sea throughout the dark ages and the middle ages was great. This importance was somewhat impaired by the opening of the all sea route to India and by the determined growths of the Dutch and English merchant marines. With the opening of the Suez canal and the commercial and industrial awakening of Italy and Austria-Hungary, the Adriatic regained much of its old time significance. The most important commercial points are Trieste, Venice, Fiume, Ancona and Brindisi. Venice and Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, are the two foremost cities."

There's a Reason For Everything.

"Wouldn't you try to get a divorce from a woman who abused you and neglected your home and thought more of her club than she did of you?" thundered the big man.

"I don't think I would," replied Henry Peck. "I am afraid Henrietta would not let me."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Coral Builders.

Coral reefs and islands are formed by the coral building polyp. These animals only live in clear water, the depth of which is not greater than twenty-five fathoms, and the temperature of which does not sink below 68 degrees F.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

C B LINE

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo . . . 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland . . . 9:00 P. M.

Arrive Cleveland . . . 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo . . . 7:30 A. M.

(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

[illegible]

D/34

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge
10 Cents

PARIS WAR SEERS FALL UNDER BAN

Too Many Women Were Seeking Aid of Clairvoyants--- New Swindlers Spring Up

The happy days of fortune telling in Paris are over. Mediums, clairvoyants, astrologers, readers of palms and cards have now to make their living some other way.

The police found that too many women were spending their pittances in fortune telling parlors. So the ban has gone forth and in one week sixty-nine professors of occult knowledge were brought before the magistrates.

"What harm does it do?" they asked. "We always tell encouraging things. We always prophesy letters and good news. It keeps people cheered up and happy."

Many of them said their only sons, their husbands, were at the front. All source of revenue was cut off and they had to do something. But the court was obdurate and said the profession was entirely out of keeping with the seriousness of the times.

They Neatly Evade Law.

Some of them, however, continue to prophesy, but adhere strictly to the letter of the law in not giving any definite date. For instance, one of the best known of them told the fortune of a young actress in this neatly evasive way:

"You will receive a letter soon. I can't tell you exactly when. The police have forbidden me to."

And for that little phrase she asked $2.

In the Paris police courts many pathetic cases are seen. There are many which are due solely to the war, new professions and new crimes which have sprung up.

There are men with one leg who get a uniform and go around soliciting alms under the pretense that they lost the leg in the trenches. What scores of men and women, up for theft always say is:

"Your honor, I have a son (a brother or perhaps a husband) at the front. I know what he is suffering there in the trenches, and I couldn't resist the wish to send him something. Alas, I had no money, and that is why I committed this unpardonable act. But my love was stronger than my conscience."

Having heard this about twenty times one morning, one of the judges grew a little weary of it. When a woman came up accused of having given short weight in butter—only half of what she was being paid for, in fact—he said:

"Well, you, at any rate, can't make use of the argument that you were sending something to the trenches."

She Had the Old Excuse.

"It comes to the same thing," the woman said calmly. "I have a friend in the trenches, and the morning this thing happened I got word that he was seriously wounded. I simply lost my head and didn't know what I was doing. That was why I didn't notice how much butter I was selling."

Every sort of charitable society has been formed in Paris since the war. There are those that concern themselves with the physical welfare of the soldiers and those of the moral and religious. But it remained for the journal named Fantasio to launch the latest and evidently the most popular.

This new and novel organization is called the Society For the Flirt at the Front and came into being through the letter of two sergeants to the Fantasio, in which they begged that paper to do something to provide them with a little of the tender sentiment of life as a relief from the strain of the trenches.

They were so wearied, the soldiers said, with the continual masculinity of the trenches that they thought if some kind and thoughtful young ladies of Paris would only write them tender epistles they would feel cheered to take the offensive against the Germans.

Consequently the Fantasio has undertaken the work in all seriousness, forwarding such letters as are addressed to its care by modest maidens who do not wish to sign their real names and acting in return as a distributing postoffice for the effusions which come back from the soldiers.

MATTEAWAN MAY BE CAHILL'S FATE

District Attorney Expects to Move Case Against Attorney Tomorrow; Junk Dealer Case Up Today

Special to Evening Times

Pulaski, June 8.—The assertions made in an Oswego paper yesterday to the effect that if the commission whose duty it will be to examine into the mental condition of Fred T. Cahill, finds that the accused attorney is unbalanced mentally, he wil be sent to Ogdensburg for treatment, was denide here this morning. Mr. Cahill's offenses are of a criminal nature and the criminal insane are placed in Matteawan.

District Attorney Culkin stated this morning that he may move tomorrow for trial for one of the indictments made against Attorney Cahill.

An Oswego junk dealer, Nelson Wiener, who is under indictment for criminally receiving stolen brass belonging to the New York Central railroad, was on trial today and at the press hour.

Judge Coville excused the following jurors yesterday morning: George Bolwers, Bernhards Bay; Frank Stevenson, Hannibal; Edward Coe, Melvin Burton, Fulton; John Davis, Robret O'Hara, David Simona, John Parker, William Brady, James Shaw, Oswego; Edward Boyd, Pulaski; James Bogue, Fulton.

Several Plead Guilty

The disposition of the criminal calendar occupied the greater part of yesterday afternoon session, at which where heard the pleading of persons indicted in May and who were arraigned before Justice Hubbs in Supreme Court. Those arraigned withdrew former pleas of not guilty and pleaded guilty.

Arthur Tanner of Richland Junction was charged with burglary. Judge Coville suspended sentence and Tanner was paroled. According to the terms of the parole he must report at stated intervals and also pay $9 per month toward the support of his children. Other cases were:

David McAuliff, violation of the liquor tax law; sentenced deferred until next Monday afternoon.

Peter C. Campbell of New York and Fred Nelson of Fulton; conspiracy; sentence suspended.

Fred Rosa of Norwich, attempt to commit burglary; paroled. He is under 18 years and will be cared for by a relative in Syracuse.

William Lewis of Oswego, burglary and grand larceny; sentenced to pay a fine of $75 or serve six months in the county jail at Oswego.

George Callum, indicted for assault; permitted to plead guilty to assault in the third degree and given a suspended sentence.

Cahill Case Up This Week

Merritt Miller pleaded guilty to an indictment charging burglary and grand larceny. Case taken under advisement by Judge Coville.

John Leyden pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging him with burglary and grand larceny.

District-Attorney Francis D. Culkin of Oswego stated late this afternoon that he would move for trial during the week one of the six indictments against Frederick T. Cahill, an Oswego attorney, who will be defended by Thomas L. McKay.

Of the six indicements against the Oswego attorney. four charge him with grand larceny. The fifth indictment is for delaying the suit of a clien and the sixth one charges with larceny. Martin Cahill of Oswego, a brother of the defendant, is also held on an indictment charging larceny.

Oriville Fisk and Fred Stewart regard a garage on the road to Bowens Corners a necessity, and contemplate erecting one there.

PEACE MOVE HINT COMES FROM BERLIN

(Continued from Page One)

He intimated to some of his friends he feared his own country—Holland—might even be drawn into the conflict if it continued, but was hopeful that efforts by neutrals to mediate, if begun now, would be successful.

Most significant of the impressions which Mr. Geldemeester brought from Berlin, it was said today, was that a large section of the populace and an important element in the German Government itself were not in sympathy with the extreme militarists and believe a discussion of peace terms not undesirable.

Just how far Mr. Geldemeester may have been encouraged in Berlin to present his views to the people in the United States is not definitely known. Jane Addams and other interested in peace, who recently visited Berlin, have been cordially received by high German officials, and in German quarters here lately there has been constant reference to the likelihood of peace growing out of the present correspondence concerning neutral rights.

Italian Offensive Tightens Against Austrian Front

(Continued from Page One)

who had in his possession a war map, upon which were annotations of military value.

All three month sjoined in saying that the upper story of the monastry was empty and not in use, but the lieutenant was not satisfied. He started an investigation which showed that on the upper floor there had been set up near a window a large reflector for signally purposes. Here also two more monks were found, and all were at once taken into custody.

The search of the lieutenant revealed a large number of documents and notes prepared by the monks, together with letters from colleagues in Vienna.

Young Canadian Dropped Six Bombs on Airship

(Continued from Page One)

the aeroplane pitched and tossed like a canoe in the Niagara rapids until it turned completely over and started a zigzagging dash to the earth through the fire swept path of the airship. Hanging head downward the aviator fought for control of his machine. After a drop of 2,000 feet he caught a lever and swiftly but surely changed the direction of the fall. A few hundred feet further and he succeeded in tilting the planes ever so slightly until the machine swung into a loop the loop figure and then to an even keel. Pointing the nose of the craft toward the earth, Sub-Lieutentnt Warneford glided to an open field in the German lines, and after a moment's pause to obtain his bearings, and before a German detachment half a mile off could train their rifles on him, he set the propeller in motion again and was winging his way swiftly to the British headquarters.

The Zeppelin yesterday lay a tangled mass of ruins across an orphanage near Ghent, its frame blackened and twisted, its crew of twenty-eight men dead beneath it and two nuns and two children dead where they were crushed in the orphanage building.

There is every reason to believe the dirigible was the craft which attacked the east coast of England on Sunday night and killled five and wounded forty persons. This belief is emphasized by the fact that it was flying from the North Sea between two and three o'clock in the morning—an hour that would have permitted it to fly across the water from the English coast and be in approximately the position in which Sub-Lieutenant Warneford sighted it.

Flight Sub-Lieutenant Reginald Alexander John Warneford learned to fly last winter at the Royal Naval Air Station at Hendon, near London, under Commander John Cyril Porte, formerly of the Wanamaker transatlantic expedition. He took his certificate from the Royal Aero Club as a pilot on February 15 last. He was placed on active duty by an order of the Admiralty issued on the same day, as reported by Flight, the British aeronautical magazine, and was assigned to the President, used as an aeronautical tender, before his transfer to the front.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS GET VERY WET FEET

A near drowning accident occurred late yesterday afternoon in the river just off Pathfinder Island when a canoe in which were Joe Mangot and Elmer LaPoint overturned, throwing both of the young men into the water. Young Mangot went down once and when he came to the surface was grabbed by LaPoint. The two held to the boat and shouted lustily for help. A rowboat put out from the shore and towed them in.

The accident occurred about 100 yards from shore in deep water juse before the supper arranged by the Junior class of the High school in honor of the outgoing class. Both of the young men were to participate in the festivities, being students at the High school.

REMODELING STORE FOR BUSINESS OFFICES

S. Waldhorn is having his block on First street painted and remodeled. The interior, heretofore arranged to house tenants, will be converted into business offices.

HUBBARD ESTATE TO SON AND DAUGHTER

Buffalo, June 8.—The wills of Elbert Hubbard and his wife, who lost their lives in the Lusitania disaster, were filed for probate in Surrogate's court here today. The documents were drawn by Mr. Hubbard and were almost identical.

Both provided that in case one survived the other, the estate should be divided equally between Elbert Hubbard, 2d, son, and Miriam, daughter. The value of the estate is problematical, although it is known that Mr. Hubbard carried insurance policies amounting to more than $10,000. He owned considerable real estate at East Aurora.

"BARTER MARRIAGES" DENOUNCED BY COURT

New York, June 8. — Denouncing "barter marriages." Justice Benedict, Brooklyn, yesterday required Samuel L. Peckerman, of No. 503 Sackman st. to pay $8 a week alimony to his wife.

Peckerman sought to escape paying alimony because his wife's father had not kept the antenuptial agreement and had been sued for the amount stipulated.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By FREDERIC T. CARDOZE

Albany, June 8.—Former President William Howard Taft is to give his views on the short ballot on Wednesday afternoon, before the committee on finance and co-ordination of State officers, of the Constitutional Convention which will have a joint session at that time. Mr. Taft will explain how the national system of electing a president and vice-president is preferable to that of the State system.

Friday of this week will see that last of the individual proposals introduced by districts on the floor of the Assembly chamber. To be sure it will be possibel to get various propositions before the convention thru committees and by unanimous consent, but the roll of districts will not be called after this week.

Hearings will occupy much of the time of the delegates on the various committees this week. The various hearinsg will bring to Albany a lareg gathering of men who will discuss with the delegates in committee meetings the proposals that have been presented.

The committee on legislative powers will have an important hearing tomorrow afternoon, when the proposal of Lemuel E. Quigg to abolish prize fighting comes up for a hearing. This hearing has been twice postponed because of the absence from the city of men who desired to be hearers. It is expected that there will be a large attendance at the hearing and that some views will be advanced by fight fans to prove that prize fights should be allowed.

"I am of the opinion," said Mr. Quigg, "that if this proposal should get out on the floor of the convention that it will be passed. "I think it a meritorious measure."

Two important hearings are scheduled for tomorrow and Friday before the conservation committee of the convention. Both will start as soon as the convention adjourns for the day. The hearing tomorrow willl be devoted to the representatives of prominent civic organizations, such as the Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks; Empire State Forest Products Association, the New Board of Trade and Transportation and corporations and individuals engaged in business depending upon natural resources.

On Friday John Borroughs and Clifford Pinchot, as well as several teachers of forestry connected with universities and prominent forest and water officials, will attend the hearing.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM IN PREP. GAME

In preparation for the North High game Saturday, the local High school team will cross bats with the All Stars at Athletic field this afternoon at 3:30. Snow will occupy the mound for the scrubs while O'Brien will hurl for the school team. In the lineup of the High school's opponents are the names of several "old timers" who will try to show their ability "to come back." The teams as they will lineup are:

All Stars—Cavanaugh, 3b; LaFurney, 2b; Cullen, Capt., 1b; Martin, c.; Kempston, lf.; Reynolds, rf.; Meaney, cf.; Kinney, ss.; Snow, p.

High School.—Keeler, 3b; Wilcox, 2b; Kraus, 11b; Bray, c.; Pullen, lf.; Thompson, rf.; Barker, cf.; Martin, ss.; O'Brien, p.

BECKER PLEA TO U. S. COURT BEING DRAWN

New York, June 8.—Mrs. Charles Becker, wife of the former police lieutenant under sentence of death, cancelled her plan to visit her husband today at Sing Sing prison in order to attend a conference with her attorney, Martin T. Manton.

Mrs. Becker spent several hours in Mr. Manton's office yesterday, where the papers are being drawn for an appeal to the United States Supreme court.

SEVEN ON TOWN'S "JAG" LIST"

Hamburg, Pa., June 8.—Burgess Prutzman has started a "jag list" and has already handed names of seven residents to all liquor dealers, prohibiting the sale of liquors to them. This is the outcome of several fights and complaints.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Cincinnati.
New York at Chicago.
Brooklyn at Pittsburgh.
Philadelphia at St. Louis.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 6; Brooklyn, 1.
Philadelphia, 8; St. Louis, 4.
Chicago-New York; wet grounds.
Cincinnati-Boston; wet grounds.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	24	17	.585
Philadelphia	23	19	.548
Brooklyn	21	20	.512
Brooklyn	21	21	.500
St. Louis	22	23	.489
Pittsburgh	20	21	.488
Cinicinnati	17	22	.436
New York	16	21	.432

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Chicago at Boston.
St. Louis at Philadelphia.
Detroit at New York.
Cleveland at Washington.

Results Yesterday

Detroit, 3; New York, 2.
Washington, 6; Cleveland, 3.
Boston, 3; Chicago, 0.
St. Louis, 4; Philadelphia, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Detroit	30	17	.638
Chicago	28	17	.622
Boston	21	16	.568
New York	19	21	.475
Washington	18	20	.474
Cleveland	18	23	.439
St. Louis	18	25	.419
Philadelphia	15	28	.349

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Kansas City.
Baltimore at Brooklyn.

Results Yesterday

Brooklyn, 4; Baltimore, 3; 1st game.
Brooklyn, 3; Baltimore, 2; 2d game.
Kansas City, 1; St. Louis, 0.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	26	19	.578
Kansas City	25	19	.568
Newark	23	19	.548
St. Louis	22	19	.537
Brooklyn	23	21	.523
Chicago	24	22	.522
Baltimore	16	26	.381
Buffalo	16	30	.348

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Montreal at Buffalo.
Toronto at Rochester.
Providence at Richmond.
Jersey City at Newark.

Results Yesterday

Providence, 16; Richmond, 3.
Jersey City, 8; Newark, 3.
Toronto, 6; Rochester, 2; 15 ings.
Buffalo, 3; Montreal, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	17	11	.607
Richmond	18	15	.545
Rochester	17	15	.531
Rochester	N		NN
Providence	17	15	.531
Montreal	18	17	.514
Toronto	16	18	.471
Jersey City	14	19	.424
Newark	12	19	.387

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Elmira at Syracuse.
Binghamton at Utica.
Troy at Scranton.
Albany at Wilkesbarre.

Results Yesterday

Elmira, 14; Syracuse, 4.
Utica, 2; Binghamton, 1.
Wilkesbarre, 5; Albany, 1.
Scranton, 5; Troy, 4.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Elmira	18	12	.600
Troy	14	11	.560
Utica	15	12	.556
Binghamton	13	12	.520
Wilkesbarre	14	14	.500
Scranton	12	13	.480
Albany	11	16	.407
Syracuse	10	17	.370

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	10	14	1
Indianapolis	5	7	2
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	4	12	2
Louisville	5	7	3

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 146 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1915 | Price One Cent

SWAT THE FLY—
For the Baby's Sake

Child Welfare Day—Sunday, June 20

By Order State Department of Health

SWAT THE FLY—
For the Baby's Sake

President Urged to Select "Coalition Cabinet" by Belmont

Washington, June 9.—That President Wilson shoulld hesitate at this crisis in the affairs of the nation to draw upon any political party for a successor to William J. Bryan as Secretary of State is the belief expressed by several men who have been prominent in the campaign to provide the United States with adequate means of defence.

Just as the Liberal party, in power in England, found it advisable to form a coalition Cabinet, it was believed that President would strengthen his support by disregarding party lines and calling to his aid the ablest men in the country.

The availability of Elihu Root, formerly Secretary of State and Secretary of War and recently United States Senator, was repeatedly mentioned. Considered one of the most astute statesmen in the United States and skilled in handling state affairs of exceptional importance, it was believed by those interviewed that the fact he is a Republican should not deter Mr. Wilson from summoning him to aid the government.

Joseph H. Choate, formerly Ambassador to Great Britain and long considered dean of the American bar, also was mentioned. While Mr. Bryan was praised by some for leaving the Cabinet when he found that the will of the people was opposed to his unalterable views for peace at any price, the opinion was expressed that the President should feel impelled to call upon any party to supply the one man best equipped for that now vitally important portfolio.

Colonel Robert M. Thompson, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Navy League of the United States, said:—

"The Navy League unites with all patriotic citizens in the ferved hope that in the present crisis the President disregards party boundaries and political rivalries in selecting a successor to Mr. Bryan. Only a man of trained ability and seasoned experience, fitted to read between the lines of diplomatic correspondence and match wits with the most astute minds among the diplomatists of the world can fill the post of Secretary of State satisfactorily at this time.

"If such a man can be found within the Democratic party we will be the first to hail him, but I believe that at this time it is only in the ranks of the Republican party that a man competent to deal with the situation can be found. I believe that to experiment with men of untried ability when such men as Elihu Root and Joseph H. Choate are available would be trifling with our national safety.

"All advocates of adequate national defensive measures are unfeignedly glad that Mr. Bryan has resigned. We have always believed him a sincere idealist, but unquestionably he is not the man for Secretary of State of a great nation during a period of stress. Unalterably opposed by reason of scruples of conscience to all policies implying arms or resistance, even in self-defence, he found himself in the capacity of servant of a nation determined to make active preparations to resist aggression against the rights and lives of its citizens. In resigning rather than compounding with his conscience and complying in measures which he could not approve, he did a fine and honorable thing. The world will honor his scruples though it cannot accept his opinions."

Ralph B. Strassburger, chairman of the New York Membership Committee of the Navy League, and former Consul General to Roumania, said:—

"Party considerations should not enter into the selection of a new head for the State Department to succeed Mr. Bryan. This is a time of national stress and peril and we do not want a theorist nor an impracticable idealist at the helm of the ship of state, no matter how beautiful his dreams or fine his ideals.

"The emergencies of the time call for a man trained in the practical school of actual service. A Root, a Choate, or a White could be relied upon to pilot his country through the storms which cannot fail to beat around us as the result of the disturbance which is convulsing Europe. To hold blindly to the lines of party prejudice and ignore fitness in the selection of a man for this, the most responsible post in the nation's service, next only to that of the President, would be to court disaster and destruction."

Perry Belmont, member of the Executive Committee of the Navy League and for many years Democratic Representative in Congress from New York, said:—

"Party service should not be considered in this crisis in the selection of a head for the State Department. If inexperience in power has been a handicap to those charged with the responsibilities of government, there should be no hesitation in disregarding party lines in the selection of a new Secretary of State.

"The State Department constitutes our first line of national defence. The same degree of experience and continuity of service necessary to the command of battle ships and army corps is required of the head of the State Department and for ambassadors and ministers. When the first line of defence fails, the second line, the army and navy, are called into action. We of the Navy League hope thaa speedy upbuilding of both lines will take place so that this country may command the respect that ought to be its portion in the councils of the nations."

GERMANS HAVE CROSSED LUKEW RIVER, EXHAUSTED

Berlin, June 9 (via London).—General von Linsingen, in his advance from Przsmysl has reached Lubaczow, forty-five miles miles northeast of Przmysl, and about sixty miles northwest of Lemberg.

Lubaczow is only twelve miles from the Russian frontier at Cieszanow, on the railroad humiing northeast from Jaroslaw.

South of the Dniester, the Berlin official report today also states, the Germans have crossed the Lukow river and are at Byslow, east of Kalusz.

The great battle in Galicia has not yet reached a decision. The Austro-Germans, having crossed the Dniester, have assumed the offensive further south, and, according to the Austrian official report, have succeeded the Russians back between Kolomea and Kalusz in Eastern Galicia.

This operation was necessary before the Teutonic allies continued their advance towarrd Lemberg, as the Russian attacks in the region of Kolomea were beginning to look dangerous, after the Russians had, as reported frorm Petrograd last week, inflicted a rather severe defeat on the Austrians in this district.

British and Russian military opinion is that the Austro-Germans after their great effort, which regained for them the greater part of Galicia, have about exhausted themselves.

The view is expressed that they will soon have to secure and fortify a line on which they can withstand the Russian counter-offensive, which has already made itself felt on the lower San.

If the Russian positions were really dangerous, these authorities say, the Allies would long ago have taken the offensive in the west to relieve the pressure on the eastrn front, but it can hardly be said that a general offensive in the west has begun.

PONTIFF READY TO CO-OPERATE WITH U. S.

Rome, June 8.—Pope Benedict received in audience today Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago, and Dr. Aletta Jacobs, of Holland, who presented to him an embossed set of peace resolutions. The Pope said he appreciated the sentiment with which the whole world now looks on the Vatican. The initiative for peace, however, he asserted, must originate with America as the greatest of the neutral Powers, which, up to this time, had preserved, in his opinion, the fairest neutrality.

The Pope said he was ready to co-operate with President Wilson in any peace move and in every possible way.

The Pope asked Miss Addams about the attitude of the various countries on the peace question. He remarked that only national pride prevents an early peace and commended the women's peace efforts.

Miss Addams said afterward the Pope impressed her as a keen, intellectual, deep-thinking man, most sincere in his efforts to restore peace and undaunted by any past failure. She left this evening to visit the French and Belgian governments.

British Need New Ideas of War, Says Writer and Student

By H. G. Wells

London, June 9.—I submit there is urgent need to bring imaginative enterprise and the utmost resource of scientific knowledge to the assistance of the new born energies of coalition. This is not being done, and until it is done the war likely will drag on and be infinitely more costly and infinitely less conclusive than it could and should be.

Since the war began the German methods of fighting have been changed again and again. They have produced novelty after novelty. Each novelty has more or less saved their men and unexpectedly destroyed ours. England so far has produced hardly any novelty except in field recruiting posters.

It is high time our rulers and the people came to recognize that the mere accumulation of great masses of young men in khaki is merely preliminary to the presecution of this war. These masses make the body of the army, but neither its neck, head, hands nor feet. In the field of aviation, for which the English and French temperaments are far better adapted than those of the German, there has been no energy. The organization there has been great individual gallantry and magnificent use of the sparse material available, but no great development. We produced an insufficient number of aviators and dribbled out an inadequate supply of machines—insufficient and inadequate in relation to such a war as this.

In trench construction our shortness of high explosives is notorious. It led to the sacrifice of thousands of lives. Our Dardanelles exploit has been throughout unforseeing and uninventive.

We have produced no counterstroke to the German submarines, no efficient protection against their improved torpedoes. We are still to make efficient use of poison gas and armored protection in advances against machine guns.

One instance will serve to show what I am driving at. Since the war began we have been piling up infantry recruits by the million and makin strenuous efforts to equip them with rifles. Meantime our actual experience in war have been fully verifying the speculations of the imaginative theorists, and the Germans have been learniing the lesson of their experiences.

The idea that for defensive purposes one well-protected skilled man with a small machine gun is better than a row of riflemen is a very obvious one, indeed, bue we disregarded it.

The German are giving up crowding men for defence purposes (though weakness of national quality obliges them still to mass for attacks), and are entrusting very small light machine guns in many cases to officers.

They have adopted as the 1915 model of trench defense the proper scientific thing; against this we fire our 1910 shrapnel and hurl our 1914 infantry—10,000 widows know with what effect. Now these inadequacies are not incurable failures, but they will likely go on until we create some supplementary directive forces—some council—in which the creative factors of our national life, particularly scientific men and younger scientific soldiers and sailors, have fuller representation and stronger influence than they have in the present government.

It is not the sort of work for which a great legal or political career fits a man. That training and experience, valuable as they are in the management of men and peoples, do, indeed, very easily unfit men for this incessantly inventive work.

A great politician has no more special aptitude for making modern war than he has for diagnosing diseases or planning an electrical railway system. It is a technical business. We want acting as a sub-government scientific and technically competent men for this high specialized task. Such a sub-government does in effect exist in Germany.

It is more and more manifest that we are fighting no longer against a rhetorical system of ancient pretensions of which the Kaiser is the figurehead. In Flanders we are now up against the real strength of Germany; we are up againgst Westphalia and Frau Krupp's young men.

Great Britain and France will have to get their own brilliant young engineers and chemists to work against that splendid organization, unless the politicians can add to the many debts we owe them for the convincing service in organizing science in war more thoroughly than they ever troubled to do it in peace.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 61

[illegible], President and Editor
[illegible], Secretary and Assistant Editor
[illegible], Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Wednesday, June 9, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Good Public Servants

Our senate district and the assembly districts in Jefferson county have been ably represented at Albany during the last year. The commanding position of Senator Brown is well known. In the assembly Hon. H. E. Machold has well represented his district. By reason of continued service and ability he was made chairman of the committee on conservation and through his efforts the water storage bill which bears his name passed the assembly. If Mr. Machold is willing to serve again he should be nominated by the Republicans. It is only by continued service that a member can become of great influence in the assembly. Mr. Machold has proved himself a man of strong character and ability in legislative matters; he has the confidence and respect of all who know him. In the second district Hon. W. S. Augsbury is serving his first term. As we expected Mr. Augsbury has made good, and iff given a continuous term would no doubt rise to a commanding position commensurate with his ability and a wide business experience. The Republican party in this county can do no better for the people than to renominate these two excellent representatives.—Watertown Times.

Bryan, a Pitiable Figure

Will not someone say a kind word for Mr. Bryan? His position at the present time is one which arouses sincere sympathy. He is the chief minister of the cabinet and yet he is so far out of touch with affairs intimately connected with our present great crisis that he stands a pitiable figure. He has had trouble with the newspaper men at Washington and this has added to the burden of his present affliction. The reporters heckle him. It has been known for a long while that he did not enjoy their visits at the state department every morning and now, judging from late correspondence from Washington published in the New York Evening Post, the differences have reached a point of very strained relations.

Bryan has withstood the exasperating troubles of many political campaigns without irritation. He has smiled on in that kindly way of his and yet now, when he occupies the highest position in the administrative affairs of the country next to that of president, he is manifestly irritated b ythe situations which arise.

It is difficult for a man who has wandered up and down the country as a lecturer, publicist, and candidate the greater part of his life to turn about and chain himself down to a desk for hard office work of ten and 15 hours at a stretch. Bryan simply cannot do it. His training has been otherwise and all is the more pity. He considers the situation as philosophically as he can. Mr. Wilson treats him with all courtesy, confers with him and yet writes all the state notes himself. Bryan is a sad figure, yet he plods on in the same complacent way as of old, loving all men except those who cross his political path and hating them only in a political sense. His personality is as appealing. His nature is unwarped, even if the truth of the 1896 campaign cry of "Boys will be boys, but they can't be presidents," has been repeatedly established as fact.—Watertown Standard.

For wire cuts use Hanford's Balsam.

FOR SALE
CASH GROCERY STORE
210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY
A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of 240 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

WATER GLASS
EGG PRESERVER
By the Quart or Gallon
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

MORE OF THAT INCONSISTENCY

The announcement that Fulton's reverend gentlemen have their eyes upon dispensers of intoxicating liquors—the saloonkeepers, or those who are not satisfied with conducting business in accordance with the laws of the State—comes not with the least bit of surprise, except that one is compelled to wonder in what pathway the said reverend gentlemen have been for so long a time engaged in hoeing.

It is indeed a long time since The Evening Times told its nearly 8,000 readers that the Sunday movies in Fulton were the least of the evils to be watched. At that time The Evening Times stated that moving pictures were boons to hundreds and thousands of persons in the city, in that the houses have their educational value, to say nothing of the moral influence they exert in many of Fulton's so-called homes. As a result of making clear its belief upon the point of open movie houses, this newspaper was taken over the knee of one of the city's ministers, and with the aid of a common carrier of news, a few whacks were administered, but the flogging was unfruitful.

At that time The Evening Times knew that if the gentleman who flayed this newspaper for its attitude upon the subject of Sunday movies had the right understanding of many conditions in this city he might have been the first to grasp the hand that endeavored to give a different kind of a pull for Fulton. At that time The Evening Times knew that licensed dealers in intoxicating liquors were selling to minors and that they were flagrantly selling liquors on Sunday. At that time The Evening Times told its regiments of readers that the open Sunday movies were agencies for better morals; that the houses kept within their doors heads of families who might be otherwise in worse places—the saloons—a fact that has been borne out by investigation.

The Evening Times reiterates its stand upon the question of permitting Sunday movies, but in the same breath puts squarely the question, Is there a saloonkeeper of Fulton who feels the competition of the Sunday movie and the weekday movie to the extent that he flaunts the Excise Laws of the people, making possible the acquirement of liquors by those who cannot resist the temptation afforded by a half-open bar, and thereby increasing his earnings by just so many nickels and dimes? If Fulton has within its borders a saloonkeeper who is unwilling to restrict his sales of liquors to six of the seven days of the week, and who will allow a minor to drink at his bar, that man is one of the city's worst enemies, and it is hard for one to understand why a mayor should become so very active upon the question of censoring the movie houses, overlooking in his zeal a crime that enters into the life of the city to a very great depth.

CHILD WELFARE DAY

The State Department of Health has designated Sunday, June 20, for observance as "Child Welfare Day." It is to be given over, so far as the department with the co-operation of clergymen and teachers can bring about, to the spread of information helpful in the care and upbringing of young children.

This is an enlightened and proper application of "press agent" methods in a campaign of much benefit to the state. In the first year of its existence under the new law the Health Department, though handicapped by an insufficient appropriation and few workers, carried on a child welfare educational campaign which, in the places reached by the workers, resulted in a notable reduction in infant mortality. The fact that the death rate remained the same as usual in places not reached by this campaign proved to the authorities that the satisfactory results in the communities covered could be attributed to the spread of information and to nothing else. It is to be hoped, in view of such a showing, that Child Welfare Day will produce an interchange of views and information in every community in the state. The Health Department is doing an excellent work in this respect. It deserves the completest co-operation which the public can give.—New York Tribune.

How to See the Sun Spot.

To observe the giant sun spot that is now being watched by astronomers the officials of the naval observatory in Washington direct that the sun be looked at through a piece of smoked glass held over one of the object glasses of an ordinary opera glass, with the smoked side toward the opera glass and using only one eye. The sides of the glasses not in use should be turned away from, instead of toward, the eye, in order to prevent this from being injured by the rays of the sun striking the eye through the glass.

An Easy, Pleasant Laxative

One or two Dr. King's New Life Pills with a tumbler of water at night. No bad, nauseating taste; no belching gas. Go right to bed. Wake up in the morning, enjoy a free, easy bowel movement, and feel fine all day. Dr. King's New Life Pills are sold by all Druggists, 36 in an original package, for 25c. Get a bottle today—enjoy this easy, pleasant laxative.

Sewing Machines—all makes; priced from $5.00 to $25.00. Bogue's Piano Store, 61 First st.—adv.

Bowser's Shoestring

He Can't Find It, and There Is a Row.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

There are two standard complaints that a husband can urge against his wife whenever he gets a grouch on.

One is her extravagance, and the other is her way of running the house.

Husbands the world over are more extravagant than their wives, and as for system in running the house, no husband could do it a tenth as well. Even an old bachelor living alone is a dead failure as a housekeeper.

Sometimes Mr. Bowser urges one complaint and sometimes the other, just as it happens. He can assume dramatic poses in either of them.

He can also be the martyr, while Mrs. Bowser is the guilty party.

The other morning when he was ten minutes late at the breakfast table he had that martyred look that Mrs. Bowser had learned to connect with a row, and she was keeping very quiet when he began:

"I would like to know if this house is run on a system, or is everything supposed to take care of itself?"

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean that I have been looking for a shoestring for the last half hour and that nothing of the sort is to be found."

"No, I don't believe there is one in the house."

"I presume not. I presume the 200 pairs I bought a month ago have all been chewed up by the cat or sold to the rag man. If there's a worse run house than ours in America I'd like to see it!"

"I FOUND A BOY WALKING OFF WITH THIS MAT."

"Why, Mr. Bowser, you only brought home three shoestrings, and you used two of them to tie up your papers."

"Well, where is the other?"

"I can't tell. We may have lost it in the housecleaning."

"Don't doubt it in the least. While a shoestring is not as big as a piano or as valuable as a clock, the loss of it shows a want of system, a reckless extravagance truly discouraging. Have you got a piece of clothesline in the house?"

"I—I don't think so," she stammered.

"Probably not. Probably gone to join the shoestring. I must have something to tie up my shoe with, however, and I will use a piece of stovepipe wire."

After breakfast, when ready to go out, he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I hope you will take this lesson to heart. Carelessness in a wife is a very, very reprehensible trait."

"You are just as careless as I am!" she protested.

"No, ma'am; no, ma'am, I never mislay anything, forget anything or lose anything. Very few husbands do. I will go around the world with a pin in my vest pocket and bring the same one back with me. If you go out on the street today you had better have a policeman with you. If not, you'll lose your purse or be robbed of your coat."

When Mr. Bowser came home to dinner he entered the house with a smile on his face and the doormat in his hand and said:

"I found a boy walking off with this mat. Has any one taken the range out of the kitchen? It's a wonder to me they haven't come in after the carpets."

"That's a mat the girl put out in the barrel to be carted away," she explained.

"Oh, it is! More reckless extravagance, I see. Mrs. Bowser, I want to sit down with you some day and have a long talk. I think you mean well, but you are deficient in judgment, and your knowledge of the world is very, very limited."

"Do you know everything?" she sarcastically queried.

"Mrs. Bowser," he replied as he folded his hands under his coattails and assumed his favorite attitude, "there are probably one or two things I don't know. I don't claim to know it all, and I don't say you know nothing whatever. The husband who does not, however, know forty times as much as his wife would be considered a stick of a man. Did you go out this morning?"

"I did."

"Was your bonnet taken off your head?"

"No, sir."

"Lucky—very lucky. You are to be congratulated. I didn't"—

"Mr. Bowser, where's your watch?" she interrupted.

"My watch? Mrs. Bowser, my watch is—great Scott!"

He dropped his hand to find the chain, but it was not there. He felt for the watch, but it was gone.

"Did you leave it at the jeweler's?" she asked as he stood with open mouth and stared at her.

"Jeweler's? No; it's gone! I've lost it! I've been robbed!" he shouted as he danced around.

"It can't be. Feel in your pockets."

"Pockets! Pockets! Do you s'pose I carry my watch in my coattail pocket? I tell you I've been robbed!"

"Well, don't take on so. Your wallet is safe, isn't it?"

"G-gone!" he gasped as he put his hands up. "Watch and wallet both gone!"

"You must have been robbed in some crowd," she suggested.

"Robbed! Crowd! Robbed! Why, of course I've been robbed!" he shouted as he pranced about. "Get that infernal cat off the lounge and lemme lay down, for I'm so weak I can't stand up! Where's that camphor?"

She ran for the bottle as he flopped down, and for the next three minutes he had his nose in the opening.

"You ought to go to the police at once," she finally said.

"G-gone! G-gone!" he gasped.

"But how could you have been robbed?"

"I dunno. Hold the bottle a little higher."

"You are so careful, you know!"

"Yes."

"You never mislay anything or forget anything!"

"No."

"And never lose anything and have so much worldly wisdom!"

"Oh, my head!"

"I cannot make it out. I am so careless that I might lose a shoestring in the hustle of housecleaning, but you"—

"Don't talk to me! Over $600 gone!"

"A woman tried to steal my reticule in Buffalo, and I had her arrested, but it seems that you"—

"Gone! Gone!" he groaned.

"Haven't you any idea of when it was taken?" she asked.

"No."

"Well, I'm sorry, but this will be a great lesson to you. You will be more"—

"Mrs. Bowser," he interrupted as he suddenly sat up, "I see through it all now. It's as plain as daylight."

"What do you mean?"

"I thought it necessary this morning to give you a little advice. I felt it to be my duty as a husband. This is your way of getting even."

"Why, Mr. Bowser!"

"Don't 'Why Mr. Bowser' me! It's as plain as that chair over there."

"How could I rob you or tell any one else to?"

"Never you mind! I see it all! It's all right, Mrs. Bowser—all right. Just let go of this camphor bottle and take a seat in the other room. A husband will bear a great deal from the woman he loves, but when crowded too far he turns at bay. I have turned. As soon as I feel a little better we will have an understanding and you can probably take the noon train for your mother's in Buffalo. Robbed! Plundered! But I see through it all, and I know my duty."

"Do you think you will expire before I go upstairs and return?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Woman"—

When she returned she had the watch in one hand and the wallet in the other, and as she held them out she said:

"Being afraid that I would rob you in the night, you hid them under the bureau and forgot them this morning. It's a wonder that you didn't miss them. You never mislay nor forget, but here they are."

"You—you"— stammered Mr. Bowser as he dropped the camphor bottle on the floor and sat up.

"Oh, I haven't taken any of your money or stolen any of the wheels of the watch."

He didn't beg her pardon. He simply grunted and passed down the hall and out of doors. Just outside the gate he met a neighbor, who said:

"Good evening, Mr. Bowser. I believe I made a fool of myself a few minutes ago."

"And I'm sure I did," was the lugubrious reply.

Dinner Topics.

SOUP	The Anti-Noise Society
FISH	Scaly characters
MEAT	Roasting your friends
SALAD	Lobsters we have met
ICES	Interior friezes
COFFEE	Grounds for complaint

—Philadelphia Ledger.

Explained.

She—Why do they paint the inside of a chicken coop?

He—To keep the hens from picking the grain out of the wood.—Lehigh Burr.

His Name.

She ransacked every novel
And the dictionary, too,
But nothing ever printed
For her baby's name would do;
She hunted appellations
From the present and the past,
And this is what she named him
When they christened him at last:

Julian Harold Egbert
Ulysses Victor Paul
Algernon Marcus Cecil
Sylvester George McPall.
But after all the trouble
She'd taken for his sake,
His father called him Buddy
And his schoolmates called him Jake.
—New York Sun.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

1914 FORD RUNABOUT
FOR SALE
Has been run 1500 miles.
GARRETT BROS.
Livery and Sales Stable
North 2d Street

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

GOSSARD CORSETS
They Lace in Front
These Corsets anticipate the styles in Suits and Dresses.
Sold at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

MILLINERY
The Latest in Summer Hats
A number of Sample Hats at Half Price
MRS. F. K. JONES
210 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

BUSINESS IS GOOD
Because we serve The Best
Dinner 25c
Supper Specials 15c
FOLEY'S
Up-to-date Restaurant

TAXICAB AND [illegible] TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 446
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

Second-Hand Machinery
New and Second-hand I Beams and Pipes, all kinds and sizes,
For Sale Pipe Cut to Order
I. ALDERMAN
19 W. 3d St. Phone 2242

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WOMEN'S WHIMSIES.

Beaded, brocaded and plain velvet or satin bags are the mode, made in reticule shapes, quite large and finished with a long tassel at the bottom or with ribbon drawn tops.

One wrinkle is to wear Egyptian designed amulets done in rhinestones set in flat settings of antique gold or silver or even of jet or ivory, appended to long chains made of the same jewels.

These accompany trailing, scarflike evening gowns made of gorgeously colored chiffons, brocaded crapes or satins of a particularly soft quality.

For those who possess lace scarfs, no matter what the shape or length, quality or type, the season's latest adventure reveals a liking for these frivolous neck or shoulder fixings for wear with the new gowns for dance and evening wear.

Even the fluffs of tulle or maline which have been used all season in clouds of frothy white or in sunset tints of gorgeous colorings have their ends weighted by single metallic threaded tassels or with silk made roses in bouquet forms, each one concealing a silk covered weight to keep it in position.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

FRESH STRAWBERRIES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Mr. and Mrs. Gould Barlow of Syracuse were week-end guests of friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson of Fulton called on Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Filtsie and Mrs. Edwards Sunday.

Mrs. R. A. Dorrill and son Robert of Newark are guests of Mrs. Dorril's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Perkins.

Mrs. A. B. Keeney is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. S. D. Pettigrew of Oswego.

Mrs. Fred Wiltsie of Syracuse is at the hospital of the Good Shepherd in Syracuse for an operation. Mrs. Wiltsie formerly lived in Hannibal.

Rev. Frank Dunning, pastor of the M. E. church, was injured while at work around his automobile last week by the unexpected starting of the machine, crushing him against a post. He is recovering slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford and daughter Rose of Sterling were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. I. O. Hamblett.

Mrs. Henry Baker spent last week with her cousin, Mrs. William Kelley, in Syracuse.

Mrs, Charles Closson of Red Creek is the guest of friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Judson Kellogg, sr., attended the funeral of their niece, Mrs. M. Rabel Ellridge, Thursday.

The many friends of Miss Mabel Fitch of Noank, Conn., were grieved to hear of her death which occurred June 3d. Miss Fitch was a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Hall and had frequently visited friends in Hannibal and was highly esteemed.

Mr. and Mrs. George Snyder of Fulton were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Mayer.

Miss Ninx Padden is quite ill from blood poisoning at the Oswego hospital.

Miss Kate Sayre and Mr. Lewis Betsinger of this place were married at Wolcott Friday, May 28th, and are spending a few days with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sayre.

Maynard Elwin Gardner, is the name of the young son who recently arrived at the home of Attorney and Mrs. E. L. Gardner.

Mrs. Phelps of Oswego was a guest at the Morehouse summer home last week.

Bert Peters of Sodus was in town last week.

Fred Lockwood is making extensive improvements on his residence on Auburn street. O. J. Adamy is doing the work.

Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Adamy of Syracuse called on Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Clark and Mrs. M. Adamy Sunday.

Miss Olive Phelps of Hamilton is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Delos Perkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Hopper are spending the week in Syracuse.

J. S. Stevenson has a new Ford automobile which will do service in the suffrage cause and be painted yellow to advertise the same.

Oswego County Pomona Grange was held at Parish Tuesday. A number from this vicinity attended.

The following program was given at Golden Sheaf Grange Saturday evening: Song, Grange; Scripture reading and prayer, by Chaplain; reading names of deceased members, Secretary; processional and laying flowers on altar, Grange; song, Only Remembered by What I Have Done, Grange; reading, One by One; reading, Our Dead; solo, Mrs. Wheeler; reading, Memorial Poem; closing song.

There was a good attendance of Grangers to listen to Rev. Dunning's sermon Sunday afternoon at Hannibal Center.

June 18th this Grange will give a Children's Day program. Ice cream and cake will be served free to all Everybody welcome.

Mrs. Oscar Clark, who underwent an operation at Fulton hospital last week is reported as doing nicely.

Hannibal people are pleased to know that a new bridge of modern design will be constructed over the creek on Fulton street. The framework will be of steel with cement top and, when completed, will be a much needed improvement.

D. DeBello of Fulton has opened an ice cream parlor and candy store in the VanAuken building.

The school in District No. 12, Mrs. Fanny Perkins, teacher, closed Friday. An interesting program was rendered in the evening by the pupils. Some of the features of the program were a drama, "Whittier's Friends", by a number of pupils; violin solo by Mr. Rosbeth of Meridan; recitation, "The College Oil Cans," was well rendered by Miss Eva Crockford.

Steer this way for the Insurance that spells peace of mind—our Automobile Accident and Liability Insurance.

The accident that generally occurs is the unavoidable one—but that does not stop the "hold-up" suit that costs money to defend against—BUT our insurance protects you against property and personal damages and the company fights the case.

See us today for rates.

DAVID & MASON AGENCY

BUNDY'S CROSSING

Mrs. Byron Wells and daughters spent Tuesday with Mrs. Samuel Graham at Battle Island.

Most of the farmers here are planting their potatoes and corn.

Mrs. Gladys Wheeler and daughter Olive of Fulton are spending some time with Mrs. Fred Dodge.

Miss Ella McDonald of Minetto spent Thursday with Edith Dodge.

Curtis Christian of Minetto was in this place one day the past week calling on friends.

The closing exercises held on Thursday evening were a success; about seventy-five were present. The program was arranged by the teacher, Mrs. Muriel Congdon. The school house was beautifully decorated with ferns and flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McCann and son of the Kingdom called on Benjamin Congdon on Thursday.

Miss Goldia Graham visited friends heer a few days the past week.

Edward Echard and Ula Adams went to Minetto on Thursday night to the wrestling match.

Mrs. Bert Thornsbur and son of Hannibal spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Burchin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ula Adams were in Oswego on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Peavey and daughter were in Fulton on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wells and daughter, and D. E. Wells, spent Sunday with Mrs. Samuel Graham.

Mrs. Alice Adams was at Oswego Center on Sunday to see her daughter, Mrs. Fred Loughrey.

Mrs. Lewis Burchin is able to be out again.

George Echard and Mrs. Blanche Gardner were in Fulton one day the past week on business.

Mrs. W. Biggs of Fulton was the Sunday guest of Mrs. C. Briggs.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Dumont and family spent Sunday at Lansing with Mr. and Mrs. Shelding.

Edward Echard has bought a new 60-gallon gasoline tank of the Standardr Oil Company.

Richard Gardner spent Saturday with Wlster Adams.

Miss Pauline Echard spent Saturday with her sister, Mrs. Edward Gardner.

VOLNEY CENTER

Miss William Bateman and children are spending a few days with relatives in Phoenix.

Essee Gallagher is spending a few days with his grandfather, S. S. Pedgen.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Gallagher are living with their father, S. Pedgen.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at Mrs. Ray Holden's Wednesday, June 9. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. Ella Baggs of Fulton has been spending a few weeks with Mrs. Wm. Gilbert.

Mr. and Mrs. William Steward of Auburn were guests Sunday of W. E. Gilbert and family.

Master Luciun Parker and Earl Labeef were week-end guests of Leonard and Kenneth Cramer.

Leigh Simpson of Syracuse University spent Saturday with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Simpson.

Fred Butts of Phoenix was the Sunday guest of A. W. Simons and family.

Mrs. Norman Tice entertained a number of friends at her cottage on Memorial day. The guests were: The Misses Gertrude Sweeney, Kathryn O'Brien, Anna Spellett, Gladys Yorden, Doretta Fralick, Gertrude Harris, Marion Clark, Helen Sweeney, Elsie Wallice, Edna Vrooman, Maymie Schanmand; the Messrs, Francis Doran, Fay Tice, Hugh Myers, John Thompson, Harold Tice, Henry Hook, Delbert Prest, Sid Rolf, Carl Harris, Walter Ward, Charles Clapp, Fred Bacon, Carl Dinmore, Earl Tice, Mr. and Mrs. Harris chaperoned the party.

Mrs. William Slayter is ill.

Mrs. Joe Haskins' baby is very ill.

Clarence Ingersoll of Deansboro was a caller here over Sunday.

T, Bly shipped strawberries Monday, June 7th, the first of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Deline were callers Sunday evening upon Mrs. William Wood.

Mrs. Bronk returned to Johnsville. She has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. O. S. Bronson.

Remember the church aid Thursday, June 10.

Silas F. Potter, wife and daughter Lois, Samuel Dickerson, Miss Mae Tibbits and Miss Mary Beach motored to Utica Saturday forenoon in Mr. Potter's car and stopped for dinner at Hotel Utica. Mr. Dickerson at the age of 92 years witnessed the movies for the first time during the afternoon. The party arrived at the Dickerson homestead about five o'clock and the venerable gentleman was scarcely more tired than he would have been had he remained at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Winn, Rev. H. A. Whitehead, Mrs. Florence Cook Mrs. William Goodrick went with Mr. Winn's car to Colosse Tuesday to attend the Oswego Baptist Association. They returned Wednesday.

Because of illness there was only a small attendance of ladies at the meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hira Short to organize a suffrage club, so it was left until next Wednesday.

Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Farley were in town yesterday with Miss Mildred Marsden. They have rented the second floor of the Marsden home for the summer.

Mrs. Alice Hooks visited her sister, Mrs. John Lord, at West Monroe, from Sturday until Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jenning, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Batchellor went to Parish Saturday, returning Monday.

Mrs. Bertha Willard was here on business Tuesday.

About fifty-five persons were here in the summer cottages over Memorial day.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Webb entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Winn, Mrs. Frand Brewer of Oneida, Mrs. L. Harrington and two children of West Monroe and Leon Webb of Solvay.

John Weed was called here from Ohio on account of the serious illness of his sister, Mrs. R. Woolridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Myrick have returned from Wilcox, Pa., where they have been.

Master Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Short, is very ill with appendicitis.

Miss Flossie Coady has returned to Mrs. James Peachin after a visit at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Coady, over two months.

Mrs. David Spoon of Camden is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Coady.

The North Shore Sunday School Convention was held at Constantia Center Saturday, June 5, it being a fine day there was a full house to commence with, more came in the afternoon. It was beautifuly decorated with flowers. The program follows: Singing by the choir; devotion, Rev. A. Gritter, of Cleveland; welcome by Rev. H. A. Whitehead of Constantia; response by Rev. G. W. Wood of Cleveland; Why I am in the Sunday School Business, by Rev. C. J. Middleton, North Bay; solo by Miss Mildred Conklin of Ceveland; The Model Sunday School, Rev. O. M. Keley of Cleveland. The next meeting will be at McConnellsville. Solo, My Friend, by Miss Lena Best of Bernhards Bay; address was given by Rev. J.H. Barrett of First M. E. church of Fulton, who gave a fine discourse, "The Child and the Church.

Mr. Harlow Sperbeck is taking the census in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Summerville went with Mr. and Mrs. Sperbeck to Moravia Sunday in their auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Erd Perry and Mrs. Lois Cook were guests at George Blakeman's Sunday.

Ed Perry and Mr. and Mrs. Marlet were geusts at Ashur Dumars Sunday.

Mrs. Lydia Osborn of Mt. Pleasant has been making her cousin, Mrs. H. Austin, a visit of a few days.

School closes Friday with exercises in the evening.

Mrs. Minnie Andrew entertained the Larkin club Friday.

Mrs. Lizzie Sperbeck received a visit from her sister, Mrs. Nellie Collins, of Detroit, last week. Her daughter, Mrs. Ethel Hunter and children were over night guests also.

Burr Curtis was an over-Sunday guest of Fred Paines.

Mr. and Mrs. Milo Austin and Mr. and Mrs. Roey Austin and Mr. Herman Austin visited their mother Sunday

Shubael Rowlee has gone to Syracuse to visit his daughter, Mrs. Jennie Greenfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Osborn were Sunday guests at Ralph Brown's.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Keater and Mr. Pingree attended the funeral of F. W. George in Fulton Friday. They also attended the ice cream social at Little Utica Friday night.

Miss Anna Neary spent Sunday evening with Mrs. L. T. Austin.

We are glad to record that we have a beautiful new flag at the school house.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Paine and son Brewster spent Saturday in Syracuse.

The Eight Notes school closed Tuesday with exercises in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Ware were guests Sunday of their cousin, Fred Ware.

PALERMO

Mrs. Mary Vincent called on friends at Fulton one day last week.

Rev. David Bland of Kingston, Jamaica, was a visitor at Mrs. Charles Wetmore's last week.

Mrs. John Bough visited friends at Fulton Saturday.

Miss Blanche Collins is visiting her sister, Mrs. Allen Dashman at Martville.

Mrs. Mary Wright of Syracuse was a recent visitor of Mrs. Charles Wetmore.

Mrs. Richard Rider entertained the Gilberts Mill Ladies' Aid Society at her home on Friday last.

Mrs. Fred Parsons spent Monday at Central Square.

Mr. and Mrs. James Greene of Fulton spent Sunday at Everett Stewart's.

For thrush use Hanford's Balsam. Get it into the bottom of the affected part.

A Good Household Salve

Ordinary ailments anl injuries are not of themselves serious, but infection or low vitality may make them dangerous. Don't neglect a cut, sore bruise or hurt because it's small. Blood Poison has resulted from a pinprick or scratch. For all such ailments Bucklen's Arnica Salve is excellent. It protects and heals the hurt; is antiseptic, kills infection and prevents dangerous complications. Good for all Skin Blemishes, Pimples, Salt Rheum, Eczema. Get an original 2 ounce 25c. box from your Druggist.

Pimples, Skin Blemishes, Eczema Cured

No odds how serious, how long standing your case, there's help for you in every particle of Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. It wipes out all trace of your ailment, and leaves your skin clean anl soft as a child's. Hundreds of users have sent voluntary letters of thanks. Just try one box. It will mean freedom from suffering and embarrassment.

Many a spoken or written sermon of late has contained or led off with these words: "The obligation of maintaining the national dignity and honor rests upon the official head of the nation—its 'president.'" It would be well to make that the people's motto for all time.

Japan will not be anxious to teach China what she knows about war. But for the gigantic conflict raging in Europe Japan might not have started on her new program in China, so her action was really without proper consideration of American interests.

The annual average cost of keeping one of our battleships in commission is $828,778 and of a submarine $31,168. And the little one can put the big one out of commission in a few seconds at a cost of $500.

Japan may find this seizing of extra territorial rights in China as troublesome as Russia did a decade ago, and how troublesome that was for the Russ Japan ought to know.

One of the belligerents has put an end to money making at the government expense while engaged in war. That ought to be the beginning of the abolition of war.

The English ridiculed Napoleon's size, calling him a "mannikin of five foot three," and now they are pleading for soldier recruits down to five foot one.

Only five of the great fleet in the world cruise of 1908 appeared in the Hudson naval column—Louisiana, Kansas, Georgia, Virginia and Rhode Island.

When Cipriano Castro and General Uribe-Uribe get their names in the war dispatches peace may be expected to follow shortly.

China is indeed a big bulk for little Japan to swallow, but relatively the proportion is about that of a toad to a garter snake.

DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By FREDERIC T. CARDOZE

Albany, June 9.—Whether in future there will be one or two houses of the legislature, is a question which is quite likely to be settled on Tuesday next when the Constitutional Convention will dispose of the resolution adopted by the committee on Legislature and its organization and which is to come up as a special order upon that day.

Certain of the delegates to the convention believe that two houses of the legislature incur a needless expense and are of the opinion that with but a single house work and legislation can be don as well as at present with a far less greater expense. There are those, however, who are firm in their belief that it would be a mistake to do away with either the senate or assembly. Those who favor a continuance of the present system of lawmaking appear to be considerably in the majority.

The resolution reported favorably by the committee on the Legislature and its organization, provides that there shall be two houses and that the members of both shall be elected from election districts. In a word the adoption of the resolution by the convention as a whole, will have the effect of continuing the present method of enacting the statutes which are yearly considered.

A number of resolutions and proposed amendments to the State Constitution have been presented which have a direct bearing upon the mode of legislative procedure. It has been proposed that that the legislators meet bi-annually; that the salaries of senators and assemblymen be increased; that there be but one house; that no bills shall be introduced after a certain date; that sessions shall continue for a certain stated period; that senators be elected at large; that the terms of senators be for four years and those of assemblymen for two years and that sessions be maintained throughout the entire year. If the resolution adopted by the committee on the Legislature and its organization is dealth with in a similar manner by the delegates as a whole, then no further arguments or amendments will be directed toward the law-making branch of the State government.

Much fault has been found with the legislature of recent years. It has been claimed that the members meet too frequently, pass too many bills, are too extravagant in their methods and deal with important problems too hastily. Proposed amendments to the Constitution were in consequence presented with the intention of overcoming the faults thought by some to exist.

Reform organizations have not been alone in maintaining that fewer laws should be enacted, nor have prominent men of conservative ideas stood alone for economy in the printing bills of the State. There are those among the delegates to the Constitutional Convention who will strive to bring about the adoption of the proposition to merge the functions of the senate and assembly so that there shall be a single house. One of the most ardent sponsors for this plan is Delegate E. Clarence Aiken of Owasco, Republican, and a member of the committee on the Legislature and Its Organization. With the hope of preventing the adoption of the resolution adopted by that committee, he has submitted a minority report which urges the single house plan. In the report he points out by numerous arguments that the veto power of the governor is a sufficient check and that the senate as a check upon the assembly and vice versa is unnecessary. The aiken resolution will also be threshed out next Tuesday.

Have You Seen

THE LATEST STYLES

of

SOLID SILVERWARE

G. B. FARLEY

21 First Street

Can show you a full line. Just the kind for

WEDDING GIFTS

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

Tired, Aching Muscles Relieved

Hard work, over-exertion, mean stiff, sore muscles. Sloan's Liniment lightly applied, a little quiet, and your soreness disappears like magic. "Nothing ever helped like your Sloan's Liniment. I can never thank you enough," writes one grateful user. Stops suffering, aches and pains. An excellent counter-irritant, better and cleaner than mustard. All Druggists, 25c. Get a bottle tolay. Penetrates without rubbing.

Long Island and New England

You will never forget your happy hours by the sea. The surf bathing—the long tramps on the sand or the search for mysterious shells. The children too will find it a paradise and there are summer accommodations to suit all.

Through cars to Boston and New York, the gateways to the shore resorts.

Low Summer Excursion Fares

For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, and frequent 15-day excursions to Boston at one way fare plus $3 for round trip, consult local ticket agents.

NEW YORK CENTRAL

D/34

The White Goods Sale
STILL BOOMING at PATTERSON'S

SPECIALS THIS WEEK

Children's White Dresses from $1.25 to $5.00 each.

Ladies Wash Dresses from 82c and up.

SPECIAL PRICES ON ALL TABLE LINENS, HAMBURGS AND WHITE GOODS.

GREAT MUSLIN UNDERWEAR SALE FOR LADIES AND CHILDREN.

Fruit of the Loom, Hills or Lonsdale Cotton, 12 yds. for $1

14 yds. Black Rock Cotton for $1.00.

At PATTERSON'S

WEST SIDE PARK GETS MORE ATTENTION

If the reader has not yet seen that improved plot of ground at Worth and 1st sts., he or she should hop over the Divide at once, or better yet, wait until Thursday when the park comittee takes another inning at making the plot of ground even more attractive. The park committee comprises George B. Palmer, John McIntyre and F. G. Dolbear, who solicit the assistance of as many men and women as care to indulge in a little manual labor to make for better conditions in West 1st st. While it may be that additional flowers will not be added to those already planted, there will be work for all hands to do tomorrow when the committeemen are on hand to direct the work.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

We are Agents for

CHASE & SANBORN'S

Fine Teas and Coffees

LA PORTE'S GROCERY

Oneida St. Hello 75

Your Shoes Do They Need Repairing?

This is the best and quickest shop.

Wilson & Dwyer

207 Cayuga St.

M. KATRIB

Cleaning, Pressing, Dyeing, Repairing. Ladies and Gents Tailor. All Work Guaranteed. Free Delivery

Phone 3353 21 1-2 So. Second st.

Community Notes

Miss May Brooker of S. 1st st., entertained with a porch party yesterday afternoon.

* * *

Miss Lethea Whitaker of Syrachse is a guest of Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Halstead, of S. 4th st. and will remain for the summer.

* * *

F. G. Dolbear deserves special mention in connection with the work on the West Side park. He was not only one of the instigators but he also refreshed the workmen with lemonade of the first water.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Butts are representing the First M. E. Sunday school at the convention in Auburn.

* * *

Miss Mary Wells was the over-Sunday guest of her mother at Baldwinsville.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Redhead of S. 4th st. are in Auburn, attending the Sunday school convention.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Summerville of West 1st st. have been guests of friends in Moravia.

Madame Olga Petrova in "The Tigress" at the Happy Hour theatre Wednesday. adv.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

SPECIALS
THURSDAY and FRIDAY

5 Pair of 25c Burson Hose $1.00
$1.00 White Lawn Waists, Odd Sizes 49c
$1.00 White Muslin Petticoats 69c

O. HENDERSON & CO.

ONEIDA STREET PHONE 200

OUR

Perfection Oil Stoves means a Cool Kitchen

BEFORE BUYING, SEE OUR REFRIGERATORS, WINDOW SCREENS and DOORS and FISHING TACKLE

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

SOUTH FIRST ST. FULTON

ADOPT PLAN C

Its Chamber of Commerce Hopes to Win People to New Order

In the plan of a committee of the Watertown Chamber of Commerce to secure the adoption of Plan C under the Optional City Charter bill passed by thel ast session of the Legislature, the Standard of that city severely arraigns those whose efforts would have the change made from the present form the present form to Plan C. The Standard says:

"The chamber of Commerce is taking a referendum vote of its members on the proposition whether it is advisable for the city of Watertown to adopt the commission form of government. Why this body should go into this subject is not disclosed. It certainly was not organized nor is it supported by its membership for any such purpose.

The city of Watertown has a splendid city charter, perhaps the best of any of the third class cities of the state. It has operated well and so far as we know there are no specific complaints made. Watertown is well governed. No scandal has marred its fair name since the present charter went into effect in 1898. The general character of its officials is high; this is especially true of the boards and administrative officers, who take great pride in their work. Our financial system is sound with the result that the credit of the city is high. Our public improvements are keeping pace with our ability to pay. Our health is good, our schools good and improving, our streets are kept in splendid condition and there is a commendable civic pride. Why this tendency on the part of some minds to be carried away by every novel proposition, just because it is new, without regard to necessity or consequences.

"The plan which some malcontents are proposing to foist upon the city is substantially this. Abolish the board of water works, the board of charities, the board of public works, the board of health, the board of safety and the board of assessors, abolish the common council, the office of mayor and president of the common council, and place all these functions under a commission of five to be elected by the city at large. The members of this commission to draw a salary of $750 a year; for decorative purposes it will name from its number a mayor who really has no power except as a commissioner. This commission would select a city manager who would run the city and be paid such compensation as the commission might fix.

"The idea that any capable men could or would on $750 assume the responsibility of all these functions of government including the enacting of laws, the assessment of taxes, the charities, the water works, the public works, the public health, police and fire departments is absurd. We have a hard time now getting one competent man to consent to be mayor with only executive functions. How would it be possible to get four competent men who rae fit to perform such legislative,executive and administrative functions? Certainly as a whole our administrative boards are superior to any seven hundred and fifty dollar men who would serve under the proposed plan and they serve faithfully and well without pay. Certainly we would not be able to get five men to serve who are equal in caliber and capacity to the average of the mayors we have been fortunate in having.

"The commission plan as purposed is an undigested poorly considered, illy adapted piece of legislation without any adequate checks upon corruption or extravagance. Woe to the city which has the folly to adopt it especially a city so well governed as Watertown. A plan of government which at once combines in one body legislative, executive and administrative powers is certainly an anomaly in government in America to manage the system at all workable the recall should be added—because as sure as anything can be, corruption and incompetence, waste and extravagance and unrestrained disregard of taxpayers' rights will follow the adoption of such a loosely drawn, illy adapted monstrosity in government as that disclosed in the so-called Plan C, recommended by a committee of the chamber of commerce. Before considering the subject, consider well the blessing we are now enjoying, study the proposed law and compare it to our present charter, and agree that you are one of the $750 men who is willing to assume charge of and responsibility for the charities, the partments and taxes and assessments or whether you think that you can run all these better than they are now run.

"The plan leaves out the board of education and the courts, why, we dont' know. And yet the board of education will have to be named by the decorative head of the commission who for form's sake will bear the name of mayor. Oh times! Oh customs! We had hoped that this western stuff had had its day and had run its course.

"We have good government in Watertown today. We ought to be more careful in the selection of our common council. If we have not been it is our own fault. What assurance is there that these $750 men will be any improvement. Our advice to Watertown is to hold fast to that which is good."

JUNK DEALER GETS VERDICT NOT GUILTY

At the opening of the morning session of County Court yesterday District-Attorney Culkin moved the trial of the indictment charging Nelson Weiner, on Oswego junk deales, with receiving stolen property. The jury was selected and the trial started before the noon recess. It is alleged that a quantity of brass stolen from the New York Central railroad company came into the possession of defendant. He is defended by Denis O'Sullivan of Oswego. William Mason, a superintendent in the employ of the railroad company, was the first witness called.

The case went to the jury at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and half an hour later a verdict of not guilty was brought in. Samuel Weiner, a brother of the defendant, testified that he saw the stolen property in question.

John Leydon, formerly of Syracuse, who recently was arrested on a charge of burglary, third degree, and grand larceny, second degree; also indicted on a second charge for burglary in the same degree and petit larceny, was arraigned before court recessed for the day and withdrew his plea made of not guilty and pleaded guilty to the first indictment. Judge Coville sentenced him to three months in the Onondaga Penitentiary.

According to the indictment Leydon broke into the New York Central Railroad Company station at Phoenix, with others, last June and since that time has managed to dodge the authorities until a few days ago, when he was arrested and brought to Pulaski.

A settlement was reported in the civil action of Carmelo Feraro against Robert M. Burnett of Oswego and in that of Samuel Rocco against Henry P. Burgard of the same city. Both cases were brought to recover money damages for alleged negligence.

Two cases on the civil calendar have gone over the term, that of Henry Matott against Henry P. Burgard, an action to recover money damages for alleged negligence, and that of Floyd E. Series against Fred A. Laraway, to recover damages for alleged breach of contract.

It has been stipulated that the civil action of Walter Gannon against Robert Melver, be tried at the chambers of Judge Henry D. Coville in Oswego, at a later date and without a jury. The action was brought to recover money damages for alleged breach of contract.

TOO OLD FOR WAR WILL GIVE HIS SAVINGS

Chicago, June 8.—Tony Silvestri is too old to be a soldier. His shoulders are stooped and his step is beginning to falter. But Tony is the proudest man in Chicago's Little Italy. Pathetically he tries to draw himself erect to the salute as his wavering voice repeats the patriotic phrase on the lips of his countrymen, "Viva l'Italia."

Tony can not shoulder a rifle or man a gun. But he is going to do his share for king and country.

The meager, hard-earned savings which were to keep him in his old age are to go to help the wounded on the battlefields of Europe.

From early morning until night Tony stands on the outer edge of the crowd of eager young men who wait impatiently outside the Italian Consulate. He listens to their talk of following the flag and tears trickle down his withered cheeks.

"They are young and they can fight, while I am old," he says, and his voice trembles. "But see—I can help. It is not much, but—it is all for Italy."

He is young again for a moment as he holds out his soiled and well-thumbed bank book. The amount credited is not large—little more than $300. But it is Tony's sacrifice for his country. When the subscription lists are sent around, his name will be entered among the first.

FOR WOMEN

"The New York Shop"

Dainty Graduation Gowns ARE HERE

just suitable for every girl graduate. An exclusive line with a distinctive touch of Fashion, lace effects combined with messaline, chiffons, pussy willow taffetas and, in fact, many other materials

Your inspection will convince you that these dresses are correct for the occasion.

AT VERY ATTRACTIVE PRICES

M. J. McDonald & Co.

ONEIDA STREET FULTON

WHITE PLAGUE CAMPS WANTED

For Free Use of Patients Who Cannot Afford High-Price Institutions

Harold Keeler of this city has directed to the Oswego county delegates to the Constitutional Convention a letter which recommends that camp sites in the north woods be leased free of all charge to those persons who may be suffering with tuberculosis, or the "White Plague."

Inasmuch as there are thousands of acreas of state lands in the Adirondacks available for the use of persons who can ill acord to pay for the use of camp sites for the duration of even an ordinary vacation period—say of three weeks, it is the idea of those who have petitioned the Constitutional delegates to have the lands brought under the direct control of the State Conservation Commission, whose prrogative it should be to lease to such patients-citizens of the State—who bear certificates of an attending physician, the required amount of land for a camp, cottage and recreation plot.

It is the further desire of those who favor state ownership of the campers that tubercular patients who may frequent them shall be kept as far away from the mountain resorts as possible. This precaution would be taken to allay the fears of persons who are timid about coming into contact with sufferers.

BOARD OF UNDERWRITERS MAKE INSPECTION

A representation from the National Board of Insurance Underwriters is in Fulton and this afternoon a test is being made by the Fire Department down town to determine the water pressure and the condition of the fire fighting equipment.

A visit will be made to all the factories to ascertain the condition of the hose, automatic sprinklers and other fire prevention equipment.

It is the duty of the oBard to suggest changes or improvements to guard against fire dangers.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"Beulah," the beautiful Louisiana story of the sad orphan girl who rose from a servant to a position as foster daughter in the home of a rich woman and eventually to a marriage and most happy future. The book story is too well known to necessitate lengthy notice here. Tomorrow "The Price He Paid" and No. 5 of the "Who Pays" series entitled, "Unto Herself Alone," will be shown as a benefit for Fulton Lodge of O. U. A. M.

FRESH VEGETABLES EVERY DAY

at LaPorte's Grocery

Oneida St. Hello 75

Wall Paper

10% Discount THIS WEEK on All Cash Purchases

Hulett-Taft Co.

INCORPORATED

208 Oneida St. Fulton

Don't put off getting Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh until something happens. Get it now and be prepared for accidents. You will find frequent use for it in your stable for cuts, bruises, any sore, any lameness.

Bicycle Supplies at Bogue's.—adv.

BUELL BROS.

PLUMBING and HEATING

Phone 186

17 N. Second Street

Cahill's Perfection Bread

is the BEST BREAD MADE

TRY A LOAF—Sold only at

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

We Want Your

ELECTRICAL WORK

ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.

D. B. KANE

Phone 1598 118 Oneida St.

THOMAS H. MARVIN

HEADQUARTERS FOR

BUILDERS' SUPPLIES

Some of our specialties are:

Lehigh Portland Cement

Peerless Wall plaster

Robinson Sewer Pipe

Onondaga Vitrified Brick

Fire Brick, Fire Clay, etc.

Land Plaster Hydrated Lime

Yard:

Corner First and Broadway

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY	THURSDAY
"BEULAH"	"THE PRICE HE PAID"
in 6 Parts, featuring	in 5 parts, by Ella Wheeler Wilcox
Henry Walthal	"UNTO HERSELF ALONE" in 3 parts: No. 5 of Who Pays Series. Benefit O.U.A.M. of Fulton

FRIDAY:

"THE OUTCAST"

A Mutual Masterpiece in 4 parts 2 others.

NATIONAL BANK

Unnecessary Risk

There is no good reason for taking the great risk of fire or theft by leaving your valuables at home.

Our Fire and Burglar Proof Vault is the place of Safety.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent

$3.00 and Up per Year

Special Sale
on
Bikes, Tires, Supplies

Big Reduction from Regular Prices

BOGUE'S, 61 First Street

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

Upper Flat—Moderate rent, 214 Walradt st. 6 rooms and all modern conveniences. H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf.

For Sale—Good extra heavy double work harness; $20. G. L. Pratt, 177 E. 1st or phone 56. 149

House to Rent—Newly remodelled; modern improvements. Inquire I. Alderman, 19 W. 3. Phone 1242. 148

To Rent—7 room house in Fay st. near chocolate works. G. J. Emeny, 414 S. 4th st. 148c

Chambermaid Wanted.—Apply Clark House. 142

Hay For Sale. Phone 5819. 140c

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

HAPPY HOUR—Today
Madame Olga Petrova in
"THE TIGRESS"
5 parts
"THE TORRENT"
in 2 parts Admission 10c

FRIDAY—JAMES O'NEIL
in The Count of Monte Cristo

SPECIAL BARGAINS

Men's 50c Working Shirts 39c
Balbriggan Underwear.... 24c
Men's Working Pants..... 95c
Ladies' $1.00 Shirt Waists 69c
Ladies' Fast Black Hose.. 9c
Canvas Gloves, pair, ... 8c
Lace Curtains, by yard.... 10c
Lace Curtains 49c, 69c to 89c pr
Ladies $2.50 Skirts........$1.49
$1.25 Suit Cases.......... 89c
Paint in quarts, 39c; half gal., 69c; 1 gallon, $1.35
Granite, Crockery and Glass in our Bargain Basement.
Granite Saucepans....... 10c
Granite Kettles.......... 10c
Water Tumblers.......... 2c
Large White Plates....... 5c
15c Mop Sticks........... 8c
Best Minetto Shades...... 24c
Splint Clothes Baskets, 49c, 59c
Best Liverpool Willow Clothes Baskets, 59c, 69c, and 79c.

Thousands of other articles too numerous to mention at special prices.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

S. Waldhorn
18 First Street

DR. WHITAKER ALLAYS FEAR

Diphtheria Case Has Caused Unnecessary Anxiety In Section Affected

The case of diphtheria which developed recently in a home in Cayuga st. has, according to Dr. Whitaker, health officer, been causing unnecessary anxiety to the residents of that section.

"The old belief in treating communicable diseases," said Dr. Whitaker, "has been laid aside, for, with a better knowledge of the manner in which communicable diseases are transferred from one person to another, we are better able to make regulations for the control of contagious diseases during the school year.

"The old practice of closing the schools in the presence of contagious disease has given way to more modern methods. It is generally understood by sanitarians that the method of transmitting communicable diseases from one to another is by contact, either directly or indirectly with the secretions, which contain the infective bacteria, and not to any extent from the air, as formerly supposed.

"Fumigation, so long practiced, according to the best opinions in medical circles is of practically little value. The only precaution necessary in cases of diphtheria and scarlet fever is that the patient be kept away from others, that no secretion expelled from the surface of the body of the patient comes in contact with that of other persons. In that way and in no other is it possible for a person to become infected with scarlet fever and diphtheria."

Dr. Whitaker stated further that the local case of diphtheria had been treated with every precaution laid down in the ruling of the best medical authorities, and that any uneasiness felt by the residents of that section is entirely unnecessary.

LOCAL WOMEN ATTEND AMARANTH CONVENTION

Mrs. Fred Scholz and Mrs. Frank Richardson left for Syracuse this morning to attend the annual state convention of the Order of Amaranth.

Mrs. Patchin of Rochester is the grand royal matron of New York State of the Order of the Amaranth, and will preside over the sessions which opened this morning at Syracuse Court rooms in the Greyhound building.

The convention socially will be one of the most brilliant gatherings Syracuse has witnessed for some time.

Better Paint

Better paint this year if your property needs it. Mistaken men have been waiting for paint to come down. The cost of their job has gone up not down; it always goes up by waiting; never comes down.

Better paint than Devoe? There isn't any.

Suppose one had waited 20 or 30 years ago for a better paint than Devoe; how long would he have waited? How long would he still have to wait?

The price a gallon makes some difference; yes, but not much; it's the paint that counts; the quality counts. It's the go-far that counts. Protection or property counts more yet.

DEVOE

L. P. Smith Co. sells it.

WED., JUNE 23

Baccalaureate Sermon at Baptist Church; Class Night at Quirk; Commencement at Baptist Church

Next week in the city public schools will occur the final examinations—regents in the High school and local examinations in the grades.

Commencement week will be ushered in by the usual union services on Sunday evening, June 20, at the new Baptist church. The graduating class has invited Rev. Milton G. Buck of this city to deliver the baccalaureate sermon and he has accepted. The services will begin at 7:30.

Class Night

The following are the officers of the graduating class and those elected by the class to represent them in the first part of the Class Night program:

President.........Harold Thompson
Vice-President.....Eryma E. Paige
Secretary..........Fred'k B. Martin
Treasurer..........Leland T. Carner
Class Historian.....Lola B. Palmer
History of the Historian
Amelia L. Rolfe
Class Poet.......Florence L. Moody
Class Prophet......Earl D. Hopkins
Prophesy on the Prophet
Lillian P. Simons
Class Will........Matthew Erawley
Codicil to Will..Harold N. Gillespie

The prophecy and will are to be read on the stage. The other numbers on account of the length of the program are not to be read but will be printed in full in the school paper, "The Oracle," which will be placed on sale class night.

The second part of the program will be the presentation of the class play, "The Fortune Hunter," which is now being rounded into shape by Mrs. Kesler. This play is the most pretentious both in respect to cast and stage settings ever attempted by our local high school and is sure to produce some thespian talent heretofore unknown, as there are many strong characters in the play. The cast follows:

"The Fortune Hunter," a comedy in four acts:

Nathanial Duncan, "Nat, The Fortune Hunter," Leland T. Carner.
Henry Kellogg, a rising young financier, Harold F. Caffrey.
George Burnham, a promoter, Edward Markey Pullen.
Robbins, Kellogg's servant, Ramon F. Lewis.
Tom, a newsboy, Bernard Reswick.
Village Characters:
Sam Graham, druggist, Marshall G. Penfield.
Mr. Lockwood, banker, Earl D. Hopkins.
Tracey Tanner, liveryman's son, Harold Sholz.
Pete Willing, sheriff, Harold N. Gillespie.
Mr. Sperry, drummer, Harry J. Lynch.
"Wally," tailor,....Fred'k B. Martin
"Hi," old inhabitant...Howard Shaff
Herman, errand boy, Edward Sullivan
Roland Barnett, bank clerk, Harold Thompson.
Betty Graham, druggist's daughter, Florence L. Moody.
Josephine Lockwood, banker's daughter, Eryma E. Paige.
Angie, friend of Josie, Rose A. Walsh

Commencement

Commencement exercises will be held on Wednesday evening, June 23, commencing at 8 o'clock in the Baptist church.

The commencement address this year will be given by Rufus Everson King. His subject will be "The Laurel Wreath and Palm," an adaptation for Commencement addresses. Mr. King comes very highly recommended and his address will be of a high type—persuasive, effective, inspiring.

The valedictory will be given by Harold Thompson—the president of the class and the leader in scholarship; the salutatory by Lillian P. Simons, the second highest in scholarship. The prizes will be awarded to the successful contestants in the recent prize speaking contest: First prizes to Harold F. Caffrey and Lillian P. Simons, and second prizes to Leland T. Carner and Jessie B. Wilcox.

The history prizes given by the Kayendatsyona chapter D. A. R.—four in number—will be awarded to the best pupils in history during the past year from the Fourth St., Phillips St., State St. and Erie St. schools.

Diplomas will be presented to the

The Orchestra

The High school orchesra will furnish music for both class night and commencement.

Mrs. L. R. Owens as director and leader, has the members well trained for these events.

The personnel of the orchestra follows:

First Violin........Mrs. L. R. Owens
First Violin........Harold Gillespie
Second Violin........Evadne Austin
Second Violin........Joseph Keenan
Coronet......Prof. Jesse A. Lawton
Flute..................Earl Lawton
Flute................Albert Sanford
Clarinet..............Ralph Ferguson
'Cello...............Phillips Calkins
Drums..............Richard Murphy
Piano.......Miss Katherine Sullivan

Reserved tickets for both Class Night and Commencement are now on sale at The Quirrk box office.

Regents' Exams. in High School

The following the schedule of the State Regents' examinations to be given in the city schools next week.

Any pupil from another school wishing to take any of these examinations will be accommodated providing a note directed to Prin. L. D. Wilcox is brought from the teacher stating the subject or subjects the teacher considers the pupil qualified to try.

Monday A. M.—Geography, elem. algebra, inter. algebra, solid geometry, adv. algebra, adv. bookkeeping.

Monday P.M.—Spelling, anc. history, Amer. history, shorthand 1 and 2, chorus singing.

Tuesday A.M.—Arithmetic, pl. geometry, adv. arithmetic, com'l. arithmetic, chemistry, physics, typewriting.

Tuesday P.M. — Elem. English, English 3, English, three years, trigonometry.

Wednesday A.M.—Biology, Latin 3, com'l law, drawing, elem. representation.

Wednesday P.M.—Elem. U. S. history, English history, elem. bookkeeping, business writing.

Thursday A.M.—Latin 2, Latin 4, com'l geography, mechanical drawing.

Thursday P.M.—English 2, English grammar, English 4, com'l English.

Friday A.M.—German 2, 3.

Friday P.M.—French 2, 3.

Notes

The following members of the Fulton High School graduating class tried the State Scholarship Examinations to Cornell University at Oswego last Saturday: Bernard S. Reswick, Margaret K. Clark, and Lillian P. Simons.

Reserved seat tickets for the High school Class Play, "The Fortune Hunter," are now on sale at The Quirk.

BRICKLEY BACK, BETTER THAN EVER

Athletes who have been discouraged out of competition, following operations for appendicitis, can take hope from the case of Charles Brickley of Harvard, believed by many before his operation last fall, to have been the most valuable man to his football team that ever made good.

Brickley was supposed to be "done" for all time, following the surgical carving. He broke into the football game against Yale, long enough to get his letter—which was about two minutes. But that was the end of his gridiron career.

Now, however, Brickley bobs up in competition of two sorts—and makes good. In a recent meet with Yale, Brickley finished second in the shot-put, and was converted into a winner when Roos, the Yale man who wont the event, was disqualified.

Wednesday Brickley again came back and starred in the baseball game against Williams, his sensational fielding contributing to a 4-0 victory. He made hisl ittle hit in three times up and stole a base.

Baseball is no child's play and the fact that Brickley is able to resume athletics indicates that the weakening effects of the appendix operation have been exaggerated.

ZION'S VESTRYMEN TALK NEW CHURCH

The regular monthly meeting of the vestry of Zion church will be held at 8 o'clock this evening at the rectory 240 Cayuga st. Very important business in regard to the building of the new church is to be considered at this meeting.

Keep Hanford's Balsam in your stable.

Reliable Merchandise
at Reasonable Prices
THE LARGEST STOCK IN OSWEGO COUNTY

ONE PRICE TO ALL. EVERY PRICE MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES. EVERY ARTICLE GUARANTEED TO GIVE SATISFACTION, MONEY REFUNDED ON ANY SALE.

These are a few of the inducements we offer to our patrons, besides the Special Lots of merchandise which we buy for the benefit of our patrons and offer them AT or LESS than usual cost to merchants. Watch our windows for some of these Specials; others are displayed only on our counters, so be sure and call in every time you are down town—you might find just what you are in need of—at a great saving in price.

GIFTS FOR THE BRIDE OR GRADUATE

Our store is full of useful articles in the line of FURNITURE, RUGS, PIANOS, CHINA DINNER SETS, CUT GLASS, SILVERWARE, JEWELRY, DRY GOODS, OIL, GAS or ELECTRIC LAMPS—hundreds of other articles—all reasonably priced.

WHY BUY ELSEWHERE AND PAY MORE WHEN YOU CAN BUY IT FOR LESS AT

M. Katz & Co.'s

Fulton Keynotes

Mrs. W. A. Butts of S. 4th st. has as her guest her sister, Miss Leslie Rose of Sodus.

* * *

Mrs. C. W. Thompson is ill at her home, West River road.

* * *

Mrs. J. J. Morrill and her father, A. D. Clark, have returned from a trip to Ohio.

* * *

The picnic of the West Side P. T. Embroidery club which was to have been held Saturday, June 12th, has been indefinitely postponed.

* * *

Mrs. A. Burt of West 4th st. visited friends in Minetto Tuesday.

* * *

Miss Bogue of East 1st st., left last night for New Yorrk where she was called by the illness of a friend.

* * *

Friday morning chapel will be held at the High school, at which the High school orchestra will render several selections.

* * *

Mrs. A. D. Clark of S. 4th st. has returned from Wisconsin where she has been visiting friends and relatives for the past month.

FULTON MAN TAKES SYRACUSE BRIDE

Glenn Larkin Chesbro, of 409 State st. and Miss Dorothy Seabrook of Syracuse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Seabrook of that city were married today at the home of the bride's parents in E. Fayette st.

Rev. H. D. Holmes of this city performed the ceremony, and Miss Ethelyn Stohrer and Fred Chesbro were the attendants.

All Kinds of
GARDEN SEEDS
By the ounce or pound at
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Up-to-Date Tailoring

in all its branches. Let me convince you by giving me a trial. The slogan "TRADE AT HOME" is good, but why not practice what you preach?

M. J. FELDMAN
Merchant Tailor
Over Whitaker and Bogardus
2d and Cayuga

JUNE SUIT AND COAT SALE at the NEW YORK SHOP

Our entire stock of SUITS AND COATS are on sale for FRIDAY and SATURDAY
at your selection ....$10.00 each

Garments that sold ordinarily for $12.50, $15.00, $17.50, $19.50 and $25.00.

M. J. McDONALD & CO.
FULTON ONEIDA ST.

A Conversation

"Ironing out of doors? Well, you are original!" "Oh, not at all. Everyone is getting these Electric Flat Irons nowadays. Just connect it to the nearest light fixture, turn the switch and go ahead. So simple and so much better than poking over a hot stove." "Splendid! I'll get one today. Thank you so much for telling me."

Let us put one in on trial.

THE ELECTRIC CO.
PHONE 144

D/34

The Newspapers Published in Fulton

Are the real and only legitimate means to secure the kind of publicity that will work in true harmony with the elaborate program mapped out by the

New Chamber of Commerce

¶ The protracted dullness in retail business circles is positive proof that the merchants of this city must invest their advertising appropriations in the papers that have the "home touch"—the papers that are welding in concrete fashion the buying public in the fertile farming country lying contiguous to this city.

MR. BUSINESS

Has been very sick. He should recover, and the way to recover is to turn our faces from the fixed starings we've been giving to a popular idol, a single industry, and fix our eyes upon the farmer and the buyer from the North, the South, the East and the West of us. The farmer of today is the man who can do a lot toward making Mr. Business in this city a well man, but you must use your home papers—the papers that are near to the people—to reach the great buying public living beyond the city's limits.

MR. MERCHANT

The Fulton Evening Times is "A Herald of Progress"

ITALY BY JOINING WAR CUTS OFF KAISER'S BIG SUPPLIES SOURCE

Deprivation of Raw Materials Is What Germany Most Fears From Latest Addition to Her Foes.

Labor Market In United States May Be Greatly Affected If Italians Here Are Called Home.

WHAT Germany fears most from Italy's entrance into the war is not so much an addition to the number of her foes in the field as the completion of her isolation from the rest of the commercial world, dispatches from Berlin say. Misgivings as to Roumania are based on similar apprehensions.

All the military contingencies in relation to Italy's intervention have long since been foreseen and provided for it is declared. But through Italy Germany has had access to many neutral sources of supplies, especially the two Americas. The anxiety of Germany touches its growing shortage of raw materials.

The offices of the Hamburg-American line and the North German Lloyd throughout Germany have been branch agencies of all the Italian shipping companies since August. The trade in imports by this means was enormous before the declaration of the British blockade and even since then has been considerable. With Italy in the field on the side of the allies this door for the entrance of raw materials has closed with a bang.

Raw Materials Grow Scarce.

Despite all efforts and notwithstanding the efficiency of the German organization it is undoubtedly true that the important raw materials are becoming increasingly scarce. Thus the textile industry in the Chemnitz district is affected by a lack of cotton; the electrical industry is affected by a lack of copper and other metals. There is no real lack of copper for the manufacture of ammunition yet, but the considerable stock of that must soon begin to feel the drain.

Recently the authorities ordered an inventory of the stock of copper and other metal articles in the empire which may be used for ammunition. It has been ordered that none of these articles be sold without authority, but this measure was thought chiefly precautionary.

As the famine of raw materials grows German industries will not improbably be reduced to the condition of Hamburg, which today is a dead city. The country is now consuming its stored commodities, which cannot be replaced while production is gradually slackening except with regard to the materials used in military operations. Even among manufacturers and business men who regard the military situation with complacency there is a keen perception of the danger impending.

Use Violent Language.

The German newspapers were not allowed to attack Italy editorially or in their news columns. But the private vituperation and violent doctrine of hate against England, preached even in pulpits, are nothing compared with the unmeasured language used privately against Italy.

In many respects Germany has been able to call upon her scientists for help where the pinch of the embargo was felt, and she did not call in vain. Her scientists have literally reached out into the air and done their importing from the atmosphere.

Thus when the embargo on the importation of Chilean saltpeter threatened a shortage of nitrates for the gunpowder industry the "mobilized scientists" of the empire promptly worked out a way by which the necessary nitrates could be produced from the nitrogen of the atmosphere by means of electricity. Two plants now produce more than twice the amount needed for Germany's great consumption of explosives, and the remainder is used for fertilizer.

One of the results of the efforts of the allies to starve Germany has been to cut off her large imports of nitrogenous food for her farm animals. Germany has plenty of forage, but the supply of oats, barley and other grains has always been dependent on Russia and even America. For months the feeding of horses and cattle has been a problem.

But the scientists of the Berlin Institute of Fermentation have now discovered a method of getting the necessary nitrogenous foods out of the atmosphere. Before the war few dreamed that such gold mines existed in the air.

New Food From Sugar.

Sugar, of which Germany has a superabundance in the form of sugar beets, is the basis for the new food. The sugar is mixed with ammoniac, lime and magnesium salts. To this is added yeast—just such as mother puts into her cakes—and the whole is exposed to a strong current of air. The yeast cells begin to work at once and convert the compound into a product that is called 50 per cent pure albumen.

The product, it is asserted, is an excellent substitute for oil cake, barley and other rich and rarer cattle foods. It is said to be especially valuable for horses.

But the scientists cannot provide everything which has been going in through the ports of Italy, and soon the effects must be felt.

On the other hand, Italy looks cheerfully forward to making her share in the war more than pay its cost. According to dispatches from Rome, the Italian cabinet estimated that taking up arms would mean an outlay of at least $400,000,000 and the loss of probably 500,000 men. That did not dismay them, though the country was still paying off the cost of the Tripoli war and could not afford further expenditure. They foresaw profit in the present war.

Italy's wealth is estimated at about $15,000,000,000, of which 2 per cent is used for the payment of national debts and military expenses or defense. The wealth of Trent, Trieste and Istria, with Fiume, is estimated at about $1,000,000,000.

To Regain Italia Irredenta.

Thus after the war, should these provinces become Italian and the same system of taxation be applied, they will contribute $20,000,000 a year toward the expenses incurred by Italy for their redemption. The yearly contribution from the recovered provinces will be sufficient to cover a debt of $400,000,000 at 5 per cent interest.

With the possession of Trieste and Pola and Fiume, Italy will dominate the Adriatic, her mercantile navy will be doubled, her commercial activity will penetrate toward the east, where a new economic era is dawning and new fields for Italian emigration will be opened.

However great the sacrifices in men and money may be, the Italian enthusiasts for war say they will always be out of proportion to the results obtained by the recovery of Italia Irredenta and in other directions.

Entrance into the war will have a farreaching effect upon economic conditions in the United States also. Statisticians in various departments of the government are making a special study of the immediate results noticeable in this country.

Will Affect United States.

The first effect to be felt in the United States will be upon the labor market, especially along the Atlantic coast. The labor "liquidation," which has been progressing in the United States for several years as a result of the worldwide depression, may end immediately and be followed by a shortage in certain branches of the labor market as a result of the decision of the Italian government.

Many great projects throughout the country and several in New York may be interfered with as a result of the drain upon the labor market consequent upon the transportation of Italians of fighting age.

In the United States there are more than 2,000,000 men of Italian birth. It is estimated here that at least 35 per cent and probably 45 per cent of this number are Italian reservists, who are honor bound to join the colors. The names of this legion are contained in the files of the Italian embassy and the various consulates throughout the country.

General Ricciotti Garibaldi is reported to have said to a correspondent at Rome: "We shall not call Italians from the United States. You can say to the Italians in America that if they desire to fight for liberty they must come of their own free will."

But if the reservists are called, and it is assumed they will be, all who should refuse to honor the call to the colors would thereafter be unable to return to Italy. This stipulation is expected to have great weight in determining their course. Thousands have already registered as ready to go back.

Nearly All Return Home.

It is generally conceded that most of the Italian immigrants who come to the United States do so in the expectation that a few years of hard work will enable them to put aside enough to return home and live in virtual independence. Statistics gathered by experts in the department of commerce show that many Italians who come to the United States do so for the purpose of saving $1,000 or $1,500, so that they may go home and live in comfort.

The census of 1910 enumerated 1,343,125 Italian born people in this country, and since that time about 700,600 have come over and are now residing here. In 1910 there were 340,770 Italians in New York. It is estimated now that there are about 450,000 in New York city and more than 500,000 in New York state, 40,000 in Newark and 4,000 in Jersey City.

There is naturally considerable speculation over the probable effect on American trade, both export and import. Italy has already become a purchaser of vast quantities of supplies in the United States, and it is expected these will be increased as her operations proceed. It has been suggested that the probabilities are that Italy's exports to the United States will be decreased with the absorption of so many of her productive laborers into the field armies. This of course would have the effect of further lessening the United States customs revenues, which already have decreased to an extent that may require a special session of congress.

A Deathbed Triumph

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

An old man lay on the bed of death. A doctor sat by him intent upon some method of saving his life. An entirely different problem was in the mind of the sufferer.

"Doctor," he said presently, "can't I die for a short time, then come to life again for a certain purpose?"

"What purpose?" asked the doctor.

The invalid cast his eyes about the room to see that no one was present, then, stretching forth his hand, drew the doctor to him and whispered what he had to say. When he came to a pause the doctor said:

"I have suspected as much."

"Can it be done?" asked the invalid.

"It can be tried."

Some more conversation followed, in which the doctor gave the sick man instructions, and the sick man did the same by the doctor. Then the latter ended the matter by saying:

"Are you ready?"

"Yes."

The doctor took from his medicine case a tablet and placed it in the patient's mouth.

The sick man, who was lying on his back, stared at the ceiling, immovable. The doctor went hurriedly to the door and opened it. There stood the wife of the invalid.

"Madam," said the doctor, "I fear that your husband is dead."

The woman hurried into the room and stood over the sickbed for a few moments looking down into the pale face. The doctor, who was beside her, closed the eyes of her husband, then led her away, saying:

"This has been a long trial to you. Your watch is now over. Go and rest yourself."

She suffered herself to be led away and within an hour was in bed and asleep.

Paul Markham passed away at dawn the next morning. Preparations were made for the funeral, which was held three days later, and on the fourth day his widow, who was his second wife, and her two children by a former husband, all dressed in deep mourning, entered the drawing room of the house in which Mr. Markham had died and took seats. A number of other persons, including a lawyer, entered, and when all were seated the attorney unfolded a document and was about to begin its reading when Dr. Blanchard, who had attended the deceased, entered in company with a girl of fifteen. There was about her a melancholy that savored of despair.

"I have here," said the lawyer, "the last will and testament of Paul Markham, deceased, executed one year ago."

He then read the will, which left all his property to his beloved wife, Jane Markham, trusting that she would sufficiently provide for his daughter, Ethel Markham. Having stated that the will had been duly signed and witnessed, he added that it would be immediately filed for probate. He was refolding the document when Dr. Blanchard arose and, drawing a paper from his pocket, said:

"I have a will executed a few hours before Paul Markham's death."

The widow's countenance changed immediately.

"If you have any such will," she said, "it is a forgery. At any rate it was not witnessed. That I know, because I was in attendance upon my husband every day and hour during his last illness, and I know no one who could have witnessed a will entered the house."

"What time did you go to bed the night your husband died?" asked the doctor.

"At 10 o'clock."

"Your husband did not die till 2 o'clock the next morning."

"He died at 9 o'clock in the evening. You called me into the room where he lay and told me he was dead."

"I told you I feared he was dead. He was very low. He revived, and at midnight I drew this simple will for him, bequeathing all his property to his daughter, Ethel Markham. Two persons came at my call and witnessed the will while you were asleep."

The woman stared at the doctor, although she could hardly believe her senses. For years she had dominated her husband and for a year, since she had forced him to make a will in her favor, had watched him carefully to make sure that he did not make another. At the very end of his life he had outwitted her.

"Let me see it," she said to the doctor.

He held the paper before her. She read it and recognised her husband's signature, though it had been written in the agony of death. Realising that she had been foiled, she arose from her seat and, followed by her two children, stalked out of the room.

Dr. Blanchard by the terms of the deathbed will was made Ethel's guardian, and she thereafter made her residence with him. Her life had been nearly crushed out of her by her stepmother, and it required some time to restore her to a healthy state of mind and body. But by the time she came of age she was completely recovered, for her surroundings as a member of the doctor's family were all that could be desired, and he knew how to treat her to her advantage professionally. In his old age his savings of years were swept away in a commercial panic, and Ethel Markham provided for him and those of his family who were still too young to take care of themselves.

On the Hill of Golden Sands

The Good Luck That Came to Grandfather Chang.

By HELEN ROOT

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Just outside the Chinese village near the common well all the men stood listening to faint reverberations from the west.

"Ho!" Grandfather Chang stood with short legs firmly planted, puffing out his fat, old yellow cheeks oracularly. "You hear only thunder. There will be no war. The young men nowadays have neither the wit nor courage for it. Now, in my young day when I went to Manchuria"—

The villagers had heard the tale before.

"Ay, yah!" The blacksmith and the carpenter jeered together. "When you went to Manchuria, grandsire, the women hid the ducks. But show us how you fight on an empty belly before spring."

The indignant patriarch waddled off. In China war and famine threatened. From the cities came mutterings of a threatened uprising against the hated Manchu rule; while throughout the provinces floods had spoiled the early crops, and now, in autumn, heavy rains were falling and the late ripening millet lay rotting on the ground.

But cunning Chang had found a way to save himself and family from need. "In Shanghai," he had said to his only son, Li the Lateborn, a gaunt, slow witted, kindly giant, "are secret companies that send men to America. There taels are more plenty than copper cash in China. Ah, if my old legs were young as when I went to Manchuria!"

At the hundredth repetition Li's slow imagination kindled.

"Enough, father," he said, "I will go instead."

Even now Li was returning from Shanghai. His seven days importuning of the wealthy Top-Side tongsman had prevailed, and he would start within a fortnight for America, the forbidden Golden Hill of coolie hopes.

Patiently he trudged the sixty miles toward home, thinking of the approaching parting from his parents, his wife, and five little sons, till on the morning of the fourth day he rounded a jutting chain of hills and came in sight of the village and his own unharvested millet patch.

Strange guests were there before him. The revolution had begun.

A puff of smoke awakened him to danger; a leaden spat against the brick walled praying place sent him leaping forward at a scuttling run, and as he dashed foolishly through the deserted village to the poor shelter of his mud walled home a spray of bullets caught and flung him limp across its threshold.

There old Chang found him when the battle was over, and the villagers came creeping back from the holes and ditches that had sheltered them. His hand still clutched the tongsman's sign, a pledge of secret passage to Tai Fow, the great city which other races call Chicago. He had been dead for hours.

Other villagers had suffered loss, but the Changs faced utter ruin. The house was gone; the crop—poor enough at best—was gone; the breadwinner was gone.

IN HIS BONES HE FELT THE WEIGHT OF EACH CONDEMNING YEAR.

"Now only I, a fat, old, useless hulk," thought Chang, chastened to unwonted humility by his son's dead face, "am left to save the women and the little ones from death by cold and hunger."

"Come," he said to Nai Nai, his wrinkled wife, and to Li's widow as they wailed beside the dead, "salt water mends no broken vessels, and for all other things I can find a way. Let us first take up him who has gone on high and lay him under cover of this shed."

That done they dug amid the wreckage until they found the jar of millet laid away for next year's planting—by most sparing usage it might sustain the elders and the children for eight weeks at most—then in the corner of the roof and walls still standing they reared a flimsy shelter against the wind and rain.

"And now," said Chang, "I will take this tongsman's sign and go in my son's place to the Golden Hill."

But, for all his brave talk, Chang was heavy hearted. He had no shrewd plans for American success. He even feared he might be refused access to the ship at Shanghai. He filled the wrinkles of his face with powder, eked out his scant gray cue with bits of silk and cotton rags and tried to step with youthful jauntiness, yet in his bones he felt the weight of each condemning year, and he trembled when the eye of Yan Yin, the smuggler, fell upon him.

"Ancient," called Yan Yin, "thou of the jelly paunch and gasping breath, why come you here? America is not for such as you."

Chang played his only trump. He laid the tongsman's order in his questioner's hand:

Whereas, Yan Yin shall convey a valuable thing to America at the cost of $1,000, paid thus: In Shanghai, $200; on arrival in Chicago, $200, and the rest when Yan Yin returns to Shanghai. But if the thing in trust be not landed, but conveyed back to China, the balance shall not be paid and this undertaking shall be as waste paper.

This is a written proof.

MADE BY TAM HIN.

The signature was good, and Tam Hin was a man of money who knew his mind. If he saw fit to stand guarantor for this wheezing patriarch doubtless he had good reasons, neither would he be tolerant of inquiry.

The smuggler waved the old man toward the gangway, and Chang's Odyssey began, an Odyssey that promised no return, for he knew well that it would take all his few remaining days to repay the smuggled passage and send bit by bit the thousand American dollars needed to bring his grandson to maturity.

He found the voyage to the shores of Mexico passable enough.

It was not till the smuggling party—twelve Chinese and three white steerers—began to draw northward overland to the American boundary that Chang's Falstaffian courage failed, and fear seized upon him.

At last the smuggling party reached the border. They hid among the rocks and bushes on the steep side of the Sierra Cucaros while mounted Chinese inspectors, with jingling bridles, cantered past. They toiled across the Arizona desert till a railroad town was reached. There they were stowed away at night in secret places over the vestibules of through express trains—places so little known that the expressmen working underneath had never heard of their existence. Chang and a much younger man were the last to be concealed.

Side by side they lay, with legs bent slightly to fit the short space, and with only room enough above to let them rise on elbow when they fed from the cracker box and water jar thrust in before the outer opening was resealed. Thus, for 2,000 miles, they lay on a procrustean bed that swirled and swayed over half a continent.

Through tiny cracks that gave them air they saw daylight come and go, and come and go and come and go again till far in the third night they came quietly to rest.

In the dark hour that comes before the east begins to glow Chang heard a cautious tapping on the roof above their heads. He answered it as cautiously from within.

The plate that sealed their hiding place was slowly moved aside, and he and his companion, groaning from the pain of their racked limbs, crept through and stood upright on Chicago soil.

And here Chang offered up his final sacrifice to the grandchildren and the ancestral shade. He laid his treasured but telltale cue across his releaser's hand and motioned him to cut.

For a moment the smuggler held the old, rag roughened braid as if pondering, then with a little satisfied grunt he severed it from the white old head, fumbled behind his coat, and then thrust it deep in an inner pocket.

"Come," he said.

Out of the dark a strong hand clutched the waiting Chinmen, driving their heads together. A yellow flame flashed past them. The smuggler with a yell of pain threw both his hands above him and pitched headlong to earth.

"Got you, McElliot," said a voice, "Suspected you this long time, now I've got you with the goods."

"It's you, you sneaking spy." The smuggler loosed a swarm of nasty epithets. "You've cracked my right shoulder. I thought first you were Slim Kelly; but for the few dirty dollars the government pays you'd kill a man as quick as Kelly. Are you alone?"

"What if I am?" asked the Chinese inspector.

"Here's your chance to earn more in a minute than the government pays in a month. I cashed in ten chinks today at a hundred apiece; that's why Kelly is laying to roll me. Let me out of here and half the money's yours. Eight hundred then! The whole thousand!"

"Don't be a fool," said the inspector grimly. "You knew I'm going to bring you in. Get up!"

The figure on the ground made an apparently painful effort to rise and fell back.

"Give me a hand," he said; "my shoulder's done for."

The officer bent toward the prostrate figure.

A leaden pellet ripped through his cap. His own revolver ready for suspected treachery cracked an answer. With a bullet through his breast, the smuggler laid his sullen face against the ground and died.

Then Chang, freed from the iron grip on his collar, shrieked and ran.

clutch of captor, fiend might run in hell; hopeless, despairing, from one horrible unknown to another still more horrible, knowing always that flight must prove in vain, but driven on by the inexorable obsession of great fear.

And while he ran a sinister gray figure lurking in the shadows turned and fled the other way.

The railroad yards sprang alive with men and lights the shots had called, and Chang was caught at last in the farthest corner of a high surrounding fence.

"You'll have to give me absence leave," said the Chinese inspector next day. "I'm sick, I tell you; sick. And taking that old Chinaman was nearly as bad as killing McElliot. He was hanging to the fence with his teeth and his toes and his fingers, and when I put my hand on him he—he squealed like a caught rat. I'll have to get away for awhile."

The inspector got his leave of absence, but events went on without him. The Chinaman who traveled north with Chang stood in no fear of immediate deportation. The Chicago representative of the smuggling syndicate furnished him money for bail and legal help.

He was young and strong and, bound by the peon system of Chinese importation, would soon work out the cost of his admittance. But the professional bailer looked at aged Chang with a derisive grin.

SO CHANG STOOD BEFORE THE JUDGE ALONE.

"Old buffaloes give no milk," he said. "You can send this one back to China."

So Chang, a sad and yet a ludicrous old figure, stood before the judge alone. His hands were clasped upon his rotund stomach.

The old gray cue that once had joined it had been found in the smuggler's pocket and now dangled against the mahogany of the judge's bench, mute witness to its owner's duplicity.

The trial was soon ended.

"Deportation to the place from which you came," the interpreter rendered. Some one picked up the disheveled cue, tossed it to Chang and motioned him to move aside.

"Wo, wo!" he wailed to himself as he retreated to a corner. "This is the end of an old fool's errand. Now go I home with lost face to starve before the mockers of the village. Never! I will jump into the sea!"

And yet Chang knew that when the time came he would not jump into the sea. To the very last the bit of boastful boyhood, green in his old breast, would lure him on with hopes that somehow—somehow—he would "find a way."

His nervous fingers plucked at the recovered queue, twitching the bits of rag and string that swelled its bulk. An unfamiliar glint of yellow caught his eye.

He bent a little lower with busy hands and furtive glance to right and left.

Then he threw back his head, thrust out his paunch in the old braggart way and waddled toward the judge and spoke in his native tongue.

"Eh? What's the matter? What does he say?" asked the astonished judge.

"He says," puzzled the interpreter, "'The golden hill has served. Now, great one, send me home that I may crow aloud before the scoffing blacksmith.'"

"Crazy from worry," said the judge. "Take the poor old man away."

But Chang was not crazy—the golden hill had served. Hidden in his own discarded queue he had found the treasure he had come 8,000 miles to seek.

McElliot, the dead smuggler, knew that Slim Kelly, lying in wait among the shadows, would not look for money in an old Chinese braid.

He had rolled his illicit gains, two $500 bills, into small cylinders and twisted them in and out with the strings of the queue. There they lay through all the after events until Chang's nervous plucking fingers lifted them to sight.

So before wrinkled Nai Nai saw the bottom of the millet jar Chang went back with triumph, after all, to raise the house and plant the fields in spring and bring the grandsons up in reverence of their grandsire; also to tell great tales of his achievements in America.

HE DID INDEED MISS HER.

The Professor Admitted It, but He Was on the Wrong Track.

When the intrusive nurse in Bulwer's once famous novel, "The Caxtons," interrupted the professor's studies to announce the arrival of his first born son with an explosive, "It's a boy!" the absent minded parent merely regarded her with puzzled annoyance, and inquired vaguely, "What's a boy?"

But it was a professor in real life who, some time after the marriage of his only daughter, and her departure from the parental roof, was visited by a cousin, who ventured to condole with him upon his loneliness. "How you must miss her!" she exclaimed.

"Miss who?" said the professor, with an air of amiable bewilderment, which presently changed to one of pleased comprehension. "Indeed I do, Margaret! indeed I do!" he declared gratefully. "But I scarcely supposed my complete absorption would be so sympathetically realized. Indeed, you are right; I feel quite lost without her. A most interesting personality. And as to the poisonings, I am sure she has been maligned."

"Poisonings!" echoed his cousin.

"I am quite sure of it!" repeated the professor firmly. "There has certainly been unpardonable exaggeration in their number, and I very much doubt if she ever poisoned anyone at all."

"I am talking," said Margaret, "of your daughter, Mary."

"Oh!" said the professor. "Dear me! I thought, of course, you meant Lucrezia Borgia. She's the subject of a monograph that I began the day after Mary went away and finished a week ago. I felt I needed a little something outside my usual routine to occupy my thoughts, and Lucrezia has proved eminently satisfactory."

The brilliant and dangerous Borgia was a startling substitute, certainly, for a gentle mannered daughter of modern civilization, but one less deadly than that chosen in like circumstances by the great French scientist, Pasteur.

"After all," he was heard pensively murmuring to himself when a beloved daughter had departed with her husband to a distant home, "I shall be able to devote myself to typhoid fever."—Youth's Companion.

Courage and Decision.

Timid wavering of nerveless thought, effeminate irresolution, anxious lamentation, turn no misfortune from thee, cannot liberate thee, but to hold oneself erect, defying all forces, showing original strength, brings down the arms of the gods in aid.—Goethe.

A Minority Report.

A small, meek country negro, who had always lived on one place near Frankfort, Ky., married a big domineering woman and very soon afterward moved into town, where the keeper of the local bar met him on the street.

"Hello, Gabe!" he said. "What made you move to town? I thought you liked country life."

"Well, Mistah Franklin," explained Gabe, "I uster lak de country. But mah wife she didn't lak it—and I've done got so now dat when she don't lak a thing I jest natchelly hates it."—Saturday Evening Post.

Did Just as He Was Told.

An impecunious constituent of a Chicago alderman called upon the latter at his office one day and requested the loan of a dollar. A two dollar bill was the smallest the alderman had. This he handed to the caller, saying:

Go to the cigar stand downstairs,

PUFFING CONTENTEDLY AT A CIGAR.

get a fifteen cent cigar, keep a dollar and bring me the change."

In a few minutes the visitor reappeared puffing contentedly at a cigar and handed the alderman 85 cents. Noticing a peculiar expression on the alderman's face, he withdrew the cigar from his lips long enough to inquire:

"Did you mean that the cigar was for you or me?"

"Get out of here!" was all the disgusted politician could say.

Lots of Big Ones.

A New York man was crossing the Atlantic with an army officer who suffered greatly from seasickness.

On entering the stateroom one particularly rough day he found the officer tossing in his berth, muttering in what at first appeared to be a sort of delirium.

Stooping over to catch his words, the friend heard him say, "Sergeant—major—sergeant—major—brigadier general—ugh, lieutenant general—a-a-ah!"

"What are you saying?" asked the friend in some alarm as the sufferer looked piteously up at him after his last gasping "a-a-ah!"

"Assigning the waves their rank," said the military man, rolling toward the wall again. "There have been eight lieutenant generals within the last twenty minutes."—Everybody's.

BECKER'S FATE IN HIGHEST COURT

Man Who Sent Him to Death House Has Pardon Power.

NO COMMENT BY GOVERNOR

Prisoner Has Been Quoted as Saying That He Will Not Ask His Nemesis For Clemency—Reports That He Would Reveal Other Graft Doubted. Case Now in Federal Court.

New York.—The taking of the case of Charles Becker to the United States supreme court will automatically act as a stay, and the execution will not take place on the date set.

But if Becker loses in the highest court in the land he will find himself in a peculiar situation. He will be called on in the event of an unfavorable decision by this court to go to the death chair without asking clemency or will have to appeal to the one man responsible for his conviction.

Charles Whitman was district attorney at the time of the two Becker trials, and it was his activities in this case that won him fame and kept his name constantly before the public. Whitman stubbornly fought for the convictions, which he won. He was convinced from the outset that Becker was guilty and spared no pains in fighting the case to a successful termination.

Becker has been quoted as saying that he will not ask the governor for any quarter, that he will go to the chair rather than ask a favor of the man who prosecuted him. The situation is one that is very trying on the man. Governor Whitman has not stated what he would do if a petition for clemency should be formally presented to him. The governor granted a brief respite to Becker because he was scheduled to be in the west on the date the court set for the execution and asserted at the time that he would not consider the matter until after his return.

Photo by American Press Association.

CHARLES BECKER.

It now appears that Becker is in a mood to tell what he knows of graft in New York for a commuted sentence; whereas if nothing is to be gained by "squealing" he is resolved to die game. Those at first inclined to doubt the accuracy of the report that Becker is ready to use any means he has to save himself are now convinced that this may be the case, and interest now centers upon whether or not what Becker has to tell is worth enough to the state to warrant giving him his life.

At the office of District Attorney Perkins it has been officially announced that no confession Becker can make will help him, as evidence against police officials or former police officials could result in their punishment for only a year or two in jail. The official announcement points out that it would not be serving the ends of justice to save Becker from the chair just to send another man or other men to prison for awhile. This is the reiterated view of the prosecutor's office.

Becker, whose nights immediately after the appeal was denied were spent in tortured anxiety, eats and sleeps better. He has better control of himself during the visits of [illegible] According to Deputy Warden Johnson, Becker is showing a change for the better. He takes his exercise vigorously and again is an enthusiast for handball. He had been reading aloud to the other men in the death house the most interesting newspaper accounts of the war's progress. After the appeal was denied he stopped this diversion.

Found Ring Lost Forty Years.

Long Beach, Cal.—Mrs. Andrew F. Mitchell, wife of the pastor of the First Friends church, was notified by letter recently that her wedding ring, lost in a pig pen forty years ago on their farm in Park county, Ind., had been found. When the Mitchells moved away from the farm, having sold it, they asked the couple who succeeded them to keep a sharp lookout for the ring, but they had long since given up the ring as lost.

ITALY AND AUSTRIA RENEW OLD STRUGGLE

Adriatic Sea Has Always Been Cause of Great Wars.

Washington.—"Once more the people upon the opposite shores of the Adriatic sea are in a duel with one another for the mastery of the Mediterranean, just as neighbors across this arm of the land locked sea have always clashed, for upon the Adriatic south European supremacy has been contested since the days when Rome fell heir to the sea power of Athens and Carthage. Over this waterway Rome met the pirates of Istria and Dalmatia, aggressive Teutonic tribes and pressing hordes of Slavs, over it the empire of the east sent its expeditions to attack the empire of the west, and Austria a generation ago waged war with a disintegrated Italy over Adriatic paths and for the suzerainty of the sea."

After giving the above brief review of this historic theater for the transport of invading armies and the actions of battle fleets, youngest of the war theaters in the present European struggle, around whose shores the interest of south European battles will center, through the months to come, a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society continues in a presentation of the geographic details of the Adriatic sea:

"The Adriatic sea is 500 miles long and about 180 miles wide in its greatest width. Its average width is 110 miles.

"The Austrian, or eastern, coast is broken, strewn with fine harbors and lined with numerous rocky islands, which belong to Istria and Dalmatia. This eastern coast is of great naval and commercial value, well formed for the upbuilding of great, thriving trade ports and by reason of its almost continuously mountainous shores, its deep gulfs and bays and its screening fringe of rocky islands advantageously defended. The western, or Italian, coast, on the other hand, is low, sandy and almost unbroken. It lacks good harbors and offers few natural advantages for defense.

"The commercial importance of the Adriatic sea throughout the dark ages and the middle ages was great. This importance was somewhat impaired by the opening of the all sea route to India and by the determined growths of the Dutch and English merchant marines. With the opening of the Suez canal and the commercial and industrial awakening of Italy and Austria-Hungary, the Adriatic regained much of its old time significance. The most important commercial points are Trieste, Venice, Fiume, Ancona and Brindisi. Venice and Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, are the two foremost cities."

There's a Reason For Everything.

"Wouldn't you try to get a divorce from a woman who abused you and neglected your home and thought more of her club than she did of you?" thundered the big man.

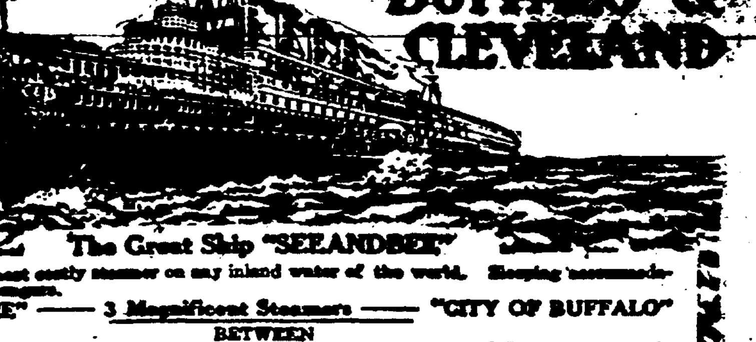
"I don't think I would," replied Henry Peck. "I am afraid Henrietta would not let me."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Coral Builders.

Coral reefs and islands are formed by the coral building polyp. These animals only live in clear water, the depth of which is not greater than twenty-five fathoms, and the temperature of which does not sink below 68 degrees F.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

C&B LINE



The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

"CITY OF ERIE" — 3 Magnificent Steamers — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents.

BEAUTY IS COMPLETE

only when the teeth are perfect. One ugly or missing tooth will spoil one's whole appearance. There is no need for poor or ugly teeth.

OUR PAINLESS DENTAL WORK

makes the extracting or filling of a tooth no more annoying than sitting for your picture. Our moderate scale of charges makes it possible for everybody to have their teeth looked after as they should be. So don't delay. Come and have us look after yours.

Bring this ad. and get $1.00 worth of work Free.

DR. H. W. WHITNEY
213 Oneida St. Fulton, N.Y.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Montreal at Buffalo.
Toronto at Rochester.
Providence at Richmond.
Jersey City at Newark.

Results Yesterday

Newark, 7; Jersey City, 2.
Toronto, 3; Rochester, 0.
Montreal, 4; Bucalo, 3 (10 ins.)
Providence, 12; Richmond, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	17	12	.586
Providence	18	15	.545
Richmond	18	16	.529
Montreal	19	17	.528
Rochester	17	16	.515
Toronto	17	18	.486
Jersey City	14	20	.412
Newark	13	19	.406

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	2	4	4
Indianapolis	12	9	0
At Cleveland—	R.	H.	E.
Milwaukee	4	8	2
Cleveland	5	9	0
At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	4	5	5
Columbus	5	5	2
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	9	12	2
Louisville	3	5	3

TEUTONS MASSING TO RESIST ITALY

Innsbruck, Austria, June 8.—Extensive preparations are bing made by the Austrians to resist the invasion of Italian armies.

General Dankl arrived at Trent on Sunday, coming from the Russian front, to take command of an Austrian army. A considerable number of German troops also have been brought into the Trent region.

Heavy artillery is being grought in from the eastern front by the Austrians for use on the Isonzo.

Allies Gain Three Miles; Artillery Batters Defences

London, June 9.—"Everything is going well for the Allies in the Dardanelles region," telegraphs George Renwick, the Daily Cchronicle's Athens correspondent. "The general offensive commenced by them at the end of last week continues with most important results. Progress has been realized at all points. Altogether an advance of three miles has been registered, and it now is expected the progress will be continuous.

"The feature of the last three days' fighting has been the extremely severe losses suffered by the Turks, and it would appear the Turkish morale has been badly shaken. The Turkish artillery fire has been particularly weak, while the Allies' big gun fire has inflicted appalling losses. The French artillery, especially the '75s,' has been notably effective."

A successful British air raid on the Gallipoli Peninsula is reported by the Daily Telegrraph's Bucharest correspondent. Nine seaplanes participated in the raid, dropping bombs on Aybasch, the Turkish base in the harbor of Gallipoli, killing three soldiers and wounding a dozen others and severely damaging the storehouse and stores.

The correspondent adds that the German submarine U-23, which recently sank the British battle ships Triumph and Majestic, has arrived in Constantinople, where the men of her crew were feted.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Pittsburgh.
New York at St. Louis.
Brooklyn at Cincinnati.
Philadelphia at Chicago.

Results Yesterday

Phildelphia, 5; St. Louis, 4.
Brooklyn, 4; Pittsburgh, 3.
Boston, 4; Cincinnati, 3.
New York, 9; Chicago, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Cicago	24	18	.571
Philadelphia	24	19	.558
Boston	22	20	.524
Brooklyn	22	21	.512
St. Louis	22	24	.478
Pittsburgh	20	22	.476
New York	17	21	.447
Cincinnati	17	23	.425

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Detroit at Boston
Cleveland at Philadelphia.
Chicago at New York.
St. Louis at Washington.

Results Yesterday

New York, 4; Detroit, 1.
Chicago, 4; Boston, 3.
Philadelphia, 5; St. Louis, 2.
Washington, 3; Cleveland, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	29	17	.630
Detroit	30	18	.625
Boston	21	17	.553
New York	20	21	.488
Washington	19	20	.487
Cleveland	18	24	.429
St. Louis	18	26	.409
Philadelphia	16	28	.364

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Kansas City.
Buffalo at Baltimore.
Newark at Brooklyn.

Results Yesterday

Brooklyn, 5; Baltimore, 3.
Kansas City, 5; St. Louis, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	27	19	.587
Pittsburgh	25	19	.568
Newark	23	19	.548
Brooklyn	24	21	.533
St. Louis	22	20	.524
Chicago	24	22	.522
Baltimore	16	27	.372
Buffalo	16	30	.348

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Elmira at Syracuse.
Binghamton at Utica.
Troy at Scranton.
Albany at Wilkesbarre.

Results Yesterday

Syracuse, 7; Elmira, 4.
Utica, 2; Binghamton, 0.
Scranton, 9; Troy, 0.
Wilkesbarre, 9; Albany, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Elmira	18	13	.581
Utica	16	12	.571
Troy	14	12	.538
Wilkesbarre	15	14	.517
Binghamton	13	13	.500
Scranton	13	13	.500
Syracuse	11	17	.393
Albany	11	17	.393

GERMANS HAVING BULLY TIME

Nothing to Do but Enjoy Life, and Norfolkers Are Helping Them.

Norfolk, Va.—The crews of the German auxiliary cruisers Eitel Friedrich and Kronprinz Wilhelm, interned at this port, are enjoying life to its fullest. Besides numerous entertainments accorded to officers and crews, the men are living a life of luxurious idleness. Their chief vocation at this time is pleasure—pleasure day and night.

They spend most of their time in Norfolk in the early hours of the day. In the afternoon they go to Virginia Beach, Ocean View and other nearby resorts. They smoke good cigars, eat the best and appear to have plenty of money. Barring a few cases of beriberi on the Kronprinz, they are a healthy lot.

The men have been taken into the homes of a number of citizens and entertained, and special services have been held for them in Protestant shurches. They are made to feel at home.

They appear on the streets in white uniforms with blue stripes and white hats. They are as neat as new pins, and their conduct is perfect. They roam the streets arm in arm with American bluejackets and visit the best theaters and other public resorts.

They are beginning to love the great American game. Several hundred of them attended a baseball game in Portsmouth and rose up and cheered a player who drove the ball over the fence for a home run. Whether they understood the game or just followed the Americans who stood up and cheered, no one but themselves knew. But there is a movement on foot to organize two baseball teams out of the crews—one on the Eitel and another on the Kronprinz—and some of the men are practicing daily. They have spent over $200 for equipment. A little short chap whom the American sailors call "Buelow" drove a ball over the sea wall in a practice game.

AMERICAN BOYS IN WAR.

Parents Seek Bryan's Help to Get Lads Out of Foreign Armies.

The state department at Washington is now engaged in an effort to obtain the release of a number of American boys who enlisted in the European armies for service during the present war. Many of these are several years under the age of twenty-one. In all such cases the countries in whose service they enlisted are releasing them and sending them home at the instance of their parents.

Among the boys who enlisted were: Karl Llewellyn, L. E. Hartman and G. G. Tyrell of Chicago; Gilbert Lancaster of Davenport, Ia., and Charles O. Landon of Berrien Springs, Mich.

Fooling the Game Warden.

A game warden heard that a restaurant was serving game out of season. He disguised himself with a false beard, visited the place and ordered a pheasant. The pheasant, delicately high, like Roquefort cheese, as all good pheasants should be, was served to the game warden, and he devoured it to the last morsel. At the end of his repast the game warden summoned the proprietor and said:

"I arrest you, sir, in the name of the law!"

The proprietor's mouth opened in astonishment. He swallowed two or three times, then he gasped:

"Wh—what for?"

"For serving me a pheasant out of season," said the game warden.

A look of relief appeared on the proprietor's face.

"Oh," he said, "that wasn't pheasant! It was crow."—Exchange.

What She Feared.

Some time ago a gas main was laid along a country road, and many residents took advantage of it to more modernly illuminate their homes. One of these was Joshua Jobes.

"Them gals o' mine," remarked Mrs. Jobes to a neighbor in speaking of the improvement some time later, "come right in the house, strike a match and light the thing without a bit o' fear, but I wouldn't touch it with a ten foot pole."

WILLETT'S BODY NOT FOUND

Canoe for Which 'Tis Said Man Lost His Life Is Found

Efforts to locate the body of Lewis Willett, who was drowned in the Granby mill race yesterday noon in an attempt to recover a drifting canoe, have so far been fruitless. Since the accident men have been engaged in dragging the channel with grappling irons and, in addition, a number of expert swimmers have tried to locate the body by diving. The search ended at nightfall, but at daybreak this morning, the work was resumed. The canoe, which was the cause of the accident, belonegd to Mr. Davenport, a local man, and had broken loose from its moorings. It was drifting down the swift current when seen by Willett, who, with two companions, W. F. Seals, a local colored man, and Louis Leibfried, were walking along the bank. Seals, in describing the affair to a Times reporter this morning, said that Willets upon sighting the boat hurriedly doffed his hat and coat and plunged into the water. He swam to within a yard of the craft, which was about twenty feet from shore and then disappeared beneath the surface. He went down twice, and upon realizing that the man was drowning Leibfried and he ran along the bank (the boat and the drowning man having meanwhile drifted considerably with the current) but Willets had disappeared. Continuing, Seals said, that he ran to the lower bridge, about a quarter mile distant, and yelled to a man on the bridge to call up police headquarters. This man was the one who called Chief Dyer from the Granby mill.

Mr. Davenport's canoe was found yesterday in the river, south of the point where the mill race enters into it. A strong eddy is formed here at the junction of the two streams and thrre is reason to believe that the body may have been carried in thes ame direction.

The victim, up until a short time ago, was employed at the Brown Pipe factory in Syracuse, and with Leibfried, a former employe of the Smith Premier Typewriter Company, had arrived in Fulton Monday night for a short visit. The two men, so Leibfried said, were to start this week for San Francisco. Willets, who is also known in Fulton as Willard, about three years ago was employed as bartender in a cafe in E. 1st st. and roomed in East 2d st. The people with whom he lived gave his home as McGrawville, a village about five miles east of Cortland. It is said that he has a wife and child living in Syracuse, but they cannot be located. Surviving him also is a married sister.

RECKLESS DRIVING CAUSES SHAKE-UP

A serious accident was narrowly averted by C. S. Hall, teller of the First National Bank, of thisc ity, early this morning, when Mr. Hall's bicycle came in contact with a swift motorcycle in 2d and Rochester sts. By dint of exceptional dexterity Mr. Hall ran his machine into the curb and escaped with minor injuries and a severe shaking up. This goes to show the recklessness of some motorists in the streets of the city.

LOCAL ARTISTS BID YOUR PATRONAGE

Miss Cook and he delegation of young artists will serve ice cream on the High school lawn to morrow afternoon from 3 to 6.

Everyone who can eat ice cream and likewise has a dime should present themselves at the school. The receipts will be used to purchase one good copy of a masterpiece for the art studio at the High school.

Miss Cook and her students merit the aid of local people. The exhibit will be free to the public.

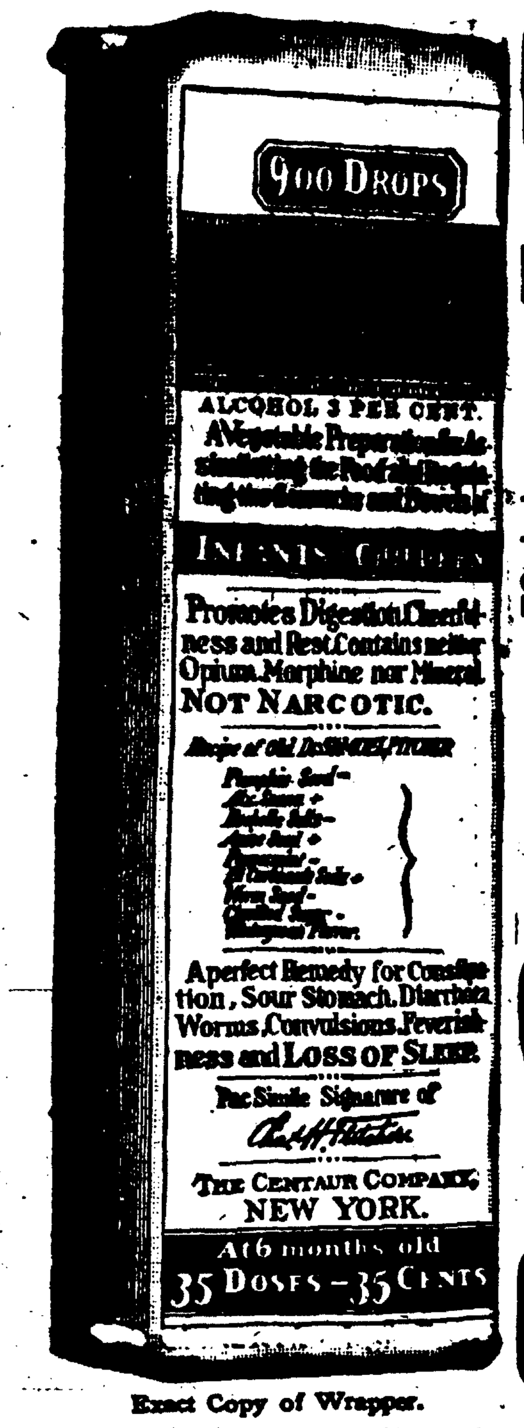
JAMES SHORT

The body of James Short, of 5th and State sts., was brought to this city for burial this afternoon from Orwell where he had been a patient in the Tuberculosis hospital for the past month.

Surviving is the widow and two children.

WEATHER FORECAST

Partly cloudy tonight and Thursday; probably showers; moderate west winds.



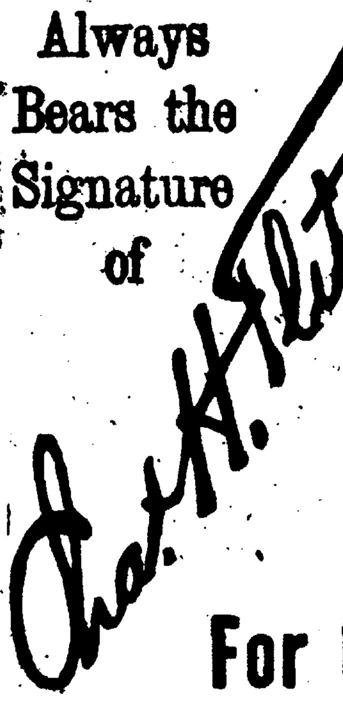
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria

Always Bears the Signature of



In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

VILLA READY TO STEP DOWN

Wants Peace, He Tells Carranza; Reply to Note Coming Soon

El Paso, June 9.—General Francisco Villa, Commander-in-Chief of the Conventionist army, confirms the report that he has telegraphed to Carranza suggesting that a reconciliation conference be held on American or other neutral soil at an early date in linew ith President Wilson's recent note. The news came in the form of a message sent to the International News Service tonight from Agnascalientes as follows:

"To the International News Service:

"I have invited Don Venustiana Carranza, as a proof of my willingness to bring about peace in Mexico, in line with your Presdent's view, to become ap arty to to reconcilliation conferenec to be held on neutral soil. A conference on the order of that of Aguascalientes would be most satisfactory.

"As I said laist year, I am still ready to resign my position if the convention demands it.

"SPECULATION," SCHWAB SAYS OF STEEL RISE

New York.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation has returned from a visit to the Bethlehem steel plant. Mr. Schwab, at the Hotel St. Regis, last night said he found the plant working full time.

Asked about the rise of eight points in Bethlehem steel stock as a result of rumors that the company was about to purchase the Cramp Shipbuilding Yards, Mr. Schwab said it was due to speculation.

"I am not the least interested in the stock market and never speculate," said Mr. Schwab. "I have not sold a share of my stock and am in no way interested in the speculating movements in Wall Street."

BIG POWDER PLANT TO DOUBLE ITS CAPACITY

Penns Grove, N. J., June 9.—The Du Pont Powder Company's Carney's Point plant No. 2, the largest of its kind in the world, recently enlarged and is now producing 250,000 pounds of smokeless powder daily, soon will be doubled in size and its producing capacity increased to 500,000 pounds a day, it is announced.

Plant No. 1, adjoining Plant No. 2 and manufacturing smokeless powder, also has been enlarged and now has a daily output of 150,000 pounds. Both plants are operated day and night, Sunday included.

PLAN TO BLOW UP SIMPLON TUNNEL

Geneva, June 9.—A man has been arrested at Domodossola, in Italy, charged with planning to blow up the famous Simplon Tunnel. He is supposed to be an Austrian agent.

He had a plan of the tunnel, which is tewlve and a half miles long and connects Brig and Domosdossola. In his room the authorities found a powerful bomb.

TWO MORE ALLEGE LUSITANIA HAD GUNS

Washington, June 9.—Two more affidavits from German sources on the Lusitania were filed today with the State Department. They followed the lines of othersp reviously filed alleging the liner carried guns.

BUSINESS CARDS.

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST., FULTON, N. Y.

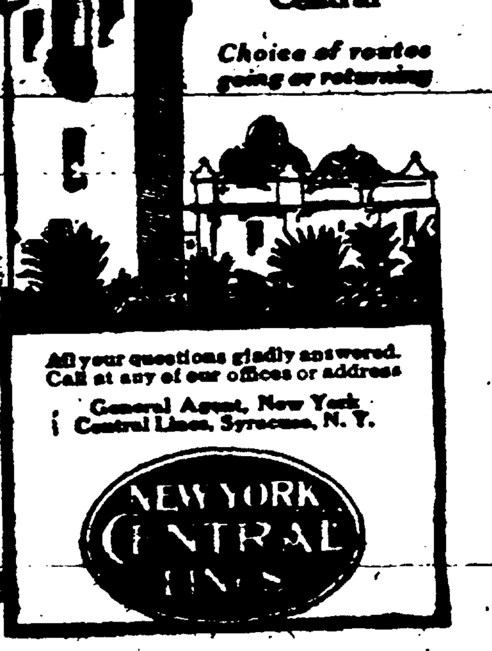
GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y.

CALIFORNIA EXPOSITIONS

$89.00

Round Trip via New York Central

Choice of routes going or returning



All your questions gladly answered. Call at any of our offices or address General Agent, New York Central Lines, Syracuse, N.Y.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 147 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1915 | Price One Cent

RESIGNATION OF BRYAN STIRS GERMAN CAPITAL

Germany Expects More Energetic American Attitude Will Result—Newspaper Comment is Barred

Berlin, June 9.—Secretary Bryan's resignation did not become know in Germany until noon today. It caused a deep stir throughout the country. The Foreign Office ordered the newspapers to refrain from comment until further notice.

It is generally assumed the resignation means the American Administration will take up a more energetic attitude toward Germany. Mr. Bryan is generally regarded in Germany not only as a pacificist, but also as a friend of Germany. He has often been represented as an ideal peacemaker.

Opinions as to the reasons which led Mr. Bryan to take this step differ greatly.

The Mittag Zeitung assumes Mr. Bryan wanted a sharper note against Germany that President Wilson was willing to sanction, but it does not expect a friendly attitude toward Germany from the President. The paper says:

"It must be growing clear to some of the leading men in America that America is playing an unenviable role in following in England's wake. America will certainly have no success with us by adopting England's stalwart one.

"Mr. Bryan and Mr. Wilson are engaged in giving reconsideration to the case. The more thoroughly they do it all the better it will be for America."

German business men in Copenhagen regard Mr. Bryan's resignation as a turn for the worse. They believe America's entrance into the conflict would be a serious matter for Germany, as the latter would thereby be cut off from all outer markets. The important allies, they argue, could limit the supplies shipped to Holland and the Scandinavian countries, allowing them barely enough for home consumption and leaving no margin for export to Germany.

Many Americans in Vienna and Berlin are leaving for the United States.

The American note is not expected in Berlin until Thursday. Germany's answer, it is said, will not be made before the arrival in Berlin of Meyer Gerhard, Ambassador Bernstorff's messenger, and Dr. Dernburg.

AUSTRO-GERMAN CAVALRY 12 MILES FROM LEMBURG

London, June 10.—Desperate fighting continues in Galicia, but the Russians are slowly being forced back. The important town of Stanslau passed today into the hands of the Austro-Germans.

The Teutonic allies are now east of Nicoll, several miles beyond the Dniester, and their cavalry has approached within twelve miles of Lemberg. Stanislau is seventy-five miles southeast of Lemberg.

In this movement, Vienna reports 5,570 prisoners were taken in one day.

While some British critics maintain that the Teutonic rush has lost its impetus, the more general feeling is that unless the Russians succeed in developing a counter-offensive on a colossal scale the entire Galician situation will remain unfavorable to Russian arms and more than likely involve the abandonment of Lemberg.

The Russian official report claims some successes on the Dneister, with 800 prisoners taken there and five machine guns, but it admits that the Germans have made progress in the Baltic provinces, where the Russians have been compelled to fall back from the town of Dubie, in thep rovince of Kovno.

A dispatch from Austrian Press Headquarters says the Russian army in Bukowina, the Austrian crownland east of Galicia, has been cut off from the Russian forces in middle Galicia and is being pressed eastward.

Stanislau lies on the line between Lemberg, the Galician capital stille held by the Russians, and Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina.

Unofficial dispatches from Geneva say the Russians have won a victory in Eastern Galicia, checking the Austrians and Germans along the Dniester.

This is not borne out by advices from Petrograd, however, and is contrary to the official German announcement of today.

Cabinet Needs No One to Rock the Boat, Says John Wanamaker

"There was no other straight road for Mr. Bryan," said John Wanamaker yesterday, "than to withdraw from the Cabinet. His chief use to the President in his two years' service was to establish the fact that his views on foreign policies were unsafe and dangerous to follow.

"A Cabinet divided against itself must fall, and Mr. Bryan and not the Cabinet has fallen. It is twelve to one in the Cabinet circle, and at least ninety millions of people outside of Washington backing the President. It is not improbable that he may have been influenced by the dishonorable example of James G. Blaine in remaining in President Harrison's Cabinet as Secretary of State while a candidate for the Presidency.

"The fact is that the position of the President and his Cabinet today will be stronger with no one in it to 'rock the boat.'

"If there is any other man there streaked with Bryanism, the real friends of real peace believe the sooner he leaves it the better.

"America's statesmen and business men are these days first, last and all the time for the President."

LANSING A MAN OF GENIUS IN MANY LINES OF WORK

Washington, June 10.—The appointment of Robert Lansing, counsellor of the State Department, to the position of Secretary of State ad interim, brings to the important position of Premier of the American Government a man who possesses many interesting qualifications. Not ony is he a great international lawyer, but he is probably a more versatile citizen than any man who has preceded him in the position.

To begin with, Mr. Lansing has had long experience in international affairs. He has represented the United States in more international arbitrations than any living American. He has appeared more frequently before international tribunals than any living lawyer. He is a writer of books, and is an editor of the American Journal of International Law, to which he has contributed many editorials, articles and book reviews. He is an indefatigable worker.

Outside of office hours Mr. Lansing is a painter, a draftsman of Great ability, a writer of exquisite verse, an ardent fisherman, a good golf-player and an enthusiastic baseball fan.

All of these things keep Mr. Lansing very busy, but it is one of the characteristics of the new Secretary that he is never too busy to smile, never too busy to be courteous and affable. There have been in public life men whose smiles have made them famous, but it is doubtful if there ever has been one who had a more engaging smile than Robert Lansing. The new Secretary smiles with his eyes as well as his lips. He may smile with his eyes and not with his lips, but he never reverses the process.

Another thing about the new Secretary which is conspicuous in these strenuous times is his remarkable self-possession. He is always cool and unruffled, almost to the point of imperturability.

The new Secretary is a handsome man. He is of good height and carriage, with neat graying hair and a small gray mustache, always perfectly trimmed. Furthermore, he is one of the best dressed men in public life.

It is one of the things about Mr. Lansing, however, that he never appears "dressed up." The sight of the new Secretary in full afternoon garb, seated at his desk, working on a diplomatic document, and puffing comfortably at a rich black pipe, is not uncommon.

It is a curious coincidence that when James G. Blaine resigned fromthe office of Secretary of State, in the Cabinet of President Harrison, twenty-three years ago, he was succeeded by General John W. Foster, the father-in-law of Mr. Lansing, who now succeeds Mr. Bryan. Mr. and Mrs. Lansing have celebrated their silver wedding anniversary since coming to the State Department.

GERMANS BURIED ALIVE BY ARTILLERY FIRE

Rain of Shells Shattered Enemy's "Bomb Proofs" and the Capture of a Farm by the French

Paris, June 10.—How German troops were buried alive in their bombproof cellars by a French artillery bombardment during the fighting in the vicinity east of Tracy-le-Mont is told in the latest report of the French official "Eyewitness." The report gives the details of the capture by the French of the Quennesvieres farm.

"Before this position," the narrative says, "the German lines formed a deep salient, the apex of which was a small fortress, and both the wings were well protected from within by lines of parallel trenches which were heavily fortified. The position was approximately 1,300 yards in extent, situated in a high plateau which overlooked the surrounding country for several miles. It was captured by the French troops on June 5.

"Throughout June 55 there was a heavy bombardment of the entire German position which was continued during the night by aerial torpedoes and musketry. This effectively prevented the Germans from making repairs to the fortifications. Our fire was very effective, the two battalions which held the position suffering heavy losses, many of the men being buried alive beneath their bombproof cellars.

"We attacked with four battalions composed of zouaves, tirailleurs, Moroccans and Bretons, who, without haversacks, carried three days' rations, 250 rounds of ammunition, hand grenades and a sack filled with earth to serve as a temporary shelter in the captured trench.

"When the command to charge was given, the whole line as one man rushed across the intervening 150 to 200 hundred yards. Slight opposition was encountered. Only one quick-firer was used by the Germans, which occasioned small losses, as the trajectory was too high. The attack was begun at quarter after ten o'clock and half an hour later the first prisoners were brought to the officers' headquarters.

"The 'clean sweep' ordered had been rapid and complete. Two hundred and fifty prisoners were the sole survivors of the two battalions. The reinforcements which the Germans endeavored to bring up were moved down by our seventy-fives. Two thousand of our adversaries were placed out of action.

"The Zouaves continued on past the second line of trenches toward Toutvent Ravine. All at once the patrols, which were ahead of the main body of troops, were seen to sway and fall, although no shot had been fired. The Germans had placed a low barbed wire entanglement in the high grain field to stop them. Our men soon severed the barbed wire and succeeded in capturing three German seventy-seven cannon, which had been effectively hidden beneath bombproofs a few yards farther on.

"The whole position was captured and quickly fortified to withstand counter attacks and communicating trenches with the main position were prepared. A counter attack followed immediately, but it was repulsed by our seventyfives and quick firers. Our aviators reported that fresh reinforcements had been rushed up from Royal in auto busses. During the nightalso fresh troops attacked, but were repulsed each time. At dawn the enemy again attacked desperately our two wings, but by rain of hand grenades his fire was effectively stopped.

"We counted on the ground where the attacks took place approximately 2,000 dead. The total estimate of the enemy's losses is 3,000 dead, not counting the wounded. We lost 250 men killed and 1500 wounded, nearly all of them from exploding shells. We captured twenty quick-firers and also a great quantity of trench materials."

D/34

WOMAN AS FIT AS MAN FOR SOLDIER

Dr. Dudley A. Sargent Contends Sex Is No Handicap.

RATHER HE HOLDS IT A HELP

Harvard University Expert on Physical Training Declares His Experience of the Feats of Girls Proves That It Is Impossible to Set Limits to Their Endurance.

Women could be made as fit for military duty as men, in the opinion of Dr. Dudley A. Sargent of Harvard university, who has given more than half a century of study to the problem of physical training of young folk. He holds that sex is no handicap to military training and cites many examples of physical feats performed by women.

"Every day," said Dr. Sargent, "I am astonished at the physical and mental possibilities shown by young women yet in college and those who are already out in the world making good. Almost daily I find it necessary to revise my carefully worked out theories and formulas as to what young women can do until now I find it safest not to suggest the limits of their capabilities.

"In one of the sad stories that has just come to us of the terrible Lusitania tragedy we have accounts of several women who swam about for many hours until rescued. What they did any able bodied, well trained woman might have done. At the time of the sinking of the Empress of Ireland in the Gulf of St. Lawrence a child only ten years old swam and floated about in the water for several hours and seemed none the worse for her adventure.

Capable of Marvelous Endurance.

"All theories to the contrary, women are capable of marvelous endurance, and so on this score cannot be rated ineligible for training for military service. But in spite of the actual proof to support this contention, many persons will shake their heads and say that I am forgetting that women are the bearers of the race and that their penalty for physical hardships will be sure and far-reaching.

"Nature, in giving to her a special task—or privilege—has endowed her with the necessary bodily strength.

"Woman's sex is not a handicap, either mental or physical, unless woman chooses to make it one.

"The great stretches of Russia could show up countless stolid faced, big muscled, sturdy women, who plow fields, reap the crops, make the black bread and bear the children and who have never even heard that they are a weaker sex.

"There are in most of our large cities today foreign born women who are familiar to us chiefly as picturesque figures on the streets as they are homeward bound with a week's fuel balanced gracefully on their heads. They walk upright and easily, and the careful observer will note a sturdiness that will surprise him.

Better Equipped Than Man.

"Physiologically the healthy woman is better equipped by nature to withstand cold and exposure than the average man. Every one knows that in regions of severe climate men wear heavier clothing and more of it than women.

"To say that a woman's pride is keeping her warm as she sweeps up the street on a blustering zero day with open coat, thin shirt waist, exposed neck and thinly stockinged feet is not altogether true, for nature is aiding her. She will, of course, suffer from unwise exposure, but not to the same degree that a man would.

"But the sad fact is that few of our American born women, the descendants of our early settlers, are trained up to even a moderate degree of bodily efficiency.

"An ablebodied woman who has undergone the same rigorous training that a soldier has should suffer no more serious consequences than he from forced marches in a pouring rain or a sleepless night in a trench.

"The type of modern woman who is a product of steam heated apartments, matinees, teas and ennui is fitted neither for motherhood nor for suffrage, to say nothing of tasks savoring of militarism. But a woman of this type is in a class by herself. To be sure, the class is rather large, but the women who compose it are not the ones who will shape the future either of our homes or of our nation's destinies.

"In a frame of mind that would be ludicrous if it were not pathetic these women shield themselves from physical exertion, accept headaches and other weaknesses as if they were a part of their heritage as women and resort to bridge and similar 'light' recreations."

BRIDE WEDS IN CAST.

Society Girl Won't Let Operation In Hospital Postpone Wedding.

Miss Sarah Penner George, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. George, well known in Baltimore society, declined to have her marriage to Dr. T. Grier Miller of Philadelphia postponed, and the ceremony was performed at her bedside in a private hospital.

The bride recently underwent a serious operation and was encased in a plaster cast while the ceremony was performed.

HIS SPEECH WAS SHORT.

It Was Also Right to the Point, and the Jury Did the Rest.

A Chicago lawyer tells of a prosecuting attorney in a circuit court of an Illinois county some years ago whose early education had been defective, but who was so shrewd and "long headed" that few more dangerous antagonists could be found at the bar in that region.

At one time he had procured the indictment of a man for theft. The amount alleged to have been stolen was $5, and at that time the penalty for stealing $5 or more was imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary. For stealing less than that amount the punishment was confinement in the county jail without labor.

The evidence proved beyond dispute the theft of a five dollar note of the State Bank of Illinois, but the prisoner's counsel brought several business men to swear that it was not worth its face value in gold, but all agreed that in ordinary transactions it would pass for $5.

Over this testimony the prisoner's counsel quibbled for two hours while the prosecuting attorney listened in patience.

When his turn came he arose and delivered himself as follows:

"Gentlemen, I hope the learned counsel won't get offended if I don't talk but just one minute. All I've got to say is this: The prisoner don't pretend to deny that he stole our money, and all he asks of you is just to give him the privilege of stealin' it at a discount!"

He sat down, and the jury sent the thief to the penitentiary.—Case and Comment.

TECHNIC OF PAINTING.

Modern Color Methods and Those of the Old Masters.

Many persons think that the paintings by the old masters owe their permanency in some degree to secret processes now lost. In the Journal of the Franklin institute Dr. Maximilian Toch points out that as a matter of fact the old masters used only those few colors (madder, for example) the permanency of which was well established, and that they avoided mixing colors known to have a bad chemical effect on one another.

Incidentally he describes the scientific methods of detecting later day copies. Zinc white, where flake white would have been used, protoplasmic remains in the cells of the wood used for the picture and the transparency of the bitumen in the shadows are proofs that a picture is not a genuine antique. In respect to deterioration the author mentions the bad effects of smoke and modern gas fumes and, after saying that either light or darkness may bleach a picture, points out that some pictures that have been kept in the dark can be restored by placing them in bright sunlight.

Finally Dr. Toch condemns those modern painters who substitute the collapsible tube or palette knife for the brush on the ground that the flakes of color thus attached to the canvas will crack off and become detached. If that method had been used by the ancients no trace of their work would now exist.

The Heroines of Novels.

If I were his Satanic majesty and a novelist came to me for judgment I should beetle my brows in a horrible manner and quiz him thus:

"Did you ever make your heroine eighteen years old? Did you ever endow a maiden with the repartee of Pinero, the intuition of Blavatsky, the carriage of Garden, the hauteur of the Medici, the beauty of Aphrodite and the wisdom of Athene—all at the age of eighteen years?"

If the novelist answered me "Certainly not!" I should say, "To heaven with you!" But if he answered, "Sure, I did!" I would blast him where he stood.

For of all the iniquitous, fallacious, unfair and dangerous doctrines this takes the icing off the cake—that the female species reaches her apogee at the immature age of eighteen.—George Weston in Saturday Evening Post.

Types of Feet.

Among the various races of men, three types of feet occur. Certain pure races have one type of toe which is characteristic of each race. Thus, the Zulus, the Basques and probably most pure Celts have the even toed foot, while the Papuans, the Boschmen and a number of African tribes, as well as both ancient and modern Egyptians, have the arch toed foot. Many European nations, however, have a mixture of the three types. But it is certain that among the English, and probably among the Germans, French and Greeks, the even toed foot is the commonest.—Strand Magazine.

Reward of Writers.

Writers of nonfiction today seldom fare more handsomely than did Chief Justice John Marshall, who, 110 years ago, received $60,000 for his life of Washington. After Stevenson's death the royalties on his books amounted every year to ten times the sum he had received a few years before.

The Swordfish.

So powerful is the jaw of the swordfish, from which the sword projects, that it has been known, in attacking vessels, to pierce through oak timbers to the depth of ten inches.

The Cossacks.

No matter how old a Cossack is he belongs to the reserve forces of the "national defense" in Russia and, if required, accompanies his sons and grandsons to battle.

COMBINATION VIEW OF LIVING ROOM AND DINING ROOM EXTENSION

Design 1071, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

INTERIOR VIEW—LIVING AND DINING ROOM.

This house is artistic both as to the exterior and interior. Dark brown siding with white trim and the main roof sweeping over the front piazza give a very graceful effect. The living room and dining room are finished in dark oak, with beamed ceiling. Ionic columns extending to the ceiling give a classic and substantial effect to the division between the living and dining room. Both rooms are well provided with windows, those of the entrance being leaded. Size, 40 feet wide by 32 feet deep. First story 9 feet in the clear, second story 8 feet, basement 7 feet. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $4,000.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains 310 designs costing from $1,000 to $6,000; also a book of interiors, $1 per copy.

MAKES NEW JAWS OF WEDDING RINGS

German Dentist Works Marvels For Wounded Soldiers.

WOMEN GIVE UP THEIR GOLD

Faces Shattered by Bullets or Shrapnel Are Rebuilt at Duesseldorf From Precious Metal, With Shinbones and Pieces of Rib Taken From the Injured Men Themselves.

"You need not thank me for this. It long ago lost its significance." The "this" was a woman's wedding ring, worn and scratched.

The message, blurred and poorly written, and the ring, indicating some hidden tragedy that never will be revealed, were sent, says a dispatch from Duesseldorf, Germany, to the Chicago Daily News, to Dr. Christian Bruhn, one of Germany's most distinguished dental surgeons, for the furtherance of his work—the patching up of soldiers whose jaws have been shot away.

The patching up process requires much gold. Dr. Bruhn's clinic is free, one so far unsupported from any official source. As his fame has gone out over Germany, however, his gold reserve has increased amazingly.

A famous actress has given a heavy medallion, the gift of the ruler of a German state. A noted litterateur has donated a similar gift from the king of Sweden. Wedding rings, seal rings, necklaces, gold coins from England and from Turkey, even old gold teeth, are pouring in on Dr. Bruhn, to be melted up and find their way into the mouths of wounded soldiers.

Soldiers Made New Again.

The orthopedic institutions, where the soldiers are made new again, so that they may go back to the front, are depressing. But they cannot compare for sheer horror with the great institution in Duesseldorf where scores of men, with half of their faces left, sit or lie in a steel framework that supports a broken jaw until newly inserted bones shall have had time to knit.

The Duesseldorf institution is devoted exclusively to the care of soldiers who have been injured in the jaws and is the largest of its kind in Germany. Weekly it is turning out men who, aside from scars and somewhat impeded speech, are about as good as before the war, men who a few weeks or months before were brought in in such condition that the layman, if he could endure to gaze for long, would despair of their ever being saved.

The patients frequently are found to have rifle bullets imbedded in the bones of their jaws, bullets often that have been flattened out or twisted by the impact against the bone. More serious are the shrapnel and grenade wounds, which tear away whole sections of the face.

Each Supplies Own Bone.

Through use of the X ray the patient's exact injury is established. In a majority of cases there is some part of bone missing—a part that must be replaced by gold or by bone from some part of his body. Each patient is his own bone supply, so to speak, and generally it is the shinbone that serves. The ribs also are a fertile field. So fast does nature work that the piece of bone taken out for use in the jaw is replaced rapidly by new growth.

One patient in the hospital slowly recovering from a wound that gouged out his whole jaw has a strip of shinbone in his mouth. On top of that is a new set of serviceable teeth. The man is healthy and reasonably happy.

In dozens of cases it is not only necessary to replace bone, but skin as well. Here again each man must supply his own. Great strips of skin are taken from the patient's arms and grafted on to cheeks or chins. Aside from the scar along the line of stitching there is usually little indication of the original injury.

Each man is photographed on the day of arrival and at intervals as his recovery progresses. To the layman the results accomplished are little short of miraculous. It is almost incredible that so much can be accomplished.

URGE AMERICANIZATION DAY.

Mayors Indorse Welcome to New Citizens on July 4.

The mayors of 250 cities in New York state, in session at Troy, adopted a resolution indorsing the movement to be made the coming Fourth of July a day on which newly naturalized citizens shall be guests of honor. They urged all other cities in the state to follow suit in appointing committees to arrange for citizenship receptions and rallies.

More than fifty other cities throughout the country have now keenly taken up the idea.

AN OFFICER'S LIFE, 23 DAYS.

Briton Has but Little Chance Once He Reaches Firing Line.

It has been figured out from the casualty returns that the average life of the British officer when once he has reached the firing line is only twenty-three days.

The latest lists, which give the British casualties in a single week, contain the names of 812 officers and 20,011 men.

PERILS OF BAD AIR.

Reduced Vitality, Loss of Appetite and General Bad Health.

Air is bad when it is overheated, when it contains an excess of moisture and when it is chemically contaminated. This is the conclusion of the New York state commission on ventilation as summarized by Professor C. E. A. Winslow, chairman.

The first indictment against bad air shows that an increase in temperature beyond the normal 70 degrees produces serious derangement of the vasomotor mechanism of the body, resulting in a rise of temperature, increased pulse and a lowered blood pressure, with a corresponding decrease in efficiency, both physical and mental. In addition to this, overheating conduces to an undesirable congestion of the mucous membranes of the nose, thus possibly paving the way for colds, sore throats and attacks of various germ diseases.

The work of the commission also proves that chemical accumulations in the air as a result of air stagnation bring about a decreased appetite for food, which, in turn, must have an unfavorable effect on the entire body. In the commission's experiments the people living in fresh air ate 4½ to 18 per cent more than those living in stagnant air.

"These experiments," says Professor Winslow, "indicate that fresh air is needed at all times and in all places. While we have changed our ideas as to what causes bad air, ventilation is just as essential to remove heat produced by human bodies as it was once thought to be to remove the carbon dioxide produced by human lungs, and it is now proved also to be essential for carrying away chemical products which exert a measurable effect upon the appetite for food. People who live and work in overheated and unventilated rooms are reducing their vitality and rendering themselves an easy prey to all sorts of diseases."

WARRING ON RUST.

Problems With Which Iron and Steel Experts Are Wrestling.

This age of steel has roused a world wide battle with rust, and more chemists and other experts are studying possible weapons for this battle than are busy on almost any other industrial problem. Concrete owes much of its present growth to the difficulty of protecting steel and iron against rust.

Absolutely pure iron will not rust, and fairly pure iron will rust only slowly. One way, therefore, is to improve the grade of iron, and manufacturers now sell iron that is guaranteed to withstand rust for considerable periods. It is possible, though expensive, to purify iron completely by electricity, and electrolytic iron, as it is called, may before long be common commercially.

Surface coats of protection are, however, the favorite methods of today, and many such coatings have appeared lately. The latest one is a metal coat that can be applied on an iron or steel structure after it has been erected in much the same way that paint is applied. Finely powdered metals—such as tin, lead or zinc, or all three in proper proportion—are mixed in oil and painted on the bridge or column or other structure that needs protection. Then the painted surface is heated by a hand torch or in whatever way is most convenient.

The oil burns away, and the powdered metal melts, but does not run. As the metal cools it takes a tight grip on the iron surface and forms a tin or alloy coat, which stops rust.—Saturday Evening Post.

Selecting the Golf Ball.

The small heavy ball will go farther than the lighter or larger ball for the player who can hit it extremely hard owing to its less resistance from the air. Because of its weight and small size it can bore its way through the air almost like a bullet. In the case of a lady or a very light hitter I firmly believe they will get much better results with the large light ball since because of its greater resiliency it will get the maximum distance from a much lighter blow. So my advice would be for a light hitter to use the light ball, the average hitter the medium weight and the hard hitter the heavy ball.—Outing.

Phi Beta Kappa.

Phi Beta Kappa are the names of three letters of the Greek alphabet, the initial letters of three Greek words, Philosophia Biou Kubernetes, which means "philosophy the guide of life."

This is the name of the oldest of the Greek letter college societies. Membership is bestowed as an honor for exceptionally good scholarship. The society originated at William and Mary college in 1776, but has extended to many other colleges and universities. There are about 17,000 names in the catalogue. Members wear a gold watch key as a badge, with emblem and inscriptions.—Philadelphia Press.

They Help In a Way.

"Riches are not everything," declared bitterly the poor, but honest, suitor, who had just been rejected. "They cannot insure happiness."

"Perhaps not," replied the practical maiden, "but they at least provide means to pay the premiums on the policy!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Correct.

Jack—You say Jones is living above his income.

Bill—Yes; he gets his income from an apartment house and lives on the top floor!—New York Globe.

The nobleness of life depends on its consistency, clearness of purpose, quiet and ceaseless energy.—Ruskin.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

1914 FORD RUNABOUT FOR SALE
Has been run 1500 miles.
GARRETT BROS.
Livery and Sales Stable
North 2d Street

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

GOSSARD CORSETS
They Lace in Front
These Corsets anticipate the styles in Suits and Dresses.
Sold at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

MILLINERY
The Latest in Summer Hats
A number of Sample Hats at Half Price
MRS. F. K. JONES
210 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

BUSINESS IS GOOD
Because we serve The Best
Dinner 25c
Supper Specials 15c
FOLEY'S
Up-to-date Restaurant

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4246
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

Second-Hand Machinery
New and Second-hand I Beams and Pipes, all kinds and sizes,
For Sale Pipe Cut to Order
I. ALDERMAN
19 W. 3d St. Phone 2242

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

BUSINESS CARDS.

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices—consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST., FULTON, N. Y.

GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Friday, June 11, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Immigration After the War.

In his contribution to a symposium printed in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, Secretary of Labor Wilson predicts that with the enormous sacrifice now going on in Europe, and with the prospect of a vast demand for labor in the work of restoration and reconstruction that must be done after the peace protocols are signed, Europe will need and keep its laborers at home.

There seems to be reason in the Secretary's prediction. Emigration on a large scale is a national loss, and the movement of mobile labor away from Europe has not been viewed with indifference, as a rule, by the governments of the Old World. While it has removed the pressure of over-population in some instances, it has been at a cost which made the gains of doubtful value. Moreover, it is not to be supposed that the United States will be willing to keep its doors open for the victims of war's ravages. Its restrictions now bar out the maimed and the incapacitated, and the countries of Europe may be depended upon to impose obstacles to the departure of the able-bodied survivors.

So numerous are the elements of uncertainty that predictions are hazardous; but those who think that the close of the war is going to be followed by a wholesale migration to America to escape the burdens of taxation leave out of account the certainty that the nations of the Old World will omit no effort to prevent a further loss of population.—Utica Dispatch.

Home Rule for Cities

John Lord O'Brian has introduced in the Constitutional Convention an amendment giving to cities the absolute right to adopt new charters or to amend existing charters. The Legislature is prohibited from interfering in any way with the government of cites. This is a change in the matter of city government which seems to us to be highly desirable; in fact, this paper has long advocated absolute home rule for cities. Many states have adopted either a constitutional provision, or, where practical, a statute to carry into effect this home rule idea. It was under such a constitutional provision that the City of Cleveland adopted its present charter, and some thirty other cities in the State of Ohio either amended their old charters or adopted entirely new ones, and wherever the plan has been adopted it has proved entirely satisfactory. It gives to the people of the municipalities the absolute right to say under what form of charter they wish to manage their local affairs, and at the same time, retains in the city a management and control of local affairs which have often been exercised through the Legislature of the State far removed from the municipality.

The measure introduced by Mr. O'Brian has been endorsed by the conference of Mayors of New York State and is very strongly recommended by the students of municipal government everywhere. The possibility of the adoption of such a constitutional amendment was repeatedly suggested by those who opposed the enactment of the commission charter for this city, for with it comes the opportunity to adopt a perfect charter and not be compelled to take only such form of charter as the Legislature deigned to present. Of course, cities may amend existing charters under this proposed constitutional provision, but as the convention will, in all probability, write in a prohibition against the recall and initiative and possibly the referendum, the prospect of getting a real commission government charter for Buffalo appears to be extremely remote. The present instrument, minus the recall and initiative, lacks the very instruments which would make for its efficiency and effectiveness and on which it relies for its strength. It is doubtful if the home rule provision would tend to the preservation of the commission form as the small rulership of large municipalities without recall would be too autocratic and powerful. Cut off from the legislative body in the State, the next tendency of cities would be to a representative legislative body in the local government. That, indeed, has been the experience of Ohio cities, and that is the basic idea of the charter of the city of Cleveland—a large legislative body; centralization of executive authority, and the absolute separation of the executive and legislation branches of government.

Whatever the faults or merits of the proposed O'Brian amendment may be, however, it gives to the people of the city the right to say what they wish to do, and takes the power away from the Albany Legislature, thus it bestows absolute home rule on the city, and for that reason alone it is highly desirable.—Buffalo Times.

FOR SALE
CASH GROCERY STORE
210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY
A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of 240 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

WATER GLASS
EGG PRESERVER
By the Quart or Gallon
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 79

BUTTONED UP

We have all come in contact with the "Buttoned-Up" Individual. He is found in the seclusion of a little gray cottage, upon the veranda of a lordly mansion, and in all public places. Sometimes we go to him; at other times he comes to find us; and again we just happen to meet. However the case may be, we are always sure to know him for his unwillingness to really see and hear makes him easily recognized. How he glows in his compactness! Buttoned eyes, buttoned ears and a buttoned mind, place him securely behind the buttress of unreason.

The "Buttoned-Up Individual" is one who is a detriment to any whole-souled community. It is he who causes discouragement, criticism and indifference to fall to the lot of men and women who would work their lofty thoughts into deeds. It is he who calls the woman "funny" or "queer" who would change some bit of the town by adding a vine or shrub. It is he who exclaims, "What's that mean?" when he sees some one evincing by energy and money a desire to change some part of the landscape, not associated with his own property, into a beauty spot. It is he who laughs at the dreams of children and mocks at the ideas of the minds. A better and richer world would be ours if we all swing into line with minds as open books, and with reason dominating feeling. With ears to hear, eyes to see and a mind to read, we shall not lack of the spirit which encourages the good, and so the beautiful, wherever and whenever we encounter it in the highways and byways of life.

THE THREE CITIES

Things that build your city, that perpetuate prosperity, are the things that consider and deal justly with the mechanics and the merchants of your town.

Schools, churches, playhouses, are indispensable factors, but even they cannot exist without the toiler and the tradesman.

Anything that contributes to the welfare, the universal betterment of body and of brain; any plan that helps to elevate, to educate, to hold trade at home, builds you and your individual interests bigger.

The things that have been done in the city in which you live, to make it prosperous, are rude and crude as compared with what can be done. The achievements already accomplished are but suggestions of the possibilities before you, if you will but get the people and the press to pull together.

As a city, you have trained your years to behave like centuries, and you have done much in the past; but you can, if you will, cram more action into Scranton, into Youngstown, into Denver—if you will.

Other cities in this country are bending their backs to their tomorrows, working on new ideas for industrial and intellectual improvement.

You men of Scranton have ideas, but these ideas will never be bigger than the men who make them and work them.

You people of Youngstown know that brass-band parades only chatter and merge in a hum. You know that the lights that shine in your sky at night tell to the world your wonderful industrial importance.

You men of Denver have the natural advantages for a greatly increased population. You have the square-jawed constructionist. You have every opportunity offered. You are provided with the tools, and you know the rules. Play the game.

Scranton, Youngstown, Denver—three cities where men are thinking more of posterity; three cities that are building ahead; three cities that capital and courage can consider worth while.—Silent Partner.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

Vice-President Marshall in the earlier days of his present official position refused to endorse votes for women because his wife didn't believe in it. He has now emerged from his state of domestic tutelage sufficiently to announce his belief that mothers should vote and that "It is reasonable to infer that the demand of men and women voters can bring about better conditions than the vote of one sex alone."

He isn't guessing either, for he made his statement after his recent visit to California where he saw what men and women were doing.

* * *

What do you expect to do with the vote? was asked a woman working in the suffrage campaign now on in West Virginia. "Well, for one thing," she answered, "we expect the legislature to make the mothers of West Virginia equal guardians of their children right away just as the Colorado legislature did after the women got the vote in that state.

* * *

In Nevada where woman suffrage won last fall, the legislature has since made others equal heirs with the father to a deceased child's property. A similar law was defeated in New York State last year.

* * *

Denmark, which went on the equal suffrage map on June 5 when the King signed the new constitution, is the second independent nation to give full suffrage to women, Norway having been the first.

"If it had worked badly in next door Norway," asks Alice Stone Blackwell editorially in the Woman's Journal, "would Denmark have adopted it?"

* * *

Mr. A. G. Pentacost, said to be a prominent business man of Pittsburgh, withdrew his membership from Trinity church in that city because the diocesan convention refused to give women equal rights in the church.

Wanted by the suffragists: More prominent business men to back their belief in woman suffrage with deeds.

* * *

Governor Johnson has signed the concurrent resolutions passed by the legislature paying the highest tribute to woman suffrage as "one of the important factors contributing to the marked political, social and industrial advancement made by the people of California."

"Any disparagement," so runs the resolution, "of the cause of woman suffrage on the ground that it is not satisfactory in this state has no basis in fact, and is signally disproved by the acknowledged intelligence and discrimination shown by our women voters in the settling of our great political and industrial problems at the polls."

WHITCOMBE

Last Friday evening the school in District No. 1 had a very fine program for the last day of school. Miss Nina Russell of Fulton was the teacher for the last two years. She has done good work and we would like to have her stay, but she is studying for a higher education and will enter Oswego Normal in September. The program is as follows: Song, Voice of the Bell, School; Salutatory, Hazel Palmer; One Thing Lacking, Bernice Dewey; song, Swing, Cradle Swing, Bernice Dewey and Frances Whipple; Seesaw, Gladys Whipple, Hazle Palmer, Harriet Palmer, Bernice Dewey; The Dolls School, Harriet Palmer; song, In Meadow and In Garden, by the Girls; A Pertinent Question, Dorothy Granger; song, The Flower Song Gladys Whipple; dialogue, The Sick Doll, Frances Whipple, Hazel Palmer, Fayette Parish; song, Smarty, Frances Whipple and Oscar Parish; Little Miss Michief, Hazel Palmer; song, My Bunny, Bernice Dewey; The Way To Do, Harriet Palmer; song, Stingy Kid, Hazel Palmer; vacation acrostic; song, Graduation Song, School; dialogue, The Trials of a Teacher, Hazel Palmer, Oscar Parish; song, Vacation Song; Valedictory Paul Mullen; presentation of certificates; play, Everyday Fairies. After the exercises Miss Ethel Whitcomb presented Miss Russell with a sterling silver pickle fork as a token of love for their teacher. We wish Miss Russell succes in her work in the future.

For Tired Feet—Feather-weight Arch Supports, at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair Shop, 110 Cayuga St.—adv.

All Kinds of
GARDEN SEEDS
by the ounce or pound at
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Who Defended the Works?

By F. A. MITCHEL

When the Germans were besieging Paris in 1871 one part of the force came to the very outskirts of the city and encountered a portion of the defenses, something like a revolutionary barricade blocking a street. There was only room for a single company, and its captain before making an attack stood off and, raising a pair of binoculars, examined the works.

They were composed of paving stones, pieces of timber and such other articles as had been brought together for an improvised fortification. But the captain could not see a single man on the parapet. This he did not like. There was the look of a trap about it. If he moved his troops forward he must do so over a distance of some 500 or 600 yards between two walls not thirty feet apart and straight as an arrow. He could not deploy his men by the flank, and as for scattering along the street they would be one behind another, and a shot would bring down every man in line.

Moreover, the captain noticed a dark spot in the works, which indicated that a single stone had been removed in the very center of the fortification. He assumed at once that the aperture was for the muzzle of a cannon, which would sweep the street, doubtless, with the scattering projectiles of the period. That meant that before a force of eighty men—the number under the captain's command—could reach the barricade a large proportion of them would be killed or wounded.

The captain called his first lieutenant, handed him his glass, directed him to take a look at the breastworks and then asked him what he thought about an attempt to carry them. The lieutenant examined the works, then, lowering his glass, remarked:

"What are the orders, captain?"

"The orders are to move forward."

"Then we must move forward, but those who live will have moved backward."

The captain's only response was an order to advance.

Shoulder to shoulder, the men marched on—for, as has been said, they could not scatter—till about a third of the distance had been traversed. Then a puff of smoke issued from the dark spot in the center of the works, and a storm of missiles broke upon the advancing line of Germans. A third of the company fell, and another dozen limped or staggered to the rear.

The rest pressed on, but a few minutes were lost in reforming, or, rather, closing, the gaps that had been made. With steady step they marched till they had covered half the distance between their starting point and the fort. There was light where the dark spot had been, and they knew that the piece had been retired to be reloaded. This gave them courage. It was an old fashioned muzzle loader, and time must be spent after every discharge in reloading. The captain gave the order to double quick, but before they had covered a dozen yards there came another hailstorm, and another twenty men were put out of the fight.

This was terrible slaughter, and the force recoiled. Some stood ready to retrace their steps; others started back. The second lieutenant stood in rear and, striking some of the fugitives with his sword, drove them back toward the enemy. The captain was among the wounded and lay in a pool of his own blood. The first lieutenant cried at the top of his voice "Forward, men!" and started at the head of some thirty soldiers to make the rest of the distance and storm the fort, though the move was now a forlorn hope, for he expected that on reaching it he would find it defended by double the number of those who were making the attack.

When within fifty yards of the barricade there came another storm of missiles. Half the Germans were laid on the stones of the street, while the other half broke and fled. The lieutenant called to them in vain. Preferring death to following them in flight, he turned and ran forward to the fort, expecting every moment to be shot down. He reached the barricade and, with a pistol in one hand, his sword in the other, climbed to the summit. There he stood, bewildered by the sight that met his view.

Not a man was behind the stones. The gun which the recoil from the last shot had driven backward a few feet was there, a thin film of smoke issuing from its vent. Leaning against it was a girl about twenty years old. She looked up at the lieutenant as though expecting instant death. Involuntarily he uncovered.

"Mademoiselle," he stammered in broken French, "where are the men who have been defending this barricade?"

"I have been defending this barricade, monsieur," was the reply.

"You—alone?"

"I—alone. Through a blunder the force that was to have held this work was ordered elsewhere."

"Mein Gott! Has a whole company been driven back by a—a girl?"

At this moment a company of French soldiers came around a corner at double quick. The lieutenant succeeded in making good a retreat, hearing cheers behind him:

"Vive mademoiselle!"

Having joined his commander, he led them again to the attack and finally captured the barricade. He looked for the girl who had defended it alone, but she was not there.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

1914 FORD RUNABOUT FOR SALE
Has been run 1500 miles.
GARRETT BROS.
Livery and Sales Stable
North 2d Street

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

GOSSARD CORSETS
They Lace in Front
These Corsets anticipate the styles in Suits and Dresses.
Sold at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

MILLINERY
The Latest in Summer Hats
A number of Sample Hats at Half Price
MRS. F. K. JONES
210 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

BUSINESS IS GOOD
Because we serve The Best
Dinner 25c
Supper Specials 15c
FOLEY'S
Up-to-date Restaurant

TAXICAB AND [illegible] TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4346
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

Second-Hand Machinery
New and Second-hand I Beams and Pipes, all kinds and sizes,
For Sale Pipe Cut to Order
I. ALDERMAN
19 W. 3d St. Phone 2242

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

Bicycle Supplies at Bogue's.—adv.

LEGAL NOTICES

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF OSWEGO.—Edna I. Sharp, Plaintiff, against Leylla Newton, J. Clifton Larkin, Bridget Gibbons, Henderson & Thompson Company, Defendants.

Pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale made in the above entitled action, at a Special Term of the Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the City of Syracuse, New York, on the 22d day of May, 1915, and duly entered in the Oswego County Clerk's Office, on the 24th day of May, 1915, I, the undersigned, the referee, duly appointed in and by said judgment for that purpose, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, the 10th day of July, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the City Hall, No. 67 East First Street, South, in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego, New York, the real estate directel by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: ALL THAT TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, situate in the City of Fulton, New York, known and describel as three rods off from the East end of Lot No. 1 of Block No. 512 of the original Village of Fulton.

Dated May 24, 1915.

H. L. GILMAN, Referee.

FRED'K G. SPENCER,
Attorney for Plaintiff,
28½ East First Street,
Fulton, N. Y. 5-24-5t

SPEED OF ALLIES IN LANDING AT DARDANELLES AMAZES GREEKS

Getting Foothold on Gallipoli Under Fierce Fire Took Forty Hours Instead of Seven Days.

Thrilling Operations Described in Dispatch Called One of Most Brilliant Acts in War.

A GRAPHIC and stirring description of the landing of the allied army at the Dardanelles is given in a dispatch from Athens by an American war correspondent who has seen the reports of the foreign military observers accompanying the British and French forces.

The general staff of the Greek army, he says, regards the achievement as one of the most remarkable operations of the war. The troops accomplished their landing in forty hours, forcing their way despite heavy losses under hot fire, while thousands struggled in the glare of searchlights and amid a terrific cannonade to put the supplies ashore.

In the reports of the military attaches two features are mentioned as standing out—the careful, systematic and detailed preparation, and then the surprising speed with which the disembarkation was carried out and the foothold on the soil seized.

The plan of action was arranged eight weeks before at a series of military conferences in London, Paris and Malta. Every detail of it went through without a hitch. Concentration of troops and supplies began immediately. Thousands of men left England secretly under cover of darkness, crossed the English channel and proceeded to Marseilles to embark on transports for Egypt.

Army Silently Formed.

At the same time those French troops that could be spared from Europe also were transported to the land of the Nile. Australian and New Zealand contingents reached Egypt through the Suez canal. Finally there were available more than 110,000 British troops, including Australians, New Zealanders and Indians, and about 60,000 French soldiers, including Algerians.

Simultaneously a monster staff was ransacking both countries for supplies. Every preparation was made for maintaining a great army for a long time on foreign soil.

Alexandria was the first advanced base. It is 700 miles from the Dardanelles. A nearer base was absolutely necessary. Consequently the British fleet suddenly occupied the islands of Mudros, Tenedos and Imbros. Tenedos is only twelve miles from Kum Kale and Siddel Bahr.

England asserts a right of occupation. Greece took the islands from the Turks in the first Balkan war. The London conference stipulated that the islands should be returned to Turkey. Turkey refused to sign the treaty, and then Greece consequently continued to occupy the islands. There was a mild Greek protest when the British took possession, but it was overcome. England promised to give back the islands at the end of the war and even yet the civil administration remains Greek.

Tenedos as Supply Depot.

A fleet of cargo boats freighted to the islands huge quantities of food, scores of heavy siege guns and thousands of boxes of ammunition. Although most of the supplies destined for the use of the troops after they landed in Turkey were taken to the islands of Tenedos and Mudros, the troops themselves remained in Egypt until the final rush for the Dardanelles.

When eventually one morning before daybreak the transports steamed out of Alexandria they made a line nearly eighteen miles long. The admiral at Mudros was advised by wireless. At Mudros and at Tenedos were stored thousands of tons of supplies. Every available warehouse was filled to the roof. Monster piles of boxes and bales extended along the beach. At once the work of loading hundreds of lighters, requisitioned from half the ports of the eastern Mediterranean, was pushed to completion.

A little less than forty-eight hours after it left Alexandria the fleet of transports, convoyed by a dozen battleships and half a hundred destroyers, passed Tenedos. Three hours later powerful tugs, towing long strings of lighters, steamed out of Tenedos and Mudros and fell into line many miles to the rear of the transport fleet.

Started at Daybreak.

Just at daybreak ten or twelve boats loaded to the gunwales with khaki clad soldiers wearing big tropical helmets put off from each transport to be the first to land on the tip of Gallipoli. Steam launches from the battleships towed the boats to shore in strings of five or six. It was three-quarters of a mile to shore.

Half the distance had been covered when a perfect hail of bullets and shrapnel spattered among the small boats. The men did not reply. They could see nothing to fire at.

The boats were run on to the beach. The men jumped out, ankle deep in water. They ran up the beach for seventy-five yards and threw themselves prone on the sand behind any little hummock they could find. Three or four men remained in each boat and poled it frantically back to the steam launch, which took it in tow and headed for the transports for another load.

Hour after hour men piled ashore from the transports. The line of disembarkment was more than a mile long.

The second detachment ran forty or fifty feet in advance of the first landing party before throwing themselves flat on the sand. The third party went the same distance in advance of the second, and so on.

At first the firing line was only a mile broad. It was gradually lengthened to cover the whole nose of the peninsula. Finally the line was more than two miles long.

The first detachment took terrible punishment. Dead and wounded were everywhere. The wounded had little show. There was no place to move them. They received rough first aid treatment and were dragged to the shelter of some small hills. They suffered greatly later in the day from the sun and heat. At the close of the day the medical corps got supplies ashore and erected temporary hospitals under the lee of a cliff.

Losses Were Terrific.

Every man was at last ashore, and an advance in open order was made. Slowly but surely the allies' army covered ground. The French had landed at Kum Kale, on the Asiatic side. That was only a trick to keep the Turks guessing as to where the real attack was to be made.

While the land forces were striving mightily to make their position secure the great battleships strung out from each end of the transport fleet thundered out fire and shell at a tremendous rate. The terrific bombardment and the vicious attacks of the Australian troops won the day. The Turks retreated behind their second line of defense. They left many dead and wounded on the field. They also lost many prisoners.

The British troops built rude breastworks and prepared to hold the captured ground at any cost. The first day's losses were terrific. More than 2,000 were dead.

When the position on Gallipoli peninsula became secure the big part of the disembarkment started. Great strings of lighters, piled high with all sorts of war materials, were beached. Thousands of sweating, swearing, half clad men toiled frantically in the hot afternoon sun. As accompaniment they had the cheerful music of a dozen or more battleships banging away at the Turk entrenchments.

Many Fell Exhausted.

At dark the men juggling supplies were relieved. It was time too. They were nearly done for. Most of them dropped exhausted in the warm sand. Also there had been some suffering because of the water. Emphatic orders had been issued prohibiting men from drinking water from Turkish wells. All the water for the men came from the ships. The small boats were so occupied they had little time for water, consequently all the afternoon there was a constant cry for "water, water."

But the work did not stop. Thousands of fresh men leaped to relieve their exhausted comrades. At night half a hundred searchlights made the beach as light as day. The men worked in shifts. Toward morning the commissary got some portable kitchens ashore, and the men had breakfast.

The second day of the landing operations was, however, its real trial. From morning until dark 15,000 men worked to their utmost to get the last of the supplies ashore. Men struggled alternately with heavy siege guns and with barbed wire. The men at the front, frantically engaged in digging trenches, used up the barbed wire as fast as it could be taken to them. But the task was done.

Forty hours of terrible, life taking toil did it—that is, the time it took the British forces to land on the extremity of Gallipoli peninsula. It was really one of the remarkable incidents of the war. The operation was a marvel of perfection as to systematic preparation and execution. The Greek general staff had estimated that if the allies succeeded in landing at all the attempt would take them seven days.

DUTCH GIFT TO NEW YORK.

Amsterdam Sends New City Flag In Token of Historical Affection.

The new orange, white and blue flag of New Amsterdam, which is to be raised over city hall, New York, on June 24, will be a gift from the city of Amsterdam, Holland. An offer of the gift from the mayor of Amsterdam has been accepted.

The people of the Dutch capital are presenting the flag "as a token of historical affection and good will so long existing between the two cities." The banner will be formally accepted on June 24, the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the installation of the first mayor and board of aldermen and the adoption of an official flag of the city.

KEEP STREETS CLEAN.

There is little use in cleaning streets if it is no one's business to see that they are kept clean. Pavements that are clean in the morning will be filthy before night if every passerby is permitted to throw papers, cigar stubs and other refuse upon them at will. There are ordinances against practices of this sort. Why are they not enforced? It is true that the officer on the beat cannot see everything. But if every offender caught in the act were promptly arrested and fined a salutary fear of violating the law would quickly prevail.—Philadelphia Ledger.

BACK YARD GARDENS.

National Bureau of Education Advocated the Making of Home Gardens.

If every back yard in every large city in the country could be made to produce fruit and garden vegetables for the home the cost of living would receive the most depressing shock of all its ruthless career.

For the national bureau of education the idea is not a dream. The bureau believes that schoolchildren, backed by competent teachers of gardening employed by the public schools, can make the home garden an immensely important factor in domestic economy.

"Experiments already made by the bureau of education," declares Commissioner Claxton, "show that with proper direction an average child between the ages of six and twenty can produce on an eighth of an acre from $50 to $100 worth of vegetables. A third of the children in the city schools might easily produce $300,000,000 worth a year."

An agent of the bureau has returned from a tour of the south, west and east. Out of thirty-two cities visited fourteen have adopted the home garden along lines suggested by the bureau of education. Nine others are planning home gardens under the direction of women's clubs and playground associations.

"God first planted a garden," says Bacon, "and indeed it is the purest of all human pleasures."

THE CLEANUP MOVEMENT.

More Popular This Year Than Ever and Many Municipalities Take Part.

There is evidence that the "cleanup" movement is even more popular this year than last. There are echoes all over the country of people cleaning their homes generally, including the cellars, attics and stables, in which disinfectants are freely used. They are using paint upon everything that needs it and are raking up leaves and burning them and all other burnable trash. They are making their front yards groan under flower beds, and their back yards sprout with vegetables, the seeds in many cases given free. They are planting and trimming shrubs, hedges, trees and vines, and cleaning up and beautifying vacant lots by removing the unsightly weeds, tin cans and other rubbish. They are attempting to abolish all places that might breed flies and mosquitoes. Streets and alleys are being made to shine; trash receptacles are being installed upon the streets and citizens urged to pick up paper and refuse and deposit therein. Vacant lot gardening contests are being held. Prizes are being offered to boys and girls for the best kept gardens and lawns, and there are many "city beautiful" campaigns in active operation.

CLEANUP HELPED BY CHILDREN.

Here is a list of some of the cities and towns regarding which reports of such movements have reached the American City, promoted by commercial or civic organizations:

Alton, Ill.; Altoona, Pa.; Atlanta, Ga.; Beaumont, Tex.; Beverly, Mass.; Bloomington, Ill.; Bloomington, Ind.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Charleston, S. C.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Chetopa, Kan.; Cincinnati, O.; Columbia, Tenn.; Denver, Colo.; Findlay, O.; Fremont, Neb.; Glens Falls, N. Y.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Lincoln, Ill.; Lincoln, Neb.; Lynn, Mass.; Malvern, Ia.; Marion, O.; Mohawk, N. Y.; Montevallo, Ala.; Newark, O.; Ottumwa, Ia.; Pawtucket, R. I.; Peru, Ind.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pueblo, Colo.; Quincy, Ill.; Racine, Wis.; Reading, Pa.; Rochester, N. Y.; Rome, N. Y.; St. Joseph, Mo.; St. Paul, Minn.; South Bend, Ind.; Springfield, O.; Tama, Ia.; Taunton, Mass.; Wadsworth, O.; Waterloo, Ia., and Youngstown, O.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

A MEMORIAL PARK FOR THE PEOPLE.

Laporte, Ind., Has One of the Most Beautiful Parks In Central West.

In Laporte, Ind., a city of 16,000 situated fifty-nine miles east of Chicago, is located one of the most beautiful parks in the central west, adorned with a large number of great oaks and hickories, varieties of trees which are not common in its section, says the American City.

Fox Memorial park represents an investment of $50,000, and its establishment has resulted in the expenditure of not less than $50,000 for boulevards leading through the park and to the city, a distance of less than a mile. It contains approximately twenty-five acres, situated along the north shore of Clear lake, a very attractive body of water. From the park casino there is a fine view of the city.

The park has been open to the public for nearly two years. The dedicatory exercises were held on June 26, 1913, when the Hon. James Eli Watson, former Republican leader of the house of representatives, expressed in behalf of Messrs. Maurice, Herbert, Robert, Walter and Norman Fox the pleasure which it afforded the sons of the late Mrs. Fannie L. Fox to give to the people of Laporte the park as a memorial to their mother.

PUBLIC CELEBRATION IN MEMORIAL PARK

The people of Laporte have shown their appreciation of this beauty spot in no uncertain manner. Because of its rare picturesqueness and its accessibility the park has a large patronage. The city band of twenty-one pieces plays in the park on Wednesday evenings, and band concerts are frequently held on Sunday afternoons, when hundreds of people visit the grounds, many making the trip by automobile and many more walking to the park. The distance is short, and the walk along the shore of Clear lake is delightful. For the comparatively few who do not wish to walk to the park and who have no automobiles, bus service at a nominal charge is provided by local liveries. The park is also used largely as a picnic ground.

The leading feature of the park is the great number and variety of the shrubs and trees.

The twenty-five acres of the park are largely of rolling prairie land, most suitable for park purposes. The band stand is in the hollow of a natural amphitheater. The park grounds present a beautiful picture on a band concert evening—scores of automobiles parked along the wide boulevard, hundreds of people seated on the grassy slopes around the band stand, children romping and playing, rowboats and canoes crossing and recrossing in the changing shadows, lights everywhere, and the music the central feature in a perfect setting.

Restricting Garage Locations.

A section of an ordinance in force in a suburb of Chicago reads: "It shall not be lawful for any person or corporation to locate, build, construct or maintain in the village of Oak Park, on any site where two-thirds of the buildings within a radius of 500 feet of the proposed site are used exclusively for residence purposes, a building for a public garage * * * without written consent of a majority of the property owners, according to frontage, within a radius of 500 feet of the proposed site of the building."

In a decision lately handed down by the supreme court of Illinois in the case of People versus Village of Oak Park, 107 Northeastern Reporter 636, the validity of this regulation was sustained as constituting a valid exercise of the police power of a municipality. It was further held that the ordinance applies to garages which were in existence when the ordinance was passed, and hence does not discriminate against those sought to be established afterward.

Clean Up and Paint Up!

A little fresh paint and the vigorous use of the scrub brush make morals cleaner. Add to these a shrub or two and a neat back yard garden and you'll know the joy of living amid a new and better environment.

WIND PRESSURE SPECIFIED IN BUILDING CODES.

The Requirements Should Be Revised and Made Uniform.

How 120 American cities specify wind pressure for the design of buildings is discussed in an article by R. Fleming of the American Bridge company of New York in the Engineering News. The writer's conclusions are summarized by him as follows:

"It might seem that our American municipalities have exhausted the combinations of wind pressure and wind stress that can be made. The fact that one code differs from another is not in itself a cause for criticism, but a code is decidedly at fault when it contains absurd or needless requirements or when its requirements are not clearly expressed. To assume wind pressure over a large area at thirty pounds per square foot and then to add the sectional area necessary to resist wind stresses to that required for live and dead loads is needless. Where this is specified in a code it is evaded in practice. It would be far better to make rational assumptions and insist on a rigid adherence to them than to insert in a code improbable loadings or working stresses that will be ignored in actual construction.

"That the need of revision in our building codes is being felt by the public is evidenced by the number now being revised. Although our knowledge of wind action is limited, we should be able to come nearer to a common ground of requirement for wind bracing than we have at present. As a basis for uniformity the writer suggests the building ordinances of Chicago. The paragraph on wind resistance reads:

"'All buildings shall be designed to resist a horizontal wind pressure of twenty pounds per square foot for every square foot of exposed surface. In no case shall the overturning moment due to wind pressure exceed 75 per cent of the moment of stability of the building, due to the dead load only.'

"The paragraph relating to wind stress reads:

"'For stress produced by wind forces, combined with those from live and dead loads, the unit stress may be increased 50 per cent over those given above, but the section shall not be less than required if wind forces be neglected.'"

CITY PLANNING LEGISLATION

New Jersey's New Law an Aid to Growing Municipalities.

Effective work by commercial organizations resulted in the enactment of a new law by the New Jersey legislature last April. There has been on the statute books of New Jersey since 1913 a law giving to the first and second class cities the power to appoint municipal planning and art commissions. Such power had, however, not been accorded to the smaller municipalities.

Realizing the need for such legislation for their own community, the directors of the board of public improvement of Madison, N. J., suggested to the New Jersey state chamber of commerce the desirability of co-operating in the advocacy of a law of this kind. As a result the state chamber of commerce appointed a committee which drafted what was subsequently known as assembly bill No. 591. When this bill was printed by the legislature it was accompanied by the following statement:

"In recognition of the need so frequently apparent of more careful advance planning of future municipal improvements, such as streets, parks, public buildings, etc., and of the location and design of public buildings and public works of art, the New Jersey state chamber of commerce heartily indorses the foregoing bill and bespeaks for it the favorable action of the legislature at the present session.

"This bill gives all municipalities except first and second class cities (for which similar provision has been made by laws of 1913, chapters 72 and 170) the power to appoint municipal plan and art commissions, the members of which are to serve without pay. Such commissions are to act in an advisory capacity to the local municipal governments and are to have no power to incur indebtedness except such as shall have been provided for and covered by appropriations previously made by the local municipal governments."

The new law was signed by Governor Fielder April 6. It is believed that it will be of material aid to the many small and growing municipalities in New Jersey in controlling more effectively than heretofore their future growth and development along rational lines.

Merchant's Gift of Trees.

William F. Gable, head of William F. Gable & Co., Altoona, Pa., recently distributed to the school children of his county 25,000 silver maple trees, says the Dry Goods Economist. The gift of trees is an annual custom with Mr. Gable, inaugurated in the spring of 1911, it being his desire to make the county one of the most attractive in the state.

In 1911 Mr. Gable distributed 20,000 catalpas, in the following year 20,000 silver maples, in 1913 English elms and in 1914 white ash, these trees being selected according to their desirability for special purposes.

The daily press of Altoona has given Mr. Gable deserved commendation for his generosity and foresight.

HOME MOVEMENT IN MINNESOTA

For the Beautifying of Dwelling Houses.

A FRUITFUL PROPAGANDA.

The Director of State Art Commission Ready to Supply Models For Farmhouses, Small Village Homes and Landscape Designs—Ugly Houses Disappearing.

Because of the conviction that the state should render service to the people the director of the state art commission of Minnesota, Maurice Irwin Flagg, is ready to supply models for farmhouses, small village homes and landscape designs. The purpose is to beautify the dwelling places of the people, and consequently the entire state can develop at the same time ambition and the love of the beautiful in the minds of men with small incomes.

The general adoption of the designs, which are furnished practically free, may eventually result in the wiping out of all of the ugly "shoe box" designs that are so plentifully sprinkled over the landscape. Minnesota is a wealthy state, and it is growing more so because the farmers there are making three blades of alfalfa grow where one grew before. They are buying the latest farm machinery; they are bending every effort to conserve the natural resources of the country, and they are learning how to take from the soil the greatest possible return.

While all this has been going on the physical character of the homes has been neglected. Mr. Flagg says in the Survey:

"Practical farmers stated their needs, and it remained for the architects of the state to solve the problem of a $3,500 ten room model farmhouse. The state art commission offered prizes. It brought together a jury composed of a practical farmer, Senator L. E. Potter of Springfield; Mrs. Margaret L. Blair, a specialist in the department of domestic science and home management of the University of Minnesota; Dean A. F. Woods of the Agricultural college of that state, and George Chapman, an architect."

Thirty farmhouse designs resulted from the competition. So much success met this work that there followed a "model village house" competition. The houses were not to cost more than $3,000 each. Fifty plans were submitted. Then came competitions for a "model farm yard." Any one in Minnesota can get these plans at a very small cost, and all others they may get by paying a good deal more for them. Mr. Flagg says:

"This program in Minnesota has stimulated other states to action. Massachusetts has just completed, through the Agricultural college of Amherst, a 'model farmhouse' program. California, Kentucky, Texas, Indiana and many other states have appealed to Minnesota for assistance in formulating programs of the same character. The 'model farmhouse' plans have also gone to several foreign countries. Germany, Italy, France and Canada have published the results of the Minnesota competition for the benefit of their agricultural people.

"This better housing program is supplementary to the other work of the commission. It sends to towns and cities throughout the state exhibitions of all kinds. It brings into the state each year a collection of the best American contemporary art. It circulates exhibits of industrial art, sculpture, home furnishings, home industries and school art. It organizes home industries and handicraft classes and puts into the field specialists to teach such work. And it has been successful in finding a market for its product."

Good Taste in Planting.

You have seen some residences overfurnished and others underfurnished, and yet you know that furniture itself does not constitute the merit or the demerit of the home so much as does the distribution of the parts and the atmosphere of the place. The "good taste" of the occupants is the final test, writes L. H. Bailey in the Countryside Magazine.

To some extent may we apply these contrasts to the home grounds, particularly to those grounds that are small enough to be dominated by the residence and to have the homelike and domestic feeling.

As in the attractive residence there is some free space, so in the grounds there must be something like an open area. Let us conceive of the little home landscape as comprising only a bare surface, with perhaps a few immovable natural obects, such as very large trees or irreducible banks. On this bottom area we are to place our subdivisions—we are not to cover the area with bric-a-brac of plants and fountains and curious works of skill. The boundaries are established. The best entrances and exits are determined. The outlooks are considered. Then the house is placed; then the service areas, such as clothes yards, kitchen entrance, vegetable garden, flower garden, barn or garage. In reference to the boundaries and the buildings, planting will be established. The bottom area of lawn or original space will remain, bearing and supporting all the rest.

FURNITURE

Five spacious floors filled from pit to dome with the good, better, best sorts only. But that doesn't make the prices more than you woud pay elsewhere for the most ordinary kinds.

PARLOR SUITS of dainty elegance

CHAMBER SUITS
Substantial and Attractive

DINING ROOM SUITS
Elaborate and Plain

You will find more styles here to select from than you will find in any store in Oswego county.

A VISIT WILL BE APPRECIATED.

J. R. SULLIVAN
WEST BROADWAY, FULTON

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS ADOPTS I. O. R. M. IDEA

Watertown, June 10.—The sessions yesterday at Kiva hall of representations attending the state convention of the Degree of Pocahontas were taken up with the agreement made between the Orphans' Board of the Great Council, Improved Order of Red Men and Orphans' Board of the Great Council of the Degree of Pocahontas. The action of the state board was ratified by an overwhelming vote of 200 to 10. Both sessions were lengthy, and many discussions arose.

At the session of the Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men, at Olean, the necessity of coming to some arrangement whereby orphans whose fathers were members of both tribe and council, or the father belonged to a tribe and the mother a council, would be taken care of, and the amount allotted them apportioned between both boards, was considered. The following agreement was drawn up, and subsequently submitted to the state orphans' board, who ratified and signed it.

"That in any case which may be presented to both boards, wherein all of the constitutional amendments have been complied with, and wherein the father was a member of a tribe, and the mother a member of a council, Degree of Pocahontas, or the father and mother members of the Degree of Pocahontas, and that an award is agreed upon, that the total amount agreed upon shall be divided or apportioned as follows: "Two-thirds of total amount paid by the orphans' board of the Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men, and one-third by the orphan board of the Great Council, Degree of Pocahontas.

We are Agents for
CHASE & SANBORN'S
Fine Teas and Coffees
LA PORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida St. Hello 75

Mrs. Frances Vidian of this city has been the guest of out-of-town friends.

Saturday is Veal Day at the CITY MARKET

VEAL CHOPS, SHOULDERS, ROASTS
CUTLETS and STEWS
All from FRESH KILLED VEAL
SPECIAL LOT OF FANCY BEEF—Our Prices Are Right
FREE DELIVERY TO ALL PARTS OF THE CITY
Phone your order, you can depend upon us.

H. C. DANN
NATIONAL MERCHANDISE STAMPS—Ask for them!

F.W.LASHER

BOOKS — WALL PAPER

Suggestions for Commencement Gifts

FOUNTAIN PENS, from the best pen made for $1.00 to the Waterman "Ideal", from $2.50 to $6.00.

BOOKS in fine bindings; "Everyman's Library," and others.

CUT GLASS AND CHINA

"KODAKS" and BROWNIE CAMERAS, from $1.25 to $39.00.

FRAMED PICTURES

See the new titles in Books at 47c, formerly published at from $1 to $1.40.

FIRST ST. FULTON, N.Y.

LOCKPORT WON STATE SHOOT

Utica Man Won Handicap in Impressive Style, at Rochester

Rochester, June 11.—After countless plates of clay had been sent spinning out over the waters of Lake Ontario, after innumerable kicking guns had sent sprays of shot to shatter their flight, after hundreds and hundreds of figures had been computed on the long scoresheets, it was announced yesterday afternoon that the Dean Richmond $1,000 Trophy event, the big team competition of the fifty-seventh annual shoot of the State Sportsmen's Association, had been won by the Lockport Gun Club.

Simultaneous with the winning of this event the meeting of the best trap-shooters in the State, which has been in session at Ontario Beach Park since Monday, was officially closed. Next year the gunners will go to Syracuse and pot at the clay birds in that city for prizes and glory.

Handicap Next in Prominence

Next to Lockport's winning the team event, which victory was only achieved after a shoot-off with the Riverside Gun Club, of thisc ity, chief interest in yesterday's shooting centered in the big New York State Handicap, which was opened Wednesday. Joseph Wagner, of Utica, who had been shooting consistently ever since coming to the city Monday, was winner in this event when he made the excellent total of 92, blazing away from the 17-yard mark. C. A. Ward, of Lockport, shooting nineteen yards from the trap, was second, with a total of 90.

Although the Dean Richmond Trophy contest and the handicap were the features of the closing card, they did not corner all of the first-class shooting. Not by a good deal, did they. For instance, in a little exhibition by one of the professional cracks at the lake, Neaf Apgar, seventy-seven birds were killed without a single miss Apgar was the high run man of the with this string.

Among the amateurs, David Wadsworth, went through sixty-five birds without seeing one go volplaning to the water's surface intact, and A. C. Skutt, who has been showing much that is fine in the shooting line since being at the lake, banged sixty-four to death before a miss was chalked against him.

One of the notable performances of the afternoon was a shoot in which three amateurs, David Wadsworth, W. W. Vanderfoff and J. R. Green, and two professionals, A. E. Sibley and J. R. Taylor, shot at twenty birds each. All but one of that 100 went to pieces. It was fine, consistent shooting.

JUSTICE DE ANGELIS IN CONTINUOUS SESSION

Utica.—Justice DeAngelis has certainly had a busy year of it thus far for he has been in almost continuous session since the January term began. The most of his service has been given here, although he did preside at a term in Oswego, Syracuse and Herkimer. His January term of Supreme Court is still alive, and in it he will take up the trial of the five New York milk dealers on July 12, indicted for for grand larceny, first degree, in securing about a million pounds of milk from the patrons of the Remsen Milk & Creamery Co., without, as it is alleged, adequate payment. He also holds an extraordinary session June 23.

The Hi-Bicycle Club, newly organized, and consisting at present of twelve members, held its first outing yesterday afternoon at Reynolds Woods. The trip was made by canoe. Tents were taken along, together with other camping paraphenalia and the party camped out all night, returning to Futlon this morning.

A regular program of events for the afternoone was laid out by a committee including a big supper. William Cullen is president of the organization; D. J. Cavanaugh is vice-president and George Snow, secretary and treasurer.

The first event of the afternoon was an exhibition boxing match between Tunk Ward and Kid Meaney, who is to fight Young Ross in Syracuse tonight.

The next event, the 100-yarrd dash was won easily by George Snow. D. Cavanaugh proved to be the best high jumper, while B. Cullen took first in the 100 yard swimming race. Morris Powers and C. Raymond Kempston won the two legged race.

The members of the club intend to build a permanent summer quarters at Appleton Point and form a canoe club. A number of the young men will go by canoe some time next month to Sylvan Beach.

Next fall efforts will be made to enlarge the membership and go in for football, basketball and other sports.

WOLEVER—ACKER

Concerning the Wolever - Acker wedding which took place in Rochester yesterday, the Democrat and Chronicle has this to say:

"The marriage of Miss Irene Mabelle Acker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Acker, to Arthur Wolever, of Fulton, took pace yesterday at the home of the bride's parents, No. 471 Flower City Park. The ceremony was performed at noon beneath a bower of daisies and palms by Rev. Walter R. Clark. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Mrs. Clarence Edmonds. Miss Elly Wirtz sang "O Perfect Day."

The bride wore a gown of white crepe de meteor, the train falling Grecian style from her shoulders. The Grecian effect was likewise carried out in her veil which was held in place by a white silk band and lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

"The bridesmaids were Miss Jessie Benedict and Miss Mae Lougnot, of Syracuse. Little Helen Pearson was flower girl and scattered roses in the bride's path.

"The best man was Leon B. Wadsworth.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Wolever, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bradford and son, Leonard T. Bradford, A. Z. Wolever, Mrs. Hattie Wolever, Mrs. Clinton Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hillicks, Mrs. Herbert Spaldings of Syracuse.

"The prenuptial events were several dinner parties, a kitchen shower given by the Misses Etzel, a variety shower given by Mrs. Clarence Edmonds, a theater party and linen shower given by Miss Rene Benedict.

OUTING PARTY WAS ENJOYING TRIP

With the occupants, mostly pretty girls, gaily attired in white and wearing white outing hats, six large touring cvars drove through East 1st st. yesterday atfernoon, bearing the employes of the Aetna Life Insurance Company of Syracuse. The autos presented a gala appearance, with their pompons, and togethers with the noise which the pretty senographers could not help but give vent to, the attention of everybody downtown was excited.

The Party motored directly to Fulton, but, before returning to Sryacuse, drove to South Bay, where a dinner was served.

GAME OFF ON WEATHER ACCOUNT

The baseball game scheduled for this afternoon between the local high school team and Oswego Normal, at Oswego, will probably have to be called off on account of the rain.

North high has a game here tomorrow with Fulton High, and it is hoped the grounsd will be in condition for a game.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED

Arthur G. Gilbert of 3d and Rochester sts., issued cards today announcing the coming marriage of his daughter Kate to Arvin Lewis Rice, attorney and the junior partner in the law firm of Wilson and Rice. Wednesday evening, June 20, is the date set for the ceremony which will take place at 221 Rochester st.

"NOBBY TREAD" TIRES

The Largest Selling High-grade Anti-skid Tires in the World

They are sold under the U. S. Tire Company's regular warranty—perfect workmanship and material—but any adjustment is on basis of 5,000 miles.

Your Dealer
L. P. SMITH CO.
EAST FIRST ST. FULTON

PURE ICE CREAM
THE RICHEST AND MOST SANITARY

Served at our Fountain and Tables. Made with Heavy Cream, the Best Flavors and Fresh Fruits.

OUR FOUNTAIN DRINKS ARE UNEQUALED

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

5% Discount
on
ALL GROCERIES
THIS WEEK
Wednesday and Saturday Deliveries
C. C. PORTER
CASH GROCER
359 Broadwell Ave. Phone 2375

Wall Paper
10% Discount
THIS WEEK
on
All Cash Purchases
Hulett-Taft Co.
INCORPORATED
208 Oneida St. Fulton

FRESH STRAWBERRIES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

Albany, June 11.—According to the rule adopted in the early days of its deliberations, the State Constitutional Convention today received the last of the proposed amendments to the Constitution from the individual delegates. From now on further proposals will be rejected unless unanimous consent is given or the desired amendments are presented by a committee of the delegate body.

Nearly six hundred proposed amendments have been received, yet it is declared upon excellent authority that the greater portion of the propositions will be rejected and will progress further than the committees to which they were referred for consideration.

That the work of the Constitutional Convention will be most conservative, is conceded by its most prominent members. The debates which are now about to be the order of each day of session are likely to be long and fragant with the views of men of wide public affairs and substantial ability. In fact, the actual work of the delegates may be said to have just presented itself, in that the mere presentation of proposed amendments has been devoid of significance other than to establish the contrast between the number of proposals offered and those which will fail of indorsement by the Convention.

Propositions aimed at practically every section of the Constitution have been brought forward. Theories novel and drastic have been advocated in relation to several branches of State government which the people have apparently found little fault with, while the departments which have been reorganized by the legislature of the present year are subjects of numerous proposed amendments also.

The fact that if ratified by the voters this fall the action of the Convention must endure for at least twenty years, at once brings home to the delegates the realization that they should enact no amendment which does not tend toward the betterment and simplification of a governmental function of the State. This of course means that every angle of a proposition reported by a committee will be exhibited in the course of the discussion which it causes and that eloquence and political astuteness will vie with conviction and the exploitation of individualism, the whole resulting in a brilliant series of arguments in which the keenest and most able minds in the State will participate.

No legislative body has numbered among its member so great an array of distinguished men in the history of this State since the last Constitutional Convention. No presiding officer of any formal gathering has ever exceeded in ability or experience the chairman of the present Constitutional Convention.

These statements conceded, no better opportunity to become versed in the diverse articles of the proposed amended Constitution, can be offered than attendance during the debates which are about to begin and which will delve into the very groundwork of the laws under which the people of New York State are working.

It has been predicted that in some instances debates will continue all day; it is certain that the sessions of one hour which have prevailed up to this time, except as regards committee hearings, will no longer prevail.

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Public Accountant
wants a few small sets of books to care for regularly. Books opened or closed. Statements carefully taken off. Prices reasonable. Phone 3304.

FRESH VEGETABLES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

BIG FISH CATCH AT FAIR HAVEN

Frank Wallace, William Allen and C. Gilbert yesterday made a record catch of perch at Fair Haven. About three hundred of the beauties were landed by the successful fishermen.

Final Disposal

of

High Grade Silk and Cloth Suits only one of a kind, the regular prices are from $17.50 to $36.75, from which we make a discount of

TEN DOLLARS

on each suit, and alterations without charge.

TRIMMED HATS

from

$1.00 to $6.00

former prices $3 to $12.

MacNamara's

FULTON LEADS CRAFT WORKERS

State Inspector Farnum Credits Local Department As Best in State

More than three hundred local persons attended the reception and art exhibit given at the High school yesterday afternoon by Miss Cook and her pupils.

That the handwork department is an efficiency department of the High school was borne out by statements made yesterday by State Inspector R. B. Farnum who unexpectedly dropped into the midst of the reception.

Mr. Farnum said: "The work done by this school department far excells any school work of its kind within the State of New York, with the exception of New York city."

The interior of the studio, attractive in its sofe brown tones, presented a beautiful array of handcraft articles. Brass, copper, leather, reed, silver and jewels were the materials used. The impression received at once was that a master hand, the product of fine training and a natural ability, had produced results such as only one entirely familiar with the details of the work could appreciate. Into every detail of the workmanship, design, decorative and in outline, true art was given expression.

A set of six panels in decorative design showed strong workmanship. One of the panels to which particular attention was drawn was a design in tree masses and foreground done in flat tones ofg reen and brown. The name Royce indicated the artist's work.

In the same set was a design equally as effective in flat tons of brown and blue; trees and foreground were also used in this design, which bore the signature of Brown.

A plate design in brown bearing the inscription M. Hart was worthy of commendation also.

A desk set in etched copper, the work of Hilda Clark, was rich in design and workmanship. The large blotter, letter opener and receptable for holding letters were the three pieces designed.

A desk set in etched and sawed brass, the work of Isabel Merriam, displayed exceptional expression and fine workmanship.

A portfolio and mat in tooled leather, the work of Elizabeth Royce, was exquisite in design and workmanship.

A handkerchief case and portfolio in leather of unusual design, and a fob of silver by Ruth Beals, each displayed ability.

A small silver chain, the work of Fred Eames and a silver neck chain the work of Margaret Clark attracted much attention by the careful work executed.

A pair of silver cuff links, by Fred Johnson, were cleverly worked out, and three silver rings, the work of Mary Marvin, caused a lot of comment. One ring was set with a moss agate, another with an onyx and the third with a sardonyx.

A woven reed tray with embroidered center in cross stitch, by Hilda Clark, was beautifully designed and well executed. A pair of etched copper book ends by Margaret Howe were of exquisite design, as were a another pair the work of Pearl Foster.

In a brief summary, the work of the handcraft department during its first year has established for itself a record, and to Miss Cook, the efficient instructor, great credit is due, not alone within school circles but from the community as a whole.

AMARANTH HAS NEW OFFICERS

Elizabeth Schultz of This City Made Warder; Loan Fund Created

Syracuse, June 11.—The eighteenth annual convention of the New York State Order of the Amaranth closed last evening after one of the most harmonious and successful meetings held by the organization.

Mrs. Amelia E. MacNair of Brooklyn, who has been associate grand royal matron, was unanimously chosen grand royal matron.

Mrs. MacNair appointed Miss Anna Geeg, of this city, Fourteenth district deputy grand royal matron. Miss Gregg of this city fourteenth district Order of the Eastern Star and has been given the highest order in Syracuse Court, Order of the Amaranth.

Other Officers Elected

Grand royal matron, Charles H. MacNary, Albany; assistant grand royal matron, Ella C. Perry, Albany; grand conductress, Fredericka De Wolf, Brooklyn; assistant grand conductress, Isabel Sidway, Buffalo; associate grand royal patron, Louis F. Bond, Richmond Hill; grand treasurer, Ella Kerr, Brooklyn; grand secretary, Anna Vass, Brooklyn, who was returned to this office for her nineteenth term.

Mrs. MacNair appointed the following officers to assist her for the ensuing year:

Grand marshal, Franklyn H. Horn, Rochester; grand historian, Elizabeth J. Scholz, Fulton; grandprelates, Mary Scofield and Dr. Fanny Palmetiere, Brooklyn, and Estelle Fish, Troy; Faith, Helene Finkel, New York; Charity, Lillian Holstein, Tottenville; Wisdom, Cora B. Sager, Rochester; marshal in the east, Mary Earwicker, Mount Vernon; marshal in the west, Anna Alexander, Troy; standard bearer, Ella C. McCoy, Brooklyn; first district deputy, Laurene P. Sherwood, Brooklyn; assistant grand lecturer, Robert Fletcher, Brooklyn; second deputy, Anna M. Beerman, New York; lecturer, Henry W. Carr, New York.

Third deputy, Elsie Evans, Tottenville; lecturer, Edward Beerman, New York; fourth deputy, Adelaide Clinch, New York; lecturer, Henry J. Binder, New York; fifth deputy, Julia B. Waters, Brooklyn; lecturer, J. H. Palmer, Long Island; sixth deputy, Eva Whish, Rensselaer; seventh deputy, Catherine Dillon, Schenectady; lecturer, W. Swartout, Troy.

Eighth deputy, Adelaide Rennie, Glens Falls; lecturer, D. G. Lawton, Hudson Falls; ninth deputy, Jane Potter, Brooklyn; lecturer, Albert E. Wilkins, New York; tenth deputy, Daisy Pooley, Buffalo; lecturer, G. W. Gray, Perth Amboy; eleventh deputy Lulu M. Phillips, Watertown; lecturer, Elmer E. Worthen, Watertown; twelfth deputy, Cora C. Hollinger, Canastota; lecturer, Henry Parker, Oneida; thirteenth deputy, Mary L. Clark, Waverly; lecturer, Charles S. Tuttle, Elmira; fourteenth lecturer, William H. Spanswick, Fulton.

Fifteenth deputy, Minnie Lobdell, Ithaca; lecturer, J. D. Ross, Dryden; sixteenth deputy, lecturer, Fred G. Poehein, Lyons; seventeenth deputy, Harriet N. Horn, Rochester; lecturer, Charles R. Vosburgh, Rochester; eighteenth deputy, Bertha B. Craig, Canaseraga; lecturer, N. B. Deuel, Dansville; nineteenth deputy, Wilhelmina A. Murr, Niagara Falls; lecturer, Ongola.

Twentieth deputy, Julia R. Ziegle, Buffalo; lecturer, George E. Wellsberry, Buffalo; twenty-first deputy, Grace E. Taylor, Jamestown; lecturer Julius T. Plosselli, Olean; twenty-second deputy, Cora E. Archer, Brooklyn; lecturer, Sherwin H. Crane, Hornell; twenty-third deputy, Susan B. Pollock, New York; lecturer, Dr. W. R. Rosenkrans, New York; twenty-fourth deputy, Blanche Storvis, New York; lecturer, Frank Krongsbury, Auburn; twenty-fifth deputy, Josephine Purvis, Brooklyn; lecturer, W. Beaten, Rochester; twenty-sixth deputy, Addie L. Thomas, Hornell; lecturer, H. S. Coburn, Olean.

Will Go to Council

The convention voted the sum of $350 for Mrs. McNair's expenses to the Supreme Council of the court, which will meet in San Francisco June 21. Mrs. Elizabeth Patchin of Rochester, retiring grand royal matron, received a mahogany serving table, with complete copper chafing dish service and a purse of money from her staff and the courts of the state.

The court voted to establish a loan fund from which any child of members of the order could receive an education, the loan to be paid back into the fund at any time the beneficiary can, no time limit being placed.

$1.00, $1.25, $1.50, and $2.00

WASH DRESSES 79c

on Sale for SATURDAY ONLY at 9 A. M.

Well made of fast color ginghams and percales, prettily trimmed and some good enough for street wear. All sizes for women and misses.

Specials for Children's Day

FOR SATURDAY ONLY—We offer an assorted lot of 5 in. and 6 in. ALL SILK MOIRE RIBBONS, per yard .. 16c

COLORED Children's Dresses at 25c, 50c, 75c, 98c, $1.50 and up to $4.00.

Children's White Dresses at 98c, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 and up to $7.50.

All SPECIALLY PRICED FOR CHILDREN'S DAY.

Children's Hats

Assorted lot of trimmed hats at........ 50c

Fine Trimmed Hats, value to $3.50, at.. $1.98

$4.00 and $5.00 fine Trimmed Hats at.. $2.49

A full assortment of CHILDREN'S GLOVES, TIES, SHOES, SILK and LISLE HOSE, FANCY HAIR RIBBONS, BELTS, FANS, and all REASONABLY PRICED

Linen Napkins at 1-3 Off

A small lot of NAPKINS, slightly soiled on outside fold, selling from $1.00 to $5.00 per doz—to close out at 33 1-3 per cent discount from original selling prices.

Odd Silk Waists of silks, crepe de chine and chiffon and fine hand embroidered voiles, selling at $3, $4 and $5; to close out at.... $1.19

Men's 50c Underwear 45c

Varsity athletic nainsook Shirts and Drawers, French balbriggan or Porous Knit; all good 50c garments, at 45c

Women's $3.00 and $3.50 Silk Union Suits in add sizes only; to close out at....... $1.98

$1.00 Outing Hats at 59c

The latest Outing Hats for women and misses, of wash or silk materials.

$20 and $25 Tailor-Made Suits $13.88

Choice of any suit sold up to $25.00.

100 Piece Dinner Set Regular $12.00 Value $8.98

$14.00 Dinner Set, gilt band and floral design, 100 per for....... $9.98

Gifts for the Bride

Gifts for the Graduate large variety to choose from at special prices during the week.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

All Kinds and All Prices.
The Largest Variety Shown in This City.

NEW RUGS AWAIT YOUR INSPECTION

FOR BARGAINS VISIT OUR BASEMENT

WHY BUY ELSEWHERE AND PAY MORE WHEN YOU CAN BUY IT FOR LESS AT

M. Katz & Co.'s

Department Store 63-65 S. First St., Fulton

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

For Sale—Indian motorcycle in excellent condition. $45; quick sale takes it. Will demonstrate at your convenience in Fulton. Address Jno. Park, 141 W. 4th st., Oswego. Phone 556M Oswego. 150c

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

Upper Flat—Moderate rent, 214 Walradt st. 6 rooms and all modern conveniences. H. L. Crandall. Phone 2528. tf.

To Rent—New house in Park st.; modern conveniences; electric light; bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

For Sale—Good extra heavy double work harness; $20. G. L. Pratt, 177 E. 1st or phone 56. 149

For Sale—61-acre farm on trolley; also 2 acres and 9-room house. Easy terms. 320 Cayuga st., Fulton. 150c

Lost—Bunch of keys, between post office and 214 S. 3d st. Reward. Return to Times office. 150c

For Sale—31 choice R. I. chicks; 4 weeks old; $6. 811 Emery st. Phone 2271. 150

House to Rent—Newly remodelled; modern improvements. Inquire T. Alderman, 19 W. 3. Phone 1242. 148

To Rent—7 room house in Fay st. near chocolate works. G. J. Emeny, 414 S. 4th st. 148c

Hay For Sale. Phone 5819. 140c

K. OF C. SCHOLARSHIPS TO BE AWARDED

Announcement is made by Dr. John Coyle of the order of the Knights of Columbus of an examination to be held on June 19 for four scholarships in Roman Catholic colleges in the State. The candidates must be members of the Knights of Columbus or brothers or sons of living or dead members of the order and in such circumstances that they need the scholarships in order to complete their courses. In 1913 the State council of the Knights of Columbus established nine scholarships of $500 which became available in 1914. Five of the scholarships have been awarded and the four others will be given after the examinations of June 19. Candidates should make inquiry direct to Dr. Coyle or through the Grand Knight of the local council.

Fulton Keynotes

The missionary societies of the First M. E. church will serve supper in the church parlors Saturday evening from 5 to 7 o'clock.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Wolever are in Rochester to attend the wedding of their son, Arthur C., and Miss Irene Acker, whose marriage took place Wednesday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James Jone of Worth st, were recent guests of Phoenix friends.

* * *

Mrs. S. Van Sanford of West 1st st. is in Auburn attending the Sunday school convention.

* * *

Miss Geshe Margaret Grube, of Bainbridge, N. Y., and Miss Blanche Bort, of Norfolk, Va., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Wells. Both young ladies came here to attend the Glisman-Wells wedding.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Boigeol recently entertained friends from Caughdenoy.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart of W. 3d st. have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Harold Perkins of Ithaca.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Norval Taft are entertaining Rev. Clinton Taft of Corning.

* * *

Miss Imogene Paddock of S. 4th st., has returned from Boston.

* * *

Sunday, the local baseball team, which so desively defeated the Phoenix team last week, will journey to Oswego and play the team from the New York Central shops.

* * *

Mrs. F. K. Jones of Cayuga st. has returned from a visit with friends at Auburn.

* * *

Orin Beebe has been the guest of his parents at Sandy Creek.

* * *

Arline and Margaret Pratt have been guests of friends at Mt. Pleasant.

* * *

William Farrell attended the Elks convention at Troy.

* * *

Amos Wood has gone to New York to visit his daughter.

* * *

Earl Dempsey has reigned his position at Foley's restaurant to take a similar position with Childs restaurant in Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. David Shepard of Batavia are visiting their daughter, Mrs. George W. Roy, of Highland st.

SAFETY is ALWAYS the FIRST thing to be considered when you decide where to put your money. It is absolutely safe with THIS BANK because we invest in the most conservative securities only. We do not loan on notes or chattel mortgages. Over 60 per cent. of our deposits are in first mortgages on real estate. We have a surplus of $158,000.00 over all liabilities and will add at least $10,000.00 to SURPLUS THIS YEAR

4 PER CENT.

FULTON SAVINGS BANK

PHOENIX WOMAN FILES NOTICE OF APPEAL

Eva E. Dean recently sued the village of Phoenix for damages sustained when she fell upon a defective sidewalk. She was awarded a verdict and secured judgment forr $2632.75, which is returned in Supreme Court, Justice Hubbs denying a new trial.

PHOTOPLAYS AT THE QUIRK

The program for today consits of a Mutual master-picture, in four parts, entitled, "The Outcast"; a good comedy, O'Flannigan's Luck," and a drama of interest, "The Butterfly." Tomorrow a powerful drama, "A Deal With the Devil," Chafles Chaplin in "His Musical Carrer," and others of the same Quirk theatre quality.

DEEDS FILED YESTERDAY

Philip Lepine to Helen F. Jennings, property in Fulton, terms private.

Joseph M. Vincent to Granite Grange No. 608 of Palermo, property in Palermo, terms private.

MARY PATTERSON COURT MEMBERS HONORED

Mrs. Elizabeth J. Scholz of this city returned last night from the Amaranth convention held in Syracuse, and expresses a great deal of pleasure over the fact that two of the Mary Patterson Court members were si highly honored. Mrs. Scholz is made Grand Historian and W. H. Spanswick is appointed Grand Lecturer of the Syracuse and Auburn district. All delegates who attended the convention report a pleasant and profitable time, expressing as well the pleasure they had in attending the concluding feature—the banquet at the Onondaga.

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Buck bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds

Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK C. [illegible]

Phone [illegible]

Pure Creamery Butter

From The Harbor Farm

Made for those who want the best.

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Oneida Street [illegible]

Special Sale on Bikes, Tires, Supplies

Big Reduction from Regular Prices

BOGUE'S, [illegible] First Street

D/34

The Newspapers Published in Fulton

Are the real and only legitimate means to secure the kind of publicity that will work in true harmony with the elaborate program mapped out by the

New Chamber of Commerce

¶ The protracted dullness in retail business circles is positive proof that the merchants of this city must invest their advertising appropriations in the papers that have the "home touch"—the papers that are welding in concrete fashion the buying public in the fertile farming country lying contiguous to this city.

MR. BUSINESS

Has been very sick. He should recover, and the way to recover is to turn our faces from the fixed starings we've been giving to a popular idol, a single industry, and fix our eyes upon the farmer and the buyer from the North, the South, the East and the West of us. The farmer of today is the man who can do a lot toward making Mr. Business in this city a well man, but you must use your home papers—the papers that are near to the people—to reach the great buying public living beyond the city's limits.

MR. MERCHANT

The Fulton Evening Times is "A Herald of Progress"

SUBMARINE BASE OFF IRISH COAST?

Speculation as to How Raiders Get Supply of Oil.

NAVAL MEN DOUBT THEORY

Submerged Tanks in Inlets Could Furnish Gasoline to Undersea Craft. However, Torpedoes Must Be Replenished and Crews Must Have Rest Off the Boats.

Washington.—Speculation as to the Germans having established secret submarine bases in isolated coves along the Irish coast was revived in semi-official circles in Washington by the publication of a dispatch from Crookhaven, Ireland, which told of a submarine having been sighted and fired upon near that place.

For some time there has been a strong belief here that there have been secret submarine bases of this character somewhere along the western or southwestern coasts of Ireland. It was definitely ascertained, however, that no information had been received by the navy department from its intelligence sources abroad confirming the discovery of any of the supposed secret bases. If there are any such bases the indentations in the shores of Ireland may have been conveniently utilized by the Germans for that purpose.

In the absence, however, of definite knowledge that such a base has been established, well informed naval officers cast doubt on this explanation of the facility with which German submarines have been able to operate in the stretch of water between Fastnet rock, the first lighthouse seen by transatlantic passengers bound for Queenstown and Liverpool, and Bishop's rock, where they catch their first glimpse of a lighthouse when going to Southampton.

Naval officers apparently are agreed on one point—that none of the submarines that have attacked merchant ships off the south and west coasts of Ireland have gone to those sections of the German naval war zone around the British isles by way of the strait of Dover or the English channel. The British have so effectively protected the approach to the English channel by a mine field extending from Ostend to the entrance to the Thames that no German warship, floating or submarine, has yet been shown to have passed that obstruction.

Naval officers here do not believe that submarines could successfully pass through this mine field. They also point to the announcement recently made in parliament that England had been able successfully to transport about 750,000 soldiers from England to France and Belgium across the channel without the loss of a single transport or the death of a single man during the cross channel journey. If German submarines were able to go to the south coast of Ireland by the channel route and there sink merchant ships, it is pointed out, the same submarines could have sunk British troopships, which would be of greater military advantage to Germany than the mere sinking of merchant ships, which carry only noncombatants.

With the English channel approach to the west and south coasts of Ireland as well as to the Scilly isles closed, the German submarines would have to take the North sea and north of Scotland route to the western shores of the British isles. Having once sent submarines to the Irish coast, it was said here, the Germans might obviate the long journey around Scotland, to and from Ireland and Germany, by establishing secret bases on the Irish coast, and the theory is very strong that this has been done.

The naval experts, however, believe that the submarines have made the journey back and forth around Scotland. One high naval officer said that the Germans were known to have submarines with a steaming radius of 4,000 or 5,000 miles, which could easily negotiate the long journey. It was suggested to him that if there were secret bases on the Irish coast there might be submerged tanks of gasoline which the submarines could visit at night, raising them to replenish their fuel supply and then sinking them again, and that it was easy to imagine that they have constructed large tanks that could be towed under water.

This officer admitted that this was possible, though he did not believe it had been done. He said that the use of such tanks was proposed some time ago to this government, but he believed, in the light of a great deal of information that he had received, that the German submarines were not following the secret base practice. He pointed out that it was necessary for submarines to replenish their supplies of torpedoes, something that could not be done from a secret base as easily as replenishing gasoline stock, and that, what was even more important, the work of the men who operated German submarines was so exacting and the strain upon them so terrific that it would be necessary for the crews to return to their German bases after their raids to recuperate. This officer also said that, while it was barely possible that the Germans might be making use of some remote island or cove, there were too many persons on watch around the Irish coast for such bases to remain easily a secret.

THE MARKING OF BILLS.

One of the Secret Service Methods Is the Use of Pin Holes.

In their surveillance and apprehension of suspected persons government secret service officers often find it necessary to "mark the money" handled by such persons. There are various methods of so marking the national currency, one of the most novel of which is the pinprick.

The note to be marked is, say, the five dollar silver certificate bearing the vignette of an Indian chief in his full regalia of feathers and trappings and presenting a full face view. With the aid of a pin the secret service man makes two punctures in the bill directly in the pupils of the Indian's eyes. To the casual and sometimes even critical inspector of the note these pinpricks are invisible. If raised to the light, however, the bill will distinctly reveal them.

The markings are complicated by the following process: The pin point is applied in the twist of the large figure 5 at the two upper corners of the note. These tiny twists do not appear in the "necks" of the two figures 5 that are at both ends of the bottom of the note. The note is now pierced again, this time in the ends of the scrolls on each side of the word five in the lower center of the bill. The marking is now complete. In secret it is exhibited to one or more persons for purposes of identification and is then placed in the till or money drawer to which the suspected person has access.

It is said that the pinpricks will remain perfect for some time. When such bills are produced in court and their marking is explained under oath conviction is practically certain.—Every Week.

MELODY DEAFNESS.

To Those Who Are Afflicted With It Music Is Simply Noise.

Every one has heard of color blindness, but few people are aware that there is such a malady as tune deafness. It prevents those affected from appreciating music, which to the melody deaf is nothing but noise.

The most intelligent people often suffer in this way. Empress Catherine of Russia used to declare that for her music was a nerve trying din, and Napoleon I. hated any form of melody. Victor Hugo had to be coaxed by the composer who put his famous lines to music. "Are not my verses," he used to say, "sufficiently harmonious to stand without the assistance of disagreeable noises?"

Doctors say that the power to appreciate music depends upon a perfect combination of the nerves and brain. Some people's nerves readily carry musical sounds to the mind, while in others nerves impede their passage to the brain cells.

Good musicians are more often born than made. Nature has provided them with nerves which instinctively carry musical chords to the brain. That is why a good musician can memorize a tune after hearing it played over once. Every note has been clearly recorded in his brain.

Those with less sensitive musical nerves receive a dull impression of any music they may hear, and thus they are unable to remember it unless it is drummed into their brain by repeated playing.—Pearson's Weekly.

Ingenious Air Bombs.

Bombs thrown from the air are usually exploded by contact. With the Martin Hale bomb, designed specially to be dropped from aeroplanes, there is a "safety pin" which renders the bomb harmless until it has been withdrawn and until a fall of about 200 feet through the air has caused the propeller to rotate and release the firing mechanism. All destructive explosives cause damage by the actual shock of the explosion—that is, by the disturbance in the air created by the expansion of the contents of the shell, by the fragments of the shell or the bullets which it contains flying in all directions, by the fumes which may be given off on explosion and which may have a stupefying or fatal effect on people in the vicinity and by the falling of bricks and mortar displaced by the bombs.—London Mail.

English as She Is Spoke.

The professor who in his address on the correct pronunciation of English said he preferred "of'n" to "often" is on the winning side. No "pronouncing dictionary" with a reputation to lose ever sounds the "t" in the middle of such words as Christmas, mistletoe, softer, often or chestnut. Good actors, whose duty it is to speak "trippingly on the tongue," can cite authority to support their pronunciation of han'kerchief and We'n'sday. And no one who knows his way about in the elocutionary field pays any regard to the spelling of such words as "extraordinary."—London Chronicle.

Early Closing Scheme.

She—Papa says that when coming to see me you must not come in a street car any more. He—Really! Does he expect me to walk all this distance? She—Of course not. He says all he asks is that you will come in a carriage hired by the hour.—New York Weekly.

Engineering Triumph.

"Why are you studying that dachshund so intently?"

"I consider him an architectural triumph of Mother Nature's," explained the bridge builder. "See how nicely the stress is calculated to the span."—Judge.

Our past lives build the present, which must mold the lives to be.—Sir Edwin Arnold.

GERMANY FACING LACK OF CLOTHING

Shortage of Wool Presents Serious Problem.

MANY MILLS CLOSE DOWN.

Shut Off From All the World's Markets, Kaiser's War Chiefs Feel Anxiety Lest They May Not Be Able to Provide Sufficient New Winter Uniforms For Their Armies.

The problem of insuring a future supply of uniforms for her great armies of fighters, while at the same time guaranteeing sufficient clothing for the old men and the women and children, is causing official Germany more real anxiety than the troublesome question of securing food supplies for all her people.

Experts in the wool and cotton trade declare that since Germany has been cut off from the wool and cotton markets of the world by reason of the allies' blockade she faces the grave danger of inability to clothe her soldiers properly many months longer and may have great difficulty in prosecuting another winter campaign if the war lasts until the snow flies again.

Germany obtained the wool she used in her manufactures mainly from Australia and New Zealand through the London markets and from South America, chiefly the Argentine Republic and Montevideo. The London market is now denied her of course, and she is cut off also from South American ports. Some of her stocks came from Russia, but they consisted of "carpet wool," and the war stopped business in that direction. She obtained comparatively small quantities of carpet wool from Turkey, but Turkey is in the war and the Turks need all their own wool.

Has Only Home Supply.

Germany had 16,000,000 sheep of her own in 1900, according to the reports, but this figure was reduced to 5,000,000 in 1907. It is assumed that the total has been still further reduced since then. It is admitted that the war has made it necessary to slaughter many sheep for food purposes, and that has decreased the amount of home wool.

When the Germans invaded Belgium they seized all the wool in sight and shipped back some 30,000,000 pounds to the fatherland, leaving the Belgians no wool at all. They also confiscated a large amount in their invasion of northern France.

It is estimated that thirty pounds of raw cotton and wool are used for the manufacture of a soldier's uniform, overcoat and other clothing. Assuming that Germany had 5,000,000 sheep in 1914 it is figured that she would not have supplied sufficient material to enter into the uniforms of more than 1,000,000. When the stocks seized in Belgium and northern France are exhausted (if they have not been exhausted already) she will have to fall back on her home supply.

Germany, it is said, uses more rags and clips in the making of her clothing than any other country. For the same reason that wool is denied her by her old customers she is unable to obtain the materials that enter into the manufacture of shoddy goods and is utilizing more than ever before the "rags" of her own people. It is said that 75 per cent more clips (tailors' cuttings from new cloth) were exported to Germany from the United States before the war than to any other country.

Woolen Mills Suspend.

Already a number of Germany's biggest woollen mills, notably the Luckenwalder company plant at Berlin, have been obliged to suspend.

Germany's stocks of cotton also are low, and she has been unable to replenish them to any large degree. It is known that representatives of German firms have disposed of large stocks of cotton purchased in the southern states before the war, which could not be shipped to the fatherland.

"The problem of getting enough wool and cotton for her purposes is a very serious one for Germany," a New York expert declared the other day. "It seems to be a question of a supply of clothes rather than of food. She can probably raise sufficient food for her soldiers and the people at home, but how to get sufficient wool and cotton to make the clothing needed for her millions is the empire's great problem."

One of the principal exporters said that of the 271,000 bales of wool exported from Argentina alone in 1914 82,000 bales went to Hamburg, Bremen and Trieste. He added that the allies are now using "carpet wools" in the making of uniforms, and he believes the Germans will do the same.

LIONESS LOOSE IN TOWN.

But All Julia Did Was to Eat One Dog and Scare Another Dead.

When Julia, a circus lioness, escaped from her cage in Mount Vernon, N. Y., she scared the town badly, but only chewed up a pup, fell over an Airedale, which dropped dead from fright, and chased a cat up a tree.

The lioness ran into an apartment house, followed at a discreet distance by seven policemen, two detectives, the volunteer fire department and fourteen trainers, armed with shotguns and forks. Julia climbed a porch column to the second floor porch and there she was driven into a box.

PRZEMYSL FAMED IN STORY OF WAR

Thrice It Has Been Besieged, Twice It Has Fallen.

GREAT AUSTRIAN VICTORY.

Russians, Who Held Powerful Galician Fortress Seventy Days, Fled Before Hail of Shells From Big Austro-German Guns to Which They Lacked Ammunition to Reply.

Three separate sieges of Przemysl, or Peremysl, as the Russians renamed it during their brief occupation, has made the great Galician fortress one of the memorable centers of the war. Nor probably is its story yet concluded.

It was early in the war's history that the Russian forces, with little of resistance before them, first swept across the Galician plains and planted their heavy guns before the stronghold. The first shots were fired on Sept. 16, and from that date until the present time Przemysl has been in the front of important events as much if not more than any other single city.

The first Russian attempt against Przemysl was undertaken too hastily, or not hastily enough. In any event, however, their big howitzers had not pounded away at the strong fortifications for many days before Austrian re-enforcements appeared in great numbers and drove the invaders back.

Early in October, however, the Russian forces, greatly strengthened and dragging heavy guns in their wake, pressed up to the outskirts of the city and again began, this time in deadly earnest, a bombardment of the various forts which formed the great stronghold, Przemysl.

Austrians Slowly Starved.

The attacking army was variously estimated at from 125,000 to 200,000 men. There were probably 150,000 Austrian soldiers within the fortress to defend it.

In a few days the city had been surrounded and entirely cut off from outward communication, and thus it was held and gradually starved until March 22, when General Kusmanek, the Austrian commander, raised the white flag.

Several attempts had been made to relieve the besieged city, but for some reason as yet unexplained the Austrian general staff could not release a force of sufficient strength to drive off the invaders or even to break through the ring of iron.

No sooner had the city fallen and yielded its more than 117,000 Austrian soldiers as prisoners than the Russian armies released from the siege rushed south and east to the various Carpathian passes, bent upon surging across those mountains and into the Hungarian plains. They advanced to the summit of the mountains and held them until the concerted Austrian and German drive, which rolled them back, began last month.

Meantime the Russians were able to restock the forts of Przemysl to some extent and to repair the damage done by their own guns. But it is supposed that it was lack of ammunition which eventually forced them to retire.

Russians Out Pell Mell.

With the Russians beaten back in the Carpathian fighting General Mackensen at the beginning of May began the drive that sent the Russians reeling back in West Galicia. Two weeks later he arrived before Przemysl with a great Austro-German army and began the actual siege operations.

Mackensen's left wing crossed the San and menaced Przemysl from the north. His right wing pressed northward from the south to complete the movement to encircle Przemysl by seizing the Przemysl-Lemberg railway.

In front of Przemysl the famous 42 centimeters began battering at the forts guarding the city from the west. The fortress was not completely surrounded, nor was the railroad seized. The Russians did not stay for that. When they found they could not reply to the terrific hail of steel poured upon them they made the best retreat they could back along the railroad toward Lemberg and on back beyond that city to their own frontier, the Austrians report.

The capture of Przemysl was one of the great victories of the war. That was achieved by the slow grind of siege, starving out the garrison. The recapture is a no less stirring and important victory. Curiously enough, it was achieved by an exactly opposite process from the capture. The assailants just hurled themselves on the fortress and drove the Russians out practically pellmell.

HOLDUP MAN USES FUMES.

Thief Taking Tip From War Experiments With Poisonous Gas.

Poisonous gases are now being used by yeggmen, the New Jersey police say.

Mrs. Emma Boeglins was alone in her grocery store at Paterson when a man asked to have a can filled with kerosene. Instantly, as she removed the cap, the air was filled with sickening fumes. Dizzy, she rushed to the door and threw the can into the street, and the man ran out of the store.

The police believe the man tried out a new method to make robbery easy and expected the woman to be overcome sooner.

BURR'S SELF CONTROL.

An Incident That Proved His Perfect Command of His Feelings.

Aaron Burr was by nature and training a man of extraordinary self control. He allowed no circumstances to throw him off his balance.

An anecdote told by Rufus Choate to Richard H. Dana, recorded in Mr. Dana's "Diary," illustrates the callousness which aided Burr so greatly in controlling himself.

Several years after the death of Alexander Hamilton, killed by Burr in a duel, Burr visited Boston, and Mr. Devereux of Salem paid him some attentions. The visitor was taken to the Boston Atheneum, where, while the two men were walking through the gallery of sculpture, Mr. Devereux happened to catch sight of a bust of Hamilton.

The thought flashed across Mr. Devereaux's mind that Burr might not care to be confronted with the sight of the features of the man he had slain. But no. Burr was undisturbed. He also espied the bust, and, although Mr. Devereux had instinctively turned away, he walked up to it and said in a loud tone.

"Ah, here is Hamilton!"

Then, passing his fingers along certain lines of the face, he added, "There was the poetry!"

Hamilton's contemporaries gave him credit for possessing a poetic mind.

QUEER LEGAL FICTION.

It Makes Stepney, In London, the Parish of Every British Seaman.

Every sailor, from the admiral to the newest joined seaman, on board British warships is regarded as belonging to the parish of Stepney, in London. It doesn't matter in the slightest where the ship is, the sailors who man it all come from the same parish—Stepney.

This queer legal fiction dates back to the time of Charles II. In those days every workingman had to live in the parish where he was born, and he could not leave it without finding two responsible sureties to vouch for his honesty.

This, of course, became rather puzzling in the case of people born at sea, for they had no parish. To get over the difficulty the authorities stated that all born at sea would be regarded as being born in the parish of Stepney, though why they should choose that parish and no other is lost in the dust of official records.

To this day the bishop of Stepney is godfather of all children born at sea, while all marriages solemnized on the ocean are recorded as though they had taken place in Stepney.—London Answers.

A Remarkable Dinner Service.

The remarkable dinner service made by Josiah Wedgwood for the Russian empress, Catherine II., in 1774 consists of 952 pieces, and on each piece is painted a different view. The body is of a pale brimstone color, and the views are painted in a rich mulberry purple. As the service was intended to be used at the palace of La Grenouilliere (meaning marshy place full of frogs), each piece also bears a green frog within a shield on the rim. The views represent British ruined castles, abbeys, parks, bridges, towers, etc. Several pieces are decorated with views of Hampstead, and there are custard cups with views of Richmond and sauce boats with the scenery of Windsor park. In many cases the views are the only pictorial records left of the old buildings. Altogether there are 1,282 views painted on the 952 pieces.

How to Treat a Rifle Wound.

In the case of a wound from a rifle bullet don't go probing for the bullet, but remove from the surface of the wound all shreds of clothing and other matter which the bullet may have carried into the flesh. This must be removed very thoroughly, and a sterilized knife or scissors should be used freely to open the wound and get it clean. When this is done treat the wound with your iodine or bichloride solution. Then dress it with gauze and bandage.

In the case of wounds from small shot the wound should be washed with a solution of alum, and then pieces of gauze or clean cloth wrung out of hot water should be applied every couple of hours.—Outing.

Loaf Bread In England.

It is perhaps worth recalling that the art of baking loaves of bread was introduced into Europe quite late in history. Flat cakes were baked even in the earliest times, but as late as the beginning of the nineteenth century loaf bread was comparatively unknown in many parts of the continent. In 1812, for instance, when an English captain ordered loaves to the value of $5 in Gothenburg the baker stipulated for payment in advance on the ground that he would never be able to sell them in the city if they were left on his hands.—London Spectator.

Canny Scot!

"I say, Sandy, mon," said Jock, handing back his friend's photograph, "when ye had those photos taken, why didna ye smile?"

"And those pictures costing me $2 a dozen!" replied Sandy. "Are ye crazy, mon?"—Woman's Home Companion.

Which?

Bacon—Ever notice how long a woman is in coming to the point? Egbert—Do you mean when she's telling a story or sharpening a lead pencil?—Yonkers Statesman.

Man, if you are anything, walk alone and talk to others. Do not hide yourself in the chorus.—Epictetus.

A VERY SICK MAN.

—Hodge in Spokane Spokesman Review.

VISITS LABYRINTH AND SEES BATTLE

Correspondent Describes War Among Trenches.

WATCHES VILLAGE BLOWN UP

Eyewitness Tells of Thrilling Scenes In Great Fight North of Arras—Destruction by Artillery and Mines, a Bayonet Charge, Aeroplanes Soaring Through Rain of Shrapnel.

What the fighting is like in the labyrinth, that vast amazing stretch of almost intermingling trenches around Arras in northern France, the scene of one of the fiercest series of battles in the history of the world, is thrillingly described by Wythe Williams in a dispatch to the New York Times.

I cannot minutely describe the conflict. No one can do that at this stage, says the correspondent.

In many places in this giant battlefield it was impossible for me to say where were the Germans and where the French, so completely was I turned around on account of the constant zigzag of the trench lines. Sometimes when I thought I was safely going in the direction of the French I was hauled back by officers, who told me I was heading into the German line.

I sometimes felt that the German lines were on three sides, and often I was quite correct. On the other hand, the French lines often almost completely surrounded the German.

In Midst of Battle.

One could not tell from the nearness of the artillery fire whether it was from friend or foe. I finally determined that when a battery fired fast it was French, for the German fire is becoming more intermittent every day.

Late one afternoon, coming out of a trench into a green meadow, I suddenly found myself planted against a mud bank made of dirt taken from the trenches. We were just at the crest of a hill. In khaki clothes I was of the same color as the mud bank, so an officer told me I was in a fairly safe position.

We flattened ourselves casually against our mud bank, carefully adjusted our glasses, turned them toward the valley before us, whence came the sound of exploding shells, and calmly watched a village developing into nothingness in the sunset.

There was a loud explosion, a roll of dense black smoke, which was penetrated quickly enough by the long, horizontal rays of the descending sun to permit the sight of tumbling roofs and crumbling walls. After a few seconds' intermission there was another explosion, and what looked like a public school in the main street sagged suddenly into a jagged pile of stones.

Sees Church Take Fire.

We turned our glasses on the other end of the village. A column of black smoke was rising where the church had caught fire.

"Where are the German trenches?" I asked the major, my guide.

"I'll show you," he answered and ordered a soldier to telephone a message to a "seventy-five" battery at our rear.

The soldier disappeared. "Watch!" said the officer.

There were two sharp explosions behind us, two puffs of smoke out on the horizon before us, about a mile away.

"That's where they are," the officer said. "Both shells went right in them."

Away to the right of the village, now reduced to ruins, was Neuville-St. Vaast, still occupied by both French and Germans, the former slowly retaking it, house by house. We were about half a mile away. We could see little, for in this business of house to house occupation most of the fighting is in the cellars.

Suddenly I heard a tremendous explosion and saw a great mass of masonry and debris of all descriptions flying high in the air. I knew just what had happened. The French had exploded a mine. Much of the debris I saw flying through space had been German soldiers a few seconds before.

Hears Yell of Victory.

Before the smoke died away we heard a savage yell. That was the French cry of victory. Then we heard a rapid cracking of rifles—the sign that the French had advanced across the space between the houses to finish the work their mine had left undone.

A cry from a soldier warned us of a German aeroplane overhead. A French aeroplane appeared, and the German made off. They usually do, as the majority of German aeronauts carry only rifles; the French now all have mitrailleuses. A fight between them is unequal, and the inequality is not easily overcome, for the German machines are too light for mitrailleuses.

Four French machines were now circling above, and the German batteries opened fire on them. It was a beautiful sight. We could not hear the shells explode, but we could see little feathery white clouds suddenly appear as if some giant invisible hand had just put them there, high up in the sky. Another appeared and another. There were several dozen little white clouds vividly outlined against the blue before the French machines, all untouched, turned back toward their own lines.

DEAR FRIEND WAS MOTHER.

Girl, Given Away Because of Poverty, Now Knows Parents.

Lacrosse, Wis.—Hazel "West," fifteen-year-old girl, who was taken away from Fred West, her foster father, by Judge Brindley because he had neglected her, has found her mother in a woman she has known all her life as a dear friend. Mrs. Fred Green, the mother, appeared before Judge Brindley and told the remarkable story of how she had given Hazel to the Wests when she was a baby because of her inability to care for the baby.

A mysterious telephone call to the Home of the Friendless, where Judge Brindley placed Hazel, effected the reunion of mother and daughter. The message said that if Hazel would come to one of the downtown stores she would be given a heavy coat. Hazel went downtown alone and did not come back. Investigation revealed her at the home of Mrs. Green, who had met her in the store and told her the story of her parentage.

In explaining the case to the judge Mrs. Green said: "I was the mother of another child when Hazel was born, and we were too poor to care for both of them, and at Mrs. West's urgent plea I let them take her.

"Not a week has passed since that I have not seen her. The Wests were better able to care for her than I, and I have been happy in the thought that she was being brought up in the right way. But since Mrs. West's death I have been worried, and now that she has been taken away from West I intend to keep her."

Mrs. Green is the wife of a railroad engineer. Hazel's father is dead.

LANE PLANS CLUB FOR U. S. WORKERS

Would Organize 15,000 Employes at Washington.

Washington.—The national capital will soon have one of the biggest clubs and one of the biggest clubhouses in the world if Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, carries out his plan. Indications are that he will. He has a committee of three at work, and it is meeting with much success.

The secretary's plans call for the formation in one big club of the 15,000 government employees here. He hopes to erect a clubhouse occupying a whole block.

It is not alone the social end that Secretary Lane has in mind. He plans to look after physical needs also. He proposes to establish a chain of co-operative stores in Washington, where the government clerks can purchase their food, clothing and other necessaries of life at a cost very much below that which now prevails.

Secretary Lane is an enthusiastic adherent of the co-operative plan. It is used successfully in the reclamation service of the interior department and on a more or less limited scale in the Home club, of which the secretary is founder and president.

The Home club will be the nucleus of the new organization. It occupies the old Brazilian embassy, in Jackson place, but its membership has grown so fast that, although this house is one of the most commodious in the city, it is almost impossible to care for its 1,700 members, all employees of the interior department.

The Home club has a business manager, who looks after co-operative buying, G. K. Weston. When fresh eggs were selling recently at 50 cents a dozen he distributed several hundred dozen a week to the members of the club at a price approximating 36 cents a dozen. When the best creamery butter was selling at 45 cents a pound Home club members were able to buy it for 35 cents a pound.

At Christmas time candy that was sold for 60 cents a pound was purchased for 50 cents by members of the club. More than 200 retail dealers in Washington have signed agreements to give Home club members discounts of from 5 to 20 per cent on cash purchases. During the winter the club, through the bureau of mines, bought several thousand tons of coal at a saving of from 50 to 90 cents a ton.

Fun.

Fun is not artificial. It was made by the same hand that gave humanity the tear.—Bill Nye.

The Scrap Book

Wanted His Reward.

A clergyman, whose name is not necessary to the chronicle, had invoked Mr. Choate's services in the settlement of a much involved and heavy estate. He received his bill in due time. Mr. Choate, it may be remarked by way of parenthesis, did not become a millionaire and thus enable himself to accept an office whose annual expenses are $50,000 more than its emoluments by omitting to send bills to clients. The clergyman accordingly was not overlooked.

The client appeared in a few days with a smile of deprecation.

"I always understood, Mr. Choate," he objected, "that you gentlemen of the bar were not in the habit of charging clergymen for your services."

"You are much in error," returned Mr. Choate firmly, "much in error. You look for your reward in the next world, but we lawyers have to get ours in this."—Denver Post.

Worthy.

I may not reach the heights I seek;
My untried strength may fail me,
Or halfway up the mountain peak
Fierce tempests may assail me;
But, though my goal I never see,
This thought shall always dwell with me:
I will be worthy of it.

I may not triumph in success
Despite my earnest labor;
I may not grasp results that bless
The efforts of my neighbor;
But, though life's dearest joy I miss,
There lies a nameless strength in this:
I will be worthy of it.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Reckless Generosity.

The late Rev. W. W. Freeman related a story illustrative of the way that a man's heart can swell and prompt him to great liberality under some extraordinary conditions. A big, raw boned, red headed young farmer entered his parlor one day, accompanied by a shy but comely girl, and desired him to perform the marriage ceremony. He did so, and when the fateful words were spoken that made the couple man and wife, the young husband drew from his pocket four bright silver quarter dollar pieces and, extending them toward the minister in his open palm, exclaimed, "There, Brother Freeman, just help yourself until you are satisfied." The minister took one.—Argonaut.

Twisted Sibilants.

A very pretty girl from a western town was the latest arrival at a select boarding school in Massachusetts. Being pretty and well dressed, she became very popular.

She was elected to be an usher for the monthly musicale, and, being painfully shy, she was much wrought up over it. She never could do it—no, never! But the election was positive; there was no drawing out. The evening found her a perfect flutter of pink frills, awaiting to receive the early comers. Each of the other young women who were acting in this capacity bore forward an imposing auditor, and Elsie found herself inquiring of a very old and elegant gentleman in a voice scarcely audible:

"Sir, shall I show you to a seat?"

"What? What? What?" demanded the austere old fellow, holding his hand to his ear.

"Sir," she screamed in a flustered voice, "shall I sew you to a sheet?"—Harper's Magazine.

The "Spell" of Mrs. Langtry.

The Jersey Lily once neatly scored at the expense of George Bernard Shaw, who was then much talked about in London and who was regarded by most folk as the incarnation of audacious egotism.

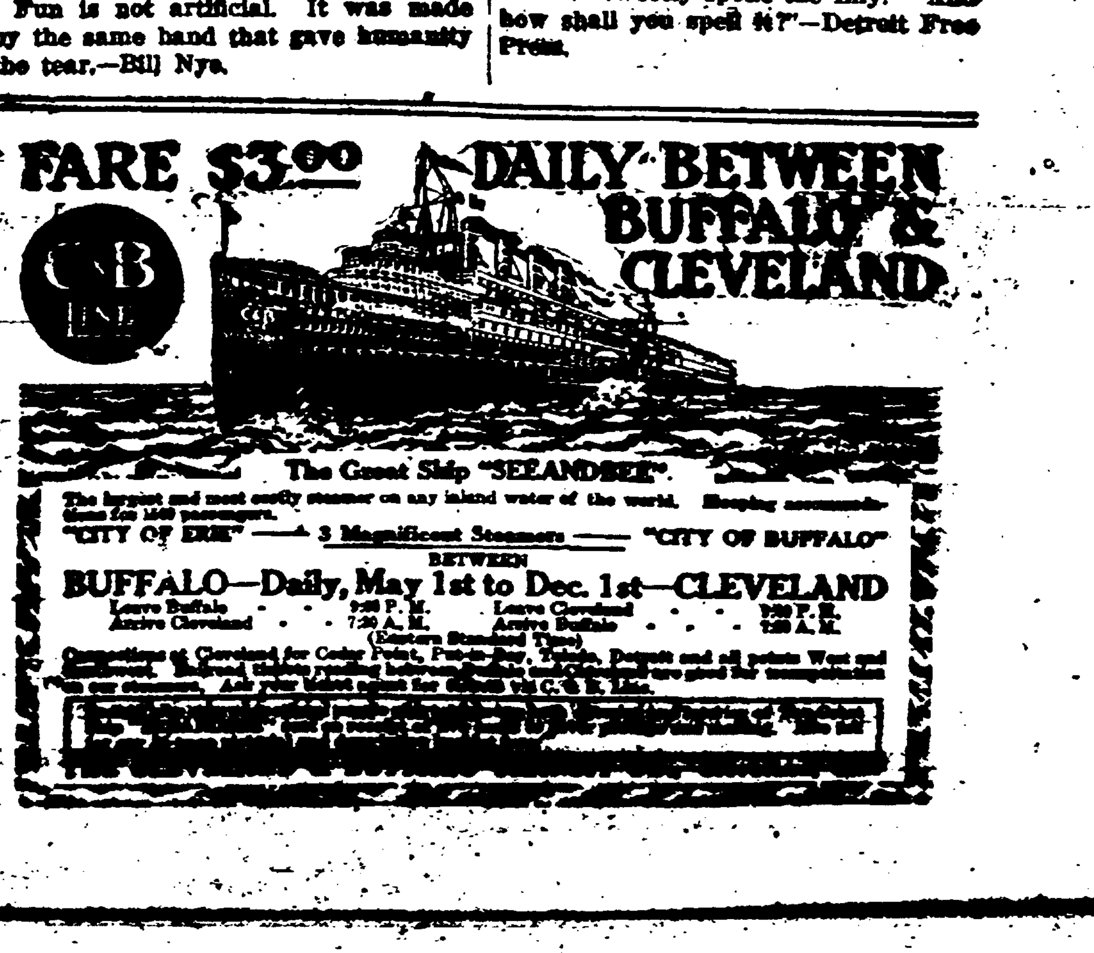
He was commenting on the limitations put upon him in his newspaper articles, among which were characteristic criticisms in the lines of music and drama. He declared that such was the censorship over him by his editors that he really had no freedom to express his opinions in the English press, and it was to Mrs. Langtry that he said:

"I shall publish a magazine some of these days, in which I shall print my opinions on all the topics of the day. I have enough of them to spare. On art, literature, philosophy, music, the drama, socialism, religion and every other subject this magazine shall reflect Shaw. I shall write every line of it too. The experiment may be futile, but the first step shall surely be taken."

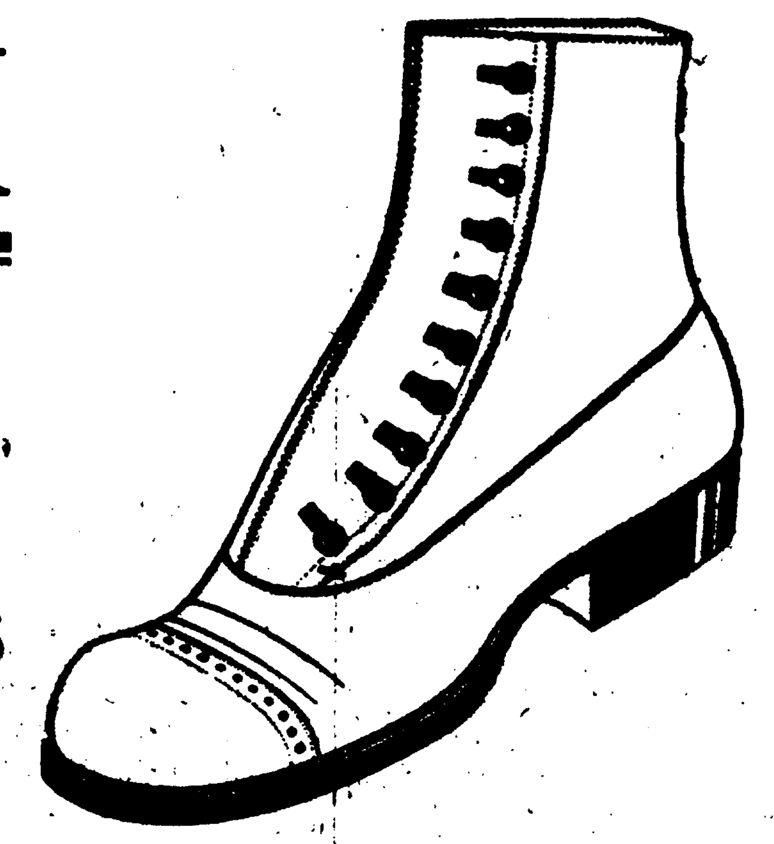
"What shall you call your magazine?" Mrs. Langtry inquired.

"I'll give it a concise and appropriate title by naming it after myself."

"Ah!" sweetly spoke the Lily. "And how shall you spell it?"—Detroit Free Press.



BUSTER WEEK



FOR

BOYS and GIRLS

BOYS' SHOES -- All Sizes up to - - - - 6

GIRLS' SHOES -- All Sizes up to - - - - 2

ALL FOR $1.00 PER PAIR STANDARD GRADES--NO SECONDS

GOOD ONLY FOR WEEK, JUNE 14th and 19th

51 SOUTH FIRST STREET - - - - FULTON, N. Y.

JUNE
the month for WEDDING RINGS
and
GIFTS FOR THE GRADUATE

Kindly call and look over our selections

Wm. C. Morgan
Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

CAHILL'S FRIENDS WANT JUDGE TO BE MERCIFUL

Oswego, June 11.—The appeals for clemency made in behalf of Frederick T. Cahill by his fellow members of the bar of this city and county to Judge Coville in County Court yesterday after his plea of guilty will be supplemented by similar requests from other citizens. The fact that Mr. Cahill is disbarred from the practice of his profession by his admission of guilt is one of the charges against him and the restitution by him of the $300 in the Boudiette case is deemed by his friends to be punishment enough. It is believed that under the circumstances a suspended sentence would be sufficient.

District Attorney Culkin when questioned about the Cahill matter said he had nothing to say as to the sentence to be imposed. He said that the Court, alone, had jurisdiction. Judge Coville will give careful consideration to all the facts and circumstances in imposing sentence.

Sentence will be passed at Pulaski Monday next. In the meantime Mr. Cahill's bail will be continued.

Late Wednesday afternoon Frederick VanDyne, who on Monday withdrew a former plea of not guilty to an indictment charging him with perjury, and pleaded guilty, was brought before the Court at about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon and was given a suspended sentence by Judge Henry D. Coville. VanDyne is placed in the custody of the parole officer for two years and one of the provisions of the parole is that the defendant must pay his wife $12 per month.

It will be recalled that VanDyne was held on two indictments, the second one charging him with attempt to commit bigamy. He became infatuaed with a young woman living at Williamstown and in February last the couple obtained a marriage license of Willard D. Rosa of the town of Williamstown and in answering the usual questions VanDyne declared that he was unmarried, as charged in the indictment, forming the complaint for perjury. The securing of the marriage license in the case of VanDyne, constituted the crime of attempt at bigamy, he being at the time a married man.

Albert Lalonde of Oswego is 16 years old, and pleaded guilty to assault, second degree. He will be sentenced Monday, Court having adjourned to 10 o'clock on that day. It is expected that the civil calendar will be taken up at that time.

HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
FRIDAY
James O'Neil, in THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO
in 5 Parts
In addition to regular program
Admission 10c.

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

FRIDAY:
"THE OUTCAST"
A Mutual Masterpiece in 4 parts
"O'FLANNIGAN'S LUCK" comedy
"THE BUTTERFLY"
Drama

SATURDAY
THE LAND OF THE LOST a drama of intense interest
and 2 others.

SUNDAY
The Powerful, Fascinating Drama, "A DEAL WITH THE DEVIL" and others including Charles Chaplin in "His Musical Car eer"

BOARD ADOPTS BANK RULES

$200,000 Capital Wanted in Cities; Can Invest Only in Loans

Washington, June 10.—Rules to govern the membership of state banks and trust companies in the Federal Reserve system were made public by the Federal Reserve Board. In announcing the regulations, under which the right is reserved to exercise judgment and discretion in considering each individual application, the board said:

"Appreciating fully that the strength of the Federal Reserve system is to be measured by the quality and character of its members rather than by their number, the Federal Reserve Board is prepared to use the broad discertionary power vested in it by the Federal Reserve act to bring about the co-ordination of the different types of banking institutions on a basis of equity and practicability.

"The board has sought, in the regulations governing the admission of state banks and trust companies, to establish only such reasonable standards of admission as necessary to protect the Federal Reserve system and the national banks whose membership in the system is obligatory, against the admission of any bank which would be a source of weakness rather than of strength, and to prescribe such regulations governing their conduct as will insure a reasonable conformity to fundamental principles deemed essential to the success of the new banking system."

$200,000 Capital in Cities.

The regulations make eligible banks and trust companies incorporated under state laws, having paid up capital of $25,000 in towns of from 3,000 to 6,000; $100,000 in towns of from 6,000 to 50,000 and in $200,000 in cities of more than 50,000. Such banks will be allowed to ask for reserve bank stock to the amount of 6 per cent of their capital and surplus. Then the application would be investigated by a committee consisting of the district Federal Reserve agent, the governor of the Reserve Bank, and a director of the Reserve Bank, whose recommendation would be submitted to the Federal Reserve Board.

In passing on the application, the following points will be especially considered:

"The financial condition of the applying bank or trust company and the general character of its management.

"Whether the nature of the powers exercised by the bank and its charter provisions are consistent with the proper conduct of the business of banking and membership in the Federal Reserve Bank.

"Whether the laws of the state in which the applying bank is located contain provisions likely to interfere with the proper regulations and supervision of member banks."

Board Reserves Great Rights.

In issuing a certificate of approval the board reserves the right to impose such conditions "as will insure compliance with the Federal Reserve act and the regulations.' State banks entering the system will be allowed to invest "only in loans on real estate and mortgages of a character and to an extent which, considering the nature of its liabilities, will not impair its liquid condition," and "shall maintain such improvements and changes in its banking practice as may have been specifically required of it by the Federal Reserve Board as a condition of its admission.

Loans by a bank on its own stock or to a single borrower will be limited to 10 per cent. of its capital and surplus.

A method is provided for state banks withdrawing from the system on twelve months' notice. The board anounces its intention of accepting examinations of state banks by the state authorities when conditions are satisfactory.

NIAGARA FALLS PRIEST HAS SERVED 25 YEARS

Niagara Falls, June 10.—Many noted clergymen of the Roman Catholic church from near and far yesterday paid a glowing tribute to the Rev. Felix Scullin, irremovable pastor of St. Mary's church, this city, who was ordained to the priesthood 25 years ago.

Beginning with a solemn high mass yesterday morning, the celebration continued throughout the day and well into the night, concluding with a handsome presentation to the priest who is beloved by all his parishioners and whose parish is by far the largest in the city.

At the mass and the banquet which followed there were upwards of 100 priests present from all parts of the State and also the province of Ontario, across the border. Chief of these, was the Right Rev. M. J. Fallon, Bishop of the Diocese of London, Ontario, who officiated at the mass and also presided at the banquet which followed.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

Sewing Machines—all makes; priced from $5.00 to $25.00. Bogue's Piano Store, 61 First st.—adv.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Pittsburgh.
New York at St. Louis.
Brooklyn at Cincinnati.
Philadelphia at Chicago.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 2; Boston. 1.
St. Louis, 13; New York, 2.
Brooklyn, 2; Cincinnati, 2 (called).
Chicago-Philadelphia (rain).

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Philadelphia	25	19	.568
Chicago	24	19	.558
Brooklyn	23	21	.523
Boston	22	22	.500
St. Louis	24	24	.500
Pittsburgh	22	22	.500
New York	17	23	.425
Cincinnati	17	24	.415

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Detroit at Boston
Cleveland at Philadelphia.
Chicago at New York.
St. Louis at Washington.

Results Yesterday

Chicag, 5; New York, 4.
Philadelphia, 11; Cleveland, 1.
Washington, 8; St. Louis, 2.
Boston, 6; Detroit, 5.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	31	17	.646
Detroit	31	19	.628
Boston	22	18	.545
Washington	21	20	.512
New York	20	23	.465
Cleveland	19	25	.432
St. Louis	18	28	.391
Philadelphia	17	29	.370

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Chicago at Kansas City.
Buffalo at Baltimore.
Newark at Brooklyn.

Results Yesterday

Kansas City, 5; Chicago, 3.
Newark, 9; Broklyn, 7 (1st game).
Brooklyn, 2; Newark, 1 (2d game).
Buffalo, 6; Baltimore, 3 (1st game).
Baltimore, 13; Buffalo, 5 (2d game).

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	29	19	.604
Pittsburgh	25	19	.568
Brooklyn	26	22	.542
Newark	24	21	.512
St. Louis	22	21	.512
Chicago	24	23	.511
Baltimore	17	29	.370
Buffalo	18	31	.367

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Binghamton at Syracuse.
Troy at Wilkesbarre.
Albany at Scranton.
Elmira at Utica.

Results Yesterday

Syracuse, 6; Binghamton, 5; 10 ing.
Utica, 7; Elmira, 0.
Scranton, 7; Albany, 1.
Wilkesbarre, 4; Troy, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	18	12	.600
Elmira	19	14	.576
Troy	15	13	.536
Wilkesbarre	16	15	.516
Scranton	14	14	.500
Binghamton	13	15	.464
Albany	12	18	.400
Syracuse	12	18	.400

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Toronto at Montreal.
Rochester at Buffalo.
Providence at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Providence, 11; Jersey City, 3.
Newark, 4; Richmond, 3.
Rochester, 12; Buffalo, 1.
Montreal, 3; Toronto, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	18	13	.581
Providence	19	16	.543
Rochester	19	16	.543
Richmond	19	17	.528
Montreal	20	18	.526
Toronto	17	20	.459
Newark	15	19	.441
Jersey City	14	22	.389

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	4	10	1
Indianapolis	7	12	3
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
Milwaukee	2	6	3
Louisville	5	9	3
At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	6	9	1
Columbus	1	4	3
At Cleveland—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	4	8	2
Cleveland	5	9	0

ONE CLAUSE WORTH ALL CHARTER COST

Olean, June 10.—The revision of the charter of the city of Olean which was recently adopted cost the city $348.90, all of which with the exception of $50 for typewriting the same, goes to Attorney Allen G. Hastings, who drafted the charter. Mayor Simpson stated the one clause which provided that the county clerk collect the delinquent taxes makes it worth the entire amount to the city.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 149 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1915 | Price One Cent

American Can Judge Neutrality Only By Being Neutral

Amsterdam, June 12.—A Berlin dispatch to the Cologne Volks Zeitung says:

"Without doubt Mr. Lansing, in comparison with Mr. Bryan, is a man of very sharp tone, but the German press will do well not to inquire too anxiously whether he is a man of sharp or of peaceful tone.

"Our submarine war will not cease on that account. If American ships or Americans in British ships enter the war zone they must, despite Mr. Lansing and President Wilson, take the risk involved in such a voyage. America can claim the right to judge neutrals' rights only when she herself maintains neutrality. Such was not the case under the pacifist Mr. Bryan and probably will be just as little the case under the international law expert Mr. Lansing."

The Vossische Zeitung, of Berlin, says:—

"The note probably will not be answered sooner than two weeks, because the arrival of Dr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard with special messages from Count von Bernstorc, the German Ambassador at Washington, to the German government must be awaited. His arrival is not expected before June 17 and the answer cannot be prepared until after this."

The note, messages from Berlin declare, has been well received in official quarters.

The American Ambassador, Mr. James W. Gerard, presented the note at the German Foreign Office at ten minutes after ten P.M. yesterday. Diplomatic circles regard it as decidedly conciliatory in tone, far more so than the first reports reaching Berlin by cable had led them to expect.

Immediately upon the delivery of the note at the Foreign Office, Herr von Jagow, the Foreign Minster, had copies of it made for the Chancellor, Headquarters and the Admiralty. Herr von Jagow asked to be excused from any comment on the note until the various officials directly concerned had an opportunity to familiarize themselves with its contents.

No steps have yet been taken in Berlin for the publication of the note. The German government, which has decided to defer an answer to President Wilson until the arrival in Berlin of Dr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard, the representative of Count von Bernstorc, the German Ambassador to Washington, would, it is said, have been better pleased if the note had not been given out for the present in the United States in order to avoid newspaper comment in the interim.

N. Y. LINER CAUGHT IN SHOWER OF BOMBS

New York, June 12.—A aerial attack on three British trawlers in the North Sea and the flight of two Zeppelins that later on dropped bombs on the British coast near Ramsgate, close enough to the ship for the explosions to be heard, were described by officers and passengers of the Holland-American Line steamship Nieuw Amsterdam, which arrived here late yesterday from Rotterdam.

The Nieuw Amsterdam left Rotterdam for New York May 29. On the same day, officers and passengers said, they met a fleet of three British steam trawlers. Soon after there appeared, coming from the direction of Ostend, three German biplanes, which immediately opened an aerial attack on the trawlers.

The trawler, rushing about in a zigzag course, proved to be hard marks for the fliers to hit, ten bombs being dropped in all, none of which took effect.

One of the trawlers, seeking safety, took up a position as close as she could get under the bows of the Nieuw Amsterdam, where her pilot managed to hang close until the German fliers turned about, heading back toward the coast.

The bombs as they were dropped could be plainly seen, and accounts generally agreed that they were apparently of about 50 to 60 pounds weight each. Exploding when they struck the water, they threw geysers into the air to a height of twenty to thirty feet.

On the night of June 3, while the steamer was lying in the Downs, passengers witnessed the passage overhead of two big Zeppelins. Theyy were moving toward Ramsgate at a high rate of speed, apparently more than 2,000 feet high.

Soon after their passage there came to the ears of those on board the sound of six heavy explosions, and in the distance could be seen flashes of light resembling distant lighting. It was later reported that the explosion were from Zeppelin bombs dropped near Ramsgate.

On June 4, the day the Nieuw Amsterdam was released, the passengers again had a sight of an aerial war craft—this time a dirigible flying the British flag. The dirigible circled over the water in their vicinity. Apparently on a scouting cruise.

In the downs five German reservists were taken off the Nieuw Amsterdam. One of the five was Heinrich Kornahrens, who lived for five years in San Francisco. Two others, Isak and Moritz Aronfrau, first cabin passengers, took $150,000 in cash with them when taken off. In the purser's office they had a package of diamonds valued at $250,000. This package was handed over to the Collector of the Port when the ship arrived. It will be kept in the Appraisers Stores until after the war.

"PARLORS" MUST CLOSE, MIDNIGHT

Alderman Objects to Discrimination Between Public and Club Amusements

Although the weather conditions at 8 o'clock last night were such that a meeting of the Common Council was a remote possibility, Aldermen Quirk, Gardner, Foster and Disston appeared at City Hall and some time later Mayor Fox and Alderman Baker made their appearance, and the session was held, with Alderman Sullivan the only absentee.

Several resolutions introduced at the meeting failed to meet with the approval of Alderman Foster, although the rest of the Board voted in favor of them. Mr. Foster first entered an objection to the bill of Buell Bros., plumbers, who installed the bath room fixtures, showers, etc., in the City Hall recently. According to Mr. Foster, Buell Bros. estimate was less than $50 and the bill rendered last night totaled $86.43. Of this amount $24.25 is due for labor and the remainder for materials. In view of the fact that the estimate was less than half of the bill, Alderman Foster objected to the payment of the bill, claiming it exorbitant. Mayor Fox recommended that the bill be paid, but after some discussion the bill was referred to the committee in charge of the work, comprising Messrs. Sullivan, Baker and Gardner.

The new city ordinance which will regulate the operation of bowling alleys, pool and billiard tables and gambling houses was introduced and passed although here again Alderman Foster objected to the clause which will compel all pool parlors to close their doors at 12 midnight. This will also apply to bowling alleys, and these places must also be closed on Sunday. Alderman Foster remarked that the various clubs and fraternal organizations of the town are allowed to operate their pool and billiard tables until they see fit to close, and deemed any rule which would control some and not all of the places in the city, an unfair one. The Mayor stated that the 12 o'clock rule must be enforced for the reason that many of the saloons in the city have pool tables on their premises and the fact that the pool tables are in operation after the closing hour of the saloons affords many opportunities for illicit selling of liquor. Alderman Disston said that midnight was late enough for anyone to be abroad.

The license for the pool and billiard tables was fixed at $5 for one table and $2.50 for each additional one for the term of one year. For one bowling alley a license fee of $10 will be charged, and for each additional alley, $5.

After the report of Commissioner of Charities Woodbury had been read it was announced that it will be necessaryr to borrow the sum of $1,000 with which to pay the bills of the department for the past month and the month of June. The money will be borrowed and paid back from the Excise fund which will be collected in October. In making his report, the Commissioner stated that the industrial conditions of the city are worse than they have been in years. Fifty families on the West Side alone are slowly starving to death, according to Mr. Woodbury, and although many foreigners have left the city there are many who cannot leave and must stay here and await the inevitable change in industrial conditions, which, however may not come for some time. The Commissioner stated that the plight of these people is not realized by the citizens at large and he is sure that many wealthy residents of the city would aid materially if they knew the distressing conditions which obtain among the poorer classes and especially the foreigners here.

Along this line, the Mayor stated that a committee from the Belgian Relief Committee had interviewed him yesterday for the purpose of ascertaining where a concert might be held in thisc ity next Friday night, the proceeds of which will go into the relief fund for the Belgians. Alderman Disston declared that something of the sort is needed right here in Fulton and several of the aldermen voiced the opinion that charity begins at home. The Mayor told the board he had offered the relief committee the use ofthe City Hall provided no other place for a meeting was offered. He added that the Elks or some other fraternal order may be given the opportunity to stage the affair. A nominal admission fee will be charged and the entertaining talent will be furnished by thec ommission.

The sum of $375 was appropriated for the Lee Memorial hospital, and $10 for postage for the various departments at the City Hall. $200 was voted to Post Schenck, G. A. R.; $25 was voted to the Mayors' Conference for the benefit of the Information bureau which has been established by the conference. Aledrman Quirk stated that the amount was small for a city this size, and Alderman Foster promptly argued that it was large enough, when the city has to borrow money continually. Thomas Mahar was given a permit to build an addition to his shop at the corner of 5th and Erie sts.

Andrew W. Stoneburgh, through his attorney, Claude E. Guile, entered a claim for $500 damages against the city, as a result of the flooding of his premises on 1st st., due, according to the claim, to inadequate storm sewers in that vicinity. The claim was referred to the city attorey. Mr. Stoneburgh claims that his premises have been inundated on three separate occasions and that his house and grounds have suffered severely as a result.

The sum of $75,155 was on hand in the bank June 1, according to the report of City Chamberlain George Washburn.

The Mayor read a communication form the National Americanization Day committee recommending that July 4 be celebrated here as an Americanization day. The full details are printed in another column.

Husky, agile men who are not employed atp resent are asked to present themselves at the City Hall Monday night when the Council will meet again, at which time applications for the position of City Dog Catcher will be received. The Dog Catcher this year must be able to provide a detention place or pound for the canines and a suitable commission will be paid for all unlicensed dogs. In view of the fact that many men are unemployed here at present, the list ot applicants Monday should be a large one.

The Mayor read a communication from the United States recruiting station at Buffalo, asking the city to provide room for a branch recruiting station here. A letter has been written to the Buffalo headquarters asking the requirements of the station and the mattet will be decided Monday night.

The subject of summer band concerts was informally discussed after the meeting had adjourned and when mention was made of an appropriation for the concerts, Alderman Foster recommended that bridges be built with the public funds instead of financing band concerts. Alderman Baker also recommended that the Superintendent of Public Works build the bridges under the supervision of the City Engineer instead of letting the contract to an outside party. There are hundrerds of men in the city who would be glad of a chance to work for $1.50 per day on the bridge work and with the Superintendent and City Engineer in charge the city could save money, according to Aledrman Baker.

LET HIM SEE AMERICA FIRST.

—Chapin in St. Louis Republic.

German Division Annihilated; 9561 Prisoners Taken

Petrograde, June 12.—The Russian infantry with surprising ease, has inflicted a succession of great defeats on the Germans in eastern Galicia.

The main attack of the Germans was at Mosciska with heavy guns on the railways, but it was spent before the Germans reached the babrbed-wire entanglements of the main position. They retreated in the utmost disorder, leaving thousands of dead.

Simultaneously, the Russians started an enveloping movement against General Linsingen's army, which had crossed the Dniester. The Russian infantry, with magnificent dash, attacked the Germans, who had a quantity of 3-inch guns, and drove them from the woods. They annihilated an entire division and captured 261 officers, 9,300 men, seventeen field guns and forty-nine machine guns. The fighting lasted two days.

The Germans are now entirely surrounded to the southward of the Dniester. Evidently they had intended to develop in enormous force here and were headed by the Prussian Guards. They advanced rapidly toward Halicz to conduct the main attack on Lemberg, but all their movements were easily frustrated.

The Germans now are apparently waiting for reinforcements. They have lost in sir weeks in Galicia more lives than in the previous six months against Russia.

Everywhere the Russians are in close contact with the Austro-Germans.

There are signs that the Germans are developing activity north of the Pilica, in Poland, and toward the Niemen with heavy artillery and chemical laboratories in hopes of drawing the main Russian strength there.

The latest Russian success was achieved solely with the bullet and bayonet. Scarcely a shell has been fired in the last fortnight. This strategy is regarded as a triumphant vindication of General [illegible].

BIKE OWNER ROBBED; TOOL KIT AWAITS THIEF

Howard "Pop" James, so named because of his skill at pop-corn making, the genial soda mixer at the Onyx, suffered a severe loss yesterday, and has lost some of his geniality. Recently "Pop" bought a new bike and yesterday he left the wheel standing outside of the store. Some few hours later the wheel was missing and attempts to trace it have thus far, been in vain. The police were notified and a full description of the vehicle given, even to the number of spokes, all of which information "Pop" had at hand.

He stated last night that a tool kit came with the wheel when he bought it and if the thief does not intend to return the wheel he can have the tool kit by calling at the Onyx.

HUMANS ATTACKED BY CATTLE DISEEASE

Grafton, W.Va., June 12.—A malady similar to the foot and mouth disease and which has affected almost a score of persons and more than fifty animals in Taylor and Barbour counties, is attracting the attention of health officers.

Three families south of Grafton quarantined today. The disease is known scientically as sarcoptem scahbize equi.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street
Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening
Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
E. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1906, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Saturday, June 12, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

A Voice from the Grave

The refusal of the Prison Commission of the State of Georgia, by a vote of two to one, to recommend the commutation of Leo M. Frank's punishment to imprisonment for life, places much emphasis upon the letter written by Judge Roan, before whom Frank was tried for murder. The letter was written to Frank's attorneys, and permission was given to use it if necessary. It takes on much significance, as it comes as a voice from the grave.

It would seem to the lay mind that the Governor of Georgia cannot well ignore the significance of this posthumous evidence of the judge who presided at the trial of Frank. In that letter Judge Roan declared:

It is possible that I showed undue deference to the opinion of the jury in this case, when I allowed their verdict to stand. I do not believe that a person should meet the extreme penalty of the law until the court, jury and governor shall all have been satisfied of the prisoner's guilt.

Judge Roan said, further, that, as he was still unconvinced of Frank's guilt, he would express and enlarge upon his views directly to the Governor and the Prison Commission. But before he had an opportunity to do so this conscientious judge was summoned by death.

It is not a light thing to disregard—on demand of public clamor—the dying message of the justice who presided at the trial of Frank. Before his death he made it plain that he was not without a reasonable doubt of Frank's guilt; a doubt which remained after opportunity for calm reflection. Until his death this doubt remained. In this country every person accused of crime is held to be entitled to benefit by reasonable doubt of his guilt. And it must be remembered that it is now a question of granting Frank his freedom. It is a case of grave danger of committing the crime of executing a man whose guilt is doubtful.—Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

Americanization Day

To the immigrant lately arrived in America, largely ignorant of its language, its customs, its point of view, the fire-cracker on the Fourth of July no doubt conveyed a certain crude impression of the American valuation of independence, democracy and personal liberty. He could understand its simple staccato message much more plainly than that of the exercises, conducted in an alien tongue and to which he is not especially invited, which have since been substituted, thanks to the success through out the country of the Safe and Sane Fourth idea.

No one, unless it be the firecracker manufacturer, can desire the return of the old type of insane Fourth, but it has become increasingly evident that as a nation we cannot afford to sacrifice the opportunity which the day offers of letting the immigrant know how we feel about the basic principles underlying our institutions. The menace of the hyphen is looming too large longer to be ignored. Something must be done.

That something the Americanization Day Committee purposes to do by replacing the voice of the humble and imperfect firecracker on this year's Fourth (and this should mean succeeding Fourths as well) with that of those citizens best qualified to tell the immigrant at receptions and meetings to which he has been especially invited just what it means to become an American. The committee, of which Mr. Frank Trumbull is chairman, will maintain a bureau of information to furnish as many communities as it can interest in its campaign with all the assistance in its power toward the carrying out of programs on the fourth which will emphasize the advantages of citizenship, of the learning of English, of civics and of fuller participation in American life. This campaign deserves the co-operation and support of every patriot.—New York Tribune.

BUILD ON A ROCK

When Judge Ben Lindsey comes to Fulton next month and speaks from the Chautauqua platform it is just possible the Judge will tell why boys declare war upon themselves or deface and destroy that which should be precious, yes, even sacred to them.

The cases of the young men in Fulton, those who were members of the graduating class, turning at the twelfth hour upon possessions within the walls of an institution that has given them gifts more precious than jewels, is significant.

The act, or the intended mischief, has to the thinker more importance than a misplaced sense of humor. Real malice could not have been in the minds of the young men, but ignorance, that root of all evil was undoubtedly the cause. This is something every intelligent man and woman in the community should face. The community has not and does not bestir itself at any time to make its young people feel themselves a part of the community. The cultivation of public spirit is a dead or dormant quality in Fulton and it is inexcusable. The young people, the ones who will make or break Fulton in the years to come should be given their place in public life now. The responsibility of solving public problems should be placed in the confidence of high school pupils. Their interest, their intelligence, their respect and their co-operation must be sought. This is not a task for the teachers but for the public.

When we place within the keeping of a sane, intelligent person a gift of value, explain its worth, and entrust its care the trust is not often betrayed.

To give with all honor our public spirit into the hands of young men and women that it may be nurtured, to flourish like the green bay tree, would be to build our proud little city upon a very rock.

"Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates."

BURYING THE MOOSE

Medill McCormick, who "went back" some time ago, has declared that the European war and industrial conditions have practically obliterated the Progressive party. It remains now, he insists, only for the former Bull Moose to decide whether they are Republicans or Democrats. He is backed up in that position by that stalwart Roosevelt man, Alexander H. Revell, who says he never left the Republican party, but merely supported Roosevelt against Taft.

That is what most of the Progressives did. The other, who went into the party for social justice's sake, have discovered that the Progressive party offered no better opportunities to fight for humaniy's advancement than the old parties did. Newer, it was no less the creature of personalities, of machine methods, of bossism. If it hadn't its Barnes and Penroses, its Murphys and Taggarts, it had its Perkinses and Flinns. Consequently, most of the social justices are a lot more uplifted now and a lot less Progressive than they were in 1912. The Progressive party is not yet gone—there remains Perkins and Governor Johnson. But it is going fast.—New York Tribune.

Attacking the President

Mr. Bryan, he of the voluble tongue, has started his attacks. They are directed against the President's second note to Germany ostensibly, but in reality they have the effect of an attack upon the President himself. This man has worked himself up to a frenzy of believing that he is right. He did the same thing in '96. At that time the people of the country said to him that it might be that he was right, but that they were of a different opinion. They are saying the same thing to him again. Yet he cannot see it.

He talked the other day to the newspaper men about the old hen and her brood. He said that she was cross and irritable because she found it necessary to hold so much under her wing. Applying tne analogy to himself he said that he, too, was cross and irritable because he had been trying to hold so much under his wing. Yes, for 20 years he has been clucking away from one end of the coutnry to the other because of the great problems and their solutions, and Americans have given about as much attention to what he has said as the farm hands do to the mother hen as she sounds that strange alarm when a cloud passes overhead, which she mistakes for an eagle. Bryan has always been mistaking soft, wind-tossed clouds for birds of prey.

Even that small minority of Americans, who are inclined to take the same views as Mr. Bryan onour present crisis fear the Greeks even though they come bearing gifts. He has started his campaign of publicity too vigorously. It points too sure to 1916. Today he gives out a statement directed to the American people; tomorrow he will issue another statement, an appeal to German-Americans. It has always been an established principle of American politics and governmental matters that administration in power is to be given free reign by the opposition in the conduct of foreign affairs. Americans of all parties have done this in the present crisis, yet Mr. Bryan, of whom most was to be expected, has made an attack on the judgment of the administration, the like of which has seldom been known in the annals of our history.

Wilson's first judgment was right. If he had been able five years ago to have knocked the Commoner into a cocked hat the country would have been saved much annoyance and the Democratic administration much embarrassment.—Watertown Times.

Sewing Machines—all makes; priced from $5.00 to $25.00. Bogue's Piano Store, 61 First st.—adv.

WOMEN'S TEMPERANCE UNION NEWS NOTES

The Kansas supreme court has declared valid the will of Dr. Henry Wisner, the late wealthy Barber county land owner, under the provisions of which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Kansas will receive property valued at from $20,000 to $40,000. It is stipulated that the bequest to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is "for the purpose of carrying on a fight against the liquor traffic." Experiences in his own family are said to have made Dr. Wisner a strong opponent of the liquor traffic.

* * *

The Baker Stove Company of Belleville, Ill., not long ago issued an order that its 400 employes no longer will be permitted to drink intoxicants while at work. In an effort to increase the efficiency of the men and decrease the number of accidents, the foundry managers are encouraging the men to drink milk in place of beer, and are providing ice with which to cool the milk.

The managers of the sixteen other foundries in Belleville are said to be watching the experiment and may issue issue similar orders concerning drinking to their workmen.

"We are not posing prohibitionists,' said George Baker, superintendent of the Baker Stove Company, "but we believe we can increase the efficiency of our men and reduce the number of accidents in the shop if the men are not allowed to drink when at work.

"Statistics gathered by the Illinois Manufacturers' Association and the American Foundrymen's Association show that liquor and good work in foundries are enemies. Under the new Illinois Workmen's Compensation act the employer is liable for all accidents that occur in his plant and we wish to reduce the number of accidents in our place to a minimum."

Charles L. Huston, vice-president of a large steel company at Coatesville, Pa., has stated the decrease in accidents in his mills was fifty-four per cent. in six months, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He attributed the reduction in the number of accidents to the removal of the saloons from the town. Wallace H. Rowe, president of the Pittsburgh Steel Co., in a letter to the license judges of Westmoreland county, Pa., said, "We have experienced a growing inefficiency in the service of our men in the mills resulting in accidents and death, largely attributed to the heavy use of beer and whisky." He said that eighty-five per cent. of the accidents in his mills were due directly or indirectly to liquor.

In an effort to find something to take the place of beer for the men during working hours, William H. Barr, president of the National Founders' Association of Buffalo, N. Y., had a large ice box built and finally persuaded his men to buy milk and keep it in the ice box until ready for consumption.

It was after studying the reports of these men high in the foundry world that the Baker plant at Belleville decided to prohibit beer drinking in their plant. "Our men never drank to excess," said Superintendent Baker, "but the fact that they did drink increased the danger of accidents. I called them together one day and explained the whole situation to them. I told them it would be a move for safety first, and they finally saw the thing the way I did. Now there is no objection to the rule at all. Some of the men bring milk with them and keep it on ice, while others buy milk during the day, instead of beer."

REMAINS A BABY

Yonkers, June 11.—Miss Eva Jarvis twenty years old, of this city, is held for safe keeping because she insists on being fed through a nursing bottle because of a delusion she has that she is a one-year-old infant.

Alfred Fox, charities commissioner, ordered her committed to a hospital yesterday for observation. A commission of three doctors will examine her as to her sanity.

WATER GLASS
EGG PRESERVER
By the Quart or Gallon
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Special Sale
on
Bikes, Tires, Supplies
Big Reduction from Regular Prices
BOGUE'S, 61 First Street

MR. SMITH

By I. E. Hyde

No, wife; I will not go to church,
So save your breath, I say.
Your themes may take another lurch—
Another drift today.

I'll pay your pew rent on the square.
So choose one where you will.
But Jones will never see me there—
He owes too big a bill.

The preacher's sermons are all rot;
He talks of politics.
He motions out the turkey-trot—
No wonder Johnson kicks.

And Chester says the preacher's wife
Wears feathers in her hat;
And that she lives an outdoor life.
What do you think of that?

Ned Tod says, that the preacher man
Preaches from chunks of coal.
While Bill declares those objects can
Please children that are droll.

So wife, you take the kids along
To hear those object themes.
I've got to work—I know it's wrong
To hoist and place those beams.

Tonight—you say—Oh, no; old girl;
I'll be too tired to go.
I guess I'll join the motion whirl
And see a picture show.

I have no use for church work now,
Their policies are slow.
Their systems often raise a row,
But not with me—oh, no.

My soul may rest in peace some day,
At least, I hope it will.
Don't talk to me of church, I say;
For heaven sake! keep still.

To please you, then, I'll go tonight.
—I'm here in church at last—
And—oh, my God; just help me fight
My sins. Forgive the past.

I have been slow to understand
The better part of life.
So help me reach the heavenly land
With the children and my wife.

IMPORTERS DENOUNCE GREAT BRITAIN'S ACTS

New York, June 11.—Detention by British commerce restrictions of non-contraband merchandise worth more than $30,000,000 at neutral ports of Europe adjacent to Germany and Austria was denounced to President Wilson yesterday in a letter prepared by a committee representing practically all of the large importing firms of New York city.

Such action was authorized at a conference held by members of such firms at the Hotel Vanderbilt.

As the merchandise in question was all manufactured and has been consigned to importers here by German and Austrian manufacturers, the delegates to the conference yesterday admittedly foresaw in their protest to the President anotherr international complication. This, they say, should properly be made the subject of diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Great Britain.

Importers Take Aaction.

The fact that the greater part of the merchandise held up by British order is in the class of seasonable goods required by the fall and holiday trade prompted the importers to take radical action.

All this merchandise, it was explained yesterday, was contracted for in Germany and Austria prior to March 1, when the British restraining order was issued. Whether it is released or not, it will have to be paid for by the American importers, the manufacturers having completed their part of the contract by producing the merchandise for shipment.

A nother complication is that in many instances importers here already have old merchandise which they now are unable to budge from Europe.

Included in the supplies held up are toys, novelties, notions, art works, such as calendars, laces, embroideries, glassware, silk and leather gloves, linens and miscellaneous dry goods. The United States Government, according to the importers, is being deprived of $12,000,000 in duties because of the British order-in-council.

STOLEN REGENTS' PAPERS NOT YET FOUND

Two developments in the investigation of the theft of the regents' examination papers from the Baldwinsville High school are expected today. One is the arrest of persons believed to know something about the missing papers and the other is a statement from the Board of Regents at Albany regarding means by which the members of the senior class can be graduated.

Today is the last school day before the examinations, which would originally begin on Monday morning and last through the week. Detectives are believed to be at work in the village, and from all apeparances their investigation has gradually narrowed to two students.

The theory that the regents will allow the students to pass on their yearly rating still prevails, especially because many of the pupils are sons and daughters of farmers residing outside of the village, who are obliged to pay for tuition. If they should be held up because of the missing papers the year's work would be lost.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively.
Adv.

All Kinds of
GARDEN SEEDS
by the ounce or pound at
LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Unnecessary Risk

There is no good reason for taking the risk of fire or theft by leaving your valuables at home.

Our Fire and Burglar Proof Vault is the place of Safety.

Deposit Boxes for rent

$3.00 and Up per Year

PURE ICE CREAM

THE RICHEST AND MOST SANITARY

Served at our Fountain and Tables. Made with Heavy Cream, the Best Flavors and Fresh Fruits.

OUR FOUNTAIN DRINKS ARE UNEQUALED

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

Why bother with uncertainties? PURCHASE A UNITED STATES 5000 Mile Guaranteed Tire and you will get there.

Your Hardware Dealer

L. P. SMITH CO.

Burglary Charge Not to be Pressed

Rumors to the effect that the three high school students who were arrested in the school building a few nights ago were to be prosecuted in the city courts were dispelled this morning by Judge Wilson who stated that he had never announced nor had, in fact, been consulted upon any action of that character. The Judge was much provoked at the attitude of the papers, and said practically all of them had little regard for facts and printed news, and particularly news pertaining to the police courts, without consulting him or getting first hand information.

The newspaper which printed an elaborate account of the High school escapade came in for some criticism and the Judge stated that the boys had been worked up to a high pitch of excitement and apprehension by newspaper stories to the effect that they were to be prosecuted for burglary.

It was learned this morning that the Board of Education will be requested, probably by a petition, to reinstate the boys who were expelled, so that they may take the Regents' examinations and graduate with their class. Public opinion seems to favor another chance for the lads who will, according to the present ruling, lose the benefits of four years' hard work through their foolish prank. There are some members of the Board of Education who favor the repeal of the expulsion edict, it is said, but on the other hand, some claim that this will be a lesson to others and the order should stand.

We are Agents for

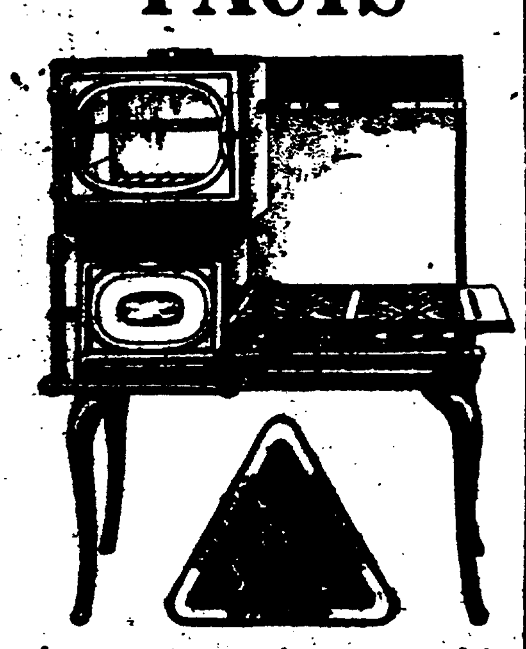
CHASE & SANBORN'S

Fine Teas and Coffees

LA PORTE'S GROCERY

Oneida St. Hello 75

GAS RANGE FACTS



A gas range must be constructed by experts—under strict tests of every piece of material, if it is to give you long, faithful service. The Moss Special Gas Range is made by a concern who make nothing else, and who bend every energy and spare no expense, to produce the greatest line of gas ranges known today. The sanitary fire enamel finish cleans like a china plate, the patent burners save 25 per cent. in gas. The ovens, broiler and burner grates are a model of convenience. The initial cost is less than for many inferior makes. Why not, in justice to your own best interests, investigate the Moss Special now—many models await you here.

They Lead in

ECONOMY, SANITATION, CONVENIENCE, SERVICE, BEAUTY.

THE GAS CO.

Phone 198

A MILD DISTURBANCE

Those melodious sounds heard by passersby in the vicinity of the Quirk Theatre last night about midnight were neither cries for assistance nor the Oswego Normal Glee Club at rehearsal, but simply an impromptu concert given by a number of the High School orchestra musicians who dropped into the Onyx on their way home. The performance attracted a large number of spectators and earned well-merited applause.

The perpetrators of the crime were "Wah-Sing" Murphy and Alonzo McClellan, the ring leaders of the affair; "Boots" Ferguson, clarinet; "Chesty" Saford, flute; "Professor" Keenan, violin, and Angus Calkins, 'cello. A newspaper reporter tried to accompany the bunch on the piano but was obliged to trail after the first few bars.

JAMES W. BOYCE

James W. Boyce, aged 59 years, died at his home, 37 South 7th st., last evening. Mr. Boyce had been ill some time.

The deceased had lived in Oswego county for the greater portion of his life and was well known here. He followed farming for many years. He is survived by his wife, three daughters, three brothers and three sisters. The daughters are Mrs. Carrie Onderkirk, Mrs. Edith Cole of this city, and Mrs. Bessie Drice of Bowens Corners. The funeral will be held from his late home Monday at 1 o'clock and the body will be taken to Jacksonville, N. Y., where interment will be made.

Bicycle Supplies at Bogue's.—adv.

Pure Creamery Butter

From The Harbor Farms

Made for those who want the best.

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Oneida Street Hello 75

THOMAS H. MARVIN

HEADQUARTERS FOR

BUILDERS' SUPPLIES

Some of our specialties are:

Lehigh Portland Cement

Peerless Wall plaster

Robinson Sewer Pipe

Onondaga Vitrified Brick

Fire Brick, Fire Clay, etc.

Land Plaster Hydrated Lime

Yard:

Corner First and Broadway

CHILDREN'S DAY IN 5 CHURCHES

Celebration Postponed in Two of City Churches Until Next Sunday

Children's Day will be observed generally in the city churches tomorrow. There are two exceptions, however, that of the Free Methodist and Presbyterian churches, the first-named on account of the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. C. Watson, and secondly, because so many of the officers and members of the Presbyterian church have been in attendance upon the Sunday school convention in Albany.

The churches whose Sunday schools will celebrate Children's Day tomorrow are:

Free Methodist Episcopal Church

7:30 P.M.

Song by congregation.

Prayer by pastor.

Exercises and graduation of primary department.

Illustrated song, with lantern slides. "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story."

Drill by five young ladies.

Recitation, Katherine Howe.

Recitation by four primary children.

Illustrated son, with lantern slides, "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Boy Scout selection, Porter Butts.

Illustrated song, "America."

The collection of the evening will go toward the "Student Aid Fund."

Congregational Church

Sunday Morning.

Organ voluntary.

Processional, primary department.

Doxology.

Invocation.

Gloria.

Response reading.

Prayer

Hymn.

Recitation, "Tis Children's Day," Helen Pooler.

Exercise, "God's Little Child," Eunice Decker, Dorothy Chesbro, Geneva Boyd, Vivian Hall, Dorothy McKay, Hazel Hollingsworth.

Song, primary department.

Recitation, Psalm 100; Helen Goldberg, Gertrude Case, Alice Decker, Letha Fitch, Gertrude Hadden, Leona Porter.

Exercise, "Young Volunteers," Alden Blake, George Edward Buell, Thomas Scott, Joseph Dingle, Homer Decaitre, Herbert Davis.

Exercise and song, "The Daisies"; Jessie Terpening, Mary Oathout, Dorothy Stoughtenger, Ruby Franklin, Ruth Chubb, Marjorie Todd, Sylvia Blann, Bessie Stevenson.

Notices.

Offering.

Baptism of children.

Exercise, "What shall we give to the day?" Dolores Swaga, Ninabel Horr, Bernice Palmer, Doris Ackroyd, Edna Hadden, Helen Alexander, Clara Morris, Marion Cook, Mabel Sellman, Florence Wilber, Mary Clark, Thelma Miller, Mary Mansfield, Beatrice Clinch.

Exercise, "Let us be glad," Isabel Loveland, Elizabeth Wilber, Ruth Van Amburg, Marion Chubb.

Exercise, "In the Army of the King:" Roland Quade, Clifford Mansfield, Frank Caster, Thomas Stevenson, Monroe Hall, Richard Clinch, Mahlon Herner, Charles Jarvis.

Exercise and song, "Beautiful Roses of Love"; Gladys Decaire, Mirla La Beef, Florence Swaga, Gladys La Beef.

Graduation exercises—Mary Dey, Thelma Blann, Ruth LaPoint, Lillian Bayley, Thelma Bennett, Ruth Dingle, Rita Lum, Cassie Halstead, Irene Halstead, Violet Ackroyd, Clifford Halstead, Henry Horr, Harvey Blann, Robert Barrett, Walter Andrews, Alanson Loomis, Otis Hudson, Norwood Terpening.

Presentation of diplomas by Mr. Z. Newell, Sunday school superintendent.

Closing hymn.

Benediction.

First Baptist Church

Milton George Buck, Minister

The annual ladies' day of the Central New York Preachers' Association will be held in this church on Monday next. A conference of the preachers at 11 A.M. Dinner served at 1 p.m., after which there will be special addresses, by the ladies present and the meeting will close with an address, "Rambles in the Jungles of India," by Mrs. J. M. Baker of Ongole, India.

The annual Children's Day will be observed on Sunday and the exercises will take the place of the regular Bible school will assemble in their regular places at 10:15 a.m. and march into the auditorium at 10.30 where the following program will be rendered:

March—school.

March .... School

Salute of American Flag...... School

Singing—America........... School

Salute—Christian Flag........ School

Singing—Fling out the Banner, School

Song—On Children's Day..... School

Prayer .... Pastor

Responsive reading, led by superintendent.

Cradle Roll—Welcome.

Song—A Song of Praise, with whistling chorus by the boys' school.

Exercises—Beginners' class.

Address—Supt. F. M. B. Trask.

Exercise—The Trail Dwellers, junior girls.

Bobolink song—Primary and Juniors.

Exercise—The ePace Fleet, Junior boys.

Exercise—Light of World, Junior girls.

Song—Boat Song, School.

Exercise—The Wheel on the Trail, Primary girls.

Song—The Light Bearers, School.

Benediction.

The ordinance of baptism will be administered at the evening service and the pastor will preach on the subject, "The King's Rider."

If you have no church home come to the church of the "Cordial Welcome," Third and Utica sts., and find a welcome awaiting you.

The Christian Endeavor will meet at 6:30 p.m. All young people are urged to be present.

State St. M. E. Church

Rev. H. D. Holmes, Pastor.

There will be baptismal services at the morning hour, and reception of members. The pastor will speak at this service on "Church and the Child."

At 7.30 in the evening the following Children's Day program will be carried out by the Sunday school, under the direction of Mrs. H. D. Holmes.

Carnival of Flowers.

Characters:

Spring—Gladys Stoneburg

Love—Marion Hayes

Joy—Florence Mahlerwein

Purity—Thelma Palmer

Memory—Virginia Cook

White Rose—Lillian Warner

June—Thelma Bogardus

Angel of Flowers—Mary Lockrowe

Children's Day—Helen Clements

Chorus of rose-maidens, daisies, color bearers, flower-girls, pansies, raindrops and sunbeams.

Processional—Orchestra

Chorus—Choir

Prayer

Part I Carnival of Flowers.

Solo, Juanita Beebe.

Part II. Carnival of Flowers.

Offering—Orchestra.

Benediction.

Zion Episcopal Church

Rev. Minor J. Peters, Rector

Sunday, June 13th, second Sunday after Trinity, services as follows:

Holy Communion......... 7.30 a.m.

Sunday school............ 9.30 a.m.

Matins and sermon........ 10.45 a.m.

Evensong and sermon..... 5.00 p.m.

Presbyterian Church

Charles S. Robertson, Pastor

Morning prayer at 10 o'clock, led by Prof. L. D. Wilcox.

Worship by families at 10:30, with sermon theme, "Should the Church Face the Evils of World with a Destructive or a Constructive Program?"

Bible school at noon.

Vesper service at 5 with sermon theme, "The Angels of God."

Christian Science

35 E. First Street.

Christian Science services held on Sunday at 10:45 a.m. and at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the VanWagenen block Mrs. H. A. Allen, first reader; Mrs. Noah Merriam, second reader. You will be welcome and interested to attend one or both services.

The subject for next Sunday is: "God, The Preserver of Man." Golden Text: Jeremiah 32: 40. Responsive Reading: Leviticus 26; 3-13.

First Methodist Church

Rev. J. W. Barrett, Minister

Services on Sunday as follows: Morning worship at 10:30 with sermon, "The Junior Smiths"; object sermon to junior worshippers. "The Sacrifice Hit," of special interest to baseball fans. Baptismal service preceding the regular sermon.

Bible school at noon and Brotherhood at the same hour.

Evening service at 7.30; children's exercises including illustrated hymns and songs on the screen closing with "America," illustrated with 17 artistic slides.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 12.—At last a delegate to the Constitutional Convention has lent an ear to the declaration of several former governors that there should be a State Board of Pardons. On the last day that an amendment could be presented by an individual member of the convention, Delegate Gordon Knox Bell, representing the seventeenth district, came forward with the proposition to take the pardoning power from the executive and vest it in a pardoning board.

It has been argued by more than one governor that the duties of the executive are of such important character that they must needs be continually attended to and that each year they become more multitudinous, precluding a division of attention to matters pertaining to the welfare of the State. In addition, it has been pointed out that the proper consideration of an application for a pardon cannot be given by an executive who has at his elbow innumerable and diversified tasks awaiting attention and who is required to transact them in their order.

Clemency on the part of a governor is not a duty but a high official privilege enjoyed only by the executive. Hundreds of such applications are received yearly, many of which are not even more than casually considered, it is said, because of the length of time which is required to examine into the merits of a request for clemency.

Frequently pardons or commutations of sentences have been granted by governors when the requests have come from the judges who have pronounced sentences which in later life they regard as having been too severe.

The provisions of the proposed amendment by Delegate Bell seek to create a State board of pardons to consist of five members, one to be selected from each judicial district and the fifth to be a commissioner-at-large. The members of the commission are to serve for five years and must be members of the bar of the various counties from which they were chosen.

Though presented, the Bell amendment is said to have been improperly drawn which may mean that it will be amended either on the floor or by the committee on Governor and other state officers, to which it has been referred.

While the board of pardons plan has many advocates, it also has enemies. It has been suggested that with time to devote solely to the examination of applications for release from the penal institutions of the State, the pardoning board will in consequence be besieged with requests to pardon this or that prisoner which may ultimately mean that the list of pardons will yearly grow larger.

This argument is met with the contention that the pardon board as suggested has other functions to perform than that of the haphazard pardoning of felons. Advocates of the Bell amendment declare that many men are today serving time because they have never had the opportunity of having their cases brought to the governor for scrutiny; it is to go thoroughly into the question of whether the application is based upon sound grounds that the proposed board is desired.

Hundreds of applications for pardons are seldom more than opened, inasmuch as the majority of prisoners believe that they have been too severely dealt with and seek to obtain releases through the medium of a pardon. Applications based upon just causes, however, are known to have been passed by because of lack of time to study the case.

MARCONI DEVICE TAPS AUSTRIAN WIRELESS

Paris.—A report issued by Admiral Thaon di Revel, chief of the Italian naval Staff, shows Austrian wireless messages are intercepted regularly by the Italians, says a special dispatch from Rome.

The Italians have been enabled to obtain this information, which is of immense military value, by the use of a new device invented by Guglielmo Marconi. The device is said to make it impossible for the Austrians to intercept Italian messages.

Black's Cookies tickle the palates of old and young, because they are right. adv.

JUNE

the month for

WEDDING RINGS

and

GIFTS FOR THE GRADUATE

Kindly call and look over our selections

Wm. C. Morgan

Jeweler & Optometrist

Fulton, N. Y.

5% Discount

on

ALL GROCERIES

THIS WEEK

Wednesday and Saturday Deliveries

C. C. PORTER

CASH GROCER

350 Broadway Ave. Phone 2375

Cahill's Perfection Bread

is the

BEST BREAD MADE

TRY A LOAF—Sold only at

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Public Accountant

wants a few small sets of books to care for regularly. Books opened or closed. Statements carefully taken off. Prices reasonable. Phone 3304.

THE QUIRK

Today a William Fox feature in four parts entitled The Yellow Traffic, a heartinterest drama that has all the splendid points of these famous productions, and "The Gangster and the Girl," a two-part melodrama, will repay a visit to this popular amusement resort. Tomorrow "A Deal with the Devil" will serve as the feature photo-play supplemented by that funny one, Charles Chaplin in "His Musical Career."

INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds

Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER

Phone 122.

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c

1 Word 3 Times 2c

1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge

10 Cents

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Chattel Mortgage Sale.—One gasoline truck wagon, in good condition, with top; also one light truck same as above, without top. Sale at VanWagenen garage, Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. A. Bristol, Mortgagee's agent. 154

For Sale—Indian motorcycle in excellent condition. $45; quick sale takes it. Will demonstrate at your convenience in Fulton. Address Jno. Park, 141 W. 4th st., Oswego. Phone 556M Oswego. 150c

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

Upper Flat—Moderate rent, 214 Walradt st. 6 rooms and all modern conveniences. H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf.

To Rent—New house in Park st., modern conveniences; electric light; bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

For Sale—Good extra heavy double work harness; $20. G. L. Pratt, 177 E. 1st or phone 56. 149

For Sale—61-acre farm on trolley; also 2 acres and 9-room house. Easy terms. 320 Cayuga st., Fulton. 150c

Lost—Bunch of keys, between post office and 214 S. 3d st. Reward. Return to Times office. 150c

For Sale—31 choice R. I. chicks; 4 weeks old; $6. 811 Emery st. Phone 2271. 150

FRESH VEGETABLES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

FIRE DESTROYS MUCH OF CANADA'S PULP SUPPLY

A residents of Watertown, just returned from a trip into Canada, tells of the destruction wrought by forest fires this year, thus:

"There were many forest fires in that country," said Mr. Elsworth, "and while I saw there I saw 6,000 cords of peeled four-foot wood burned that would have cost $12 a cord here, but there must have been at least $30,000. It was covered by insurance. The International Paper Company also lost some wood. Most trees there are soft woods, and when fire would strike a balsam or spruce, they would ignite the whole length in a twinkling. The river was full of logs, and the fire was so hot that the exposed surface of logs caught, and it was necessary to send 40 miles for fire engines to extinguish the flames. This will mean that deliveries of companies concerned will be delayed. There is little wood being cut this season, because of low price, and because banks in Canada have shut down on loans for lumbering. Some men are cutting only 2,000 or 3,000 cords of pulpwood, where they formerly cut 10,000 and 15,000. The result is that if there is much demand for Canadian pulpwood, prices will go soaring."

The fire seen by Mr. Elsworth was near Ste Euphemie and Rosaire. The Van Dyke Company, which owned it, also lost its camps and barns.

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

FRESH STRAWBERRIES
EVERY DAY
at LaPorte's Grocery
Oneida St. Hello 75

Steer this way for the Insurance that spells peace of mind—our Automobile Accident and Liability Insurance.

The accident that generally occurs is the unavoidable one—but that does not stop the "hold up" suit that costs money to defend, against—BUT our insurance protects you against property and personal damages and the company fights the case.

See us today for rates.

DAVID & MASON AGENCY
55 N. FIRST STREET

CHURCH BOARD DINED IN STYLE

For a Time Every Member Enjoyed Himself, Forgetting War and Rumors of War

An occasion of unusual enjoyment and extreme pleasure was the dinner to the Official Board of the First Methodist church, by host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lockwood, at their home, West Granby, N. Y., Wednesday, June 9th, at six o'clock p.m.

Twenty-seven members of the official board of the church motored out to the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood, there to enjoy a bountiful repast and the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood.

The members of the board present were M. V. Connell, president; Rev. J. W. Barrett, H. L. Paddock, Geo. T. Carner, Watson A. Butts, Geo. B. Palmer, J. J. Morrill, Arnold Bebee, C. E. Dines, F. Burtin, H. L. Waugh, F. J. Parkhurst, Fred Ure, James Robinson, W. J. Lockwood, F. E. Goodjon, J. W. Distin, A. B. Sanford, W. H. Patterson, H. J. Howe, J. E. Stanley, W. E. Perry, Judge H. J. Wilson, E. E. Morrill, J. H. St. Louis, Dr. L. Fowler Joy, Fred Hodges and Edward Joslin.

The last man to alight on arrival of the last car was heard to remark after surveying the countenances of the twenty-six who had preceded him, that he had never seen such a gaunt, hungry looking lot of good natured fellows before in his life—"Why they look like a pack of hungry wolves, seeking what they may devour"—the brother was heard to remark.

Well, it matters not how they looked on arrival before the dinner, but how they looked and acted after the dinner is what the Times' readers will be most interested in. The dinner was served artistically "en course," and if any one knows better how to serve a dinner than our host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood—"Well, show me!" exclaimed the board in unison. The chicken was the real thing and were not the ones stolen from Watson Butts' State street neighbors' henroost either (although Watson was there to help eat them)—and the strawberry shortcake was not short of berries nor lacking with whipped cream. But how those fellows did eat—"Oh, my," you never saw the like. The genial toastmaster in trying to start the toasts got as far as "too full for utterance," when he had to back off—jounce down, and get a new start. Finally the speech making was under way and such a flow of oratory led by the genial toastmaster, H. L. Paddock, you never heard the like.

John W. Distin responded to the first toast, "Our Class Leaders," and gave a brief history of the time honored Methodist class which was the bulwark and strength of early Methodism. J. H. Howe, "our Harry," as we call him, responded to the toast, "Our Stewards." Harry, as is his want, took for his theme, "The Purse-strings of the Church," and proved to the satisfaction of the board that you can no more run a church without money than you can a paper mill without pulp. As to the better of the argument H. J. had it from the start and no one arose to dispute him. The occasion was taken advantage of by the staunch friends of Mr. Howe, to boom him for district delegate to the quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which meets at Saratoga Springs next year. While "our Harry" is worthy of the honor and in every way capable, yet there is a lurking danger in sending him to Saratoga since it is known that Mr. Howe is the exact counterpart or replica of the Hon. Senator Brackett of Saratoga and it is feared that a serious mix-up might occur—for instance suppose the coachman of Senator Brackett should inveigle our Harry into the Senator's carriage and take him to the races while the Senator in his stead should be escorted into the delegate seat of "our Harry," during his absence at the races. Where the resemblance is so marked, such a thing as well as others might occur.

M. V. Connell responded to the toast, "Our Trustees." Brother Connell followed the tradition of the historian and led us from the time of his early connection with the church down to the present.

Brother Connell being the oldest member of the board appeared the youngest in his style of youthful utterance. F. E. Goodjon rendered a beautiful and appropriate solo entitled "All Coons Look Alike to Me." When it comes to music, Brother Goodjon is "Johnnie on the Spot." Although it was a temperance body of men and temperance was discussed at length, when the indomitable George Carner arose to speak, some one remarked that "the best of the wine was reserved for the last of the feast"—and surely Brother George outdid himself and caused even the bushes to laugh. While the toast, "The Women of our Church," was assigned to Mr. Carner, he said the women not being present to hear his speech, that he was going to take for his subject "The Women of Every Church and Everywhere," and how he did orate on suffrage. Carrie Chapman Catt and Dr. Mary Walker could not hold a candle to Brother Carner's matchless oratory. The speech was so remarkable that one of the brothers moved that the speech be illustrated with photo engraving and reported to the New York papers. Our new pastor, the Rev. J. W. Barrett, concluded the program with a response to the toast, "What the Pastor Expects from His Official Board." The expression of great earnestness by our pastor in the desire for the spiritual uplift of our church and community, his well chosen words and admonition for Christlike loyalty to the church endeared him to the hearts of us all.

The occasion will be marked as an epoch in the history of the church, one long to be remembered, and it is hoped it is the forerunner of similar events which will bring the full board together in the enjoyment of christian association and jovial good fellowship.

Long live our host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lockwood and may the richest blessings of our heavenly Father dwell richly with them, our brother and sister in the church, our co-workers in Christ's vineyard.

Respectfully submitted,
The Man with a Conscience.

London Wants to Know Features Producing Resignation

London, June 12.—The London morning newspapers in their comments on the American note to Berlin express surprise that Mr. Bryan should have felt compelled to resign after signing the first note.

The Daily Telegraph says:—

"The spirit of the second is exactly that of the first, and it leaves us to wonder even more than we did before why Mr. Bryan thought it necessary to resign. There is nothing of a minatory character in the note—nothing that the most fervid imagination could construe into a challenge or ultimatum.

The Chronicle says:—

"The note gives to Germany every opportunity of saving her face, if she so desires. It not only is phrased in most friendly terms but, inviting the submission of further evidence concerning the Lusitania and the resumption of other negotiations through an American intermediary, opens a vista for negotiations which might keep the diplomatists of Berlin and Washington employed until the war is ended, only that the President insists that the submarine outrages must stop during the negotiations. And it is this point which gives significance to the whole."

The Daily News questions whether Mr. Bryan's inference that Germany will reject the demands is sound and whether, if it is sound, the situation arising could have been avoided by any conduct of negotiations which did not involve the betrayal "not of American rights only but of the rights and hopes of humanity," and continues:—

"There is no reason yet to assume that the President, who throughout the dealings with Germany, has sought peace with the steady coolness and high purpose habitual to him, despairs of success. The phrasing of the note is as little provocative as conceivable.

"The German government cannot be unaware of the tremendous additional handicap which the entry of the United States into the struggle would mean for Germany. The attacks of the German press on America reflect the view of the Berlin government, but even supposing that war should ensue, what other course was open to the President? He is not risking war with Germany for a stiff-necked determination to uphold exclusively American rights. The rights the President is upholding are the fundamental rights of humanity, and, although the help to the Allies which the entry of the United States into the struggle would bring would be dearly purchased by the loss of American neutrality, which is one of the factors intended to soften the ferocities and brutalities of the war.

The Daily Mail says:—

"The first impression of most readers of the note will be, we suspect, that it is extremely polite and quite harmless. Whatever charges may be brought against American diplomacy in this crisis, that of being unreasonable or hectoring or lacking in persuasiveness must certainly fall to the ground.

"The vital passages of the note are those in which the United States earnestly and solemnly renews the representations of the note of May 15 and again asks assurances that American lives and ships shall not be endangered on the high seas. Will Germany agree to abandon indiscriminate submarine warfare? That is the question the United States put to her once more?"

The Times says it is "inclined to believe that Germany will not reject the demands, but will resume negotiations and endeavor to preserve friendly relations with the United States, especially as Wilhelmstrasse can discover in varied passages of the note material for procrastination if it so desires." The editorial continues:—

"Nothing well could be more moderate in tone than the note, but on issues of substance the President remains immovable. There is nothing in the note, however, to suggest that the policy such as American newspapers seem to expect from Germany would be doomed to failure. The President has done the utmost compatable with national dignity to make the path of submission smooth and easy for Germany and her answer will be awaited with profound interest on both sides of the Atlantic."

ARTISTS SAVE MODELS IN FIRE IN STUDIOS

New York.—Fire in No. 106 West Fifty-fifth street yesterday caused a hurried exodus of a number of artists who have studios there. Samuel N. Abbott, his arms loaded with "summer-girl" drawings, asked Clarence F. Underwood to help him save the precious young women. But Mr. Underwood was working with Miss Gladys Kahn as his model, and preferred to see that Miss Kahn got out safely.

The fire was trifling and the loss inconsiderable.

"STILL NEED SHELLS," SAYS LLOYD-GEORGE

London, June 12.—Addressing engineering firms at Cardiff, Wales, David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, said he would organize South Wales to speed up the output of munitions just as Lancashire had been organized. Referring to the dire need of ammunition, Mr. Lloyd-George said:

"I hardly like to say it, but we are still short of sheels."

He strongly hinted at compulsory service.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate east to southeast winds; partly cloudy tonight and Sunday; warmer Sunday.

LOAN ASSOCIATIONS INNURE THE WORKMAN

Port Jervis, June 11.—The New York State League of Savings and Loan Associations began here today its twenty-eighth annual convention. This city is the home of the oldest cooperative savings and loan association in the state, organized in 1868. More than 150 delegates and visitors are here for the convention and were welcomed by Mayor Lybolt.

Among the papers read was one by Charles C. Zoller, of Rochester, on "The Poor Man and the Savings and Loan Association."

"The building and loan association is the association of the poor man," Mr. Zoller said. "It is his creation, he is part of it, his interests are there, and it is his pride and satisfaction that it is a recognized banking association, protected by the state. Today its advantages are eagerly sought by the large depositor and borrower, who realizes its safety.

"We feel that the marvelous growth that has attended the association will be an incentive to us in working and striving for increase of advantages to its members and for their security and prosperity. Let us advertise. Let us bring the associations to the attention of the public, particularly the workingman who is paying rent week after week, year after year, always under the rule of the landlord. Let us bring to the attention of those who have money not only the safety of our association, and the greater interest they will derive by depositing their funds with us, but also the higher purpose that will be achieved by the judicious lending of their money, through the associations, to the workingmen and the poor for home buying."

SANG IN OSWEGO

At the public rhetoricals of the Oswego Normal and Training school held yesterday at the Normal, Miss Gertrude Lake of this city, contributed to an excellent program, a vocal solo, "The Quest." Miss Lake was accompanied by Richard Schuler of Oswego.

Fulton Keynotes

The undenominational Bible class will meet Monday, June 13, with Mrs. R. B. Crockett, 415 Highland st., Mrs. E. R. Redhead, leader.

* * *

Thomas Johnson arrived in the city yesterday, having completed his first year in the University of Pennsylvania.

* * *

Mrs. John O'Brien of Cayuga st. entertained delightfully the Thursday Evening Euchre Club, last evening.

* * *

Leonard Bradford has been in Rochester attending the wedding of his cousin, Arthur Wolever.

* * *

Miss Margaret Quigley of Oswego has been the guest of Fulton friends.

* * *

Miss Frances Gardner, a nurse at the hospital, is recovering from a short illness.

* * *

Miss Pearl Parke of Phillips st. is spending a few days at Auburn.

* * *

Mrs. G. H. Stewart of Utica st. entertained the Friendly Nine Birthday Club. Everybody reports a pleasant time.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Spencer of Rochester have been the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Spencer, of Utica st.

* * *

Mrs. Leon Abbott and Mrs. Riley Harding spent Thursday in Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. John Spencer has been entertaining her brother, Burr Curtiss, of Auburn.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Milnes of West 2d st. are entertaining their daughter, Miss Elair.

* * *

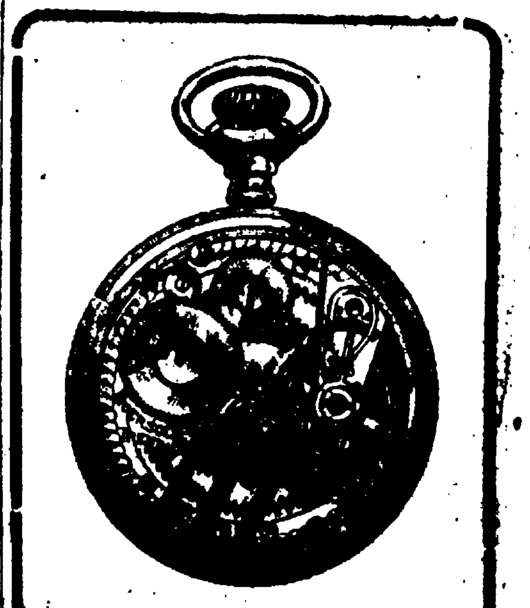
Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bracey of Worth st. entertained recently Mr. and Mrs. James Dubois.

* * *

Mrs. H. Hunter and children have been geusts of her parents at South Granby.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson of Hannibal st. called on friends at Palermo recently.



Have You Seen
THE LATEST STYLES
of
SOLID SILVERWARE
G. B. FARLEY
21 First Street
Can show you a full line. Just the kind for WEDDING GIFTS

FOR SALE
CASH GROCERY STORE
316 CAYUGA STREET, CITY
A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of 340 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

UNDERTAKERS
YOUNG & HILL. Open day and night at 117 Oneida. Phone 2172.

HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
TODAY
King Baggot and Jane Gail in the Big Feature
"THE CORSICAN BROTHERS" from the story of Alexander Dumas
"THE LOST RECEIPTS"
in two parts.
SUNDAY
"THE JUNGLE QUEEN"
with Marie Walcamp and Wellington Playter—with the Big Jungle Scene.
"WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN"
in Two Parts.
and Four Others.
Admission 5c

DON'T WAIT FOR THE RUSH—BUY NOW
470 S. SIXTH ST. 9-room house, nearly new. Small barn. All kinds of fruit. Lot 50x132. Price reduced for a quick sale.
S. SEVENTH ST. Well located, in good repair and arranged for two families. $1,650.
70 ACRES, $2,500. Located on West River road 5 miles from Fulton. Heavy loam soil. 5-acre wood lot; balance all tillable. 2-story, 8-room house; large basement barn. Will exchange for city property.
WHITAKER & BOGARDUS, Inc.
Real Estate and Insurance Fulton, New York

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.
TODAY
"THE YELLOW TRAFFIC"
A Fox Feature in 4 parts and
"THE GANGSTERS AND THE GIRL"
SUNDAY
The Powerful, Fascinating Drama,
"A DEAL WITH THE DEVIL" and others, including Charles Chaplin in "HIS MUSICAL CAREER"
MONDAY
JOHN REDMOND "THE EVANGELIST"
and others.

D/34

The Newspapers Published in Fulton

Are the real and only legitimate means to secure the kind of publicity that will work in true harmony with the elaborate program mapped out by the

New Chamber of Commerce

¶ The protracted dullness in retail business circles is positive proof that the merchants of this city must invest their advertising appropriations in the papers that have the "home touch"—the papers that are welding in concrete fashion the buying public in the fertile farming country lying contiguous to this city.

MR. BUSINESS

Has been very sick. He should recover, and the way to recover is to turn our faces from the fixed starings we've been giving to a popular idol, a single industry, and fix our eyes upon the farmer and the buyer from the North, the South, the East and the West of us. The farmer of today is the man who can do a lot toward making Mr. Business in this city a well man, but you must use your home papers—the papers that are near to the people—to reach the great buying public living beyond the city's limits.

MR. MERCHANT

The Fulton Evening Times is "A Herald of Progress"

SNAPSHOTS AT NOTABLE PERSONS

Rear Admiral W. S. Benson, New Naval Chief.

Photo by American Press Association.

Rear Admiral William Shepherd Benson, recently appointed chief of naval operations, is generally conceded to be one of the ablest officers in Uncle Sam's navy. The new office, which was created by the last congress, gives the rear admiral control of and makes him responsible for the preparation and maintenance of plans for the use and efficiency of the fleet in and for war, and in effect also makes him the active head of the navy.

The creation of the office of chief of naval operations does not disturb the general board of the navy, of which Admiral Dewey is chairman.

Before his appointment Rear Admiral Benson was one of the senior captains and in the ordinary course of events would have been promoted to the rank he now holds by virtue of his office next November. Born in Georgia on Sept. 25, 1855, the new chief of operations is young enough to hold his present post for the full term of four years. He entered the Naval academy in 1872 and was graduated four years later, and during a sea service of twenty-two years since that time has cruised practically all over the world.

Since 1908 Admiral Benson's sea duty included the command of several important ships and also service as chief of staff of the Pacific fleet. His most recent sea service was as captain of the super-Dreadnought Utah and temporarily as commander of the first division of the Atlantic fleet. In July, 1913, he was detached from the Utah to become commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard, where he has demonstrated exceptional executive ability.

Railroad Wage Arbitrator.

Charles Nagel of St. Louis, neutral member of the board of arbitration which settled the wage dispute of engineers, firemen and hostlers on ninety-eight western railroads, was formerly secretary of commerce and labor. Since the award the railroad brotherhoods have by resolution demanded a congressional investigation of the appointment of Mr. Nagel as arbitrator. The railroad workers claim that Mr. Nagel was not neutral, "inasmuch as it was clearly established that he is a co-

© by American Press Association.

CHARLES NAGEL.

executor and co-trustee of the estate of Adolphus Busch, which estate has large holdings in railroad securities."

A native of Texas, his parents moved to St. Louis during the civil war. Young Nagel was educated at St. Louis, where he took a course in law and subsequently studied law and political economy at the University of Berlin. Returning to St. Louis in 1873, he was admitted to the bar and soon took an active part in municipal affairs. He served four years as president of the city council and also served as a member of the Missouri legislature. He was a member of the Republican national committee from 1908 to 1912 and was secretary of commerce and labor during President Taft's administration.

MAKING OTHERS HAPPY.

Why Put It Off Till Tomorrow When It May Be Done Today?

Why should we postpone our loving and the being happy that goes with it? The wife we are going to show more affection for as soon as we have made a little more of a pile. The husband we are going to be more companionable and sunshiny with as soon as we get a little more service in the house, the children whose lives we will enter into more fully as soon as we feel the pressure of circumstances a little less, the people we are going to show how genial we really are as soon as we have time—none of these ways of loving depends on the things we are waiting for.

Indeed, our opportunity comes more now than it will come when we have these things. The very pressure of our days bring us in contact with many people who most need a show of kindness and who will most warmly respond to it. The wife most needs and will most value love in her days when she is most being a helpmeet. The husband most needs and most prizes love in his years of struggle.

What are we waiting for? The kingdom of heaven is within and will not come of circumstances.—Nautilus.

Bjornson's Advice.

There is a story told of Bjornstjerne Bjornson that, arriving at a late hour at the town of Bergen, which was en fete to receive him, he vouchsafed to the expectant people no finer words of wisdom than a general recommendation to go to bed.

In vain they appealed to him for "song or sentiment." The great Bismarck, said he, gave the same advice under conditions all similar, and what was good enough for Berlin must suffice for Bergen.

Three years later, on visiting the town for the second time, the master novelist found a deserted city. Not a light burned in the dismal railway station, no banners waved, no addresses were read by portly burgomasters. In vain Bjornson asked for a cab.

"They have all gone to bed," was the reply. And so Bergen remembered.

First European Railway.

The first carriages that ran on rails in Europe were those of a horse railway between Linz and Budweis, in Austria. This was in working order in 1827. Locomotive railways were much longer coming. The first line in a modern sense was opened from Paris to St. Germain in 1835, but railway development was greatly hindered by a terrible accident on the Paris-Versailles line in 1842. The next was the Brussels-Malines line in Belgium. Belgium was also the first country to begin, in 1830, systematic plans for a national network of railways. Prussia followed in 1835 and Austria-Hungary in 1838. The first great trunk line in Europe was from Paris to Rouen, opened in May, 1843.

Family Pride.

Mrs. Blunt—Well, Louisa, I don't suppose you will attempt to deny that your original ancestors were stone age ruffians who lived in a damp cave.

Mrs. Tree—If my earliest ancestors were a part of the geologic period of which you speak they must have had a red sandstone chateau of their own on Flinthead avenue, with stalactite decorations and running water on the first floor.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Poi In Hawaii.

Poi, the Hawaiian national dish, is made by pounding up the cooked root of the taro plant—the Arum esculentum of the botanists—with water into a thick paste. When slightly fermented it has a pleasant, fruity, acid taste.

The Solution.

"I wish I knew how Blinks lives without working?"

"Open a grocery store in his neighborhood and you'll soon find out."—Philadelphia Ledger.

LOCKS OR SEA LEVEL.

The Wisdom That Was Shown In Building the Panama Waterway.

The slides in the Panama canal have led some persons to say that it was a mistake not to build a sea level canal. In discussing that criticism Mr. Charles Whiting Baker, editor of the Engineering News, recently said that the few engineers who urged a sea level canal now dislike to be reminded of the fact.

"Bad as the slides are and costly as the work of cleaning them away is proving to be," said Mr. Baker, "they would be vastly greater if the canal at Culebra cut were made eighty-five feet deeper, as it would have to be in order to lower the canal to sea level. But even that is not the worst. In a sea level canal there would be slides to contend with not only in the nine mile long Culebra cut, but all the way across the isthmus—in the deep morasses along the lower Chagres river, for example, where in some places the soft mud is a hundred feet deep. When at Panama I myself saw a slide move into the cut that was being made for the Gatun locks foundation, in which half an acre or so of soft ground flowed down the slope like stiff molasses.

"We owe a great debt of gratitude for our correct choice to President Taft, President Roosevelt, Colonel Goethals and the late Alfred Noble and other great engineers, who threw all the weight of their influence in favor of a lock canal. There is no dissent in the engineering profession from this assertion, and the public ought also to understand it."

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Blue Blood Versus Oil

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Billy Perkins had the usual American assurance, but it never got into the limelight till he went to Spain as a clerk in the American embassy. Billy had means and no taste for business. Indeed, since his living was ground out for him by coupons which fell like gold leaves from sundry bonds he had inherited, what he wanted was an apology for occupation. A friend having been appointed secretary of legation at Madrid, he secured Billy a position as brevet clerk, which gave him the right to say that he was attached to the embassy, but he was seldom if ever called upon to do any work.

As an attache of the legation he received invitations, and, since Americans are considered an unconventional people, he was accorded social liberties that other men were not granted. For instance, there were families which he was permitted to visit as young men visit in America—that is, he was not forced to converse with young women from the sidewalk, they standing on a balcony high above his head. He was permitted to see certain young ladies in their homes, but not alone. Some member of the family other than the lady on whom he called was always present.

One young lady in whose home he was accorded an entrance was a daughter of Don Sebastiano Herrera, a Spanish grandee whose family tree was planted in the time of Ferdinand and Isabella. Dona Inez, the daughter, was destined for some nobleman who would be considered worthy to enter the Herrera family. As for Billy Perkins, had he ten times the fortune he possessed he was not for a moment to be thought of as a husband for her.

Nevertheless the Herreras had traveled abroad a good deal and had thrown off some of the most ultra of their Spanish conventional forms. Their daughter met men at balls, and occasionally one was invited to her home—of course only by her father or mother. Billy Perkins met her at a function given by his chief, the ambassador, and fell desperately in love with her.

Dona Inez evinced a desire to learn English, and when Billy offered to teach her her mother was much pleased with the offer. The good lady had a high admiration for the English nobility and had formed a design of taking her daughter to England, hoping that her rare beauty would catch an English nobleman. However this may be, Billy was permitted to come to the house two evenings in the week to give Dona Inez lessons in the English language. Of course her mother or some member of the family who could be relied upon was present to watch that no lovemaking passed between the two young persons. Moreover, whoever was on watch understood enough English to know if Billy were trying to work that language for the purpose of making love, though, since Dona Inez did not understand a word of English, this was hardly necessary.

Nothing is so delightful to two young persons of opposite sex as to outwit those who are placed on guard over them. Billy's method of teaching English was to have his pupil read something printed in that language or convert something printed from Spanish into the English tongue. This required the use of a Spanish and English dictionary.

One evening when the two were at work using the dictionary every few minutes, Billy, turning the leaves, stopped and put his finger on the word "your." Then he turned to the words "eyes" and put his finger on that word. In this way he spelled out "your eyes are like beautiful twin lakes, and your lashes are like the rushes growing on the borders." Then Inez took the dictionary and by the same means said, "You Americans are great flatterers." This was followed by a sentence from Billy—"There is no such beauty in America as yours."

These few communications occupied half an hour, but what time was lost in looking up words was gained in the fervor of the sentences. In two or three evenings Billy had made as much love as some men with every facility would make in a year. And Dona Inez, if she was not an apt scholar at learning English, certainly understood with marvelous facility what was said to her by this method of communication.

Before Dona Inez had learned enough English to catch a British nobleman she had been caught by an American scamp who should have been put in the stocks for daring to make love to the daughter of a Spanish grandee. However, he came out frankly at last and one morning, marching boldly into the presence of Don Sebastiano, asked him for his daughter's hand. The old gentleman looked at the American brevet clerk aghast and asked him what he meant. Billy replied that he meant exactly what he said.

"Are you aware," asked Don Sebastiano, "that our family were nobles at a time when the land in which you were born was inhabited by savages?"

"I am," said Billy, "and are you aware that my ancestors drove your ancestors out of Texas? My ancestors bought an oil tract of your ancestors, and now I am in receipt of $20,000 a month from the property?"

Billy intended by this statement to strike the nail on the head, and he did, for Don Sebastiano, with all his blue blood, was as poor as a church mouse. Billy married Dona Inez, and the pair now live in winter in Spain, in summer in America.

ONCE UNPOPULAR, BECAME HERO

CONSTANTINE OF GREEK NATION

Blamed For Disaster In War of 1897, He Planned Exile, but Gained Fame In Balkans.

Son George, Like Father, Was Educated In Germany and Lacked Hold on His People.

KING CONSTANTINE of Greece succeeded to the throne on the assassination of his father, King George, by the regicide Schinas March 19, 1913. It was expected he would take the name of Constantine XIII., reviving the old Byzantine line, but he contented himself with the simple Constantine I.

He was born at Athens Aug. 2, 1868. He was educated by tutors obtained from Leipsic and from early boyhood showed effects of German influence. He married Princess Sophia of Prussia, sister of Kaiser Wilhelm, at Athens Oct. 27, 1889.

Photo by American Press Association.

KING CONSTANTINE OF GREECE.

Tall, soldierly in appearance, quiet, reserved almost to shyness, Constantine was for a long while most unpopular with the Greeks. He was blamed for the failure of the Greeks in the war with the Turks in 1897.

Until the war with Turkey he had had little military experience aside from participating in the annual maneuvers of the German army. When he saw his country drifting into war with the Turks he opposed the movement, for he knew his people were utterly unprepared. The Greek infantry were then armed with discarded French rifles, bought at $2 each.

In 1908 Constantine felt his unpopularity so keenly that he acquired a palace in St. Petersburg, took service in the Russian army, and was determined on quitting Greece forever. But in 1911 the national legislature by an overwhelming vote restored him to his former post as inspector general of the Greek army. Then came the Balkan war and Constantine soon became the hero of his people.

He brought the Greek army to a state of high efficiency and led it to many victories, not the least of which were those at Saloniki and Janina. Several New Yorkers headed the committee which presented him with a jeweled sword as a memento of these achievements.

Complete accord has not always ruled in the domestic affairs of Constantine. While there was no whisper of scandal, he and Sophia lived apart for a time and there seemed little prospect of a reconciliation until after the victories in the Balkans.

Curiously enough, there is a very old Greek tradition which says that when a royal Constantine weds a Princess Sophia their son shall reign in Constantinople and revive the ancient Byzantine empire.

George of Greece is the eldest son of Constantine and Sophia. He was born July 7, 1890, and is not married. His engagement to the beautiful Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of King Ferdinand of Roumania, was announced two years ago, subsequently denied and then later reannounced. Early in the present year it was stated that the wedding had been scheduled for the spring, but postponed on account of the war.

Like his father, George received his education and military training in Germany under the care of his uncle, the kaiser. Because of this there have been reports from time to time that the Greeks looked with more favor on Prince Nicholas, brother of Constantine.

George has two brothers and two sisters. Prince Alexander, born in 1893; Princess Helene, born in 1896; Prince Paul, born in 1901, and Princess Irene, born in 1904.

Prince Nicholas commanded the Greek artillery in the Balkan wars. He received his military education in France. His wife is the Grand Duchess Helene of Russia, daughter of the late Grand Duke Vladimir. Thus instead of the influence of Dowager Queen Olga being minimized in his case, as in that of King Constantine, by a German wife, the influence of Princess Helene is all exercised against the German tendency of the family.

King Ferdinand of Roumania, father of Princess Elizabeth, is a Hohenzollern, while the princess' mother is Princess Mary of Great Britain and Ireland.

"SWAP WIVES LIKE HORSES."

Supreme Court Justice Makes Caustic Comment on Divorce Cases.

In the course of a divorce case in which the husband admitted being a bigamist, Supreme Court Justice Frederick E. Crane of Brooklyn delivered a brief but crackling philippic against American marriage and divorce conditions.

"Marriage is the cheapest thing under our law," snapped the justice. "Marry one day and then come back in court the following morning and get divorced! Swapping wives and husbands has become as common as swapping horses in our country. If we want polygamy why don't we come out bravely and establish it here?

"We judges, the supposed guardians of the law, are forced practically to sit back and wink at felonies and watch the offenders go free."

"Perhaps I sometimes say too much in court," Justice Crane added later in his chamber, but he didn't smile when he said it.

NEW WAY OF MAKING LIVING.

Man Gets $10 a Week From City to Prevent Him Committing Suicide.

A new way of making a living has been revealed in Atlanta, Ga. C. S. Stafford, ex-proprietor of a paint shop, is getting $10 a week from the city to prevent him from committing suicide.

Becoming ill five years ago, Stafford was taken to the City Detention hospital, and when he recovered he refused to move out. Threatened with forcible ejection, he declared he would commit suicide. The health authorities decided to put him on the payroll at $10 a week.

AUTHORS RUN AMBULANCES.

"Queed" Harrison and Stanton Are With American Hospital In France.

One of the ambulance chauffeurs making the most runs to bring in wounded with the American ambulance in France is H. S. Harrison, better known as "Queed" Harrison, from his "best seller" book of two years ago. He hates the nickname, but everybody calls him by it.

Mr. Stanton, son of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and himself an author, is one of the orderlies in the American Hospital in Paris.

LIFE SENTENCE OF SOBRIETY.

Court Puts Woman Under Permanent Ban Against Drinking.

Magistrate Harry Miller at Jamaica, N. Y., sentenced Mrs. Margaret Askins to "eternal sobriety." She accepted the life sentence with thanks and left the court with her husband, whose plea to the court won for her that sentence instead of another.

Mrs. Askins, who is thirty-three years old, was charged with being an improper guardian of her children. Agent C. Harstedt of the Children's society testified that the woman threatened to kill her children and chased her husband with a carving knife.

The husband said his wife would be all right if she let liquor alone, so the "eternal" sentence was imposed.

SET OFF BY HUMAN SPARK.

Man's Electrified Body Caused Big Explosion, Expert Thinks.

The theory that a man's body may contain enough electricity to set off a charge of explosive has been advanced by a British government expert on combustibles to account for an explosion at Stowmarket which resulted in the death of four men.

Major Cooper-Key, the expert, expressed the opinion that one of the men had accumulated electricity in his body "and had not earthed himself." He added: "It was an exceptional accident, which could probably have been prevented by a metal stud in the worker's rubber overshoe. A regulation to this effect will probably be made."

HOPES FOR BLACK COTTON.

Planter Tries to Make It Grow So It Won't Need Dyeing.

A southern cotton planter who is trying to make a black cotton grow says:

"God gave men five primal sorts of cotton—white, red, brown, yellow and black. The black has been lost somewhere in the mists of the ages, but every experienced breeder knows that so long as the species exists the lost variety can be restored.

"To this end I am working. The start was made by planting deep green lint cotton, red lint cotton and brown lint cotton in my experimental patch. If I can get the three to come into blossom at the same time black lint is assured."

CHINESE EDIBLE DOGS.

They Are Fed Mainly Upon Daintily Prepared Vegetable Food.

English bon vivants have tested the merits of the Chinese edible dog, and they pronounce it very good dog indeed.

The dog is destined from the beginning for the table. Like the edible rat of the same country, it is fed mainly upon vegetable food, which is often delicately prepared and specially devised, in order to give the dog's flesh a peculiar flavor and aroma. The result is something quite different from the flesh of the ordinary dog of the western world.

The genuine Chinese edible dog is known by its bluish black tongue, which is a peculiar mark of its variety. In infancy and early youth the dog's tongue is red, and upon reaching maturity and the edible age it suddenly becomes black, sometimes within two weeks.

Another peculiarity of this dog is its lack of the barking faculty. It is said that the dog can bark, and on occasions does so, but these occasions are rare.

Many experiments, most of them unwilling, were made with the flesh of dogs during the Paris siege. Newfoundlands and St. Bernards were preferred, under the mistaken impression that they would prove more eatable than other varieties. They proved to be detestable in all cases.—Every Week.

CORK TREES OF SPAIN.

How They Are Stripped of Their Bark at Ten Year Intervals.

An important industry in Spain is the cultivation of cork trees. This tree is an oak which grows best in the poorest soil. It cannot endure frost and must have sea air and also some altitude. It is found all along the coast of Spain, the northern coast of Africa and the northern shores of the Mediterranean.

There are two barks, the outer of which is stripped for use. The cork is valuable according as it is soft and velvety. When the sapling has reached the age of ten years it is stripped of its outer bark for two feet from the ground. The tree will then be about five inches in diameter and about six feet up to the branches. This stripping is worthless. The inner bark appears blood red, and if it is split or injured the tree dies.

When eight or ten years more have elapsed the outer bark has again grown and then the tree is stripped four feet from the roots. This stripping is very coarse and is used to make floats for fish nets. Every ten years thereafter the bark is stripped, each year two feet higher up, until the tree is forty or fifty years old, when it is in its prime and may then be stripped every ten years from the ground to the branches. —Exchange.

Royal Kisses.

The kings and high officials of Europe when they meet always embrace and kiss each other, no matter what their relations have been in the past or may be in the immediate future. This is a kiss of respect. It may be given on the lips, the cheek, the brow or the beard and is nicely adjusted, according to the age and rank of the giver. From this close personal contact it passes through many forms—kissing the hand, parts of the clothing and even the ground trodden upon according to the idea of respect or fear inspiring the one who performs the act. The nations of the west have not adopted this ancient custom as a form of salutation, but have reserved it for the more tender relationships of life.—Christian Herald.

Dumas and His Porthos.

Dumas, like Balzac, was fond of his own creations. Among them all he loved Porthos best. The great, strong, vain hero was a child after his own heart. One afternoon, it is related, his son found Dumas careworn, wretched, overwhelmed. "What has happened to you? Are you ill?" asked Dumas fils. "No," replied Dumas pere. "Well, what is it then?" "I am miserable." "Why?" "This morning I killed Porthos—poor Porthos! Oh, what trouble I have had to make up my mind to do it! But there must be an end to all things. Yet when I saw him sink beneath the ruins, crying, 'It is too heavy, too heavy for me!' I swear to you that I cried!" And he wiped away a tear with the sleeve of his dressing gown.

An Old Indian Drum.

The Sioux Indians formerly had a conjurer's drum, which they called wakanchanchagha. It was used on religious and ceremonial occasions, had two heads frequently decorated with crude pictures of animals, and was beaten with great vigor for the purpose of appeasing the wrath of their offended deities or of contributing to the recovery of the sick.

Africa.

Africa is the most elevated of all the continents. It is the "continent of plateaus." The great tableland in the south has a mean altitude of over 3,500 feet. The wide tableland on the north has an average elevation of about 1,800 feet.

Impossible.

"Can't you play tennis without making all that noise?"

"Why, how can you expect us to play it without raising a racket?"—Baltimore American.

Excluded.

Ascum—Well, well! I congratulate you, old man. And how is the baby to be named? Popley—By my wife's people, it seems.—Exchange.

AID BELGIANS ON A BUSINESS BASIS

Elaborate Financial System Gets the Best Results.

ORGANIZED BY AMERICANS.

Commission Will Have Provided Foodstuffs to the Value of $65,000,000 by Middle of August—Profit Made In Cheap Bread—Belgians Have Done a Lot of Work Themselves.

London.—The American commission for relief in Belgium will have provided foodstuffs to the value of about $65,000,000 for the Belgian people by the middle of August. Charitable contributions from America will have amounted to about $5,000,000 and from other quarters of the world approximately the same total. The great bulk of the food supplies, representing the remaining $55,000,000, is being provided indirectly by the Belgian people themselves.

This is made possible by the elaborate financial machinery set up by the commission, enabling the Belgians to utilize their own energies and resources. Fully 75 per cent of the Belgian people are being supplied with food by the commission without recourse to charity. One result of the commission's operations is that bread is now cheaper in Belgium than in London.

When the commission was formed last October, under the chairmanship of Herbert Clark Hoover, it was estimated that the total imports required to keep the population of Belgium alive would amount in value to about $50,000,000 before the next harvest. The rise in the price of foodstuffs increased the necessary amount to $65,000,000.

The greatest problem in this connection was involved in the fact that foodstuffs sold in Belgium to those who still had resources were paid for in paper. The entire metallic currency disappeared early in the war, and national bank notes were so scarce that many communes were printing paper issues of their own.

This paper money had no value outside of Belgium, and in any event to have exported it would have denuded the country of currency. But unless this money were turned into gold it would be necessary for the commission to find in the outside world an amount of money which was out of the question. At the outset, therefore, the commission began to devise a method for effecting the exchange of these local currency obligations into gold.

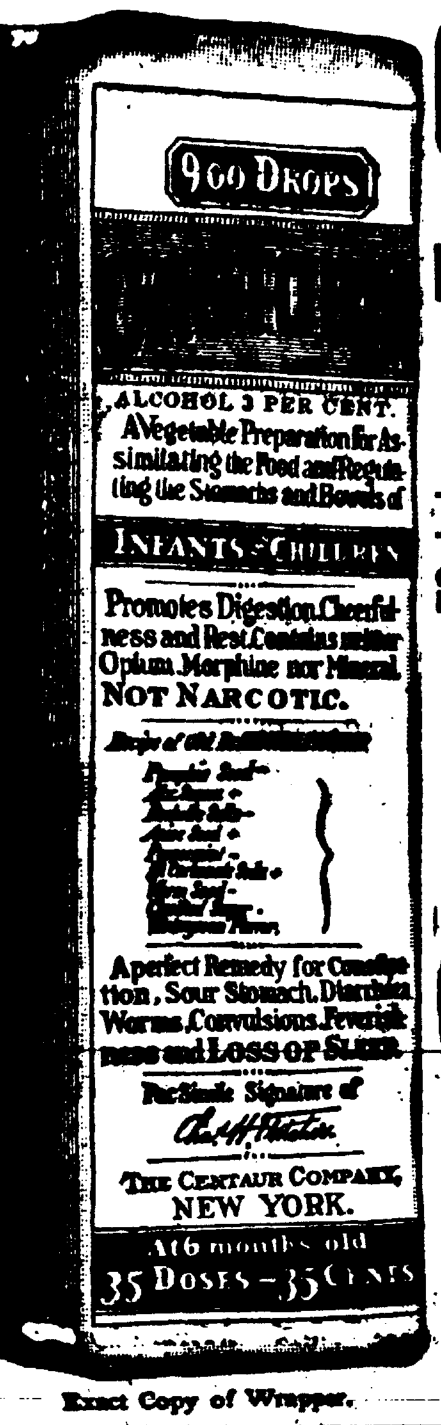
Negotiations were opened with the belligerent governments for permission to set up a form of exchange whereby persons or institutions abroad owing money in Belgium should turn over to the commission the amount due in sterling or dollars. The commission undertook to pay their debts for them in Belgium out of paper money which it received from the sale of foodstuffs. The belligerent nations agreed to this after long negotiations, and there was thus set up a form of exchange. The commission is today the only institution which is doing a systematic banking business across enemy lines.

By degrees the commission has extended this exchange department of its organization, which has come to be the lifeblood of the structure. It has induced many well to do Belgians to pledge their credit for moneys handed over to the commission in gold, which in turn is paid to them in Belgium in paper. The commission also has advanced money to the communal governments, taking their obligations therefor, and by pledging these obligations abroad has obtained further resources. The communes have been enabled in this manner to procure money to pay communal officers, to maintain the schools and keep up municipal works, thus enabling the Belgians to carry on the details of civil government and saving the country from the danger of anarchic conditions.

One phase of these operations arose in connection with a number of Belgian concerns, which, while they had resources abroad, had exhausted their local resources in payment of workmen or in disbursements to depositors. A form of hardship had grown up through the inability of such concerns to make good their obligations to the public, and persons who had believed themselves well to do were being forced to the bread lines through inability to draw money due them.

Through the operations of the commission these concerns were enabled to hand over in London and New York funds they possessed abroad, and the commission in turn delivered paper money received from the sale of food. Thus the cycle of credit was reestablished, and many thousands of persons were saved from the bread line.

Before this machinery was set up practically the whole population was dependent on the world's charity, paper money being of no avail. The initial appeals of the commission, therefore, were made on behalf of the 7,000,000 of people. With the success of these financial efforts, however, all of the people still able to pay for their food were made self dependent, and the appeals of the commission for charitable contributions were reduced to those made on behalf of the absolutely destitute.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

PLANTING TREES AND SHRUBS

Federal Experts Give Advice For Various Localities.

WIDE RANGE OF CHOICE.

The Country Is Divided Into Five Sections and Suitable Varieties Are Suggested For the Various Divisions. Beauty of Shade Trees Depends Upon Normal Growth.

"What kind of trees shall we plant to beautify our grounds? What shrubs would be suited to our schoolyard?" asked a specialist in trees and shrubs of the department of agriculture.

The department specialists have prepared a list of trees and shrubs suited for general use in private grounds, streets, private parks and schoolyards for each of five general divisions of the United States. The divisions are:

First—New England states, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri and Iowa.

Second—Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Third—Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.

Fourth—New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, western Texas, western Oklahoma and western Kansas.

Fifth—California, Oregon and Washington.

The specialists suggest in district No. 1, which includes New York and adjoining states, the following: Deciduous trees—Red oak, white oak, pin oak, American linden, American white elm, white ash, scarlet maple, sugar maple, green ash, Norway maple. Evergreens—White spruce, white pine, Scotch pine, hemlock, balsam fir, Colorado blue spruce. Shrubs—Lilacs, viburnums, philadelphuses, hydrangea, Japan quince, flowering currant, cornuses, spireas, weigelas, coralberry, snowberry, bush honeysuckle, wild roses, rugosa bush, Thunberg's barberry, calycanthus, Regel's privet, elders, sweet pepper bush.

In district No. 2, which includes Delaware and the southern states as far west as Texas, the department would plant the following: Deciduous trees—Tulip, sycamore, pin oak, white oak, black oak, live oak, red oak, white ash, bald cypress, Norway maple, red elm, American white elm, Kentucky coffee, American linden, catalpa, liquidambar hackberry, sour gum and southern section willow oak and laurel oak. Evergreen trees—Long leaf pine, magnolia, live oak, cedar of Lebanon. Shrubs—Golden bell, hydrangeas, lilac, elaeagnuses, loniceras, hibiscus, roses, Japan quince, calycanthus, smoke tree and viburnums, philadelphuses, cornuses, jasminums, spiraeas, weigelas, coralberry, snowberry, Thunberg's barberry, crape myrtle, privets, hollies, evergreen, barberries, elders, rose of Sharon. South of Charleston, S. C.; Camellia japonica oleander.

"The beauty of a shade tree depends upon its normal and symmetrical growth," says a department official. "In order to insure this, before planting cut off the ends of all broken or mutilated roots; remove all side branches save upon evergreens, so that a straight whiplike stalk alone remains. Dig holes at least three feet in diameter and two feet deep in good soil and make them four feet across in poor soil. The sides of holes should be perpendicular and the bottom flat. Break up soil in the bottom of hole to the depth of the length of a spade blade. Place twelve or fifteen inches of good top soil in the bottom of the hole and use the fine top soil, free from soda or other decomposing organic matter, about the tree roots. On top of this bottom layer place the roots of the tree, spread them as evenly as possible over the earth, put in and cover with two or three inches of fine top soil. Tramp firmly with the feet and fill the hole with good earth, leaving the surface loose and a little higher than the surface of the surrounding soil. When the work of planting is completed the tree should stand about two inches deeper than it stood in the nursery.

"In order to insure symmetry of growth trees must be allowed unrestricted area for development. At least forty feet should be allowed between trees intended to occupy the ground permanently. Quick growing nurse or temporary trees may be planted between the long lived ones to produce immediate results, but as these are seldom removed as soon as they should be to prevent interference with the development of the permanent plantations the practice is not to be recommended."

Shower Baths For City Horses.

Shower baths have been provided for horses in certain of the larger cities through the kindness of the humane societies. Arrangements have been made with the municipal fire departments by which the societies are allowed to tap the fire plugs and attach hose and spray, so that teamsters and others may give their steeds a bath by merely halting for a moment and turning on the spray. Water for drinking purposes may also be drawn.

ILLNESS CHEAP IN PRAGUE.

Comparatively Few Doctors There, Yet the Fees Are Small.

According to a consular report, one may at least be ill in Austria and not dread the exorbitant doctor's bill that follows.

The city of Prague, with a population of about 600,000, has only about 800 physicians, or one for every 7,500 persons. A doctor charges for a daytime call in a middle class family only 60 cents, or 10 cents more than if the patient calls on him in his office. For a night call the doctor receives from $1.20 to $2, according to the distance. Only professors at the clinics of the two local universities charge more, receiving $2 to $4 for a house call and $2 for an office visit. As in this country, the physicians give only prescriptions.

About 100 dentists practice in Prague. The average charges are: Drawing one tooth, 40 cents; cement filling, 60 cents to $1; amalgam filling, 80 cents to $2.

The annual income of these professional men is estimated as follows: Head professor in charge of clinics, salary paid by the government, $1,440 to $1,600, and $5,000 to $11,000 from private practice; other professors at clinics, salary paid by the government, $1,000, and from private practice, $4,000 to $10,000; general medical practitioner not attached to any clinic, [illegible], the average income of a dentist being $5,000.

EITEL'S CREW FLED EARLY

One Lieutenant and Several Men Fled Before Internment

Washington, June 12.—Department of Justice officials today decided to proceed under the U. S. Immigration laws against Lieutenant Brauer, and several sailors reported missing from the interned German auxilliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich at Norfolk, if they can be located in the United States.

Agents of the department have failed to locate the missing Germans, and it is supposed they have escaped from American territory. Officials of the State Department are prepared to make representations to the German Governemnt if the men return to Germany.

Lieutenant Brauer and the men who accompanied him left the Prinz Eitel Fredrich while the ship was at Newport News, and before she had been interned or her officers paroled.

Collector Hamilton at Norfolk reported today as follows:

"The commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich states that Lieutenant Brauer left the Prinz Eitel soon after her arrival at Newport News, as did also any members of the crew who may not now be aboard, and asserts that since the internment of the Prinz Eitel and the giving of his written parole, no officers or men have been severed from the ship."

Norfolk, June 12.—Captain Thierichens today would neither confirm nor deny reorts that Lieutenant Brauer, Third Surgeon Nolte, and other members of thec rew of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich had left the ship and have not returned.

Paris, June 12.—A dispatch tonight from Algeciras says the man arrested there, andat first described as the commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, is some other officer of the cruiser.

He was ill when the Prinz Eitel stopped at Buenos Aires before going to Newport News, and was left in a hospital there. Later he endeavored to reach Europe on an Italian steamship. He was interned at Gibraltar, where he now is.

5,000 ALLIES HORSES TAKE 3 U. S. TOWNS

Alton, Ill., June 12.—Thunder and lightning early today stampeded 5,000 horses bought for the Allies at East Alton. They broke down stockades, overran three towns, knocked down fences and young trees, and held up automobiles and two railroad trains.

Trainmen on the Alton express fired at horses to clear the track and killed two. Henry Wuenstenfeldt, in a halted auto party, was kicked by a horse and three of his ribs were broken.

20 YEARS IN PRISON FOR KILLING TEACHER

New York.—Frank Berchman plead ed guilty in the Bronx yesterday to killing Susan Lewis, a school teacher. He was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment by Judge Weeks. The murder was Jnauary 6.

Berchman is twenty-two. He was in love with the girl, who was a year younger. She rejected him, and he shot her as she was on her way home from school. Miss Lewis lived at 1996 Clinton avenue.

You can get Black's baked products at the right hour for meals. They are at your grocer's, fresh every afternoon. adv.

Many a spoken or written sermon of late has contained or led off with these words: "The obligation of maintaining the national dignity and honor rests upon the official head of the nation—its president." It would be well to make that the people's motto for all time.

Japan will not be anxious to teach China what she knows about war. But for the gigantic conflict raging in Europe Japan might not have started on her new program in China, so her action was really without proper consideration of American interests.

The annual average cost of keeping one of our battleships in commission is $828,778 and of a submarine $31,163. And the little one can put the big one out of commission in a few seconds at a cost of $500.

Japan may find this seizing of extra territorial rights in China as troublesome as Russia did a decade ago, and how troublesome that was for the Russ Japan ought to know.

One of the belligerents has put an end to money making at the government expense while engaged in war. That ought to be the beginning of the abolition of war.

The English ridiculed Napoleon's size, calling him a "mannikin of five foot three," and now they are pleading for soldier recruits down to five foot one.

Only five of the great fleet in the world cruise of 1908 appeared in the Hudson naval column—Louisiana, Kansas, Georgia, Virginia and Rhode Island.

When Cipriano Castro and General Uribe-Uribe get their names in the war dispatches peace may be expected to follow shortly.

China is indeed a big bulk for little Japan to swallow, but relatively the proportion is about that of a toad to a garter snake.

LEGAL NOTICES

STATE OF NEW YORK—Supreme Court, Oswego County.

Nora Kane vs. Nancy C. Heatherington, individually, and Nancy C. Heatherington as Executrix of the Last Will and Testament of Leroy S. Sweet, deceased, Henry Heatherington, Nancy Sweet, Eugene A. Sweet, Ida E. Sweet, his wife, Charles Hair, William Sweet, Martha Lowe, Jennie Lowe, Henry Sweet and all unknown persons having an interest as heir at law or otherwise, under the Last Will and Testament or the estate of said Leroy S. Sweet, or to the estate or under the Last Will and Testament of Henry Sweet, if deceased, his widow, heirs at law, next of kin, devises, grantees and assignees, if any, all of whom and all of whose names are unknown to the plaintiff.

To the above named Defendants:

You Are Hereby Summoned to answer the complaint in this action and to serve a copy of your answer upon the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service; and, in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Trial to be held at the County of Oswego.

Dated this 21st day of May, 1915.

LOUIS C. ROWE,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P. O. Address,
1 and 2 Grant Block,
Oswego, N. Y.

To William Sweet, Henry Sweet and to any unknown persons having an interest in the property or estates of either Leroy S. Sweet, deceased, or Henry Sweet, if deceased, as above specified.

The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of Honorable Irving G. Hubbs, Justice of the Supreme Court, dated the 26th day of May, 1915, and filed with the Complaint in the office of the Clerk of the County of Oswego, at Oswego, N. Y.

Dated, Oswego, N. Y., May 28, 1915.

LOUIS C. ROWE,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P. O. Address,
1 and 2 Grant Block,
5-29-6t Oswego, N. Y.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo 7:30 A. M.

(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

FRANK'S FINAL PLEA TODAY

Governor Slaton Received Many Letters—Fight Lasted All Day

Atlanta, Ga., June 12.—The last effort to obtain commutation of the death sentence imposed on Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan to life imprisonment began before Governor Slaton at 10 o'clock this morning.

Attorney W. M. Howard presented the case for the defendant, assisted by Attorneys C. H. Alexander and M. J. Yeomans, and Solicitor Hugh Dorsey made an appeal to the Governor to allow the verdict of the Court to stand.

There is no sign of abatement in the fight in Frank's behalf. Governor Slaton continues to receive letters from all parts of the State and nation urging clemency for the condemned man.

In an editorial addressed to the Governor the Augusta Chronicle today urged him to disregard the finding of the prison commission. The Chronicle says in part:

"The refusal of the Georgia Prison Commission, by a vote of two against and one for, to recommend to the Governor that he sommute the death sentence of Leo Frank to lifei mprisonment, has, we believe, greatly surprised, we might even say shocked the best thought and sentiment of Georgia.

Hints at Fear to Act.

"We have been reliably informed that up to very recently the three members of the prison commission favored commutation and that they so expressed themselves. If they were correctly quoted then one of two things is certain: Either that they honestly changed their minds after the official hearing of the case, or they feared to act on their individual judgment in the matter.

"If it could be true that a jury of twelve men was in any way intimidated by public sentiment and the so-called mob spirit at the time of the Frank trial, there may be those who will say that two or three men could be just as easily intimidate by what they were told is 'public sentiment' but which is not—at least not of the kind worth considering too seriously—and by the poisoned pen of Tom Watson, the professional scourage of Georgia politics and public men.

"The latter, with all the abuse and vindictiveness for which he is famous, demanded Frank's life. The usual class of people and some other followed him in this; and to one who can be frightened by such things it may have seemed that not to summarily execute Leo Frank would not only be a great miscarriage of justice but of political policy. But the enlightened public opinion of Georgia has no sympathy with this attitude and views with abhorrence Watson's anti-Jewish vituperations."

New Evidence Found

It is stated that Dorsey has obtained new evidence in regard to the letter written by the late Judge Roan on his death bed in behalf of Frank an dthat this will be presented to Governor Slaton.

Everything points to a hard fight before the Governor. Big delegationsfrom many sections of the State will appear for and against Frank. Former Governor Joseph M. Brown will head a big anti-Frank delegation from Marietto, where Mary Phagan was born. He will make a speech against commutation.

A big mass meeting will be held on the Capitol grounsd tomorrow afternoon to protest against clemency. This mass meeting will be held while the hearing is in progress before Governor Slaton.

Frank is still confident that he will not hang. He passed the afternoon conversing with his aged parents and wife and appeared especially cheerful to those who called to see him.

WORKMEN'S ACT BINDS OUTSIDE STATE LIMITS

Hartford, Conn., June 12.—Jurisdiction of the Workmen's Compensation act is not limited to Connecticut, the Supreme Court of Connecticut has just ruled.

Sophia Kennison and Marcia Marsdale were awarded compensation from the Thames Towboat Company of New London for the deaths of Wallace J. Hodges and George Marsdale. Both men lost their lives when a company tug foundered in the navigable waters of New Jersey.

BUSINESS IMPROVING, OFFICIAL FIGURES SAY.

Railroads Earn More Than Year Ago. Treasury Balance Expands.

With the decision of the federal court that the United States Steel corporation is not a trust it is confidently expected that business will now quickly take big leaps.

That conditions are greatly improved is emphasized by a statement by Comptroller of the Currency Williams showing that on May 31 the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency still outstanding aggregated only $2,508,940 out of the $383,502,045 originally issued. This outstanding currency is held largely by banks in the cotton states.

A report by the interstate commerce commission shows that the net revenues of the great railroads for April were $33,821,308 as against $30,322,791 for April, 1914. The gross revenues were $2,000,000 less, but the operative expenses were $6,000,000 less.

Secretary McAdoo and other officials of the treasury department are confident that the turning point has come in national finances and that by July 15 there will be in the general treasury fund a working balance of at least $100,000,000.

KAISER HAS PLENTY OF MEN.

But Losses Are Seven a Minute and Flower of Youth Is Gone.

Colonel Repington, the military expert of the London Times, discussing the new German army, says:

"The classes of 1915 and 1916 and part of the ersatz and landsturm will soon be supplying the Germans with their usual quota of good men, and it would be a fallacy to suppose that the German operations will be any more hampered this present year by a lack of men than by a lack of munitions and food.

"The Germans do not lack the means to continue the campaign vigorously. Nevertheless it must not be forgotten that the German casualties have been ten times those of the British, and the strain of fighting simultaneously on two fronts has been immense.

"No nation can go on losing seven men a minute day and night. The original German army disappeared long ago. Their supply of men is not exhausted, but to a large extent the flower of the German youth has withered."

THANKS FOR AID TO RYNDAM.

Holland-American Line Praises Naval Men For Brilliant Seamanship.

Secretary Daniels has received a letter from the Holland-American line expressing the company's appreciation and gratitude for the aid given by the battleships Texas and South Carolina to the steamship Ryndam when she was injured in collision off Nantucket May 26.

The South Carolina took on board the passengers and crow of the Ryndam, totaling 230 persons. Among the passengers were thirty-two women and ten children, including four babies. The accident occurred at 3:40 a. m., and all the passengers and crew were transferred to the South Carolina by 4:30. The Texas convoyed the Ryndam to the Ambrose lightship.

The letter remarks on the efficient work done by the officers and crew of the naval vessels and the hospitality shown the passengers and crew of the stricken ship and states that it will always be remembered as a brilliant example of good seamanship and splendid comradeship.

WAR NO BAR TO RED TAPE.

French Surgeon Checked In Work by Lack of Printed Forms.

One of the best known doctors, who is directing a French military hospital, recently had need of a certain surgical instrument. He wrote to the authorities for it.

"Make your request on a printed form," came the answer. The doctor replied that he had no printed forms. Second reply from the administration, "Make a demand for printed forms." The doctor again wrote and received a third reply, "Make your demand on a printed form."

WAR CUTS DOWN BIRTH RATE.

Paris Has 2,040 Fewer Babies In Month, Statistics Show.

Births in France are beginning to show the effects of the war.

According to the statistics for Paris there were 1,850 births in May, the tenth month of the war, as compared with 3,890 in the same month last year.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	4	9	1
Indianapolis	3	12	0
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
Milwaukee	8	11	1
Louisville	9	8	1
At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	7	12	0
Columbus	0	7	3
At Cleveland—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	3	7	0
Cleveland	5	8	2

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Pittsburgh.
New York at St. Louis.
Brooklyn at Cincinnati.
Philadelphia at Chicago.

Results Yesterday

Chicago, 2; Philadelphia, 0.
New York, 3; St. Louis, 2.
Cincinnati, 1; Brooklyn, 0; (15 in.)
Boston-Pittsburg; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	25	19	.568
Philadelphia	25	20	.556
Brooklyn	23	22	.511
Boston	22	22	.500
Pittsburgh	22	22	.500
St. Louis	24	25	.490
New York	18	23	.439
Cincinnati	18	24	.429

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Cleveland at Boston.
Detroit at Philadelphia.
St. Louis at New York.
Chicago at Washington.

Results Yesterday

New York, 10; Chicago, 9.
St. Louis, 5; Washington, 1.
Boston, 4; Detroit, 3.
Cleveland, 3; Philadelphia, 0.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	31	18	.633
Detroit	31	20	.608
Boston	23	18	.561
Washington	21	21	.500
New York	21	23	.477
Cleveland	20	25	.444
St. Louis	19	28	.404
Philadelphia	17	30	.362

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Chicago at Kansas City.
Buffalo at Baltimore.
Newark at Brooklyn.
Pittsburgh at St. Louis.

Results Yesterday

Newark, 12; Brooklyn, 2.
Baltimore, 5; Buffalo, 2.
Chicago, 4; Kansas City, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	29	20	.592
Pittsburgh	25	19	.568
Newark	25	21	.543
Brooklyn	26	23	.531
Chicago	25	23	.521
St. Louis	22	21	.512
Baltimore	18	29	.383
Buffalo	18	32	.360

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Binghamton at Syracuse.
Elmira at Utica.
Albany at Scranton.
Troy at Wilkesbarre.

Results Yesterday

Scranton, 3; Albany, 2.
Wilkesbarre, 3; Troy, 2.
Binghamton-Syracuse; rain.
Utica-Elmira; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	18	12	.600
Elmira	19	14	.576
Wilkesbarre	17	15	.531
Troy	15	14	.517
Scranton	15	14	.517
Binghamton	13	15	.464
Syracuse	12	18	.400
Albany	12	19	.387

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Toronto at Montreal.
Rochester at Buffalo.
Richmond at Newark.
Providence at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Buffalo, 12; Rochester, 5.
Providence-Jersey City; postponed.
Toronto-Montreal; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	19	13	.594
Providence	19	16	.543
Rochester	19	17	.528
Richmond	19	17	.528
Montreal	20	18	.526
Toronto	17	20	.459
Newark	15	19	.441
Jersey City	14	22	.389

CHANGE OF TIME

The New York(Ontario & Western Railway summer schedule becomes effective Sunday, June 27th. Important changes. adv.

EXTENSION WORK ON BROAD SCALE

Value of Home Conveniences Demonstrated by Agents of Dep't of Agriculture

Washington.—Secretary of Agriculture Houston is going to try to solve the problem of unrest among country women by improving their condition.

"The chief objections of women to country life," according to a statement issued by the department, "are usually the generally small returns from farming, the drudgery of farm work and the social isolation.

"Data taken from the records of the department and relating exclusively to work of this kind in the thirty-three northern and western states show the following distribution of funds: For meetings and movable schools, at which demonstrations are given in cooking, sewing, household conveniences and for the organization of women's clubs to study home economics, $81,555; for canning clubs to teach girls and women how to prevent many of the wastes of the farm by canning and preserving fruits, vegetables and meats by cheap and rapid commercial processes, $56,197; for county agents who help farmers and their wives to increase the net income of the farm and thus make possible the introduction of labor saving conveniences and other improvements $1,027,312.

Photo by American Press Association.

SECRETARY HOUSTON.

"Extension work designed to be fundamentally helpful to farm women seems to include within its scope certain matters, as follows:

"First.—Plans to increase the net income of the farm. Farm women need more money for home purposes. The purchase of home conveniences, the installation of water, sewerage, lighting and heating systems, kitchen and other conveniences and the bringing of literature and music into the home are, in the majority of country homes, dependent upon greater net profits in farming. Knowledge of these conveniences and other desirable things is good, but money to buy these desirable things is a vital necessity if country life is to be made as acceptable to women as town life.

"Second.—Plans to teach and demonstrate efficiency in farm home management. These include such matters as wholesome food properly prepared and served in adequate supply and variety throughout the year, the care of the home and the family linen and wardrobe, the care and management of children and sometimes the handling of certain farm enterprises like poultry and eggs, milk and butter, the garden, small fruits, etc. Efficiency in farm home management contemplates the maximum of accomplishment with the minimum of effort to the end that the farm family may find satisfaction and contentment in the home and that the time of the farm woman may be conserved.

"Third.—Plant for leisure and development. The farm woman needs time for reading, self development, child teaching, social life and recreation.

"In the development of home economics demonstration work there needs to be kept in mind the point of view that the problems of country women must chiefly be solved by country women. The county agent movement in some sections of the north and west started out primarily as a city man's movement, but it has succeeded in exact proportion as the farmers of the county have taken hold of the work and made it their own."

Monument Set Up For Ape.

Summit, N. J.—The grave of a pet monkey which was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Humphreys of New York and was buried here a short time ago on the estate of Mr. Humphreys' mother, Mrs. T. St. John Gaffney, is now marked with a handsome headstone.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 150 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | MONDAY, JUNE 14, 1915 | Price One Cent

What You Can Do for Fulton--Buy in Fulton! If You Spend Dollars Out of Town You Deprive Fulton Work People of Money That Belongs to Them.

Chamber of Commerce Begins Campaign of Boosting for the Merchants, Who in Turn, Are Expected to Show Their Loyalty to the City.

The Chamber of Commerce has begun its "Buy at Home" Campaign. On Saturday the members of the Chamber doing a retail business were notified that dodgers were available for distribution. Many of them called at the Chamber office and secured some of the dodgers which read as follows:

What you can do for Fulton!

Buy in Fulton!

If you buy out-of-town, and we buy out-of-town, what will become of our city?

Beginning June 14th let the people of Fulton and especially every member of the Chamber of Commerce make a firm resolve to spend their money in Fulton stores for everything necessary for house and personal use.

You will be surprised when you look around a little, to discover that many things you thought could not be had here, are for sale in Somebody's store in Fulton. If we do not happen to have what you want, we will gladly order it for you.

Most of the nationally advertised specialties and standard brands of every kind of merchandise are on sale here. The price is usually less than you have to pay in the large city stores, or in the long run to the mail order houses.

Buy in Fulton—and you help to extend Fulton's trade area.

Buy in Fulton—and you help the whole city and yourself.

Give Fulton Merchants Half a Chance—They will make good.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The merchants are expected to wrap these dodgers up in packages and to give them away with purchases.

The Division of Retail trade in furtherance of this plan to encourage trade in Fulton will issue a series of reasons for trading here. Reason No. 1 is printed today. The others will follow day by day.

Buy in Fulton—Reason No. 1. Because you can get it cheaper in Fulton.

The old bugaboo that it is cheaper to buy away from home is scared away if you look it squarely in the face. Buy from a merchant in another town. What was your railroad fare? How much did you spend in the restaurant? What time did it take? Railroad tickets and food cost money; usually they cost considerable money. That time is money is a proverb. But it from a mail order house. You have two cents or more for postage. You, have, on the average, ten cents for a money order. You pay cash in advance, when money is worth six per cent. Often you pay for the insurance. Compare the article so bought with the same article in our local stores. Given the same quality, the price is but a few cents—just a few catch pennies—lower. And you have spent the difference in ways you never notice. But you spent it! Out-of-town it is but look if you can take advantage of a special sale and if you do "pick up a bargain" you can seldom be sure of the reliability of the man who sold it to you.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Chambers of Commerce throughout the country are awake to the opportunities for stimulating Home Trade. Olean has adopted the following slogan—"Made in America isn't enough, Trade in Olean, that's the stuff." The same slogan is equally applicable to Fulton. Hampton, Iowa, advertises its thrice guaranteed goods—Guaranteed by the Local Merchants, Guaranteed by the Leading Manufacturers of the United States and Guaranteed by the foremost papers and magazines. What can be said of Hampton can be said of Fulton. The dodger is the opening of the campaign which we hope will result in more and better business for FULTON.

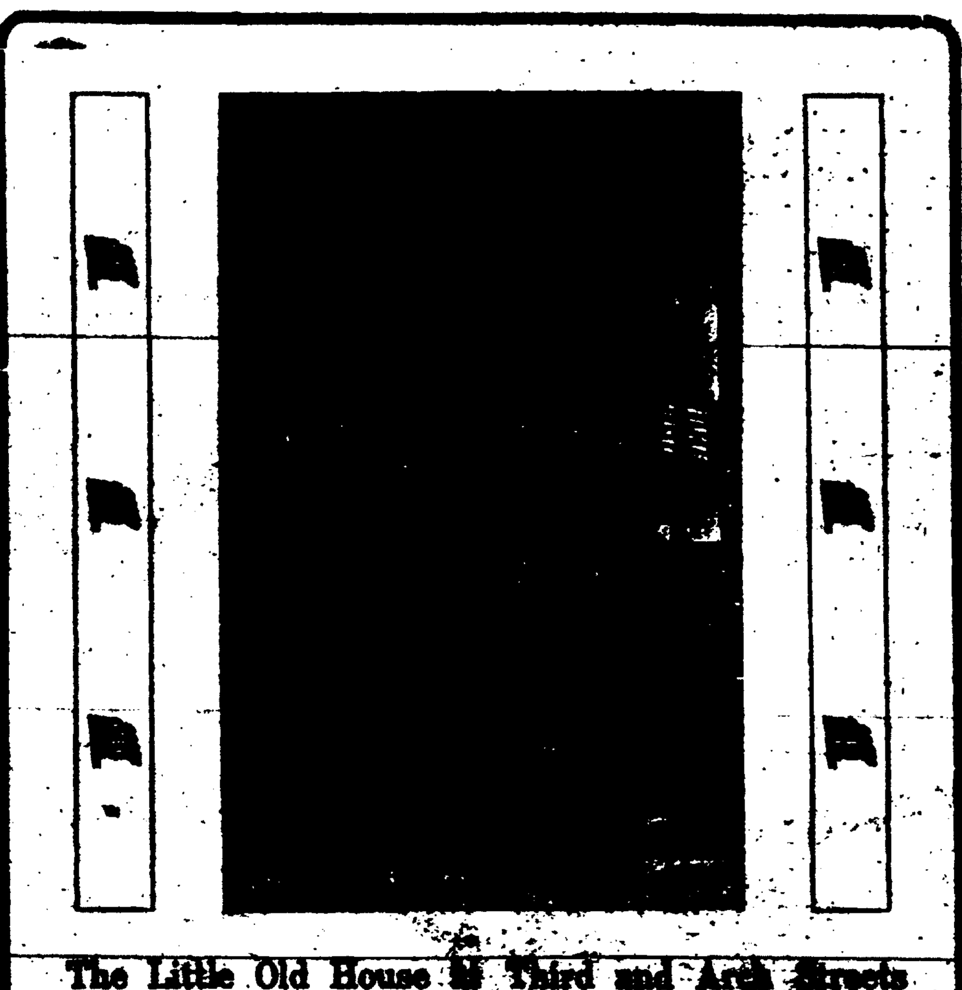
ALDERMEN TO MEET IN ADJOURNED SESSION

The Common Council will hold a meeting tonight at the City Hall, adjourned from last Friday. At tonight's session several important matters will be discussed. The city dog catcher will be appointed and all applicants for the job are requested to be on hand early. The Americanization Day plan, which has been recommended as a fitting way to observe the Fourth of July will also be given consideration and the council will also be given consideration and the council will take definite action on the proposition.

The new ordinance which regulates pool rooms and bowling alleys will be published in the papers this week. The ordinance does not go into effect until it has been published, although one of the pool-room operators stated today that he had been ordered to close his place at midnight tonight.

ELKS OPEN HOUSE TO THE VETERANS

Members of Schenck Post, G. A. R., will be guests of the Fulton Elks at the Elks' Home tonight. A light collation will be served late in the evening and the veterans will be entertained with music, and addresses. William Rubin of Syracuse will be the principal speaker.



The Little Old House at Third and Arch Streets Philadelphia, Pa., where Betsy Ross made the First American Flag

LINER AND YACHT CRASH IN FOG

Two Persons Die Aboard Steamship Bunker Hill When Bowsprit Pierces Cabin

New York, June 14.—In a blinding fog that enshrouded Long Island Sound last night, the Bunker Hill, fastest steamship in the Boston service of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, collided with C. K. G. Billing's yacht, Vanadis, off Eaton Neck, east of Huntington Bay.

Two men—George H. Kendrick, of No. 141 Milk street, Boston, and John Brown—both passengers on the Bunker Hill, were killed. Kendrick, said to be a wealthy financier, was in his stateroom when the bowsprit of the Vanadist pierced the Bunker Hill like a lance. It carried away eight staterooms.

Brown was hurled from the deck of the steamer and picked up by the Vanadis, on which he died soon after. A number of passengers on the Bunker Hill were injured. Among them are:

Wright, Mary, No. 57 Chancery lane, London.

Bell, Jarden C., Hotel Belmont, New York city.

Waugh, Martha, 1223 Aarrh street, Philadelphia.

Walsh, Mrs. Edward D., No. 36 Garden street, Brighton, Boston.

The Bunker Hill bore the brunt of the encounter. At 10:40 the Vanadis, with Mr. Billings and his family and the body of Brown aboard, dropped anchor at the Glen Cove station of the New York Yacht Club. Mr. Billings immediately dispatched messages saying the Vanadis collided with the Bunker Hill about 7 o'clock.

FOREIGNERS PAY FINE FOR ILLEGAL FISHING

Three Poles and an Italian were taken into custody this morning by Gamekeeper Travis for illegal fishing in the Oswego river. The gamekeeper found in the possession of the four men a number of bass, and it now being closed season for bass, an offender is obliged to pay a fine for each fish of the species caught. When arraigned this morning, the Italian settled by paying a penalty of $15. The case of the other three men was not settled.

FORD CAR AWAITS OWNER AND CASH

First Street Garage Holds What Is Left After Joy Riders Had Fun

Evidently a joy-ride without parental permission, a young man who refused to give his name or address came to grief yesterday afternoon on the river road north of the city, near the water works. The automobile, of the well-known Ford variety, was badly damaged and will need a new windshield, mudguard, top, steering gear and possibly an engine.

Although the youthful driver stated that he was alone in the car at the time, investigation revealed the fact that the car was accupied by four people, two women and the twoy oung men. The occupants of another car who passed before the accident stated that the car was running swiftly and the driver was driving with one hand. Grease leaking from the differential jooded out on the rear tires and when the driver tried to mae a slight turn the rear end of the car left the road and, striking some grass, turned completely over. The driver was the only one injured and he sustained nothing but a bruise on the temple.

A passing automobile gave the Ford a tow and the wrecked machine was brought to the VanWagenen garage for repairs. The youth who appeared to be in charge stated that he had left his pocketbook somewhere and told the manager of the barage that he would call up this morning after he had consulted another party about the repairs. Up to noon today the man had not called. Although the youth removed the license numbers from the car, a Times reporter succeeded in getting the number although no amount of questioning could reveal the name of the owner. The number was N. Y. H. 8287. The party left this city on a south bound trolley later in the afternoon.

KILLED BY 3D RAIL ON EVE OF GOING TO WAR

New York.—Joseph Izzo, twenty-one, of No. 475 Broadway, Astoria, an employe of the Long Island Railroad, was electrocuted today. In avoiding a train he stepped on the third rail.

He was hurrying to finish a job before giving up hisp osition to return to Italy and join the colors.

Germany Holding Argument In Reserve to Be Used in New Reply to Plead Law of Reprisal to United States.

Washington, June 14.—Germany in her reply to the last United States note on submarine warfare will propose a discussion of the principle and doctrine of reprisal or retaliation as a justification or palliation of her past acts of submarine warfare which have affected the lives of American citizens.

Germany will expect a free discussion in connection with the starvation reprisal of Great Britain. Germany will maintain that it is impossible to discuss the doctrine of reprisals without discussing it equally with Germany and Great Britain. This proposal, it is understood, is the argument which Germany held in reserve when she sent her last note to the United States. In that note she said that she had other considerations to present in reference to the Lusitania.

These officials say Germany will not go to the extent of asserting that the law of retaliation, even in its widest and most flexible interpretation, could be applied to any tragedies in the future in which there shall be a loss of American life by the illegal use of submarines without visit and search and assurances for the safety of non-combatant Americans.

It is nevertheless asserted that Germany will seek to embrace the case of the Lusitania. It is not expected that German's attitude will affect the determination of the President to insist on reparation and guarantees for the future. The new argument by Germany, these officials say, will take advantage of the door left open by the President to bring forward its last argument.

This argument will necessarily suggest to the United States that it should pass upon the question of the justification in law or in humanity of the doctrine of starvation laid down by Great Britain as a "retaliatory measure." It is pointed out that it has become a mere question between Great Britain and Germany as to which first appealed to the law of reprisal. Great Britain asserts that Germany commandeered all food supplies for the German Army, and the Order in Council was an act of retaliation.

Germany holds the establishment of the submarine war zone was retaliation against acts of Great Britain in holding up American ships and others with cargoes of foodstuffs for neutral nations and for Germany herself.

One of our informants said today:

"I think Great Britain, when she looks into her own authorities on international law will find that Germany can make a very strong appeal on the nessit and legalt ofthe law of reprisal or retaliation.

"I thing it can be shown that the doctrine of reprisal and retaliation is a doctrine also of American law. Under the Madison administration it was practised. I that your histories will show that President Madison ordered the seizure of British officers as a reprisal for seizing certain American citizens by Great Britain. I might also cite the recent seizure of Vera Cruz."

FOUR-CITY LEAGUE MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT

The Oswego-Onondaga League project has not been abandoned by its promoters although no definite move toward the formation of the league was made during the past week. A meeting was called for Friday night, June 4, but owing to the fact that J. Cotta, the Oswego manager, could not be present the meeting was postponed. The Phoenix and Fulton representatives were on hand, however. The next meeting is scheduled for Friday night of this week at which time the organizers hope to get together and get the league started.

Baldwinsville, Phoenix, Fulton and Oswego will comprise the circuit. If the meeting Friday is attended by all the representatives, the league will probably be given its send-off on Saturday, June 26.

LADIES OF PARISH AID HOLD MEETING TONIGHT

The ladies of the Parish Aid of the Zion Episcopal church will hold a special meeting at the home of Rev. and Mrs. M. J. Peters in Cayuga st.

All members are urged to be present, as business of importance is to be discussed.

Martin Boy Still Continues to Improve

Frederick Martin, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin, of 187 West 2d st., was run down Saturday afternoon on West 1st st by a large touring car owned by H. Putnam Allen and driven by Leonard Bradford, Mr. Allen's chauffeur. The child was playing in the street and did not see the approaching car until it turned out from behind a wagon. Bradford claims that he was driving slowly and he is corroborated by witnesses. The right fender hit the child knocking him several feet and rendering him unconscious.

Bradford, with the assistance of a neighbor, picked the boy up and he was rushed to the office of Dr. Joy, where an examination disclosed many bruises and a slight concussion of the brain. The boy regained consciousness yesterday noon and since then has been improving steadily.

Bradford is known as a skillful driver, very careful in the city limits, and he is not blamed for the accident. He was lone in the car at the time of the accident.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Monday, June 14, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

CHILDREN'S DAY AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The largest attended and the best children's service ever given by the Bible school of the First Baptist church was given Sunday morning. Immediately after the precude on the organ Miss Clara Wilson commenced the march on the piano for the school which had assembled in the chapel and led by Harold Schaffer carrying a large American flag and Miss Frances Lewis carrying the large emblem of the Churchtian cross followed by the Superintendent Fred B. Trask and the pastor, Rev. M. G. Buck, and the classes of the adult school. After them came the second division; the Juniors led by the superintendents, Mrs. William Rear and Mrs. Lester Baldwin. After them came the primary department led by the superintendents, Miss Ethel Knapp, Miss Edna Wolcott and Ivenette Barnes and Mrs. Ouderkirk, after which came the beginners led by the superintendents, Mrs. Irving Galusha and Miss Edna Hill and last, but not least, the cradle roll in the arms of the mothers and one, the youngest of all, in a little baby basket, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Calkins.

After the march around the church the salute to the American flag was given and one verse of America was sung, then the salute to the Christian flag was given and one verse of "Fling Out the Banner, Let It Float," after which the pastor led in prayer and the program as printed Saturday was given. There were over 400 in the march and a large offering was taken for the American Baptist Publication Society. Much credit should be given to Mrs. C. W. Streeter for the successful carrying out of the program, superintendent of the primary department of the school assisted by Mrs. Harry Hopkins and Miss Edna Wolcott and Miss Edna Hill.

The floral decorations were beautiful and were under the supervision of Miss Florence Slauson, president of Christian Endeavor.

One of the features of the exercise was the presentation and consecration of the members of the Cradle Roll by the mothers and the receiving of them by the primary department.

BATTLES-WESTCOTT

Lincoln Battles and Mrs. Frances Westcott were married by the Rev. Charles Olmstead at the parsonage of the Congregational church Saturday evening, at 7 o'clock. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Adam Crouch. Upon returning from a brief honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Battles will live at 155 W. 4th st. Mr. Battles is a carpenter of ability and Mrs. Battles has a large circle of warm friends who united in wishing nothing but success to the couple.

WOMEN URGE CHILD WELFARE

Want Pastors to Discuss Infant Life Saving Campaign Next Sunday

Albany, June 13.—The Public Health Committee of the State Federation of Women's Clubs is co-operating with the Division of Child Hygiene and the Division of Public Health Education in making Child Welfare Sunday, which occurs on June 20th, a success. Dr. Mary Gage Day of Kingston, Chairman of the Health Department of the State Federation, has issued a statement through the Division of Child Hygiene calling upon Women's Clubs generally to co-operative with the Health Department in this feature of its campaign to save babies' lives.

Letters have been sent out to the pastors of churches all over the state urging them to devote some time on Sunday, June 20th, to a discussion of the need for child welfare work in their communities. The responses to this letter from clegymen of all denominations indicate that the discussion of this subject will be widespread. Several circulars of information have been prepared and these are being sent out to clergymen and other to give them data upon which to base their addresses.

In her letter Dr. Day says: "With close co-operation with the health authorities, club women can help create a strong public health sentiment, so that the new sanitary code of our state will be enforced. This code contains the best health provisions known and if fully enforced can not fail to result in great physical good to the whole population.

"A splendid opportunity is offered the women of this state to help make Sunday, June 20th, 'Child Welfare Sunday,' universally recognized, and a day long to be remembered. Proper food, fresh air, good personal hygiene are as important for adults as for children in order to live efficient lives. Each club women can feel that she is rendering her own community a definite service, in using all her efforts to fill the churches to overflow when the gospel of child-saving will be preached.

"Every thoughtful person must recognize the importance of registering the births of children, yet some states do not even have a law requiring it. The law in our own state is a good one.

"In order to test just how well our good law is being enforced, committees of club women have been organized all over the state to investigate the birth registration in the communities where they live. So far about forty have been working and more committees are being organized."

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

Bicycle Supplies at Bogue's.—adv.

PURE ICE CREAM

THE RICHEST AND MOST SANITARY

Served at our Fountain and Tables. Made with Heavy Cream, the Best Flavors and Fresh Fruits.

OUR FOUNTAIN DRINKS ARE UNEQUALED

PHONE 80 — THE ONYX — Quirk Theatre Blk.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THE SAFE WAY TO SAVE

is to deposit each surplus dollar to your credit in the First National Bank where it is secure and earns more money for you.

Your account, whether large or small, is cordially invited.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

THE FLAG TO ITS MAKERS

The Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, delivered the following address to his office force on Flag Day, 1914:

"This morning as I passed into the Land Office, the flag dropped me a most cordial salutation, and from its rippling folds I heard it say: 'Good morning, Mr. Flag Maker.'

'I beg your pardon, Old Glory,' I said, 'you are mistaken. I am not the President of the United States, nor the Vice-President, nor a member of Congress, nor even a general in the army. I am only a Government clerk.'

'I greet you again, Mr. Flag Maker,' replied the gay voice. 'I know you well. You are the man who worked in the swelter of yesterday straightening out the tangle of that farmer's homestead in Idaho.'

'No, I am not,' I was forced to confess.

'Well, perhaps you are the one who discovered the mistake in that Indian contract in Oklahoma.'

'No, wrong again,' I said.

'Well, you helped to clear that patent for the hopeful inventor in New York, or pushed the opening of that new ditch in Colorado, or made that mine in Illinois more safe, or brought relief to the old soldier in Wyoming. No matter, whichever one of these beneficent individuals you may happen to be, I give you greeting, Mr. Flag Maker.'

I was about to pass on feeling that I was being mocked, when the flag stopped me with these words:

'You know, the world knows, that yesterday the President spoke a word that made happier the future of ten million peons in Mexico, but that act looms no larger on the flag than the struggle which the boy in Georgia is making to win the corn club prize this summer. Yesterday the Congress spoke a word which will open the door of Alaska, but a mother in Michigan worked from sunrise until far into the night to give her boy an education. Yesterday we made a new law to prevent financial panics; yesterday, no doubt, a school teacher in Ohio taught his first letters to a boy who will write a song that will give cheer to the millions of our race. We are all making the flag.'

'But,' I said impatiently, 'these people were only working.'

Then came a great shout from the flag.

'Let me tell you who I am. The work that we do is the making of the real flag. I am not the flag, not at all. I am but its shadow. I am whatever you make me, nothing more. I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become. I live a changing life, a life of moods and passions, of heart breaks and tired muscles. Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly. Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from me, and cynically, I play the coward. Sometimes I am loud, garish, and full of that ego that blasts judgment. But always I am all that you hope to be and have the courage to try for. I am song and fear, struggle and panic, and ennobling hope. I am the day's work of the weakest man, and the largest dream of the most daring. I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and statute makers, soldiers and dreadnought, drayman and street sweep, cook counselor and clerk. I am the battle of yesterday and the mistake of tomorrow. I am the mystery of the men who do without knowing why. I am the clutch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution. I am no more than what you believe me to be, and I am all that you believe I can be. I am what you make me, nothing more. I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, the pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this nation. My stars and my stripes are your dreams and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith, because you have made them so out of your hearts, for you are the makers of the flag, and it is well that you glory in the making."

WITH THE STATE EDITORS

Rockland county is rotten politically speaking, and the punishment of Boss Whyard, following the imprisonment of Bart Dunn, of the same county, for a similar offense, will greatly clear the atmosphere. Although robbing the State through highway construction has been ended and perhaps half a dozen men punished for their part, the State has not recovered one cent of the millions lost through Tammany mismanagement and Tammany theft, nor is it likely to recover anything. Nor have the bigger men in the ring which squeezed the Treasury been brought to book. As usual, they covered their tracks.—Brooklyn Stanard-Union.

* * *

Comptroller Travis is saving money in the right way. He is declining to appoint special counsel to collect the inheritance taxes.

Horace Greeley once said, "the way to resumption of specie payments is to resume them." Evidently Mr. Travis believes that the way to economy is to be economical.—Watertown Standard.

* * *

The Governor has vetoed bills carrying over $2,500,000, but still was unable to cover up the gap left in the finances by the extravagances and waste of the three Democratic administrations. So a direct tax was necessary this year.

Even while the Governor's critics were making most noise it was found necessary to borrow a large sum on short term notes to pay public employees during the weeks that will pass before the returns from the new taxes become available. As large numbers of employees have been discharged and various other economies have been introduced in the public service since January 1, it is idle to say that the Republican administration is responsible for the situation that has made new taxation necessary.—Binghamton Republican.

* * *

Governor Whitman and the State administration, can not accomplish in a minute, nor build new in a short period of a few months, a perfect state government out of the wreck of Democratic misrule, any more than a mechanic can build a Packard touring car of a Ford runabout. As Governor Whitman's period of office continues compare carefully his administration with that of his Democratic predecessors, and no man of any party will find him or his administration, wanting.—Mohawk Valley Register.

* * *

The most serious mistake that could be made by the constitutional convention would be to load down the draft of the new Constitution with a multitude of provisions that properly come under the category of statutory law. The framers of the Federal Constitution set a good example in the matter of brevity, as well as in other respects, being satisfied to lay down a few broad general principles, and leaving it to Congress to frame the laws.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

ANNUAL MEETING OF LOCAL D. A. R. WOMEN

The annual meeting of the daughters of the American Revolution was held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Foster in Highland st.

No special program was arranged, but questions of importance were discussed.

Sewing Machines—all makes; priced from $5.00 to $25.00. Bogue's Piano Store, 61 First st.—adv.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 14.—In the event that the amendment to the State Constitution proposed by Delegate Anthony J. Griffin becomes enacted into that document, the present State census or innumeration will have been the last. Delegate Griffin has presented a proposition for the apportionment of senators and assemblymen based upon the number of voters participating in the election for governor.

The basic idea of the amendment is to have the legislative apportionment depend upon the voters in the various districts, the proposition being framed in the expectation that the term of the governor will be increased from two to four years. In case the term is not extended, the language of the amendment can readily be changed so as to have the reapportionment every four or eight years.

"It is assumed," said Delegate Griffin in discussing his proposed amendment, "that it is now obvious that owing to the great increase in population in many counties of the State, an interim of ten years between apportionments means a virtual denial of just representation. Up to the present time it has been the custom to make a reapportionment after each State census."

It is the conviction of Delegate Griffin that so long as reapportionments are made every ten years, there is no need or excuse for the intermediate State census."

It is the conviction of Delegate Griffin that so long as reapportionments are made every ten years, there is no need or excuse for the intermediate State census. The apportionment might just as well be made after the Federal census, he believes.

"The fact is," he continues," that for purposes of apportionment, there is no need for any apportionment whatever. The people actually take their own census at every election—a census, which for all purposes of government is far more satisfactory than the indiscriminate counting of the white, black and yellow, the lame, the halt and the blind. The election census gives a count of the true factors in a Republic; namely the voters."

In point out that the proposed amendment will do away with the necessity and expense of a State census, Delegate Griffin maintains that it will raise the voter to a position of self-appreciation and dignity; will accentuate the importance of the franchise and will make voting a duty and thus operate as a lesson in good citizenship. It will also eliminate the dron from political calculations and make him an object of scorn, whether he fails to vote from ignorance, indifference or from contempt of his responsibility as a citizen, he predicts.

The census of 1910 brought to light the fact that there were 2,863,773 males of voting age in this State exclusive of Indians and Mongolians. Of this number but 1,445,249 voted at the governatorial election in that year. There were in the State foreign born white males of voting age, 1,221,013. Of this number 502,083, or 41 per cent. had become naturalized, leaving a balance of 718,930 or 60 per cent. who either did not or could not avail themselves of the right to become citizens.

It is the belief of Delegate Griffin that the adoption and ratification of his amendment will stimulate civic consciousness among the native population of the State as will tend to compel the foreign born males of voting age in the State to take sufficient interest in its welfare to become naturalized citizens.

NO SUNDAY BASEBALL GAMES IN WATERTOWN

Watertown, June 14.—There was no baseball game, free or otherwise at Garland Park, Sunday. It was the opinion of the District Attorney that baseball games could be played on Sunday, provided the game could be conducted in an orderly manner, and without an admission fee being charged.

The baseball team advertised a sacred concert for Sunday, in conjunction with a game, but as no admission fee was charged the concert was held and the game played.

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

THEY LACE IN FRONT
To know them is to love them.
GOSSARD CORSETS
Sold and fitted at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Plone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4346
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

THE FLAG

By Frederic T. Cardoze

What see you from on high,
Beloved banner, as you reign
In triumph from the masthead
O'er America's broad plain?
I see a tranquil Nation
Where industry is rife,
Where homes are not disrupted
By the mail-clad god of strife!

I see beneath the noon-day sun
A realm of golden grain,
Still undefaced or trampled down
Or strewn with needless slain.
From streams which gleam beneath me
Unto distant mountain haze,
I see an effort made to build
Instead of one to raze!

Behold me, for I am the Flag,
And heed ye what I saw;
My stars are dimmed by battle smoke
My stripes were seared by war!
Though proudly to the winds of wrath
Did I my folds release,
Still prouder do I spread them
On the fragrant breeze of Peace!

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

The engagement in marriage was announced at a house party given by Miss Elsie Drury, Friday evening, to a few friends, of Miss Emma Loveland of Chestnut st. and Harold W. Hill of Utica st. The wedding day has not been set.

Have You Seen

THE LATEST STYLES

of

SOLID SILVERWARE

G. B. FARLEY

21 First Street

Can show you a full line. Just the kind for

WEDDING GIFTS

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Chattel Mortgage Sale.—One gasoline truck wagon, in good condition, with top; also one light truck same as above, without top. Sale at VanWagenen garage, Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. A. Bristol, Mortgagee's agent. 154

For Sale—Indian motorcycle in excellent condition. $45; quick sale takes it. Will demonstrate at your convenience in Fulton. Address Jno. Park, 141 W. 4th st., Oswego. Phone 556M Oswego. 150c

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

For Sale—2 H.P. marine steam engine with tubular oil burning boiler; complete from stack to propeller. 307 Cayuga st. 152

To Rent—New house in Park st.; modern conveniences; electric light; bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

For Sale—61-acre farm on trolley; also 2 acres and 9-room house. Easy terms. 320 Cayuga st., Fulton. 150c

Lost—Bunch of keys, between post office and 214 S. 3d st. Reward. Return to Times office. 150c

To Rent—Downstairs flat at 311 Atlantic ave. Inquire Crandall, 261 S. 7th st. Pone 252. tf

For Sale—31 choice R. I. chicks; 4 weeks old; $6. 811 Emery st. Phone 2271. 150

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

SHOWS VALUE OF LIFE AND COST OF DISEASE.

Dr. A. L. Light, health officer of Dayton, O., has presented to the annual conference of the state board of health a schedule of the economic cost of preventable diseases and the loss of life due to them. Here is the table:

Value of life of baby at birth, $90; at ten years of age, $2,601; at fifteen, $4,236; at twenty-five, laboring men, $5,448; professional men, $25,808; at forty, professional men, $29,334; at seventy, laboring men, $70.

Average loss by each death due to preventable disease, $3,000. Cost of each case of preventable disease: Measles, mumps, etc., $10; diphtheria, $30; scarlet fever, $50; smallpox, $60; typhoid fever, $200; tuberculosis, $3,000.

Greater Grief.

"Does your wife grieve much over her first husband's death?" "Not so much as I do."—Baltimore Sun.

N. HIGH WENT DOWN TO DEFEAT

Game Was Full of Fight, Wherein Some Fine Technical Points Were Decided

Although the first inning was a nightmare for the fans, due in a great measure to O'Brien's unsteadiness, the Fulton High school baseball team annexed another win to the season's tally Saturday at the Athletic Park field by walking all over the North High school team of Syracuse. The final tally was 10-8 and this is the second time this season that the Syracuse lads have been compelled to bow to the Fulton products. The game was featured by some hard hitting by both teams, the Fultonians in particular handling the willow to advantage. Many, many errors were made but the booting seemed to be in order among the losers.

Some fine fielding, on the other hand added speed and interest ot the contest. Frinstance Martin, the local short-fielder, handled everything that came his way and made only one miscue. He picked a hot liner from the bat of Heitzman in the fifth inning that was labeled for a safe hit and his throws were fast and accurate at all times. Honey Barnes, playing the keystone sack, was on the job all the time, and saved Kraus an error in the first inning by picking up a hard one that Kraus had fumbled and making thep ut-out at first unassisted.

Matteo, a tall Spaniard, who played center field for the visitors, pulled a shoe-string catch of the George Burns variety in the first inning. Dan O'Brien's Texas Leaguer was a hard chance, but Matteo came up on the run and pulled it out of the grass. A man was perched on third at the time, and Matteo's stunt staved off another tally.

Pullen, of course, was not in the line-up, so Wilcox played the left side, Thompson center, and Don O'Brien, who was hampered by a weak ankle, played right field.

We repeat, things looked bad for the "hum" team in the first canto. Zimmerman flied out, and although baseball experts claim that the inning is half over, psychologically, when one man is out, that dope is all off, for the North High lads did much before the next two put-outs were recorded. O'Brien assisted to a great extent. Heitzman caught one of "Oby's" fast ones in the limb; Wolf took a constitutional; Martin booted Bray's throw to second and Heitzman scored. Galvin got one past Keeler but Clark fanned. With Wolf on third, O'Brien pulled a frenzied heave into the grand stand and the Wolf came in at the door. Matteo took the projectile on the hoof, Johns hit to Kraus and Barnes made the put-out. Result—two runs for Syracuse—no hits.

The old fighting spirit was in evidence as soon as Fulton came to the bat. Martin was safe when Galvin booted his grounder. Keeler lifted one into left field, which Fitzpatrick misjudged and Bray hit to Wolf, who nailed Martin at the plate. Wilcox hit to Johns who is still trying to decide which man to play for and three men were safe on the bags. H. O'Brien's drive to Galvin helped Keeler across. Barnes boosted Bray over with another infield roller, and on a poor return to the plate O'Brien scored. Matteo picked Don O'Brien's fly.

Three hits, among them a triple by Bray, scored three runs for Fulton in the second. Kraus led off with a single, and Thompson was safe on Wolf's error. Martin made first on a fielder's choice and after Keeler had sacrificed, Bray slugged the pill for three stations. Wilcox scored Miguel with a single, but O'Brien whiffed.

The run getting began to get monotonous in the third when the locals gathered three more. Singles by Don O'Brien and Keeler and a double by Barnes accounted for the tallies.

A two bagger that was not even a fair ball allowed the North High lads to tally in the fourth. Umpire Ingamells decided that the ball had jumped first base and from the center of the diamond, his decision was correct, but the bill was a foot oustide. Matteo made the hit and he scored on a hit by Fitypatrick. Fulton also got a run in the fourth frame.

Some lad swiped one of the baseballs in the sixth inning and the field was depopulated while a posse ran him down. The excitement must have rattled O'Brien, for the visitors opened fire on him in that frame.

Two two base hits and a single coming in a row counted one run for North High. With a man on second and third O'Brien tightened up and retired the side without difficulty. A base on balls and another two base wallop coupled with an error by Barnes gave Syracuse two more in the seventh.

O'Brien took things easy in the ninth and the Syracusians scored two more. After Zimmerman and Heitzman had tallied, however, 'Oby' steadied and Galvin and Clark were easy hits.

The score:

Fulton

	AB	R	H	PO	A	E
Martin, ss.	5	2	0	0	7	1
Keeler, 3b.	3	1	1	2	2	2
Bray, c.	4	1	1	5	1	1
Wilcox, lf.	4	2	2	2	0	0
H. O'Brien, p.	4	1	1	2	1	0
Barnes, 2b.	4	1	1	2	2	1
D. O'Brien, rf.	4	0	1	0	0	0
Kraus, 1b.	4	0	1	12	1	0
Thompson, cf.	4	1	1	2	0	0
Barker*	0	1	0	0	0	0
	36	10	9	27	14	5

North High School

	AB	R	H	PO	A	E
Zimmerman, 1b.	4	1	1	5	0	1
Heitzman, 2b.	2	3	0	2	2	1
Wolf, p.	4	2	2	0	5	1
Galvin, ss.	5	0	0	1	1	2
Clark, c.	5	1	1	8	1	1
Matteo, cf.	3	1	2	3	0	0
Johns, 3b.	4	0	1	2	1	0
Wineter, rf.	4	0	0	2	0	0
Fitzpatrick, lf.	4	0	1	0	0	1
	35	8	8	*23	10	7

*H. O'Brien out—hit by batted ball.

Score by innings:

Fulton ....3 3 3 1 0 0 0 0 x—10
North High ...2 0 0 1 0 1 2 0 2— 8

Three base hits—Bray. Two base hits—Wolf, 2; Clark, Barnes.

Stolen bases—Martin, Keeler, Zimmerman.

Sacrifice hit—Keeler. Sacrifice fly, Galvin.

Struck out—by O'Brien, 4; by Wolf, 5.

Base on balls—Off O'Brien, 4; off Wolf, 0.

Wild pitches—O'Brien, 2.

Hit by pitcher—Matteo, Heitzman.

Umpire—Ingamells.

MICHAEL BRAY TO GIVE TEAM A REAL TREAT

Captain J. Michael Bray, of the Fulton High school baseball team will appear in the role of host to his teammates, Coach Bill Stauring and a few invited guests at a large evening at Friend Bray's home next Thursday. Michael is the honorable catcher, as well as the honorable captain of the honorable high school nine, but he confesses himself more of an adept at corralling any loose eats which come his way than at handling outdrops. And he is of the opinion that the rest of his teammates, some of whom are weak on the basebals, are all strong on the menu stuff, and show more speed in the dining room rush than they ever have displayed on the diamond. For that reason, purveyors of things edible are advised to stock up well for Thursday night's battle.

In addition to feed, other little unimportant details, such as speeches, "well-chosen" words, songs, perhaps a little dancing, and parlor games, may be tolerated. The boys have a few surprises on tap, and needless to say, the team will be there three ways from the ace.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

	R.	H.	E.
At Louisville—
St. Paul	1	7	0
Louisville	2	4	1
At Cleveland—
Kansas City	3	8	2
Cleveland	2	7	2
Second game—
Kansas City	8	10	1
Cleveland	5	9	1
At Columbus—
Minneapolis	2	9	3
Columbus	3	7	1

For Tired Feet—Feather-weight Arch Supports at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair Shop, 119 Cayuga St.—adv.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Chicago.
New York at Cincinnati.
Brooklyn at St. Louis.
Philadelphia at iPttsburgh.

Results Yesterday

Chicago, 6; Boston, 4.
New York-Cincinnati; rain.
St. Louis, 9; Brooklyn, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	26	20	.565
Philadelphia	26	20	.565
St. Louis	26	25	.510
Boston	23	23	.500
Brooklyn	23	24	.489
Pittsburgh	22	23	.489
Cincinnati	19	24	.442
New York	18	24	.429

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Cleveland at Boston.
Detroit at Philadelphia.
St. Louis at New York.
Chicago at Washington.

Results Yesterday

No games scheduled.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	31	19	.620
Detroit	31	21	.596
Boston	24	18	.571
Washington	22	21	.512
New York	22	23	.489
Cleveland	20	26	.435
St. Louis	19	29	.396
Philadelphia	18	30	.375

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

No games cheduled.

Results Yesterday

St. Louis, 6; Pittsburg, 5; 1st game.
St. Louis, 3; Pittsburg, 1; 2d game.
Newark, 5; Buffalo, 0; 1st game.
Buffalo, 4; Newark, 3; 2d game.
Kansas City, 6; Chicago, 4; 1st game
Chicago, 3; KansasCity, 2; 2d game.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	31	21	.596
St. Louis	25	21	.543
Brooklyn	27	23	.540
Pittsburgh	25	22	.532
Newark	26	23	.531
Chicago	26	25	.510
Baltimore	19	29	.396
Buffalo	19	34	.358

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Syracuse at Albany.
Utica at Troy.
Wilkesbarre at Binghamton.
Scranton at Elmira.

Results Yesterday

Albany, 2; Syracuse, 1; 10 ings.
Utica, 5; Wilkesbarre, 1.
Binghamton, 6; Troy, 4.
Elmira, 7; Scranton, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	20	12	.625
Elmira	10	15	.571
Troy	16	15	.516
Scranton	16	15	.516
Binghamton	16	15	.516
Wilkesbarre	17	17	.500
Albany	13	20	.394
Syracuse	12	21	.364

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Buffalo at Montreal.
Rochester at Toronto.
Newark at Providence.
Richmond at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Providence, 4; Jersey City, 1; 1st.
rPovidence, 5; Jersey City, 3; 2d.
Richmond, 4; Newark, 3; 1st.
Newark, 12; Richmond, 5; 2d.
Montreal, 17; Toronto, 9; 1st.
Toronto, 6; Montreal, 4; 2d.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	21	13	.618
Providence	22	16	.579
Richmond	20	19	.513
Montreal	21	20	.512
Rochestr	19	19	.500
Toronto	19	21	.475
Newark	17	20	.459
Jersey City	14	25	.359

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall know the answer. adv

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

THE OLD and THE NEW

Drudging fades to a memory when you banish the Hot Stove, Heavy Irons and Many Steps of the Old-Fashioned Ironing Day, by using the

ELECTRIC FLAT IRON

Thirty Days Free Trial if an Electric Iron will convince you.

THE ELECTRIC CO.

103 Oneida St. Phone 144

Pathfinders to Make Friday a Big Day

Although the bad weather Friday necessitated the postponement of the Pathfinder Island weekly Field-Day program, the officers of the club and the committee in charge of the affairs are making plans for one of the banner days of the season this week. The Field Day project has not been meeting with the support expected, and in order to keep the matter fresh in the minds of the club members at all times, it is probable that something in the nature of a reminder will be sent to each member in the future, announcing the event.

The club members and guests who go to the island for the Friday Field Day find themselves well repaid for their excursion. However warm it may be in the city, the Island is favored with cool breezes at all times and those who spend the afternoon on the grounds certainly benefit greatly. The club house is easily accessible from the city, either by automobile or boat.

Quoits appear to be a favorite pasttime among the men of the club and there may a quoit league formed in the near future. The tennis courts have not yet been put in condition but as soon as the demand justifies this procedure, the courts will be graded and rolled for the season. The club officials have experienced great difficulty in keeping the court in good condition, owing to the peculiar soil on the island and the fact that the court cannot be drained properly at present. The baseball diamond is well patronized and Friday a game between two picked teams will be played.

In the evening the interior of the club is used for dancing, and in place of the orchestra, in vogue in former years, a Victrola now supplies the music. The modern dances are very popular and the younger people in particular, keep the Victrola busy.

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Morgan of Oneida st., are entertaining Mrs. Sarah Morgan.

* * *

The marriage of George Frederick Gillard and Miss Ellen Mehegan will take place at the Church of the Immaculate Conception Wednesday, June 16th.

* * *

Fred Chesbro of State st. has been in Syracuse attending the wedding of his brother, Glenn Chesbro and Miss Dorothy Gladys Seabrook.

* * *

Edward Stevens of East Broadway is ill.

* * *

Miss Dorothy Allen and Miss Florence Sprague spent the week-end at Constantia.

* * *

Mrs. C. E. Hammond of Gansevoort st. entertained the Elizabeth Robertson Bible class of the Presbyterian church Saturday.

* * *

Francis Murphy is home from Mercersburg Academy to spend the vacation with his parents.

* * *

Mrs. Ella Baggs of this city is the guest of out of town friends.

* * *

Miss Shanahan, assistant superintendent ofthe Lee hospital, is the guest of Syracuse friends.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Perine have returned to their home in Syracuse after visiting friends in this city.

* * *

Mrs. Fred Summerville of West 1st st. entertained a party of young women in honor of her niece, Mrs. Mary Reynolds of Oswego.

* * *

A miscellaneous shower was given Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Drury, West 3d st., by the Sunday school class of which Miss Drury is a member. Miss Drury's wedding to Darlin VanAlstyne is to take place in the near future.

* * *

Mrs. Elizabeth Sayles of Buffalo st. has been the guest of relatives at Palermo.

FOR SALE

CASH GROCERY STORE

210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY

A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of

240 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

UNDERTAKERS

YOUNG & HILL. Open day and night at 117 Oneida. Phone 2172.

Cahill's Perfection Bread

is the

BEST BREAD MADE

TRY A LOAF—Sold only at

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

GRATITUDE.

Gratitude is the fairest blossom that springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none so fragrant, while its opponent, ingratitude, is a deadly weed, not only poisonous in itself, but impregnating the very atmosphere in which it grows with fetid vapors.

LEGAL NOTICES

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF OSWEGO.—Edna I. Sharp, Plaintiff, against Lewlla Newton, J. Clifton Larkin, Bridget Gibbons, Henderson & Thompson Company, Defendants.

Pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale made in the above entitled action, at a Special Term of the Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the City of Syracuse, New York, on the 22d day of May, 1915, and duly entered in the Oswego County Clerk's Office, on the 24th day of May, 1915, I, the undersigned, the referee, duly appointed in and by said judgment for that purpose, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, the 10th day of July, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the City Hall, No. 67 East First Street, South, in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego, New York, the real estate directel by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: ALL THAT TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, situate in the City of Fulton, New York, known and describel as three rods off from the East end of Lot No. 1 of Block No. 512 of the original Village of Fulton.

Dated May 24, 1915.

H. L. GILMAN,
Referee.

FRED'K G. SPENCER,
Attorney for Plaintiff,
28½ East First Street,
Fulton, N. Y. 5-24-5t

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY

JOHN REDMOND
"THE EVANGELIST"

A splendid Dramatic production in 4 parts and others

TUESDAY

No. 6 of Paramount Travel Series and a Feature Master-Picture

MONEY

WEDNESDAY

"THE LONE STAR RUSH"

A Romantic Tale of the Great Australian Gold Fields in 5 parts

FOR THIS WEEK

The Biggest Bicycle Sale

Ever held in this City. Standard Wheels, ranging in price from $20.00 to $40.00 on Sale

From $15.00 to $30.00

not Mail-Order Bargains, but Real Values, backed by Our Guarantee and Our Service.

TIRES and SUPPLIES
at Big Reductions

DON'T FAIL TO INSPECT THESE BARGAINS

BOGUE

"The Bicycle Garage" 61 First Street

MEXICO GETS 30 DAYS MORE

President Will Insist That Leaders Get Together In That Time for Peace

Washington, June 14.—Administration officials have determined to await the effect of the interchanges between Carranza and General Villa to bring about peace in Mexico before taking any other steps to end the chaos in that country.

It was stated today by officials that the replies of Carranza and Ville were being given "consideration" at the State Department. This means that the President would read and estimate them and indicate to the Cabinet on Tuesday what advance, if any, had been made.

It is intimated very strongly that the President will give the Mexican leaders at least thirty days more in which to show what they can do of their own resources.

State Department dispatches seem to indicate that General Villa has by no means been defeated and that he will be in a position to be an equal power with Carranza in any agreements that may be made. If there should be a national convention agreed upon as a plan, department officials are predicting that it will be an even chance whether the principles of General Villa or those of General Carranza would prevail.

The Red Cross is pushing its work in Mexico regardless of the political factions.

Red Cross headquarters announced tonight that C. J. O'Connor, the head of the Pacific division at San Francisco, has been ordered to Mexico City. Mr. O'Connor will assume general charge of the Red Cross in Mexcio.

He will reach Galveston on Tuesday, and from there will proceed at once to Vera Cruz, where he will be met by former Consul-General Arnold Shanklin, with whom he will proceed to the Mexican national capital to establish a central office for the important and long relief work which is ahead.

The medical equipment needed in Mexico has been shipped already on orders of the Red Cross here.

Large supplies of foodstuffs are on the way and some of the food has already arrived at its destination. The Red Cross is informed tonight that a carload of provisions, shipped through Eagle Pass, has arrived at Monclova. This is a town which has been taken and retaken by the armies of Villa and Carranza, and the destitution there is great.

BIGGEST SMASH IN YEARS
AT
C. A. BECKWITH'S SHOE STORE

602 Pairs Ladies' $3.50 $4.00 and $5.00 Pumps and Oxfords for .. $1.49

ON SALE WEDNESDAY, 9 a. m.

No Approvals, Exchange or Refunds

SEE WINDOWS AND BE ON HAND EARLY.

C. A. BECKWITH
First Street, Fulton

Rev. Lindsman Commends Welfare Work

The parable of the Pharisee and the Publican was the text of a forceful sermon preached yesterday at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by the pastor, Father John Lindsman. The priest declared that the Pharisees are still in existence, and showed how the Pharisee spirit is still existant among the people today.

Father Lindsman reviewed the Gospel of the day in which the shepherd leaves the ninety-nine sheep and goes into the desert to search for the one which was lost. The shepherd is the figure of God, and the lost sheep is the lost soul which has strayed far from the fold. And in searching for the lost one, God shows the great depths of His mercy, which has not bounds, and therefore is greater than anything else in the world.

Among the announcements Father Lindsman spoke of the work of the Child Welfare station and said that the mothers should be particularly careful during the warm weather with the smaller children, not only of their bodies but of their souls. Sunday school and church attendance during the summer months, when many people leave the city on Sunday, was urged.

The Holy Name society met yesterday afternoon after the vesper service which was held at 3.30 o'clock.

RED MEN HAD THINGS EASY IN SUNDAY GAME

The Red Men of this city handed a bad beating to the New York Central baseball team of Oswego at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon. The final score was 19-6 and the Oswegonians never had a chance to win.

Johnnie Painter was on the firing line for the locals and for six innings the visitors could not find him. Fulton meanwhile piled up twelve runs. In the last three stanzas, the Oswego lads took advantage of Painter's generosity and ammassed six tallies while the locals kept on their winning way and totaled seven more scores.

Fayette did some fine work behind the bat for Fulton and the local infield showed flashes of sensational fielding. A large crowd witnessed the game, which was rather a disappointing affair, inasmuch as the visitors had been touted as a strong aggregation.

BARNES LABOR LAW CHANGES ARE KILLED

Albany, June 14.—Tomorrow Edgar T. Brackett will renew his fight for the Quigg resolution which his committee reported last week and which opens the way for a reapportionment of Senate districts. Last week Senator Wagner opposed it, and Tuesday he will do so again. Wickersham and Root's friends will do the same, each party organization being shaky about approaching it.

The short ballot has been killed, it is thought. There were too many conflicting motions on the subject.

Although ex-President Taft and others have advocated judicial appointments, it is believed here tonight the proposal is too reactionary to be accepted.

Methods of trials will be revised considerably, but unanimous jury verdicts probably will be retained, at least in criminal cases.

It is confidently predicted that William Barnes' amendments to abolish the compensation, mothers' pension and labor laws will be buried if they ever reach a vote.

KING VICTOR, IN PERIL, IS ORDERED TO REAR

Rome, June 14.—In order to protect King Victor from danger at the Isonzo front, General Cadorna officially decreed that the King take a five days' rest in the rear. The commander-in-chief took this drastic action after a shell burst twenty yards from the King, when he was on the second line trench.

An officer threw himself bodily in front of the King to protect him. The former wash urled to the ground and arose covered with mud from head to foot.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair tonight and Tuesday with moderate north to northeast winds.

Ha-Ha-Ha-Ha-Ha-Ha!

IT is said that a good laugh is better than medicine.

This man is listening to the famous Ben Greet Players, who will appear at the Redpath Chautauqua.

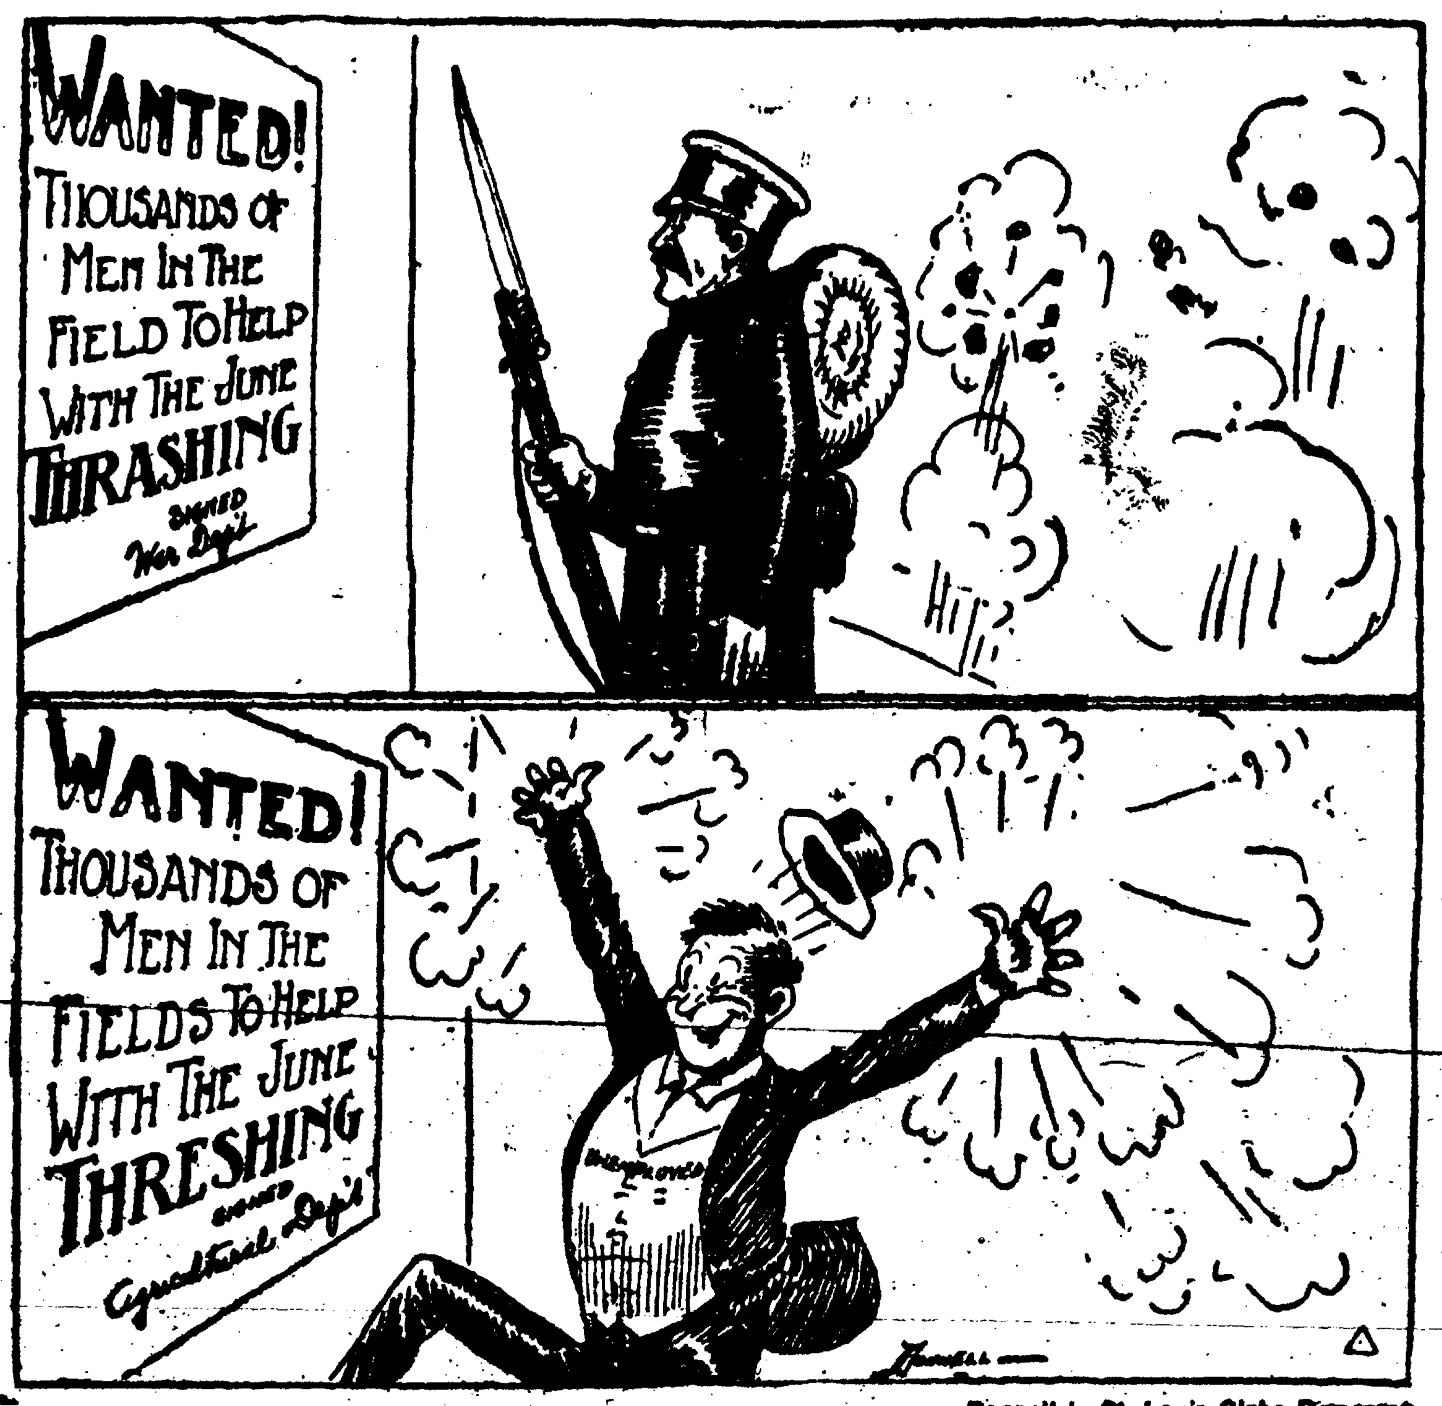
This company of fifteen artists play "Much Ado About Nothing." It is a play with fun enough in it to fill a wagon box with the sideboards on.

Its real purpose is to make people laugh. Its mission is ha! ha! ha!

It is an expensive attraction for the management. But the price to the people is only 50 cents each and your money's worth guaranteed.

The Chautauqua this year is crammed full of good things. It will be here soon now. Better begin to plan so you can get your share while the getting is GOOD.

EUROPE AND AMERICA.



—Donnell in St. Louis Globe-Democrat

KIRCHWAY SAYS KAISER IN BELGIUM WAS RIGHT

New York, June 14.—"Germany's contention that she had the right to violate the neutrality of Belgium because that country, by its very neutrality, was forced into being an ally of France, is correct," said Professor George W. Kirchwey, of Columbia College, at Labor Temple, 2d avenue and 14th st., last night.

Dr. Kirchwey, an authority on international law, discussed "The New International Law and America in the Present Crisis," and said while he personally did not accept the position of Germany on the sinking of the Lusitania that country undoubtedly had a legal case for its defense that would be settled legally no matter what the outcome of the present crisis.

"Because Belgium was in the position she was," he said, "Belgium was an obstacle to Germany and became a part of France the minute Germany moved against that country, just the same as she would have become an ally of Germany had France moved in that direction.

"The more the United States insists upon its rights as a neutral country the more we will be aiding those who have command of the seas.

"International law sustains us in our positions of shipping munitions of war to the belligerents.

"The question is, shall we eliminate ourselves entirely or take an active part on one side or the other? So the alternative offered us today is suicide or war."

CITIZENS UNION URGES HOME RULE CITIES

New York.—The Citizens' Union sent to all delegates to the Constitutional Convention, yesterday, a brief favoring home rule for cities. As illustrating the evils of the present system the organization says:

"It has been necessary in the past five years for Buffalo to go to the Legislature for authority to protect its trres by spraying; Newburgh for permission to close and sell a portion of a street; Little Falls for permission to have streets without preliminary petition; Syracuse for authority to use other substances than water in sprinkling its streets; New York for authority to dispose of old school books."

100,000 AT CONEY; 10 BALL PLAYERS JAILED

New York.—Coney Island had 100,000 visitors yesterday. In the morning the beaches were thronged, but later it was foggy and too chilly to bathe. At night the resort was busy.

Jacob Feldman, of No. 243 West 26th st., is the first person to be arrested this season for playing ball on the beach. Nine others were arrested for the same cause.

Louise Regan, ten, of Granda place, Brooklyn, was walking along Surf avenue, eating candy when picked up by the police. She had seventy-five cents and said her mother had given her a dollar to go to Coney Island for the day. Inquiry proved she had started on ap icnic without permission.

ELKS MAY HANDLE BELGIAN RELIEF BENEFIT

The representative of the Belgian Relief Fund Committee, who interviewed Mayor Fox last week, in an effort to ascertain whether a concert could be held in this city Friday evening for the benefit of the Belgian sufferers, was expected to return to this city today to receive the decision of thec ity officials in the matter. Mayor Fox stated this noon that he had turned the matter over to John W. Stevenson, Exalted Ruler of the Elks, and that organization will probably take up the concert. The committee will supply the entire program including severeal fine singers, speakers and other forms of entertainment, and the affair, if held under the auspices of the Elks, will be staged at the Elks' Home or at a local theatre.

BADEN REGIMENT KILLED AND CAPTURED

Paris, June 14.—One entire German regiment was annihilated by the French near Hebuterne in an attack on the Toutvent Farm, the official "Eyewitness" with the army says in a report issued by the War Office.

"When the French troops captured the important positionbefore the farm of Toutvent," he writes, "they found nothing remaining of the formidable fortifications installed there but masses of debris. The accurate fire of our heavy artllery wrench ed the wire entaglements from the ground, upheaved the trenches in some places, filled them in others and obstructed the approaches.

2 OF COMMONS DEAD, 9 WOUNDED IN WAR

London, June 14.—The casualties among members of the House of Commons serving at the front now number eleven. Two were killed and nine wounded. Two others are prisoners.

The two killed were William G. C. Gladstone, a grandson of the famous Gladston,e and Charles O'Neil, representative of Armagh, South.

THE QUIRK

Today is presented John Redmond in the "Evangelist," a four-part drama of intense interest full in accord with the usual program offered. Other reels of quality will be shown. Tomorrow "Money," a heart gripping story with elaborate staging, costumes etc., with thrill after thrill will featnre the bill.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Wanted—2 Polish chambermaids and woman cleaner. Pontiac, Oswego. 152

Fulton Keynotes

The Misses Ruth Hart and Alma Becker of Baldwinsville were visitors in this city Saturday night.

* * *

Among the college students who have returned home for the summer vacations are Misses Marion Edgarton, of Syracuse; Helen O'Brien, of St. Elizabeth's; Isabelle Diman, of Bryn Mawr, and Messrs. Stanley Hare of Syracuse; Thomas Johnson, of Pennsylvania; Don Cavanagh, of Syracuse and Win Perry, of Syracuse.

* * *

The condition of Robert McCully, of the VanWagenen corporation is reported as serious. Mr. McCully has been ill for the past three weeks suffering from a complication of diseases.

* * *

Chief of Police Edward Dyer will be one of the guests of honor at the Municipal Day parade which will be held in Syracuse Wednesday. The various city departments will appear in the lien of march.

VIENNA CLAIMS VICTORY AT PLAVA

Vienna, June 14.—The following statement was issued by the War Office today:

"In the Italian theatre, near Plava, on the Isonozo, there has been a violent engagement during the last few days. Attacks on June 11 by the Ravenna brigade, in order to capture the hills on the eastern bank, led to the retreat.

"Early Saturday they again crossed the river. After violent attacks by the Italians, who were constantly reinforced, we still held our position. Four hundred Italians were killed.

"On the Carinthian-Tyrol frontier, artillery engagements continue."

WILL EXPEDITE TRIAL OF MIDDIES

Annapolis, Md., June 14.—The investigation of irregularities in Naval Academy examinations entered upon a second week today. There is little prospect of an early conclusion.

As a result of Secretary Daniel's hurry call an effort will be made to secure the testimony of officers and midshipmen of the practice squadron by the end of the week, so that the cruise through the Panama Canal to the San Francisco Exposition may begin.

Starting with seven midshipmen as defendants, the list has been added to until there are eight midshipmen and six ensigns on trial.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 151 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | TUESDAY, JUNE 15, 1915 | Price One Cent

German Submarines Sink Three More Vessels in Waters of British Isles; Protection to Increased Merchant Vessels.

London, June 15.—The new activity of the German submarine fleet, which has resulted in the sinking of more than thirty vessels in the last week, is expected to bring forth additional protective measures by the Admiralty. The new First Sea Lord, Admiral Sir Henry B. Jackson, is known to be devoting much attention to the question, and it is believed he will be able to arrange further safeguards for vessels along the British coasts.

The most important loss of yesterday was the British steamship Hopemount, of 3,300 tons, which was torpedoed at a point west of St. Ives, a popular resort in Cornwall, seven miles from Penzance.

The Hopemount's last appearance in an American port was on April 14, when she left Newport News with a cargo for St. Nazaire. The vessel was built at Newcastle in 1904 and was 331 feet long.

The French schooner Diament has been sunk off Pendine, on the Welsh coast. The crew landed yesterday at Plymouth. They had a two-minute warning to leave their ship.

Two Danish schooners, the Katrine and the Cocos Merstal, were stopped during the day by a submarine. The crew of the Cocos Merstal were sent aboard the Katrine and the former vessel was then set on fire.

The Danish schooner Marie, which has arrived at Leith, reports that on last Thursday while on the passage from Christiansand, she was held up by a German submarine miles off the Isle of May. Scotland. The crew of the schooner was ordered to the boats and the Germans went aboard the Marie with the intention of setting fire to her, according to report, but on the appearance of two British patrol boats, the men returned to the submarine, which [illegible]

The British steamship Arndale, of 3,583 tons gross, has been sunk as the result of striking a mine in the White Sea. It is presumed she was carrying a cargo to Archangel, the only important Russian port on the Arctic ocean.

Four hundred tons of copper aboard the steamship Zamora, from New York for Stockholm, which was thrown into prize court, was requisitioned yesterday for the British government.

The American steamship Wicko, which left Philadelphia on May 27 for Copenhagen, is being detained at Kirkwall, and the American steamship F. J. Lisman, from New York on May 23 for Rotterdam, is being held at London.

The Swedish steamship Indianic, which left New York on April 28 with a cargo of food for Gothenburg, is being held at Leith.

The British government yesterday paid an instalment of $301,105 on the cargo of cotton of the steamship Marie, detained at Kirkwall last April while on a voyage from Galeston for Malmo.

CZAR REPORTS LOSS OF 150,000 GERMANS

London, June 15.—Important victories on the eastern front are claimed tonight by Berlin and Vienna.

Northwest of Mosciska, in the region of Sieniawa, eighteen miles northwest of Javislow, the German report says, along a line extending over forty-three miles, the entire positions of the Russians were taken, as well as 16,000 prisoners.

The Russian official report only mentions the locality where this action is said to have taken place, which declares the Austro-Germans, after heavy losses in the region of Mosciska Friday and Saturday, did not resume the offensive.

Not for months past has there been such general activity on the eastern front. Checked at the center of the Galician line, the Austro-Germans have developed an orensive on both wings at the same time and they are starting another battle in Poland to the north of Przasnysz. Fighting has been resumed along the whole line from the Baltic to Roumania.

Vienna reports the Russian front east and southeast of Jaroslaw has been broken and the Russians have been forced to retreat, with heavy losses. It is claimed also that the Russians are retreating near Mosciska and southeast of that place. It is in this sector, according to Vienna, that the 16,000 prisoners were taken.

Near Derzow, south of Mikolaiow, the Austrians say they repulsed and routed the Russians. They captured Zydaezow. North o f Zala Szczyky the Russians made a night attack on a front of two miles, but were repulsed with great losses.

According to Petrograd, the Austro-Germans have made another crossing of the Dniester, where a brilliant cavalry charge at Zale Szcyyky resulted in a local Russian success, but no claim is made that the invaders were pushed back across the river.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 2

Because Every Dollar Spent in Fulton Keeps It at Home

Experts say one of the best ways of arriving at the state of a city's prosperity is to balance the bank clearings against the population. This tells the story how money is circulating through the city, and the better story told, the better, you may be sure, is the condition of the average citizen of that city. The dollar spent in the store of the Fulton merchant goes into one of the Fulton banks. The chances are in favor of it coming out again into Fulton. The dollar spent in Fulton is almost sure to figure twice in the bank clearings of Fulton. The dollar spent away from Fulton will figure in the bank clearings of some other city. And experts determine the general prosperity of a city by comparing the bank clearings with the population.

CHABMER OF COMMERCE.

REGENTS' STANDING of FULTON STUDENTS

PRELIMINARY SPELLING

Fourth St.

Evelyn Martin, 84; Elisie Merriam, 92; Frances Payne, 97; Fred Pickett, 88; Hazel Rice, 88; Elon Bowlee, [illegible]

State St.

James Blakeslee, 92; Vincent Edgarton, 92; Vernon Kimball, 86; Angie McNally, 96; Muriel Morgan, 95; Leland Palmer, 90; Leonard Somers, 82; Eula Switzer, 84; Lillian Warner, 95;

Phillips St.

Charles Atwood, 81; Almeta Boyd, 94; Walter Buell, 80; Ruth Burleigh, 94; Lillian Cheney, 82; George Clearey, 96; Leslie Dewey, 91; Royal Fields, 86; Roberts Fitten, 88; Evangeline Hopkins, 96; Clarence Kelly, 94; Rhoda LaBeef, 97; Frank Mahar, 88; Mary McCaffrey, 87; Ella McGinnis, 80; Charles Nettleton, 86; Marion Nichols, 95; Walter Parks, 80; Lucien Parker, 89; Carlyle Pooler, 82.

Erie St.

John Buell, 91; Edith Campbell, 82; Marie Carey, 86; Joseph Connors, 92; Sara Dickinson, 92; Eleanor Harding, 86; Ivan Jones, 98; Fred Kitts, 94; Lola Lamphear, 80; Hellum LaPointe, 82; Ernest London, 87; Millie Merriam, 80; Claude Pierce, 85; Clara Smith, 87; Mary Smith, 92; George Tromblay, 90; Edward Tyrrell, 80; Helen Tyrrell, 83; Marion Young, 91.

Non-Resident

Rolland Auringer, 88; Blanche G. Cole 84; Walter R. Cole, 87; Ruth Loomis, 85; Lena Sheffield, 90; Ralph Simons, 81; Melrose Taft, 83; Wallace Wood, 83.

GEOGRAPHY

Phillips St.

Ernest Beaudien, 92; Leila Chesbro, 92; Gladys Haines, 82; John Kellum, 91; Lola Lamphear, 96; Ernest London, 75; George McNamara, 91; Claude Pierce, 75; Clarence Streeter, 76; Hazel Wagner, 85; Marion Weaver, 90; Elsie Wood, 91; Floyd Wright, 80; Marion Young, 90.

Fourth St.

Grace Beebe, 85; Winton Bennett, 97; G. William Braun, 93; Arthur Holden, 79; Leona Joice, 81; William Kaplan, 84; Loretto Kempston, 90; Harry Lago, 75; Mary McCann, 90; Elsie Merriam, 75; Florence Rappole, 78; Lena Robinson, 75; Anabel Spencer, 96; Marguerite Stanley, 88; Mildred Withers, 79.

Oak St.

Erthus Dashran, 90; Muriel Harris, 96; Frank Stuber, 97; Helen Mott, 90; Gladys Loveland, 92; Charles Culkin, 100; Kathryn McKenna, 100; Percy Andrews, 100; Joseph Frawley, 100;

HIGH SCHOOL

Advanced Bookkeeping and Office Practice

Raymond Eames, 64; Ramon Lewis, [illegible]

INTERMEDIATE ALGEBRA

Harold Thompson, [illegible]; Margaret Clark, 81.

SOLID GEOMETRY

Edward Sullivan, 62; Harry Lewis, 61; Harry Lynch, 82; Lenora Eames, 61.

Chorus Singing and Rudiments of Music.

Robert Boland, 81; Edith Brown, 90; Helen Cusack, 88; Newell Davenport, 95; Joseph Donovan, 65; Marion Goodjon, 89; Alice Gorman, 96; Lena Kaplan, 78; Marion Little, 70; William Lum, 80; Mary McKenna, 81; Helen Mullen, 85; John O'Brien, 78; Ellen Powers, 73; Florence Schnur, 71; Alice Somers, 86; Helen Waldhorn, 76.

ELEMENTARY ALGEBRA

Agnes Atwood, 84; Frank Baker, 80; Robert, Boland, 61; Margaret Bradley, 68; Junie Burton, 60; Natalie Butts, 93; Margaret Byrne, 86; Gladys Churchill, 72; Frank Clark, 62; Beatrice, DuBois, 62; Minnie Ferguson, 65; Leon Foster, 60; Alice Gorman, 60; Medora Halstead, 68; Henry Holly, 79; Doris Howard, 89; Conrad Hunter, 62; Neil Hunter, 86; Emma Ives, 80; Edna Jennings, 61; Hazel King, 84; Lulu Keo, 66; Frances Kraus, 78; Lucy McCaffrey, 78; Edward McSweeney, 77; Clark Morrill, 70; Helen Mullen, 61; Russell Murphy, 76; Florence Murdock, 61; Ruth Nipper, 84; Frances O'Hara, 71; Nina Parmley, 88; Grace Pitcher, 60; Clarence Sikes, 73; Fred Vant, 80.

Bridget Okoniewski, 98; Eva Boyce, 96; Harold Chesbro, 92.

State St.

Thelma Bogardus, 96; Porter Butts, 98; Clifton Draper, 94; Marguerite Fivaz, 88; William Fivaz, 98; Elizabeth Ingamells, 86; Harry McCarthy, 94; Mary Murphy, 93; Beulah Roy, 93; Gladys Stoneburgh, 95; Alfred Witherbee, 90.

Non-residents

Vera Chaffee, 84; Walter Cole, 81; Cecil Harris, 75; Merril Hartman, 88; John B. Howard, 77; Ruth Loomis, 81; Willard Loomis, 85; Lela Osborn, 83; Mabel Smith, 80; Wallace Wood, 75; William Howard, 81.

WEATHER FORECAST

Probably showers tonight and Wednesday; colder Wednesday; moderate west winds.

German Newspapers Decry "Typewriter Heroes," Urging Also That the Two Nations Shall Stand Against "Jingo Enthusiasts."

Berlin (via London), June 15.—The Lokal Anzeiger, probably the most influential newspaper in Germany, prints a noteworthy article on German-American relations by its general director, Eugen Zimmerman.

This article coming on the heels of Friday's concillatory article, is taken to mean that influential representatives of politics and business are standing behind this paper and exerting their efforts for a German-American understanding.

"President Wilson," says Herr Zimmerman, "desires nothing more and nothing less than an understanding between Germany and England concerning the forms of maritime warfare which at the same time will insure the safety of American passengers. The task is not light, considering the development of naval war, but it can be solved if all interests display good will."

A new form might be given to naval warfare, Herr Zimmerman continues, on the basis that passengers on ships with special marks of identification and sailing under the Government guarantee that they are unarmed, should receive proper consideration at the hands of submarine commanders. The compromise must also involve the withdrawal of the British Adimralty's instructions to merchantmen to attack and ram submarines on sight.

The article ventures to indicate for the first time to the German public that there may be a second side to the question of arms shipmetns, on which the press for months has been harping.

Herr Zimmerman pays his respects to what he terms "typewriter heroes, who, far from the front, are preaching war ta the knife against everybody," and concludes:

"We wish to act and write with blood and iron, but just because we are fearless and determined we may look for possible ways by which to arrive at an understanding with America. We need not close up our department of incoming and outgoing declarations of war, which heretofore has worked nobly, but it seems to me that [illegible] for excessive caution."

The editor of the Tageblatt, second only to the Lokal Anzeiger in its wide influence, Theodor Wolff, also publishes an article in favor of a policy aimed at the avoidance of new conflicts and the bringing in of new adversaries.

He urges as a suitable method for giving German diplomacy adequate authority and prestige at home to stand firm against "jingo and whip-the-world enthusiasts," the creation of an advisory council to the foreign office, in which former ministers and secretaries of foreign affairs, ambassadors and leading members of parliament have seats.

The Frankfurter Nachrichten proposes as a method for modifying the hardships of submarine warfare that the United States Government consent to the stationing of German commissioners in American ports to examine ships sailing for Europe so that those which carry no armaments, munitions or troops may be exempt from attack by German submarines.

The newspaper cites as a precedent for such action the fact that similar commissioners are maintained by the British Government in various neutral countries to examine and certify with regard to cargoes bound to neutral ports.

The Berliner Tageblatt expresses its approval of the suggestion of the Nachrichten.

GERMAN TROOPS RUSHED TO RETAKE YPRES SECTOR

Northern France, June 15.—Along the whole western battle line, from the Belgian coast to Arras, there are manifest signs of the Germans making a fresh attempt.

hTere is no denying that the German army in the west has been undergoing a very severe gruelling durin gthe last three weeks. At last two special swoops were prepared.

A—For confounding of the British line in the Ypres section.

B—For a simultaneous dash on toward Arras and through the Soissons district.

Both completely failed.

The weather has been hot, but the nights have been refreshingly cool. There have been long spells of sunshine. The British army has been watching the vigorous onslaughts of the French in the battleground further south, where Souchez and the famous labyrinth stamp the high water mark of their success, and waiting for the hour to strike.

Measured on the map, the result of a month of hard fighting in this distritc does not cover a wide area, but its supreme importance is plainly manifest to the watchful student of the situation. It promises a great deal more in the near future.

German reinforcements continue to arrive from the north and south of Lille is thronged with them. All conceivable means is being taken to strengthen and fortify the Woodland slopes behind the battered trenches of the first German line.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
D. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1924, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Tuesday, June 15, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Destroying American Shipping

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company is the second concern operating ships in the Pacific to announce a determination to go out of business. The reason assigned by the company is the passage by Congress of oppressive legislation in the form of the La Follette seaman's act. The act goes into effect November 4th. The Pacific Mail Company advertises that its last sailing will be on November 2d. After that date its ships will be offered for sale.

The officials of the company declare that it will be impossible to compete with the Japanese steamship companies, which are heavily subsidized by the Japanese government, the increased cost of manning American ships under the La Follette law placing American companies at a great disadvantage. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company has not paid a dividend since 1899, and its officials naturally do not care to assume the responsibility of contracting a heavy deficit. The stock of the company is controlled by the Southern Pacific Railway. Thirteen vessels are in operation, five being in the transpacific trade.

The passage of the LaFolette measure was opposed by men in Congress who were most familiar with shipping affairs. The prediction was made that the passage of the bill, the provisions of which were really written by labor interests, would be another heavy blow to American shipping. Congress turned a deaf ear to these warnings, although it was at the same time considering various schemes intended to revive our merchant marine. That it was guilty of a serious blunder, is now apparent. The incident is merely another illustration of the folly of which members of Congress are guilty when they allow themselves to be swayed by men of La Follette's dangerous radical views. — Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

Sons and Daughters

That was neither a very tactful nor a very chivalrous jury which awarded a New Jersey parent $2,000 damages for the loss of his baby sonand only $1,000 for the loss of his baby daughter. Those twelve good men and true might so easily have made it $1,500 each and have avoided stirring the embers of the age-long controversy over the comparative value of daughter and son. But now that they have started the flames of argument leaping heavenward, it can do little harm to add some indifferent fuel to the blaze.

Our neighbor, "The World," has been at some pains to gather from representative women of the region their opinions of the verdict. To the question, Is a boy worth twice as much as a girl? Most of them have replied, in effect. A girl is worth twice as much as a boy. So that one is inclined to wonder whether if that jury had been composed of mothers instead of fathers, it would not have reversed the ratio of damages. And yet from time immemorial it has been the mother who was considered to love the son the more and the father the daughter.

The point is, the daughter is in very truth, worth more to a mother than the son, and the difference may be computed in dollars and cents. To begin with, the daughter may become a little mother and take the place of a nurse in the care of younger brothers and sisters. Nurses are paid for a similar service. Who ever heard of a little father? And in the work of the household the daughter may save the wages of a domestic servant and do the work cheerfully and efficiently.

These are her more important potentialities before she becomes fifteen or sixteen, during the period when her brothers are romping about like irresponsible Indians and doing whatever chores they are forced to do inefficiently and with infinite reluctance. After this age both may become wage earners, the daughter as a stenographer or clerk or telephone operator, the son as an errand boy or office boy or whatever, and while she brings home almost all her earnings, he spends the greater part of his on cigarettes and the movies.

Finally, when both are married it is the daughter's establishment which the parents usually find the more convenient to visit.

One may well ask, then, why it is the boy apepars the better economic investment in his fathers' eyes. Is it not because his potentialities are in the nature of an insurance fund? If the worst should befall, he could gradaully take his father's place. His existence becomes the equivalent of a second line of defence, something which, though it may never be needed, conduces powerfully to the peace of mind that passeth understanding.—New York Tribune.

AMERICANIZATION DAY

Americanization Day boomed and boosted for the Fourth of July celebration in Fulton could not only be made a success for this year, but would serve as a stepping stone toward the years to come.

Any public demonstration that leads toward greater love for the home land is to be encouraged. Any movement that develops toward higher citizenship should be supported. Fulton has individual need for the high type of the true American. In a recent interview Mary Antin, author of "The Promised Land," said, "It isn't enough to be just an American. It doesn't mean anything. We must be fanatic."

Further on in speaking of the meaning of the new land to the aliens Miss Antin said, "The war has brought things home to us—the things we missed doing. We didn't make these aliens feel welcome. We didn't gather them to us as brothers in the light of our creed that all men are created equally dear in the sight of God, with the rights equally sacred to pursue life, liberty and happiness.

"If we are shocked at the way these millions within our gates seem to forget their American citizenship, surely we ourselves are to blame."

Surely the idea expressed is not too complicated or too visionary for any American to catch. Americanization Day in Fulton would push the good work along.

MORBID MEN

There are a few morbid men in this country. A morbid man is a cold-storage product, and cannot command much in the market. Managers have little, if any, use for morbid men. The fellow with a prostrated purpose, with atrophy of ambition; the chap that has distemper in his wanting to do, is at best a boil.

One unbraced, drooping, flagging member of an organization can get every other member of the working force walking lame, halting, hesitating. One man with mangy manners, one kinked, contaminated individual, can put a first-class bunch of men on the blink. If you have any spavined balkers, any kickers, strikers or squealers, quietly slip them out of the organization. To tolerate a mule-man is injustice to the horse-sense fellows who are willing to work.—Silent Partner.

WITH THE STATE EDITORS

South is Waking Up.

That a protective tariff is the best for the South has long been known by the manufacturers in this section, and the past two years has brought the lesson home to the farmerand business man. The growth of this feeling is bound to break the "solid South" in time, and the quicker the better for the material development of the almost untouched resources of the South.—Tazewell (Va.) Republican.

When the War is Over.

The pendulum is always swinging. Barring accident, it is not impossible that the fortunes of war may bring notable prosperity to this country within the coming year. Obviously, it will not be the result of democratic policies; rather will it be in spite of them, for the war itself is accomplishing much that would be accomplished under a high protective tariff.

The stupendous increase of exports over imports is fast making the United States a creditor nation and laying the foundation for substantial national prosperity.

When the war is over, however, and foreign-amde products are dumped into this country, our status will be changed unless the Wilson-Underwood near free trade law is repealed and a workable, protective law is adopted in its stead.—Peoria Transcript.

People Will Revise It.

It is announced from the White House that the President is not thinking of revising the Underwood tariff. Possibly not, but the people are, and they will do it, too, after 1916.—Mt. Vernon (Ind.) Republican.

GRATITUDE.

Gratitude is the fairest blossom that springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none so fragrant, while its opponent, ingratitude, is a deadly weed, not only poisonous in itself, but impregnating the very atmosphere in which it grows with fetid vapors.

A RESTFUL LAKE RIDE

Travel to be enjoyable must be restful, and at this season of the year whether your trip takes you East or West break its monotony, either at Cleveland or Buffalo, by a refreshing night's trip across Lake Erie on a veritable floating hotel. C. & B. Line Steamers leave either city every evening and arrive early the next morning.

The fame of the great Ship "Seeandbee," is attracting to the route a vast number of travelers to enjoy the delightful lake ride and, at the same time, inspect her magnificent interior decorations, wonderful illuminating system, and other interesting features. The "Seeandbee" is the largest and most costly passenger steamer on inland waters of the world; length 500 feet, breadth 98 feet 6 inches, 510 staterooms and parlors accommodating 1500 passengers, equally in sleeping capacity the largest hotels of the country.

The fares for this lake trip are less than by rail, and also railroad tickets reading between Cleveland and Buffalo are accepted for transportation on all C. & B. Line Steamers."—Adv.

BUSINESS LIFE IS BRIGHTER

Business Men See In Immediate Future Best of Signs of Revival

New York.—America's financial and business leaders are full of courage.

Most of them, also, have now mustered up a full measure of confidence.

Here are the main planks on which they base their optimism:

1. Government reports promise a wheat crop of almost one billion bushels, or a better harvest than the United States has ever known. Oats, barley and hay are also ahead of last year.

2. War with Germany is now expected to be avoided. In the highest circles it is not believed even the breaking off of diplomatic relations will be rendered obligatory by Germany.

3. Bryan's ignominious break with the Administration is accepted as sounding his death knell as a political power, and the financial community welcome his passing, for it has always regarded him as a menace to sound finance and to stable business prosperity.

4. President Wilson, it is understood, favors dropping the Steel Corporation dissolution suit in order to accelerate the return of industrial activity, the restoration of business confidence and industrial peace. Grave national and international problems also enter into consideration.

5. Announcement that the Dardanelles have been opened is looked for any day, a development that would eliminate certain international financial obstacles and would, in the opinion of many, have a marked physical and psychological influence in hastening the beginning of the end of the war.

6. Our export balance is expected to reach $1,000,000,000 within the next few days.

7. Oversea orders are being received in unprecedented volume and the actual shipment of goods is declared to be only about to set in in earnest.

8. A genuine "boom" is developing in copper, lead, spelter and minor metals, while the steel industry is recovering encouragingly both in volume of contracts and in prices.

9. Gold exports are nearing the $100,000,000 mark, a movement which, though attended by unpleasant possibilities, strengthens the solidity of our monetary situation and tends to foster expansion and speculation.

10. Business, while very uneven, is improving, as increased bank clearings show.

STEEL ORDER CONTINUE HEAVY; FOREIGN DEMAND

Pittsburgh steel mills, especially the Carnegie Steel Company units, are still benefitting in large measure from heavy contracts for rolled and cast steel due either directly or indirectly to the European war. The large gain in May orders booked by the Steel Corporation subsidiaries came mainly from this source.

The principal increase in domestic business for the last few weeks has been and is because of the large equipment order placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, including the distribution this week of rail contracts aggregating 155,500 tons. Since January 1 the rail mills have taken orders for 1,300,000 tons, equal to less than 50 per cent. of mill capacity. The Edgar Thompson rail mill and the Ohio works at Youngstown of the Carnegie Steel Company were utilized during the week to roll round bars for making shrapnel, recent orders for which have aggregated more than one hundred thousand tons.

The average output of steel ingots by the Steel Corporation in May was seventy-seven per cent of capacity, or 1,203,000 tons, indicating production of 943,000 tons of rolled products. Shipments averaged about 37,000 tons per day, and orders exceeding shipments by 4,000 tons per day were in excess of 41,000 tons daily.

Some very substantial orders for steel rounds, car wheels and car axles were placed last week, but one of the most encouraging features is the urgent demand for ocean going ships. Domestic merchant interests want forty more and foreign interests ten more boats of 1,500 to 18,000 tons burden. All present marine ways are full for eighteen months to two years. Provision must be made for expansion.

Steel building and bridge work continued light. The principal pig iron contract was 40,000 tons basic, taken by an Eastern Pennsylvania steel mill.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

THEY LACE IN FRONT
To know them is to love them.
GOSSARD CORSETS
Sold and fitted at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c,
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4246
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

TAFT TO PRESIDE AT PEACE LEAGUE

Philadelphia, June 15—Ex-President Taft will open the League of Peace Conference, to be held in this city by the national provisional committee of one hundred and thirteen this week, with an address at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel Wednesday evening on his plan for a peace alliance of all the great powers. The other speakers at the dinner will be Hamilton Holt, editor of "The Independent"; Judge George Gray, of Delaware, and Oscar S. Straus.

The conference proper will open in Independence Hall on Thursday morning, June 17, the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill. Mr. Taft will preside. The general discussion of the proposals will be preceded by formal addresses by Theodore Marburg, of Baltimore, former United States Minister to Belgium; John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University; John Bassett Moore, John Bates Clark, James M. Beck and Edward A. Filene, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The proposals to go before the convention provide for an international court to try all justiciable questions, a council of conciliation for the consideration of non-justifiable questions, the use of joint military force against a beginning of hostilties contrary to the terms of the alliance.

OSWEGO'S POPULATION SHOWS BIG INCREASE

The Oswego Times is authority for the following:

"Oswego got out of the 23,000 class Saturday night according to such census figures as are available this morning. The figures so far indicate that 24.046 people have been enumerated with an unknown but large number of names still to come in. It is too early to make any guesses on what the actual population will be put but it is perfectly safe to say that in spite of all of the hard times Oswego is going to show a large increase over the census of 1910."

SAFETY AT SEA ACT INADEQUATE

By Error a Law Intended to Guard Men's Lives Remains Inoperative

Washington, D. C., June 15.—The charge of inexcusable carelessness in the enactment of an important statute has again been sustained against the administration.

The error occurs in a statute directly affecting the safety of human lives. The "safety at sea" act, passed to "promote the welfare of American seamen" and to prevent if possible a repetition of the "Titanic" steamship disaster with its appalling loss of life a little over three years ago, failed to clearly fix the date it should become effective. Two different days were named for enforcement, one four months later than the other.

Section 14 of the act revises the regulations regarding lifeboats, life-rafts, life-belts and similar equipment for preventing loss of life in case of accident, and declares that the regulations must be enforced and obeyed "on and after July 1, 1915, on steamers navigating the ocean or any lake, bay or sound of the United States."

Section 18 of the same act contains a squarely contradictory provision declaring that "this act shall take effect, as to all vessels of the United States, eight months after its passage, etc."

Two conflicting opinions have been rendered by legal officers of the administration on this statute. The Solicitor of the Department of Commerce first found July 1, 1915, as the date Congress intended the law to operate as to American vessels. The Attorney General reversed this opinion and ruled that Congress intended November 4, 1915, as the time for enforcement.

When the Titanic sank and carried so many hundreds to an ocean grave, the world was shocked to discover the inadequacy of laws the enforcement of which would have greatly reduced hte number of fatalities. There was a universal demand for the immediate enactment of better laws to safeguard ocean travel.

It is shocking now to find that in the statute enacted in response to this demand there is an error that leaves in doubt the time of its operation, and has made it necessary for an individual rather than Congress to determine when the law shall be enforced.

A blunder of this type is monumental. In all parliamentary procedure it is elementary that a definite date for the enforcement of a law is practically as important as the signature of the President. Combined, the two constitute the electric current which permits the machinery of the law to be set in motion.

Many members of Congress and others familiar with the history of this "safety at sea" act believed that it would go into effect July 1, and are surprised and disappointed that under the opinion of the Attorney General it will not begin to operate until November, after the season for water travel is over.

In most instances a failure to fix definitely the date a statute shall be enforced involves only financial considerations. But in a law designed for the protection of humanity, lives are at stake and the necessity for the highest degree of care becomes imperative.

FOUR IN FAMILY GET COLLEGE DIPLOMAS

Montclair, N.J., June 15.—Graduation means something out of the ordinary for Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stickney Hall, of 17 Upper Montclair avenue. Samuel S. Hall, jr., the eldest of the Hall children, will beg raduated on June 24 from Harvard, where his father completed his course in 1888. Miss Enid Angeline Hall, the only daughter, was graduated last month from the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., and Lawrence Percival Hall will be graduated next Thursday with the senior class of Montclair High School. The youngest son, Reginald Sexton Hall, will be among the graduates of Hillside Grammar school next Thursday.

Aspah Hall, grandfather of the younger generation, won distinction while connected with the Naval Observatory at Washington, having discovered the moons of Mars, Delmos and Phobos.

Black's Cookies tickle the palates of old and young, because they are right. adv.

Woman's World

A Woman Who Believes In Universal Suffrage.

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT.

Excerpts of an address delivered by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont at the southern states woman suffrage conference held in Chattanooga, Tenn., November of 1914 are given below. Mrs. Belmont spoke to the southern audience as a southern woman, having been born in Alabama. She is the granddaughter of General Robert Desha of Tennessee, member of congress during the administration of Andrew Jackson.

Mrs. Belmont said in part:

Modern society is undergoing a decided revolution in woman's affairs which a few years ago would have been declared impossible. Each day brings fresh evidence of woman's ability to cope with world problems and effect reforms. We are all familiar with the doleful predictions made from time to time regarding the danger of permitting women to interest themselves in matters pertaining to the public welfare. But we have countless examples of efficient women devoting their talents to the common good, and the world not only survives the shock, but constantly demands more and more of their time and effort. Society has come to recognize the advantages derived from their co-operation, and welcomes the enormous benefits accuring therefrom.

Not long ago the distinguished editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, familiarly known as Colonel Watterson, gave an interview to a New York newspaper, in which he said: "Man has no inalienable rights which woman has not, but God and nature have given her a fixed place which she cannot change." Now, as a matter of fact, the "fixed place," which, according to tradition, God and nature gave woman, was in the garden of Eden, without any clothes, any roof over her head, any cooking stove, or any cradle to rock her baby in. If it had been "impossible for her to change it" all of us would be roaming around in the forest at the present day.

Men simply get themselves mixed up with God and nature, and the "fixed place" for women which they have in mind is one that man himself assigned to her some time after Adam had received his first knowledge through her efforts.

Personally, I plead guilty to so strong a desire for the poplitical emancipation of women that I am not at all particular as to how it shall be granted. I have sworn allegiance to the national amendment for woman suffrage, while the southern states woman suffrage conference, of which I am proud to be a member, holds rigidly to the principle of state rights. As a southerner I thoroughly understand the problems which create this attitude, and if that method proves effective I shall gratefully accept the results. In this respect I feel toward woman suffrage as I do about the cotton industry—both should have the undivided support of the whole United States.

Our critics, like those of all times and all places, distort our motives and denounce our efforts, but I insist that woman suffrage is a spiritual movement, for we seek the uplift of the whole dependence, believing that "where the human race is imbued with a desire to promote the principles of self respect and the spirit of the Lord, there is liberty."

Notes About Note Paper.

Pure white stationery is always suitable, but for the debutante an exquisitely tinted paper is in good taste. This can be had in salmon, oyster blue and Dresden. Sometimes the salmon has a dull rose line and the oyster blue a cadet blue line around the edge.

Formerly a monogram was engraved in a corresponding shade in the corner of the sheet, but fashion no longer requires this, for the engraved initials are meant to stay.

The ordinary correspondence card has fallen into disfavor, yet one attractive style for those who prefer the card to note paper is being used. It has about one inch of the card folded back to form a flap, and the monogram is in the center of the flap.

A new style of paper for engraved formal invitations and receptions is the panel sheet. An impressed border about half an inch wide runs around the edge, and the paper itself is long and rather narrow. Although more expensive than the usual formal style, it is distinguished in appearance.

Sealing wax is still in vogue and offers much in the way of charm in the appearance of a letter.

Hints for the Needle Worker

A Crochet Lace Pattern.

Abbreviations.—Ch., chain; d.c., double crochet; st.tr., short treble; tr., treble; d.tr., double treble.

The "largs" pattern is sure to become a favorite. Its uses are manifold, while its appearance is at once attractive.

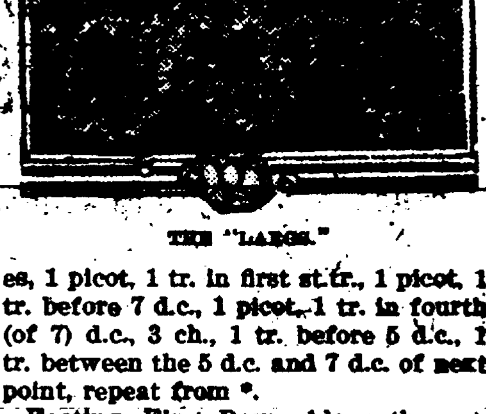
Crochet cotton No. 30 was used for this model, but the worker may vary the width by using coarser or finer cotton as she may desire.

First Row.—17 ch., * 5 ch., 2 d.tr. in first of 5 ch., 5 ch., 1 d.c. in same place, 3 times more work 5 ch., 2 d.tr., 5 ch. and 1 d.c. in same place, 3 d.c. in first 3 ch. of 17 (as they stand), 17 ch., repeat from * for length required, turn.

Second Row.—* 5 ch., 1 d.c. in first point, 7 ch., 1 d.c. in second point, 9 ch., 1 d.c. in third point, 7 ch., 1 d.c. in fourth point, 5 ch., 1 d.c. in centre ch. between two sets of points, repeat from *, turn.

Third Row.—* 5 d.c. in each, 5 ch., 7 d.c. in 7 ch., 1 d.c., 2 st.tr., 9 tr., 2 st.tr. and 1 d.c. in loop of 9 ch., 7 d.c. in next 7 ch., 5 d.c. in 5 ch., repeat from *, turn.

Fourth Row.—1 tr. after the first 5 d.c., * 3 ch., 1 tr. in fourth of 7 d.c., 1 picot (5 ch., 1 d.c. back into first), 1 tr. after seventh d.c., 1 picot, 1 tr. after 2 st.tr., 1 picot, 1 tr. in second tr., 1 picot and 1 tr. in next 5 tr. stitches, 1 picot, 1 tr. in first st.tr., 1 picot, 1 tr. before 7 d.c., 1 picot, 1 tr. in fourth (of 7) d.c., 3 ch., 1 tr. before 5 d.c., 1 tr. between the 5 d.c. and 7 d.c. of next point, repeat from *.



THE "LARGS."

Footing, First Row.—Along the outer side of foundation chain work 2 ch. and 1 tr., missing 2 stitches below.

Second Row.—2 d.c. in each space, 1 d.c. on each treble.

The "Stroma" Crochet Lace.

Abbreviations.—Ch., chain; sl.st., slip stitch; d.c., double crochet; tr., treble.

Crochet cotton No. 40 was used for this model, which measures 1½ inches wide. Crochet cotton in No. 50 is also well adapted.

First Row.—Work a chain for length required, turn and make spaces of 1 ch. and 1 tr., missing 1 ch. below, turn.

Second Row.—5 ch., miss 2 tr., 1 tr. on next tr., 1 tr. in space, 1 tr. in tr., 1 tr. in space, * 3 ch., miss 2 tr. below, 4 tr. on next 4 stitches below, 3 ch., 1 picot (4 ch., 1 sl.st. back into first), 2 ch., miss 2 tr. below, 1 d. c. in next space, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., miss 2 tr. below, 4 tr. in next 4 stitches, repeat from *, turn.

Third Row.—2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., * 3 tr. in ch. just before next block of tr., 1 tr. on first of 4 tr., 3 ch., 4 tr. in next 3 ch. space, 3 ch., 1 tr. on end tr. of next four, 3 tr. in ch. before picot below, 2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., repeat from *, turn.

Fourth Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. in 3 ch. space below (between 2 blocks), 3 ch., 4 tr. in next space, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 1 d.c. between 2 picots below, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. between 2 blocks below, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, repeat from *, turn.

HANDSOME LACE PATTERN.

Fifth Row.—Like the third row, but work 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch. and 1 picot instead of 2 ch., turn.

Sixth Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c. between 2 picots below, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, 3 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, repeat from *, turn.

Seventh Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 4 tr. between 2 blocks below, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c. between next 2 picots below, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c. between next 2 picots, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 1 ch., 4 tr. between next 2 blocks, repeat from *, turn.

Eighth Row.—3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 3 d.c. between 2 picots just before first block, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 3 d.c. between first 2 picots directly after block, * 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 d.c between next 2 picots, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 3 d.c. between next 2 picots, 2 ch., 1 picot, 3 ch., 1 picot, 2 ch., 3 d.c. between next 2 picots, repeat from *.

THE ROSE FROCK.

"Queen Rose of the Rosebud Garden of Girls" Describes Gown.

LINGERIE GOWN.

The month of roses, with its brides and weddings, brings out many versions of the "rose frocks." The gown shown here to be worn at a midsummer evening function is one of the prettiest of the season's offerings in rose.

The gown is of faintly rose chiffon, very simply built, just a straight hemmed and gathered skirt and surplice waist, which serves also for sleeves. But the charm of the frock is in its trimming of roses and the color in which it revels.

The roses are tiny and set upon the skirt in alluring little circles as finishings of the ribbon trimming. The girdle of ribbon is trimmed in the same manner, and in her arms the wearer will carry a bouquet of pink roses.

CURTAIN LAUNDERING.

How to Correctly Wash Lace Curtains and Dry Them.

There is a right as well as a wrong way to do curtains.

First, take the measure of all the curtains before putting in the tub. Keep this slip of measurements to adjust the stretchers correctly.

Second, fold the curtains lengthways and crossways until they are about a foot either way and keep them this way until they are ready to put on frames. This will keep them from stretching.

Third, soak in slightly warm water for a half hour, then squeeze gently (never wring) and put in warmer water and rub them good with any white soap. Let soak while the curtain frames are being cleaned by using a small whisk broom and soapsuds, then rinse and dry. Now squeeze the curtains carefully (never rub on a board), remove from this water and place in a boiler of warm suds and ammonia and let come to a boil and boil about ten minutes.

Fourth, suds, rinse and blue. Now for the starching, which is a very important part. For six pairs use three tablespoonfuls of good starch to three and one-half quarts of water. Dip a small piece of net in the starch to try it and then dry it quickly and make sure the stiffness the curtain will be when dry.

Fifth, now they are ready for the frames. Take the first one and put over the pin in one corner of the top of the curtain; then go to the bottom of the curtain on the same side and catch up the other corner, then the opposite corners. Now begin in the middle of the curtain and pin two or three, then in the middle between this and the ends either way. Same way with the other sides, also the ends or top and bottom.

Do not draw them along the edges, but with both hands bring them up to the pins in a straight line.

Keep the threads of the curtains always straight and ease in any slight fullness, should there be any, rather than let it come out at ends.

When dry remove carefully and do this one important part: Lay the curtains lengthwise on a bed not in use and fold in the middle lengthways, then once again lengthways, never crossways. When the curtains are on the poles they will hang in lengthwise folds.

The surprise and satisfaction that come from curtains done the right way doubly repay one for all the work.

Scalloped Onions.

Boil six or eight onions until tender, changing the water once. Separate them with a fork and arrange in layers in a buttered earthen dish, alternating the layers with buttered breadcrumbs. Season with salt and pepper, pour over the whole enough rich milk to nearly cover, spread with melted butter and brown in a moderate oven.

SUMMER ACCESSORIES.

The Fan With Bag Is Another Mid-Victorian Resurrection.

TWO BAGS AND A FAN.

Mesh bag with gate top and silver chain of size just large enough to hold a bit of change. Evening bag and matching fan of flowered satin. The sticks are of white painted wood.

PAINT AND PAINT BRUSH.

Now Is the Time When Bright Sunlight Shows All the Dingy Places.

Paint and paint brush should be as close friends of the housewife as are needle and thread. Perhaps it is the unconscious psychology exercised on women by good paint advertising or perhaps it is because they are skillful at it that they enjoy odd bits of painting about the house. The can of "ready mixed" covers a multitude of sins of commission from heels, hands, knocks, scrapings and rough treatment generally.

There is the baby buggy of wicker, stained and dirty from long use. A small can of stain and a couple of coats of black on the springs and wheels will make it withstand the still harder test of spring showers. Then, baby's iron crib looks as though it has incipient measles where baby has dented off the enamel with the stock of its toy gun. Two coats, or, better, three, of white paint and enamel will cover up the blisters and make the crib as sanitary and pleasing as when new.

On close inspection the gas stove and its pipes appear rustily dingy and down-in-the-mouth, as it were. Ah, just the thing! A small can of special stove paint in black will make the stove gleam happily again and remove its unkempt air. Perhaps, too, the radiators are spotted and shineless. It is only the work of a half hour to paint them with special silver or gold radiator paint.

The kitchen is an important field for the use of paint brush and paint. Frequently unsightly plumbing can, as suggested, be made attractive by the various lacquer paints. The pantry shelves need never be hard to clean if they are treated to one or two coats of white enamel. Table drawers also can be painted, which will prevent them from absorbing grease and getting so dirty. The legs and front of the ordinary kitchen table will look better and stay cleaner longer if given a coat of paint harmonizing with the other colors in the room. Wooden salt boxes, strips on which to hang utensils, the space between shelves in many closets, can all be made brighter and more sanitary by a liberal use of paint.

Under the head of paint must be included the great variety of stains combined with varnish or various other wood finishes. These are particularly useful in "touching up" floors, woodwork, certain pieces of furniture, and in staining soiled wicker and basket work. Perhaps it is a favorite rocker which has been kicked and knocked until the finish is spoiled. It is not very difficult to touch it up or to refinish it entirely, first sandpapering it to remove the old varnish and then handling it as if it were an entirely new piece. Taborets, small tables, stools, all these can be made to wear longer and appear like new if treated to the magic of the paint brush.

All woods with exposed pores absorb moisture and grease. Water enters the pores, causes them to swell and thus become disfigured. The more impervious the wood surface can be made the easier it is to keep it clean and the longer the wood will last. Paint, varnish and stain, whose base should always be the best linseed oil, fill the pores of the wood, coating and rendering it impervious. And paint is not hard to clean. It is the open, untreated woodwork which looks dingy, absorbs grease and is hard to care for.

Polishing Silver.

An excellent silver polishing cloth can be made in the following way: Buy an ounce of jeweler's rouge, mix with a little water, rub into a piece of chamois skin and dry.

Cleaning Raincoats.

To clean raincoats sponge them with a mixture of alcohol and ether, to which a tablespoonful of ammonia to a pint of liquid has been added.

Care of the Baby In Summer

Bottle Feeding.

[Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.]

The first and most important thing to do for a baby is to find the right food for him. When for any reason he is deprived of the one "right" food, his mother's milk, some substitute must be found. Experience in feeding many thousands of babies in this and other countries has shown that clean, fresh cow's milk is the only food that can be depended upon to take the place of breast milk with even a fair degree of success.

In order to have milk that is clean enough for a baby's food, the greatest care must be taken to keep it clean from the time it is drawn from the cow until it goes into the baby's mouth. If a cow is kept on the place it should be possible for the mother to see that the cow is brushed clean before being milked, that the teats and udder are washed before the milking begins, that the hands and clothing of the milker are clean and that a partly covered milk pail is used, which has been scalded with boiling water before use.

It is sometimes advisable to boil the milk, especially in hot summer weather. Usually the method of treatment called pasteurization renders it safe. Here is a simple method of pasteurizing:

Put a gallon of water over the fire in a large kettle. When the water is boiling hard remove the kettle and let it stand uncovered for ten minutes. Stand the filled and corked bottles in the hot water, cover the kettle and allow it to stand for half an hour. Remove the bottles and cool them, under running water if possible, until they are cold, and keep them on ice or where they will be cold until needed.

Perfect cleanliness must be observed in making up the baby's feedings. The mother's hands should be washed clean, and she should wear a clean apron. All the dishes and articles to be used should have been boiled before being used, and as far as possible they should be kept for the baby's use alone. Milk is very readily tainted by being put into dishes in which food has been cooked. If convenient have on hand a kettle large enough to hold eight nursing bottles at a time, a two quart bowl or pitcher to hold the milk mixture, a funnel through which to pour it into the bottles, a long handled spoon to stir it with, a bottle brush, enough nursing bottles and nipples for all the nursings in twenty-four hours, and the same number of new corks. A graduated measuring glass is a convenience, but a nursing bottle having a scale in ounces blown in one side may be used instead.

It is most important that the bottles shall be kept cold from the time the milk is prepared until it is used. Here is a cheap and effective icebox:

Use a lard or candy bucket or a wooden box for the outside receptacle. In the bottom put a layer of sawdust an inch thick. In the middle of this box place an eight quart tin pail with a cover and fill all the space around it with sawdust. Inside this pail put the ice and the bottles and cover both the inner pail and the outer box. If the ice is broken up and put into a small covered pail which is set inside the refrigerator it will keep longer than when it is not thus protected. If the outer box has a cover on hinges, as will be most convenient, a thick layer of newspapers may be tacked to the underside of the cover. Or a cushion stuffed with hay, straw, excelsior or sawdust, made to fit the cover of the box, may be fastened to it. If properly made this little device will keep the baby's bottles sweet for twenty-four hours with very little ice, provided they are very cold when put in.

When it is time to feed the baby take one of the bottles out of the icebox and put it in a small pail or pan of water over the fire to heat. The water should come up to the milk line on the bottle. Do not make the milk too hot. The mother may test the heat by sprinkling a few drops on the inner surface of her arm; when it feels just comfortably warm to her skin it will be right for the baby.

After the feeding is finished, remove the bottle at once and empty out any milk that may be left. Rinse it with cool water and leave it filled with water. At some convenient time wash the bottles with warm soap and water using the bottle brush to scrub them clean inside. Rinse thoroughly and put them over the fire to boil. The kettle used for pasteurizing may be used for this purpose. The water should cover the bottles and they should be boiled for fifteen minutes. They may stay in the water until the feedings are made up. Wash and boil the corks at the same time.

To clean the nipples, wash and scrub them in warm soapy water. A little common salt rubbed on the inside will remove the milk. Rinse well and drop them into boiling water for five minutes. They will dry with their own heat when removed and should be put away dry, in a dry glass jar, which has been boiled with the bottles. Cover the jar and keep it out of the light. Handle the nipples only by the lower edge, and never by the top, which is to go into the baby's mouth, and guard especially against flies, which like nothing better than to swarm over the baby's bottle and nipple. If this happens, put on a fresh nipple before feeding the baby. Flies are a deadly enemy to humanity.

For the Children

Master Gilbert W. Kahn as an English Officer.

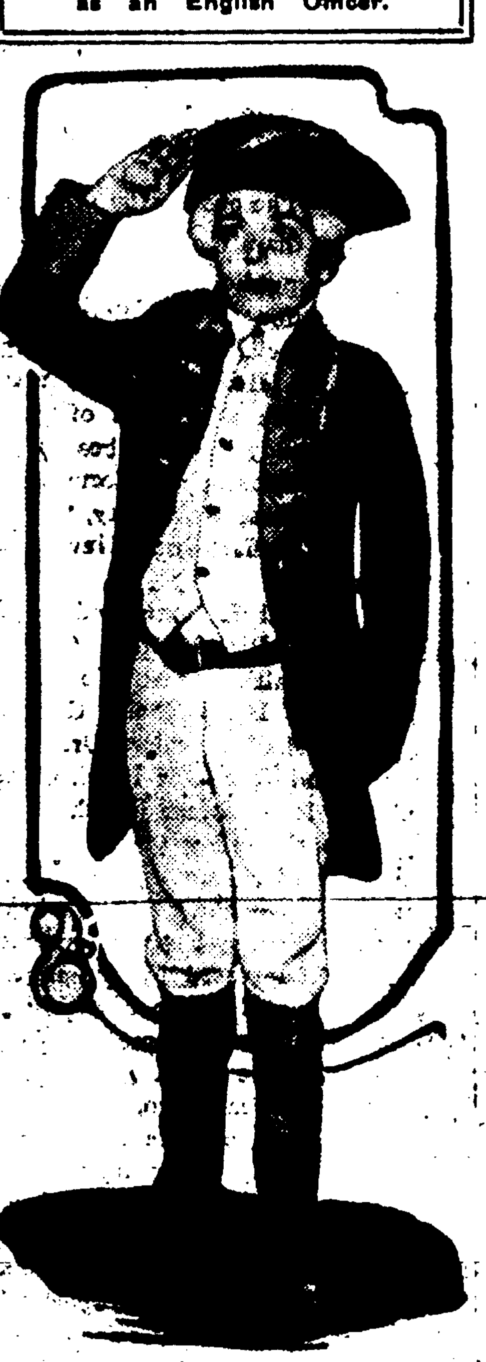


Photo by American Press Association.

Recently there was held in New York an entertainment called a Lafayette fund fete. It was under the auspices of rich and socially prominent people and had for its object the raising of money to aid the wounded soldiers of France. The entertainment was principally of tableaux and living pictures, children dressed in colonial costumes and uniforms being the actors. The boy in the picture represents an English lieutenant of the colonial period, and there were scores of youngsters in equally brilliant and handsome costumes. The boy's name is Gilbert W. Kahn, son of Otto H. Kahn, who is prominent in social and financial circles in New York city.

A Fight With a Cougar.

In company with an Indian a Port Angeles (Wash.) man went fishing for salmon in a rocky river. Suddenly a big cougar appeared at the entrance to a cave and, with a roar, crouched to spring at the Indian.

The white man threw his fish spear at the cougar, while the Indian ran for his life.

The spear entered the animal's neck and ear, and thus the man held him at a distance and tried to drown him. But the cougar was too strong and agile for that, and finally the spear came out of its hold.

For four long hours the man and the cougar fought, the cougar walking around and around and every once in awhile making a spring, which the man every time repulsed with the spear.

The combat only ended when the Indian returned, after a twelve mile trip, with a gun. His first shot wounded the beast in the side; the second lodged in its head and killed it.

Arctic Dogs.

Far up north on the wild and snowy wastes is the home of the Eskimo or arctic dogs. Although many of them are half savage, scarcely more than reclaimed wolves, they are wonderfully cunning and enduring. With the reindeer they are the beasts of burden, valuable to their owners and a great help to explorers and travelers in these cold, trackless regions. Over the untrodden frozen plains these dogs can travel at the rate of seven to eight miles an hour, drawing a good sized load and keeping up the pace for several days. In summer they are turned loose to shift for themselves and are far more care free than in the winter season, when they must toil for their masters.

Sheep Intelligence.

However stupid we have learned to consider sheep, they are not devoid of sympathy and charity one for another. A shepherd was driving home a flock of sheep when he noticed one of them lagged behind and bleated piteously. Then he saw another of the flock run back and walk with it until they overtook the rest. On examining the animal that had stayed behind he found that it was blind and must have called for help, in some manner making an appeal that met with immediate response.

Fairyland.

I wonder if a girlie must,
In fairyland, always wear
A dress with lace and trimming fussed
And ribbon bows in her hair.

I wonder when she talks too fast
If some one is there to say
That children always should speak last
And older folks quick obey.

I wonder if she takes the hose
And carelessly wets her head,
If she is robbed of all her clothes
And put at once in her bed.

I wish there was some way to know
About such unpleasant things,
If fairies treat small children so
I'd ask no fairy for wings!

—Philadelphia Record.

D/34

GET TRAINING

Courses Arranged at Several Universities—New Qualifications Established

Albany.—The prevention of epidemics rather than their control is the keynote of public health work today in the opinion of the State Public Health Council, who are sending a letter to all Health Officers urging that they take advantage of special courses of study in public health to be given this summer by Cornell University, Syracuse University, the University of Buffalo and New York University.

The Council is composed of Dr. Herman M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health; Homer Folks, Mrs. Elmer Blair, Dr. Wilhelm Gaertner, Dr. T. Mitchell Prudden, Dr. Simon Flexner, and Professor H. N. Ogden.

In their letter to the health officers they state that they are charged by law with the task, among other things, of prescribing qualifications for health officers. And they have become more and more impressed by the importance of the local health officer in any scheme for the improvement of health conditions in the State.

"Not many years ago, if he was a good physician, capable of recognizing the ordinary communicable diseases and looked in a general way after nuisances and water pollution, he was held to be adequately equipped and able to serve properly his community," says the Council. "But today much more is required. The recent discoveries concerning the transmission of disease have made the prevention of epidemics rather than their control his important task. The education of fathers and mothers, of school children and school teachers, and the presentation of accurate sanitary information to boards of trustees and city councils are perhaps his largest duty. His efficiency is measured by such standard as the infant death rate, by the number of cases of typhoid fever, by any outbreak of measles or whooping cough, and the more competent the health officer the more free will his community be from children's diseases and the lower the infant death rate will be."

The letter contains a hint as to the intention of the Council with reference to the qualifications of health officers. The council urges all health officers to seriously consider taking advantage of the courses offered in one of the universities, so that they may prepare themselves for meeting the qualifications for health officers which it is the purpose of the Public Health Council in due time to prescribe.

"The Public Health Council," says the letter, "make this appeal to the health officers, sharing with them as they do the responsibility for a successful public health service in the State, in the hope that we may, by greater knowledge and more thorough preparedness be better able to meet the greater demands of the day for more perfect health conditions thruout this Empire State, and thereby greatly promote the conditions of life, health, and happiness, among her citizens."

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

MARK TIME

Constitutional Delegates Do Not Hasten Their Work and Business Lags

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 15.—Numerous as have been the proposed amendments to the State Constitution as presented by the individual delegates, it is the belief of several of the important factors of the convention that the most important of the proposals have as yet not been presented and will not be until the committees have decided what should and what should not be reported.

As a matter of fact, the individual delegates as individuals have little effect upon the transactions of the delegate body except in the exercise of their functions of introducing proposals, their vote as members of committees and their final vote upon the floor of the assembly chamber in advocating or rejecting a proposed amendment. The committees and the committee chairmen exerices the most potent influence in connection with the deliberations of the convention. Each committee chairman is a man of wide public affairs, selected to head the committee dealing with the subject with which he is the most familiar.

It is understood that the majority of the amendments reported favorably by committee will be altered in committee and that very few will be favored of the six hundred and sixty-seven which have been introduced to date. Committee hearings have been the order of thed ay for a number of weeks past, but they are to continue from now on together with executive sessions.

Aside from resolutions adopted by several of the committees, the most important of which being that of the committee on the Legislature, its organization, etc., no committee has finally acted upon a proposed amendment. The resolution in question is a wide one in its scope, for in a single document it is proposed to disapprove of the numerous proposals aimed to reorganize the legislature and amend the law with relation to its sessions and the salary of its members. This is being debated today as a special order of business and the first debate of the Convention is thus in progress.

The remainder of the month of June will find the delegates hard at work, sifting the various proposals before their respective committees. One of the most important committees is that which has to do with conservation propositions, such as water storage matters and the questions arising from the administration of the forestry laws. Before this committee there are a number of important proposals which seek to alter the law relative to the cutting of dead timber, the development of water power and other kindred matters pertaining to the forest preserves of the State.

Another important committee—in fact they are all important—is that dealing with the Governor and other State officers. The Bill of Rights Committee and the Judiciary Committee, before the latter being diverse amendments directed at a change in the system of slcting judicial officers.

From the above committees amendments are likely to come in the form acted upon by the delegates sitting as a committee of the whole.

PETITIONS MUST BE FILED BEFORE SEPT. 7

Candidates for the several county and municipal offices who want to get into the race next November must get their petitions out under the new primary law by Sept. 7. The petitions must bear the signatures of three per cent. of the voters enrolled in the candidate's party and registered in the election division to which the office pertains. In other words an assemblyman candidate must have three per cent of the enrolled voters of his particular party in that assembly district; a supervisor three per cent. in his town.

All town officers, including supervisors; a county clerk, special surrogate and two coroners are to be chosen next fall. In thec ity all municipal officers from mayor down must be filled.

Petitions may be filed with the election board between August 26 and September 7, the latter being the final date for filing to have the aspirant's name placed upon the primary ballot. Primary day this year falls on Tuesday, September 28, while the general election will come November 2. City, county and assembly district candidates will file the petitions with the county clerk. Candidates for state positions file their petitions at Albany.

HUDSON JAUNT CITY'S CURE

Commissioner Davis Advises Unique Treatment For Patients

New York, June 15.—Believing that a harmless and ladylike ride on the Hudson river will take the place of a large "swig of booze," Miss Katherine B. Davis, Commissioner of the Department of Corrections, announced yesterday that the city would operate steamboat excursions this summer for what her department terms "professional women souses."

The fact that one woman had served two hundred terms on Blackwell's Island caused Miss Davis to investigate. She found that this woman became intoxicated each time a few minutes after she was released and that she had said the only way she could get a nice ride on the river at the city's expense, was to become intoxicated and be sent to the island.

Further investigation, according to her statement to the Society to Lower Rents and Reduce Taxes on Homes, which met at Police Headquarters, revealed the fact that hundreds of women enjoy the steamboat ride from Manhattan to Blackwell's Island so much that as soon as they are released after serving one sentence they become intoxicated so they can be sent back to the island by steamboat.

"My department is now arranging," said Miss Davis, "togive these women all the boat rides they want in the hope that whenever they think they want a drink they can take a boat ride."

Miss Davis also told several other new and interesting facts aboutwomen prisoners. She said that in her fifteen years' experience handling women prisoners she never found a woman who had been graduated from a college. This was considered significant, as Miss Davis probably has handled more women prisoners than any other person in the country, long having been head of such reformatories as that at Bedford Park.

Inefficient parents, drugs and too little to eat, she said, caused most of the crime among girls. When a girl once has been sent to an institution, she said, she never should be sent back to her home, but to new surroundings.

A High Calling.

Tommy was eighteen, and only the recording angel knew what was the age of Aunt Katy, but the little old colored woman and the college fisherman were each getting their first taste of New York life that winter. One effect on Tommy was to make him want a silk hat.

"Now, what do you think of Tommy's wanting a silk hat, Aunt Katy?" exclaimed Tommy's mother, who was having a hard time adjusting herself to having for a son a young man instead of just a boy.

"What he want wid a silk hat? He ain't no preacher."

"But, Aunt Katy, other people besides preachers wear silk hats. Haven't you noticed the men in silk hats on the streets? Every other man you meet has one on on Sunday."

"Yessum, an' I jes' been tryin' to figger out where all them preachers preached."—New York Post.

DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 15.—Acting State Superintendent of Prisons George S. Weed will meet with the Parole Board on June 23 at Sing Sing prison and while there will have a talk with former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, twice convicted for having been implicated in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler. Becker is now awaiting the summons to the electric chair, which unless the Court of Appeals decides to intervene or the governor takes a similar step, will come during the week beginning July 12, less than a month away.

There have been a number of sensational and fictitious stories circulated concerning the attitude that Becker has taken since the highest court in the State ruled that he should not be granted a new trial. It was broadly spread that he had become indifferent to God and man and railed against his fate and the injustice which he had received. According to high officials in the department of prisons, there were no grounds for the circulation of such rumors.

Becker was first imprisoned in Sing Sing on October 30, 1912. He was incarcerated there until February 26, 1914, when he was discharged as the result of having secured a new trial. As the result of a second conviction he was returned to Sing Sing prison on May 29, 1914, and has since been there awaiting the decision of the Court of Appeals, which recently ruled that there were no legal grounds for a third trial, and soon thereafter fixed the time of his execution for the week beginning July 12.

As far as is known no one has seen Becker officially, save of course, Warden Thomas Mott Osborne of Sing Sing prison and possibly attorneys representing him, since the last meeting of the parole board at Sing Sing. At that time Acting Superintendent of Prisons Weed had a conversation with him.

"Becker seemed in good spirits. He is a powerful, courageous man and it is all nonsense to say that he went to pieces after he received the news that the Court of Appeals had refused to grant him a new trial. No such information was reported to this office and therefore, I know that the rumor was false," said Mr. Weed today. Superintendent of Prisons John B. Riley, has been taking a needed vacation for the past few weeks and the work of the Statep rison department is being administered by Mr. Weed.

There is now before the Court of Appeals a motion for the re-argument of the Becker case based upon a technicality. The least that Becker can get is a stay of his execution, which step is taken automatically providing the highest court decides to re-open the case and hear the claims set forth by the attorneys for Becker.

To have been released from the death house and then returned to it is an experience which has fallen to but few of the prisoners who have been sent to Sing Sing prison. If granted a new trial in the face of the recent decision of the Court of Appeals, Becker will be again taken from the somber confines of his cell which is kept solely for the use of men convicted of a capital crime. Becker has been in confinement for nearly three years.

"MONEY"; THE QUIRK TODAY

You have never heard of this play. Its title, its story and the leading actor may be unknown to you. It is the first offering ofa new producing company. Imagine if you can the energy and effort put forth in its making. "Money" tells a heart-gripping story—it is deeply interesting; the staging is the most elaborate conceivable. Money was no object in the production of the elaborate settings, scenes and costumes. In one of the scenes an entire palace is burned and destroyed with its rich oriental furnishings and hangings.

NEW PASTOR FOR OSWEGO'S 1ST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Rev. E. L. Seymour, former pastor of the Oswego First Presbyterian church, is to be succeeded by the Rev. E. F. Ripley of Mt. Vernon. Mr. Ripley is described as a young man, forceful and eloquent and is endorsed by the entire board of elders.

HANNIBAL MAN'S NOISE AT SODUS

Opened Some Eyes to Village Enterprise; Sodus is Booming

So very many Fulton people know Sodus and itsp eople that a friendly interest is taken in whatever of a public nature happens in the pretty resort.

Something happened Friday night. It was a banquet with a bang that the Sodus Board of Trade held in the Snider House. Over one hundred were seated at the tables and during the three-hour sessions of "feasting and speeching," not a moment went to waste. At 7.30 o'clock the members and their guests were called to the tables, where were found roses and carnations at each plate. Grace was said by Rev. H. L. Rixon, of the Methodist church. Music was played by the Myers Orchestra, of Sodus.

President Case introduced Principal Lockwood, of the Hannibal High school, where since 1908 vocational studies, including agriculture, animal husbandry, manual training and domestic science, have been followed as part of the school curriculum. Mr. Lockwood's remarks were given sharp attention as the establishment of an agricultural course has long been desired in the local high school. The speaker cited how in a village of 500 population, Hannibal was maintaining such a course, a building 20 by 36 feet, used for the purpose, having been built entirely by students receiving their manual training at the school.

Harry C. Goodwin, of Rochester, formerly president of the Rochester Ad. Club, worked on a theme that might be called the mission of laughter, he carried the banquet room by storm. He expressed surprise at the recent business boom of Sodus as reflected in the extensive building of the last few years. The merchants were roundly complimented for their modern stores with store fronts and window decorations that expressed real salesmanship.

The last speaker was J. C. Bulkbee, of Rochester, who spoke in the interests of better window displays, after which the president made some closing remarks on blasting out a quantity of rock in the stream at Sodus Center. This would drain 700 acres of muck and open an area capable of supporting 100 families. Further lowering of the stream would drain many more acres. There are 2,000 acres of muck south of this village, of which only 300 or 400 are developed. It is likely that the Board will hold a picnic later in the summer at some distant resort, when the occasion will be used for booming Sodus.

LOCKWOOD HOMESTEAD DESTROYED BY FIRE

The home of Oliver Robarge, formerly the Charles Lockwood homestead, in Scriba, was burned to the ground Saturday night. Mrs. Robarge was in Rochester and her husban in Oswego. The origin of the fire is unknown and not more than $1,000 insurance on the house was carried by Mr. Robarge. About three years ago the present owner paid $10,000 for the farm.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

WEDNESDAY
Morning 9 o'clock

We place on Sale over Six Hundred Pairs Ladies $3.50 and $4.00 Oxfords and Pumps, for $1.49

SEE WINDOW FOR BIG DISPLAY AND BE ON HAND EARLY

Ladies with Small Feet can get Fitted

Exposition Votes Given Here

C. A. BECKWITH
39 First Street, Fulton

MOTOR BOAT SUPPLIES

Everything that is needed to Equip a Boat

AT

J. B. BUELL'S, 17 N. Second Street

Agents for W. D. ANDREWS CO., Syracuse

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

PURE ICE CREAM
THE RICHEST AND MOST SANITARY

Served at our Fountain and Tables. Made with Heavy Cream, the Best Flavors and Fresh Fruits.

OUR FOUNTAIN DRINKS ARE UNEQUALED

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
No. 6 of Paramount Travel Series and a Feature Master-Picture
MONEY

WEDNESDAY
"THE LONE STAR RUSH"
A Romantic Tale of the Great Australian Gold Fields in 5 parts.

THURSDAY
No. 6 of "Who Pays" Series, entitled "HOUSES OF GLASS"
No. 1 "ROMANCE OF ELAINE and PATHE WEEKLY

Bass Season Opens Tomorrow

ALL YOU ANGLERS—GET BUSY

Reports from the out-lying districts state that the fish are plentiful this year.

You will need some Tackle—We have it!

BRISTOL STEEL RODS BASKETS
A FLY FOR EVERY FISH
REELS NETS LINES

Every article at bed-rock price and Guaranteed

A. M. DRUSE & CO.
7 South First Street

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN

"The New York Shop"

We Are Showing an Exclusive Line of

WASH SKIRTS

in Many Styles and Pretty Materials, as

PALM BEACH, IRISH POPLIN, BEDFORD CORD PIQUE, Etc., at $2.98

M. J. McDONALD

CHINA BREAKS INTO TOY GAME

May Rest From Germany Title to Leading Toy Market of World

Forty thousand dollars was spent for toys last week, most of it in New York, by Chang Ku Kaio, a special representative of the Chinese government, who came to the United States several weeks ago with the Chinese commission. He bought everything in the shape of a toy or dinner favor made of metal which he could find. Assisting him was Julius Popper, chemist and inventor, who lives in the McAlpin Hotel. Mr. Chang is now busy in seeking among manufacturers of machinery for men who can build machines to make in China the toys which, before the war, were practiially all made in Germany.

China, with her cheap labor and cheap sailing ship freights, proposes to compete with the toymakers of Nuremberg, Fuersch and Thilt, who have supplied toys for most of the civilized world for generations. Many of the toys were purchased also for their educational value in the schools of China.

One sample of every sort of toy was sought by Mr. Chang and Mr. Popper obtained them, not only from the great toy importing houses and big retail shops, but searched the Bowery for the cheaper articles. In an Essex street shop they found a large vraiety of the cheapest kind of toys and favors. The proprietor, whose business probably hadnever, except at Christmas time, reached $10 a day, could not believe that they were actually going to buy the great assortment, worth more than $10, which Mr. Chang and Mr. Popper selected and heaped on his counter. He would not prepare to wrap up the toys until the purchase money was paid into his hand.

Prices paid ranged from three for a cent to $750 for a miniature model boiler, burning coal dust, attached to a complete miniature Corliss engine and electric generator. This last was purchased in Philadelphia and was used by the proprietor of a big shop to run all sorts of toy machines in his shop window.

The engines purchased ranged from one operated by acohol flame at ninety-five cents to the Corliss, which cost $140 alone. Every sort of toy lathe, saw and stamp mill is represented in Mr. Chang's collection. He has twenty sets of toy locomotives, from a pewter model at ten cents to one with apparatus for supplying its motive power, at $29.

One set of lead soldiers cost $188. It includes every arm of military service, with mountain and field batteries, a Red Cross ambulance, forage wagons and automobile trucks.

Boats at three for a cent are at one side of a collection which includes a complete battleship that cost $235. Printing outfits from $1.90 to $45 are in the collection, with boys' carpenter tool boxes of every size.

No novelty toys were sought, only the standard kinds being purchased, and the collection is astonishing in its exhibition of how much ingenuity is exercised in the manhfacture of things to amuse children.

Brooklyn was searched by Mr. Chang and Mr. Popper, who also went through all the shops of Jersey City. Then they went to Philadelphia, and later Mr. Chang toured the toy shops of Boston to make sure his collection was complete.

Mr. Chang said the Chinese government was subsidizing every new industry that is started in his native land except textile manufacture. He gave the impression that the manufacture of toys by the Chinese would be encouraged by his government, and the result of his efforts to obtain complete sets of all sorts of toys as well as the machinery to manufacture them would be placed at the service of every prospective maker of toys in China.

CITY WILL SELL PAVING BONDS

First St. Paving to Cost More Than Original Estimate-- No Band Concerts

Two blocks of bonds, representing the entire cost of the street work of last year and all street improvements up to date, were ordered sold at last night's meeting of the Common Council. One block, which represents the taxpayers' share of the cost of paving, amounts to $13,233.13, and the bond issue will be divided as follows: Nine bonds of $1000 each, eight of $500 each and one of $233.13. The bond swill be dated February 1, 1915, and will be paid as follows: one of $1000 and one of $500 on February 1, 1916, and one of $1000 and one of $500 each year on the same date until and including February 1, 1923. On February 1, 1924, one of $1000 and one of $233.13 will be paid. The bonds will bear interest at 6 per cent. per annum and the interest will be paid semi-annually. The United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York city will hold the bonds.

The city's share of the work, which totals $46,262.87, is divided as follows: forty-six bonds of $1000 each and one bond of $262.87. This block will be dated July 1, 1915, and five bonds of $1000 each will be paid commencing July 1, 1916, until the full amount of the bonds is paid. These bonds will bear interest at 4½ per cent per annum, and the interest will be paid semi-annually.

The bonds will be advertised for sale at once, and the bids will be announced at the next meeting of the Common Council, which will be held July 6. Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check for $2500. The bonds will be delivered on or before July 15.

The council received a communication from the State Department of Highways announcing that the city's share of the paving of 1st st. between Rochester st. and Broadway will total $12,300 instead of $10,300. The additional cost of $2000 will be necessary owing to fact that the trolley tracks must be laid upon second-class concrete. The trolley company will bear the cost and will be assessed $6,800 next year, in place of the assessment this year of $4,800. A resolution offered by Alderman Foster empowering the City Chamberlain to borrow $2000 to meet the additional expense was passed.

The ordinance which regulates the operation of bowling alleys and poolrooms was amended last night, owing to the fact that the legal phraseology was inaccurate in two instances. The ordinance read "all licenses shall expire on the thirty-first day of the year in which they are issued." This was changed to read "The thirty-first day of December." The words "of age" were added to the clause "under 18 years."

Alderman Quirk introduced a resolution to appropriate the sum of $300 for summer band-concerts, but after the council learned that this could not be passed except by unanimous vote the motion was withdrawn.

The bill now in the Constitutional Convention, which has been introduced through the influence of the New York State Conference of Mayors, and which calls for an amendment to the constitution allowing the Common Councils of the cities of the state greater freedom in making changes in the charter, received the approval of the council.

By a resolution offered by Alderman Distin and approved, the supplies department will purchase a suitable flag for the City Hall. At present the only flag owned by the city is approaching its last stage of usefulness, and the fire department is also without a suitable banner.

No applicants for the position of dog-catcher appeared last evening, and the city will advertise for men before the next meeting.

Fred A. Summerville, formerly city chamberlain, asked to be released from his bond of $40,000, which he assumed when he took the office. City Attorney Fanning was of the opinion that the council could not release Summerville from his bond, but a section in the charter provided for the action and by an unanimous vote, the bond was released.

The plans for the celebration of July 4th as Americanization Day were not discussed and the project will be dropped. The deplorable conditions among the foreign citizens of the West Side do not augur well for any celebration on that date.

15c and 19c TURKISH

Bath Towels 10c

Double Thread Body all through. An unusual value

On Sale WEDNESDAY Only at 9 A. M.

WHY BUY ELSEWHERE AND PAY MORE WHEN YOU CAN BUY IT FOR LESS AT

M. Katz & Co.'s

Department Store 63-65 S. First St., Fulton

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Chattel Mortgage Sale.—One gasoline truck wagon, in good condition, with top; also one light truck same as above, without top. Sale at VanWagenen garage, Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. A. Bristol, Mortgagee's agent. 154

For Sale—2 H.P. marine steam engine with tubular oil burning boiler; complete from stack to propeller, 307 Cayuga st. 152

To Rent—New house in Park st.; modern conveniences; electric light; bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

Lost—Near Baptist church, silver mesh bag containing purse and key. Return 321 Rochester st. for reward. 153c

To Rent—Downstairs flat at 311 Atlantic ave. Inquire Crandall, 261 S. 7th st. Pone 252. tf

Wanted—2 Polish chambermaids and woman cleaner. Pontiac, Oswego. 152

For Sale—Household furniture on Friday and Saturday at 502 Buffalo st. 150c

Upper Flat to Rent—408 Erie street. Phone 4480. 153

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

RAILROAD COMPANY GIVES CITY BAD PAVING JOB

Some new ruts in the pavement of East 1st st. in the down-town section are sure to appear as a result of the repairs made to the trolley tracks by the Lake Shore & Northern R. R. Company. On the strip directly in front of the City Hall, the bricks which were removed were put back this morning, but not without leaving some gaps in the paving and ridges along the the outside of the track. The track has been filled in with new brick, but the old brick was replaced on the street proper. Superintendent of Public Works Rumsey inspected the work this morning after it was completed, and whether he approved of it or not, the work went on.

The Gift Distinctive

for the

JUNE BRIDE

or the

YOUNG GRADUATE

The gift that some one else will not think of can be found in our collections.

Wm. C. Morgan

Jeweler & Optometrist

Fulton, N. Y.

CAHILL GIVEN MILD SENTENCE

Must Keep Away From Drink and Act in Accordance With Manly Ways

Pulaski, June 15.—A suspended sentence of two years and ten months in Auburn prison was imposed on Frederick T. Cahill of Oswego, by Judge Coville in County Court here yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. A condition of the suspension is that Mr. Cahill be required to make restitution of about $800 involved in the charges of grand larceny made against him. Of this amount $380 must be repaid to Mrs. Lizzie Carlton Boudiette by August 1. Mr. Cahill pleaded guilty to the charge of grand larceny, second degree, in the Boudiette case. It was charged that he secured the money from Mrs. Boudiette to pay her fine on conviction in County Court for renting a house for immoral purposes.

In addition to restitution Mr. Cahill must refrain from all disorderly conduct, from indulgence in intoxicating drink, support his family and report to the probation officer at stated intervals.

There were no pleas made at the time sentence was passed. Mr. Cahill said nothing, except that he agreed to the conditions laid down and would certainly make restitution. His counsel, Thomas L. McKay, was in court with him.

Mr. Cahill pleaded guilty Wednesday last. It is claimed that his plea automatically disbars him from the practice of law in this State.

Merritt Miller, grand larceny, and Albert Lalonde, were given suspended sentences and placed on probation.

John Abbott, charged with attempting to corrupt the morals of a child, was senteaced to serve two months in the county jail. He has already served four months.

David McAuliffe, of Oswego, who pleaded guilty to two indictments for violation of the excise law, was fined $125.

The trial of the action of Vincent Roberts vs. Frank White and James Doney, to recover in a horse case, was started today.

Pull and Let Go.

When the friends you have invited arrive give each one a different colored ribbon. Each one holds it by one end. The other ends are all united in the hands of the one who leads the game, usually the hostess. She stands in the middle of the circle. When she says "Pull!" they must let go. When she says "Let go!" they must pull the ribbon which they hold. Those who fail to comply with the rules of the game must give a forfeit.

The Cotton Flies.

An amusing outdoor game is the cotton flies. One of the players takes a flake of cotton or bit of down, which she casts into the air in the midst of a circle formed by the guests. She at once puffs with her breath to keep it floating in the air, and the one toward whom the flake takes its course must puff in the same way to keep it from falling. This flake can be kept up a long time if the players are quick.

Conundrums.

Why is a defeated army like wool? Because it is worsted.

When is a bee like a criminal? When in his cell.

What kind of money is found in all parts of the world? Matri-mony.

11 IN EVERY 100 WORKLESS.

Another 16.8 Per Cent of Wage Earners on Part Time.

Washington.—More than eleven wage earners in every hundred were out of employment, and about sixteen of the remainder were working only part time in March and the early part of April in fifteen of the important cities of the country.

Returns of a canvass of 399,881 families, including 644,358 wage earners, showed 73,800, or 11.5 per cent, wholly unemployed and 106,682, or 16.8 per cent, without full time employment.

Community Notes

Miss Ethel Cook, of Oswego, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Watson of Emery st.

* * *

Neahtawanta Lodge, I.O.O.F., will vote tomorrow night upon certain proposed important amendments to the Order's constitution. Appeals for a full attendance are being made by members and officers of the lodge.

* * *

Miss Pauline Joslin daughter of Edward Joslin, is a member of the graduating class of the Academy of the Holy Name.

* * *

The First M. E. Sunday school will picnic on the fair grounds next week, Tuesday, June 22.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eaton, who have been guests of Fulton friends have returned to their home at Watertown.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Frawley of East River Road, has been entertaining Mrs. Margaret Bane of Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boigel of Oneida st., have been entertaining out of town friends.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Foster of Highland st. entertained Monday afternoon the Kayendatsyona Chapter of the D. A. R. Plans were discussed for the reunion of the 184th Regiment on the Fair grounds of this city, June 29th. This will be the fiftieth anniversary of the mustering out of this regiment.

* * *

The Circle and friends of Mrs. W. H. Patterson and Mrs. E. J. Robinson have planned for an auto joy-ride to Oswego. They will visit the fort grounds also the Kingsford private grounds. One party leaves at 4 o'clock and the other at 6:30. A small fee will be asked which will go into the Circle's fund.

* * *

Thomas McCollum has been in Auburn to attend the funeral of his cousin, Francis Carrigan, who was killed in an automobile accident.

* * *

Mrs. Rolfe will entertain the Woman's Missionary society of the Baptist church at her home, W. 1st st., Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. William Sylvester will have charge of the program. Supper will be served on the lawn at 6 o'clock.

* * *

Miss Florence Sprague has been entertaining Miss Frances Goddard of New York.

* * *

"Move on," was the order issued by Chief Dyer to two bands of Gypsies who encamped Saturday and Monday respectively on the Fletcher farm south of the fair grounds. In compliance with the Chief's polite order the Gips moved at 10 a.m. today.

* * *

I. R. Whipple has bought from John Satterlee the barber shop in Cayuga st. Ill health brought about the sale. Mr. Whipple takes possession tomorrow morning.

BIG CONCERT TO BE GIVEN JUNE 30

Mrs. L. P. Smith and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon are completing arrangements for the concert to be given at the First M. E. church on June 30. The cream of local talent combined with that of Syracuse will participate in the affair.

FOR SALE

CASH GROCERY STORE

210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY

A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of

240 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Cahill's Perfection Bread is the BEST BREAD MADE

TRY A LOAF—Sold only at LaPORTE'S GROCERY

PUBLIC MONEY AT LOW EBB

Second Half of State Funds Is Not Forthcoming Immediately

Herman W. Kandt, county treasurer, is in receipt of another letter from H. C. Case, Chief of State Statistics Division, whose excuse for the nonpayment of the second half of the public money is explained thus:

"There is in the State treasury at the present time less than two millions of dollars with which to pay the running expenses of the State government until October 1. The comptroller is endeavoring to negotiate a loan sufficient to meet all obligations. This effort on his part has been met in certain quarters with opposition, resulting in injunctions restraining him from making the loan. The appellate division has sustained the comptroller in his contention of the legality of this loan, but because of the legal question involved he has not yet been able to secure the money. The public money will be paid immediately upon his being able to negotiate this loan, but it is impossible to make any promise as to when he will be able to do so. We hope that it will be in the very near future."

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents.

D/34

The Fulton Evening Times

IS A PART OF THE BUSINESS LIFE OF FULTON

¶ Because it is identical with every interest in this city. The Fulton Evening Times is a public institution purely. It's interests are mutual with those of every Man, Woman and Child of this city. It's success spells for the success of every Fulton Merchant. The town having successful Merchants is a successful town. A home Daily helps to make the home Merchant a successful man. One dollar spent in a paper published out-of-town deprives a Fulton workman of a dollar's worth of support.

IF YOU DEPRIVE

A Fulton Workman of His Wages it's Your Loss as well as the Workman's

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

Bowser's Shoestring

He Can't Find It, and There Is a Row.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

There are two standard complaints that a husband can urge against his wife whenever he gets a grouch on.

One is her extravagance, and the other is her way of running the house.

Husbands the world over are more extravagant than their wives, and as for system in running the house, no husband could do it a tenth as well. Even an old bachelor living alone is a dead failure as a housekeeper.

Sometimes Mr. Bowser urges one complaint and sometimes the other, just as it happens. He can assume dramatic poses in either of them.

He can also be the martyr, while Mrs. Bowser is the guilty party.

The other morning when he was ten minutes late at the breakfast table he had that martyred look that Mrs. Bowser had learned to connect with a row, and she was keeping very quiet when he began:

"I would like to know if this house is run on a system, or is everything supposed to take care of itself?"

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean that I have been looking for a shoestring for the last half hour and that nothing of the sort is to be found."

"No, I don't believe there is one in the house."

"I presume not. I presume the 200 pairs I bought a month ago have all been chewed up by the cat or sold to the rag man. If there's a worse run house than ours in America I'd like to see it!"

"I FOUND A BOY WALKING OFF WITH THIS MAT."

"Why, Mr. Bowser, you only brought home three shoestrings, and you used two of them to tie up your papers."

"Well, where is the other?"

"I can't tell. We may have lost it in the housecleaning."

"Don't doubt it in the least. While a shoestring is not as big as a piano or as valuable as a clock, the loss of it shows a want of system, a reckless extravagance truly discouraging. Have you got a piece of clothesline in the house?"

"I—I don't think so," she stammered.

"Probably not. Probably gone to join the shoestring. I must have something to tie up my shoe with, however, and I will use a piece of stovepipe wire."

After breakfast, when ready to go out, he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I hope you will take this lesson to heart. Carelessness in a wife is a very, very reprehensible trait."

"You are just as careless as I am!" she protested.

"No, ma'am; no, ma'am, I never mislay anything, forget anything or lose anything. Very few husbands do. I will go around the world with a pin in my vest pocket and bring the same one back with me. If you go out on the street today you had better have a policeman with you. If not, you'll lose your purse or be robbed of your coat."

When Mr. Bowser came home to dinner he entered the house with a smile on his face and the doormat in his hand and said:

"I found a boy walking off with this mat. Has any one taken the range out of the kitchen? It's a wonder to me they haven't come in after the carpets."

"That's a mat the girl put out in the barrel to be carted away," she explained.

"Oh, it is! More reckless extravagance, I see. Mrs. Bowser, I want to sit down with you some day and have a long talk. I think you mean well, but you are deficient in judgment, and your knowledge of the world is very, very limited."

"Do you know everything?" she sarcastically queried.

"Mrs. Bowser," he replied as he folded his hands under his coattails and assumed his favorite attitude, "there are probably one or two things I don't know. I don't claim to know it all, and I don't say you know nothing whatever. The husband who does not, however, know forty times as much as his wife would be considered a stick of a man. Did you go out this morning?"

"I did."

"No, sir."

"Lucky—very lucky. You are to be congratulated. I didn't"—

"Mr. Bowser, where's your watch?" she interrupted.

"My watch? Mrs. Bowser, my watch is—great Scott!"

He dropped his hand to find the chain, but it was not there. He felt for the watch, but it was gone.

"Did you leave it at the jeweler's?" she asked as he stood with open mouth and stared at her.

"Jeweler's? No; it's gone! I've lost it! I've been robbed!" he shouted as he danced around.

"It can't be. Feel in your pockets."

"Pockets! Pockets! Do you s'pose I carry my watch in my coattail pocket? I tell you I've been robbed!"

"Well, don't take on so. Your wallet is safe, isn't it?"

"G-gone!" he gasped as he put his hands up. "Watch and wallet both gone!"

"You must have been robbed in some crowd," she suggested.

"Robbed! Crowd! Robbed! Why, of course I've been robbed!" he shouted as he pranced about. "Get that infernal cat off the lounge and lemme lay down, for I'm so weak I can't stand up! Where's that camphor?"

She ran for the bottle as he flopped down, and for the next three minutes he had his nose in the opening.

"You ought to go to the police at once," she finally said.

"G-gone! G-gone!" he gasped.

"But how could you have been robbed?"

"I dunno. Hold the bottle a little higher."

"You are so careful, you know!"

"Yes."

"You never mislay anything or forget anything!"

"No."

"And never lose anything and have so much worldly wisdom!"

"Oh, my head!"

"I cannot make it out. I am so careless that I might lose a shoestring in the hustle of [illegible]cleaning, but you"—

"Don't talk to me! Over $600 gone!"

"A woman tried to steal my reticule in Buffalo, and I had her arrested, but it seems that you"—

"Gone! Gone!" he groaned.

"Haven't you any idea of when it was taken?" she asked.

"No."

"Well, I'm sorry, but this will be a great lesson to you. You will be more"—

"Mrs. Bowser," he interrupted as he suddenly sat up, "I see through it all now. It's as plain as daylight."

"What do you mean?"

"I thought it necessary this morning to give you a little advice. I felt it to be my duty as a husband. This is your way of getting even."

"Why, Mr. Bowser!"

"Don't 'Why Mr. Bowser' me! It's as plain as that chair over there."

"How could I rob you or tell any one else to?"

"Never you mind! I see it all! It's all right, Mrs. Bowser—all right. Just let go of this camphor bottle and take a seat in the other room. A husband will bear a great deal from the woman he loves, but when crowded too far he turns at bay. I have turned. As soon as I feel a little better we will have an understanding and you can probably take the noon train for your mother's in Buffalo. Robbed! Plundered! But I see through it all, and I know my duty."

"Do you think you will expire before I go upstairs and return?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Woman"—

When she returned she had the watch in one hand and the wallet in the other, and as she held them out she said:

"Being afraid that I would rob you in the night, you hid them under the bureau and forgot them this morning. It's a wonder that you didn't miss them. You never mislay nor forget, but here they are."

"You—you"— stammered Mr. Bowser as he dropped the camphor bottle on the floor and sat up.

"Oh, I haven't taken any of your money or stolen any of the wheels of the watch."

He didn't beg her pardon. He simply grunted and passed down the hall and out of doors. Just outside the gate he met a neighbor, who said:

"Good evening, Mr. Bowser. I believe I made a fool of myself a few minutes ago."

"And I'm sure I did," was the lugubrious reply.

Dinner Topics.

SOUP	The Anti-Noise Society
FISH	Scaly characters
MEAT	Roasting your friends
SALAD	Lobsters we have met
ICES	Interior friezes
COFFEE	Grounds for complaint

—Philadelphia Ledger.

Explained.

She—Why do they paint the inside of a chicken coop?

He—To keep the hens from picking the grain out of the wood.—Lehigh Burr.

His Name.

She ransacked every novel
 And the dictionary, too,
But nothing ever printed
 For her baby's name would do;
She hunted appellations
 From the present and the past,
And this is what she named him
 When they christened him at last:

Julian Harold Egbert
 Ulysses Victor Paul
Algernon Marcus Cecil
 Sylvester George McFall.
But after all the trouble
 She'd taken for his sake,
His father called him Fatty
 And his schoolmates called him Jake.

—New York Sun.

Keeper and Convict

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Tommy Ruggles and Eddie Barnes were schoolmates. Not only were they schoolmates, but little chums. They left the grammar school and entered the high school at the same time. From the high school they went out into the world to fight the battle of life. Ruggles drifted into the political arena and after an election, during which he had done good work for his party, received the appointment of head of the state penitentiary.

Barnes became a merchant in a small way. He finally formed a partnership with a man who swindled him out of all he possessed. A quarrel ensued that ended in a scuffle, during which Barnes threw his opponent, whose head struck some hard substance, and his skull was fractured. He died, and Barnes was sent to the penitentiary to serve a term of ten years.

When Ruggles and Barnes met, after not having seen each other for several years—the one as keeper, the other as convict—both shed tears.

"Tom," said Barnes, "I'm sorry you are my jailer. I cannot serve out my term, and I am bound to try to escape. And I wish to say to you now that I expect you to do your duty by the state like an honorable man. You may kill me while trying to capture me when I try to escape."

"Don't try the escape game, Ed. It seldom, if ever, pays. And in this case it would be hard on us both. I should certainly do my duty, and you know where that duty would lie. To me you are only one of hundreds of prisoners for whom I am responsible."

Barnes made an effort to serve out his sentence without any attempt to escape. But one day an excellent opportunity offered itself. He was in the yard of the prison near a gateway, which was opened to admit a cart. A storm came up, and the gatekeeper was blinded by a cloud of dust and lightning. Barnes slipped out and ran like a deer.

He ran into a house not far from the prison, where he found a woman. It is difficult to repress sympathy with one hounded for his life or his liberty, and the woman furnished him with a suit of her husband's clothes, and Barnes persuaded her to give him a revolver. But Ruggles at the head of a force was after him, and the convict was seen leaving the house. He had a good start, and when they reached him he was on rising ground behind a stone wall ready to defend himself. Ruggles ordered his men to keep back, telling them that he would go forward and endeavor to persuade the prisoner to surrender. He walked forward till he heard Barnes call out:

"Don't come any farther, Tom. I'm desperate!"

"Give yourself up, Ed. I've got a dozen men down on the road. It will be suicide for you to resist, and to hurt you would be an awful thing for me."

"I can't go back to that life. I'd rather die."

There was a grim silence between them for a few moments; then Barnes added:

"Go back and send your men to take me. I don't want to hurt you, and I'm going to use up the six shots in my revolver."

"I wouldn't send my men where I can do all there is to be done. If any one is to be killed in your recapture I prefer that it should be myself."

"That's not right. I've got to die; you haven't. Don't shoot your old chum or compel him to shoot you. You'll give me a better chance for my life by sending one of your men, or all of them for that matter."

"You know I couldn't do that. I might as well resign my post and lose myself in another country. But it isn't my position that I'm thinking of; it's my honor. The state trusts me to carry out the will of the people, and I'm bound to do so. If you were my own brother or my own father I would be obliged to take you all the same."

"I see how it is, Tom. We're forced by fate into this position. If you'll agree to kill me I'll step out and give you a shot."

"No; you'll have to defend yourself. I must do my duty to the state, but I'm not the state executioner."

"Well, I won't be captured, and you won't accept my life. I don't see that there's anything to be done but for us to say 'Goodby.'"

"You'd better surrender, Ed. With time off for good behavior you'll only have about six years to serve."

"Six years of such life is far worse than death."

"If you won't surrender promise me that you'll defend yourself to the best of your ability; that you won't spare me. If you let me kill you you'll force me to live a life of regret that would be worse than your six years of imprisonment."

"I wish I could stand it to do the rest of the time. It would save you."

"Promise."

There was a delay, after which Barnes promised that he would try to bring himself to the scratch of firing on his old friend.

The men down in the road heard two shots; then all was silent. Rushing up the incline, they saw the keeper and the convict lying dead, clasping each other's hand. A trail of blood from where each had stood when he fired indicated that they had crawled to each other.

BIG MEN CALL ON WORLD POWERS TO ESTABLISH LEAGUE OF PEACE

Mr. Taft Writes Special Article Showing How War Can Be Made Virtually Impossible.

Ex-President, Who Will Preside at Coming Conference, Sets Forth Planks of Platform.

ON the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, a conference will be held in Independence hall, Philadelphia, to consider proposals for a league of peace and decide upon steps to be taken to obtain the support of public opinion and of governments. Ex-President Taft will preside and the speakers will be of international eminence. Four articles will be presented as a basis for a tentative platform.

The conference is called by a national provisional committee of 113 members, which includes the names of former President Taft, former Secretary of War Dickinson, former Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, Oscar S. Straus and Judge George Gray, members of The Hague court; Theodore Marburg, former minister to Belgium; President Lowell of Harvard, President Hibben of Princeton, Cardinal Gibbons, Senator Williams of Mississippi, William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette; Andrew D. White, former ambassador to Germany; President Wheeler of the University of California, President Alderman of the University of Virginia, John Mitchell and three eminent international lawyers, Professor Woolsey of Yale, Professor Wilson of Harvard and Professor Moore of Columbia.

Writing in the Independent on the proposed plan for the enforcement of perpetual peace, ex-President Taft says:

"To constitute an effective League of Peace we do not need all the nations. Such an agreement between eight or nine of the great powers of Europe, Asia and America would furnish a useful restraint upon possible wars.

Others Would Follow.

"The successful establishment of a league between the great powers would draw into it very quickly the less powerful nations.

"What should be the fundamental plan of the league?

"It seems to me that it ought to contain four provisions. In the first place, it ought to provide for the formation of a court, which would be given jurisdiction by the consent of all the members of the league to consider and decide justiciable questions between them or any of them which have not yielded to negotiation according to the principles of international law and equity and that the court should be vested with power upon the application of any member of the league to decide the issue as to whether the question arising is justiciable.

"Second.—A commission of conciliation for the consideration and recommendation of a solution of all nonjusticiable questions that may arise between the members of the league should be created, and this commission should have power to hear evidence, investigate the causes of differences and mediate between the parties and then make its recommendation for a settlement.

"Third.—Conferences should be held from time to time to agree upon principles of international law not already established as their necessity shall suggest themselves. When the conclusions of the commission shall have been submitted to the various parties to the league for a reasonable time, say a year, without calling forth objection it shall be deemed that they acquiesce in the principles thus declared.

"Fourth.—The members of the league shall agree that if any member of the league shall begin war against any other member of the league without first having submitted the question if found justiciable to the arbitral court provided in the fundamental compact, or without having submitted the question if found nonjusticiable to the commission of conciliation for its examination, consideration and recommendation, then the remaining members of the league agree to join in the forcible defense of the member thus prematurely attacked.

Principle In His Treaties.

"First.—The first feature involves the principle of the general arbitration treaties with England and France, to which England and France agreed, and which I submitted to the senate, and which the senate rejected or so mutilated as to destroy their vital principle. I think it is of the utmost importance that it should be embraced in any effective league of peace. The successful operation of the supreme court as a tribunal between independent states in deciding justiciable questions not in the control of congress, or under the legislative regulation of either state, furnishes a precedent and justification for this that I hope I have made clear. Moreover, the inveterate practice of arbitration which has now grown to be an established custom for the disposition of controversial questions between Canada and the United States is another confirmation of the practical character of such a court.

"Second.—We must recognize, however, that the questions within the jurisdiction of such a court would certainly not include all the questions that might lead to war, and therefore we should provide some other instrumentality for helping the solution of those questions which are nonjusticiable. This might be a commission of conciliation, a commission to investigate the facts, to consider the arguments on both sides, to mediate between the parties, to see if some compromise cannot be effected and finally to formulate and recommend a settlement. This may involve time, but the delay, instead of being an objection, is really one of the valuable incidents providing for the performance of such a function by a commission. We have an example of such a commission of conciliation in the controversy between the United States and Great Britain over the seal fisheries. The case on its merits as a judicial question was decided against the United States, but the world importance of not destroying the Pribilof seal herd by pelagic sealing was recognized, and a compromise was formulated by the arbitral tribunal, which was ultimately embodied in a treaty between England, Russia, Japan and the United States. Similar recommendations were made by the court of arbitration which considered the issues arising between the United States and Great Britain in respect to the Newfoundland fisheries.

Would Have Conferences.

"Third.—Periodical conferences should be held between the members of the league for the declaration of principles of international law. This is really a provision for something in the nature of legislative action by the nations concerned in respect to international law. The principles of international law are based upon custom between nations established by actual practice, by their recognition in treaties and by the consensus of great law writers. Undoubtedly the function of an arbitral court established as proposed in the first of the above suggestions would lead to a good deal of valuable judge made international law. But that would not cover the whole field, and something in the nature of legislation on the subject would be a valuable supplement to existing international law. It would be one of the very admirable results of such a league of peace that the scope of international law could be enlarged in this way. Justice Holmes, in the case of Missouri versus Illinois, points out that the supreme court in passing on questions between the states and in laying down the principles of international law that ought to govern in controversies between them should not and cannot make itself a legislature. But in a league of peace there is no limit to the power of international conferences of the members in such a quasi-legislative course except the limit of the wise and the practical.

Benefit to America.

"Fourth.—The fourth suggestion is one that brings in the idea of force. In the league proposed all members are to agree that if any one member violates its obligation and begins war against any other member without submitting its cause for war to the arbitral court, if it is a justiciable question, or to the commission of conciliation if it is otherwise, all the members of the league should unite to defend the member attacked against a war waged in breach of plighted faith. It is to be observed that this does not involve the members of the league in an obligation to enforce the judgment of the court or the recommendation of the commission of conciliation. It only furnishes the instrumentality of force to prevent attack without submission. It is believed it is more practical than to attempt to enforce judgments after the hearing.

"One reason is that the failure to submit to one of the two tribunals the threatening cause of war for the consideration of one or the other is a fact easily ascertained and concerning which there can be no dispute, and it is a palpable violation of the obligation of the member. It is wiser not to attempt too much. The required submission and the delay incident thereto will in most cases lead to acquiescence in the judgment of the court or in the recommendation of the commission of conciliation. The threat of force against plainly unjust war, for that is what is involved in the provision, will have a most salutary deterrent effect. I am aware that membership in this league would involve on the part of the United States an obligation to take part in European and Asiatic wars, it may be, and that in this respect it would be a departure from the traditional policy of the United States in avoiding entangling alliances with European or Asiatic countries. But I conceive that the interest of the United States in the close relations it has of a business and social character with the other countries of the world, much closer now than ever before, would justify it if such a league could be formed, in running the risk that there might be of such a war in making more probable the securing of the inestimable boon of peace of the world that now seems so far away."

Two Ben Greet Players

THE famous Ben Greet Players will appear at Chautauqua and render, as they only can, that rollicking piece of Shakespearean humor "Much Ado About Nothing." This company was organized and coached by Ben Greet himself, who bears the distinction of being the greatest living authority on Shakespeare. There are fifteen people in the company, all artists, and their acting is an exact reproduction of the art of the time of Shakespeare, when the lines were relied upon for effects rather than mechanical contrivances. It is a great company.

VISITS LABYRINTH AND SEES BATTLE

Correspondent Describes War Among Trenches.

WATCHES VILLAGE BLOWN UP

Eyewitness Tells of Thrilling Scenes In Great Fight North of Arras—Destruction by Artillery and Mines, a Bayonet Charge, Aeroplanes Soaring Through Rain of Shrapnel.

What the fighting is like in the labyrinth, that vast amazing stretch of almost intermingling trenches around Arras in northern France, the scene of one of the fiercest series of battles in the history of the world, is thrillingly described by Wythe Williams in a dispatch to the New York Times.

I cannot minutely describe the conflict. No one can do that at this stage, says the correspondent.

In many places in this giant battlefield it was impossible for me to say where were the Germans and where the French, so completely was I turned around on account of the constant zigzag of the trench lines. Sometimes when I thought I was safely going in the direction of the French I was hauled back by officers, who told me I was heading into the German line.

I sometimes felt that the German lines were on three sides, and often I was quite correct. On the other hand, the French lines often almost completely surrounded the German.

In Midst of Battle.

One could not tell from the nearness of the artillery fire whether it was from friend or foe. I finally determined that when a battery fired fast it was French, for the German fire is becoming more intermittent every day.

Late one afternoon, coming out of a trench into a green meadow, I suddenly found myself planted against a mud bank made of dirt taken from the trenches. We were just at the crest of a hill. In khaki clothes I was of the same color as the mud bank, so an officer told me I was in a fairly safe position.

We flattened ourselves casually against our mud bank, carefully adjusted our glasses, turned them toward the valley before us, whence came the sound of exploding shells, and calmly watched a village developing into nothingness in the sunset.

There was a loud explosion, a roll of dense black smoke, which was penetrated quickly enough by the long, horizontal rays of the descending sun to permit the sight of tumbling roofs and crumbling walls. After a few seconds' intermission there was another explosion, and what looked like a public school in the main street sagged, suddenly into a jagged pile of stones.

Sees Church Take Fire.

We turned our glasses on the other end of the village. A column of black smoke was rising where the church had caught fire.

"Where are the German trenches?" I asked the major, my guide.

"I'll show you," he [illegible] ordered a soldier to [illegible] to a "seventy-five" battery at our rear.

The soldier disappeared. "Watch!" said the officer.

There were two sharp explosions behind us, two puffs of smoke out on the horizon before us, about a mile away.

"That's where they are," the officer said. "Both shells went right in them."

Away to the right of the village, now reduced to ruins, was Neuville-St. Vaast, still occupied by both French and Germans, the former slowly retaking it, house by house. We were about half a mile away. We could see little, for in this business of house to house occupation most of the fighting is in the cellars.

Suddenly I heard a tremendous explosion and saw a great mass of masonry and debris of all descriptions flying high in the air. I knew just what had happened. The French had exploded a mine. Much of the debris I saw flying through space had been German soldiers a few seconds before.

Hears Yell of Victory.

Before the smoke died away we heard a savage yell. That was the French cry of victory. Then we heard a rapid cracking of rifles—the sign that the French had advanced across the space between the houses to finish the work their mine had left undone.

A cry from a soldier warned us of a German aeroplane overhead. A French aeroplane appeared, and the German made off. They usually do, as the majority of German aeronauts carry only rifles; the French now all have mitrailleuses. A fight between them is unequal, and the inequality is not easily overcome, for the German machines are too light for mitrailleuses.

Four French machines were now circling above, and the German batteries opened fire on them. It was a beautiful sight. We could not hear the shells explode, but we could see little feathery white clouds suddenly appear as if some giant invisible hand had just put them there, high up in the sky. Another appeared and another. There were several dozen little white clouds vividly outlined against the blue before the French machines, all untouched, turned back toward their own lines.

Man, if you are anything, walk alone and talk to others. Do not hide yourself in the chorus.—Epictetus.

WAR WIPES OUT BRITAIN'S ENTIRE PEACE ARMY.

The total of British casualties from the beginning of the war to May 31 was 258,069 men, Premier Asquith told the commons.

The list he gave was:

	Killed.	Wounded.	Missing.
Officers	3,327	6,498	1,130
Other ranks	47,015	147,482	52,617
Total	50,342	153,980	53,747

Losses in the naval division and in the various small wars in Africa and the near east are not included.

In the first six months the British losses were 104,000. In the next four months they were 154,000.

In the last two months they have averaged about 2,000 men a day.

The army Great Britain just sent to the front numbered 570,000 men.

The entire British army at the opening of the war numbered 282,000 men. It is believed that few of these men are now left.

The total number of men sanctioned so far by parliament for the war is 3,000,000.

The naval losses due to foe are given as 8,000 officers and men.

BURR'S SELF CONTROL.

An Incident That Proved His Perfect Command of His Feelings.

Aaron Burr was by nature and training a man of extraordinary self control. He allowed no circumstances to throw him off his balance.

An anecdote told by Rufus Choate to Richard H. Dana, recorded in Mr. Dana's "Diary," illustrates the callousness which aided Burr so greatly in controlling himself.

Several years after the death of Alexander Hamilton, killed by Burr in a duel, Burr visited Boston, and Mr. Devereux of Salem paid him some attentions. The visitor was taken to the Boston Atheneum, where, while the two men were walking through the gallery of sculpture, Mr. Devereux happened to catch sight of a bust of Hamilton.

The thought flashed across Mr. Devereaux's mind that Burr might not care to be confronted with the sight of the features of the man he had slain. But no. Burr was undisturbed. He also espied the bust, and, although Mr. Devereux had instinctively turned away, he walked up to it and said in a loud tone.

"Ah, here is Hamilton!"

Then, passing his fingers along certain lines of the face, he added, "There was the poetry!"

Hamilton's contemporaries gave him credit for possessing a poetic mind.

QUEER LEGAL FICTION.

It Makes Stepney, In London, the Parish of Every British Seaman.

Every sailor, from the admiral to the newest joined seaman, on board British warships is regarded as belonging to the parish of Stepney, in London. It doesn't matter in the slightest where the ship is, the sailors who man it all come from the same parish—Stepney.

This queer legal fiction dates back to the time of Charles II. In those days every workingman had to live in the parish where he was born and he could not leave it without finding two responsible sureties to vouch for his honesty.

This, of course, became rather puzzling in the case of people born at sea, for they had no parish. To get over the difficulty the authorities stated that all born at sea would be regarded as being born in the parish of Stepney, though why they should choose that parish and no other is lost in the dust of official records.

To this day the bishop of Stepney is godfather of all children born at sea, while all marriages solemnized on the ocean are recorded as though they had taken place in Stepney.—London Answers.

A Remarkable Dinner Service.

The remarkable dinner service made by Josiah Wedgwood for the Russian empress, Catherine II., in 1774 consists of 952 pieces, and on each piece is painted a different view. The body is of a pale brimstone color, and the views are painted in a rich mulberry purple. As the service was intended to be used at the palace of La Grenouilliere (meaning marshy place full of frogs), each piece also bears a green frog within a shield on the rim. The views represent British ruined castles, abbeys, parks, bridges, towers, etc. Several pieces are decorated with views of Hampstead, and there are custard cups with views of Richmond and sauce boats with the scenery of Windsor park. In many cases the views are the only pictorial records left of the old buildings. Altogether there are 1,282 views painted on the 952 pieces.

How to Treat a Rifle Wound.

In the case of a wound from a rifle bullet don't go probing for the bullet, but remove from the surface of the wound all shreds of clothing and other matter which the bullet may have carried into the flesh. This must be removed very thoroughly, and a sterilized knife or scissors should be used freely to open the wound and get it clean. When this is done treat the wound with your iodine or bichloride solution. Then dress it with gauze and bandage.

In the case of wounds from small shot the wound should be washed with a solution of alum, and then pieces of gauze or clean cloth wrung out of hot water should be applied every couple of hours.—Outing.

When Words Fail.

"What is meant by 'Comment is useless,' father?" asked little Rollo, the boy cross examiner.

"It means, son, that you can't think of anything else to say."—Philadelphia Ledger.

GIRL IS HAILED AS NEW JOAN OF ARC

Young Italian Peasant Beauty Leads Bersaglieri.

KING VICTOR DECORATES HER

Maria Abbriani Guides Soldiers Up Mountain on Tyrolean Frontier and After Days of Heroism Shares In Bayonet Charge, Which Results In Austrians Being Driven Back.

Maria Abbriani, a dark eyed Italian beauty from a mountain village along the Tyrolean frontier, is the "Joan of Arc" of the Austro-Italian war.

King Victor Emmanuel has awarded her a decoration for her bravery in leading a bersaglieri company in a bayonet attack on the Trentino village of Nori under heavy artillery fire.

With the decoration went a personal telegram of congratulation from the king at his headquarters at the battle front.

The war office at Rome at the same time made public an official dispatch detailing the girl's heroic acts.

Maria lived with her father, an aged Italian, in the Trentino village under Austrian rule. With other Italian residents, she ran out, says the dispatch, to welcome the king's troops when they entered Nori from the south.

Austrians batteries opened fire on the Italians at the outskirts of the village. Maria hurried to the Italian commander, begged permission to be allowed to carry a gun and show the way to reach where the Austrians were hidden.

Her request was granted and one of the soldiers gave her a plumed bersaglieri hat.

For eight hours she was in the thick of the fighting, piloting Italian troops through the streets of the village and up the mountain paths to flank attacks upon the Austrian trenches.

In the final attack, she actually led a squad of bersaglieri in a bayonet charge that swept the Austrians out of the village.

A full bersaglieri uniform was given to the girl as a souvenir of the victory and her bravery.

GREATEST WHEAT CROP EVER

Federal Report Indicates That Yield May Reach Billion Bushels.

The greatest wheat crop the country ever has known is in prospect for the coming harvest. The federal crop reporting board forecasts the crop at 950,000,000 bushels, which would exceed last year's record crop by 59,000,000 bushels. With continued good weather the crop may reach a billion bushels.

The bulk is winter wheat, planted last fall on the greatest acreage ever sown.

Oats planted last spring, also on the greatest area ever sown to that crop, exceeding last year's area by almost 2,000,000 acres, is forecasted at 1,288,000,000 bushels, which is more than last year or in 1913, but 130,000,000 bushels less than the record in 1912.

The barley crop, from present indications, will be second in point of size, with 197,000,000 bushels, which would be 26,000,000 bushels less than the 1912 record crop, but more than grown last year or in 1913.

TWO CROSSES FOR CANADIAN

Warneford, Who Wrecked Zeppelin, Gets Honor Legion as Well as V. C.

The young Canadian aviator, Sub-Lieutenant R. K. J. Warneford, who destroyed a German Zeppelin in a thrilling duel in the air near Ghent, is the first man to receive the highest honors for heroism at the hands of both the British and French.

King George V. bestowed on him the Victoria cross. On the recommendation of General Joffre, President Poincaire has conferred on him the cross of the Legion of Honor.

For Memorial to Miss Barton.

A movement has been started by the Legion of Loyal Women for a memorial to the late Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American National Red Cross, to be erected in Washington.

A Definition.

Knicker—What is a smile?

Bocker—The shortest distance between two ears.—New York Sun.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo - - 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland - - 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland - - 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo - - - 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

[illegible]

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

FOR THIS WEEK

The Biggest Bicycle Sale

Ever held in this City. Standard Wheels, ranging in price from $20.00 to $40.00 on Sale

From $15.00 to $30.00

not Mail-Order Bargains, but Real Values, backed by Our Guarantee and Our Service.

TIRES and SUPPLIES
at Big Reductions

DON'T FAIL TO INSPECT THESE BARGAINS

BOGUE

"The Bicycle Garage" 61 First Street

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Chicago.
New York at Cincinnati.
Brooklyn at St. Louis.
Philadelphia at Pittsburgh.

Results Yesterday

Philadelphia, 4; Pittsburgh, 1; 11 in.
New York, 5; Cincinnati, 5; 11 ins.
Brooklyn, 2; St. Louis, 1.
Boston-Chicago; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Philadelphia	27	20	.574
Chicago	26	20	.565
St. Louis	26	26	.500
Brooklyn	24	24	.500
Boston	23	23	.500
Pittsburgh	22	24	.478
Cincinnati	19	24	.442
New York	18	24	.429

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Cleveland at Boston.
Detroit at Philadelphia.
St. Louis at New York.
Chicago at Washington.

Results Yesterday

New York, 12; St. Louis, 7; 1st.
New York, 5; St. Louis, 4; 2d.
Chicago, 8; Washington, 2.
Boston, 4; Cleveland, 1.
Detroit, 2; Philadelphia, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	32	19	.627
Detroit	32	21	.604
Boston	25	18	.581
New York	24	23	.511
Washington	22	22	.500
Cleveland	20	27	.426
St. Louis	19	31	.380
Philadelphia	18	31	.367

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Kansas City at Baltimore.
St. Louis at Newark.
Chicago at Buffalo.
Pittsburgh at Brooklyn.

Results Yesterday

No games scheduled.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	31	21	.596
St. Louis	25	21	.543
Brooklyn	27	23	.540
Pittsburgh	25	22	.532
Newark	26	23	.531
Chicago	26	25	.510
Baltimore	19	29	.396
Buffalo	19	34	.358

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Syracuse at Albany.
Scranton at Elmira.
Wilkesbarre at Binghamton.
Utica at Troy.

Results Yesterday

Albany, 9; Syracuse, 3.
Troy, 6; Utica, 0.
Elmira, 5; Scranton, 2.
Binghamton, 7; Wilkesbarre, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	20	13	.606
Elmira	21	15	.583
Troy	17	15	.531
Binghamton	17	15	.531
Scranton	16	16	.500
Wilkesbarre	17	18	.486
Albany	14	20	.412
Syracuse	12	22	.353

SPEEDERS HAD THEIR OWN WAY LAST NIGHT

The police motorcycle was not in operation in the down-town section last night, for there were several flagrant violations of the traffic laws which passed unnoticed by any policeman. A large Franklin touring car, occupied by one man, made several tours of the business section about 8 o'clock, and persons in the vicinity of the City Hall remarked at the high speed of the car. The man drove through the torn-up section of 1st st. at a speed which approached 30 miles an hour at times, and maintained this speed past the police station.

About this time, another car driven by a local doctor came up 1st st. on the left hand side of the street at a 25 mile an hour gait and switched to the right side of the road at Rochester st. This violation also escaped the notice of the blue-coats.

LEE MEMORIAL HOSPITAL GETS SOME DONATIONS

The hospital gratefully acknowledges the following donations for May, 1915:

Mrs. McKinstry, 6 cans fruit, 3 cans conserve; Mrs. Jesse Morrill, 12 cans fruit; Miss Miller magazines; John F. Brown, alarm clock; Mrs. Rowlee, magazines; a Friend, basket of apples; Mrs. C. Anderson, Mrs. Chas. Hall, Mrs. E. McCully, Miss Lourie, Miss Farrell, Mrs. Giles Piper, basket of groceries; Women's Auxiliary, 6 plants, filling of flower boxes, ice cream freezer, couch hammock, 1½ dozen bedspreads, bolt of sheeting, 9 curtains.

Received for visiting nurse fund for May, 1915:

Mrs. Doane, $1.00; Mrs. Adlebert Tucker, $1.00; Mrs. John Campbell, $1.20.

Sarah E. True, Treas.

You can get Black's baked products at the right hour for meals. They are at your grocer's, fresh every afternoon. adv.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Rochester at Toronto.
Buffalo at Montreal.
Newark at Providence.
Richmond at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Jersey City, 5; Richmond, 2.
Newark, 9; Providence, 7.
Rochester, 5; Toronto, 4.
Buffalo, 17; Montreal, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	22	13	.629
Providence	22	17	.564
Rochester	20	19	.513
Richmond	20	20	.500
Montreal	21	21	.500
Newark	18	20	.474
Toronto	19	22	.463
Jersey City	15	25	.375

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

	R.	H.	E.
At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
Milwaukee	3	8	2
Indianapolis	2	6	2
At Cleveland—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	5	9	1
Cleveland	3	7	3
At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	2	9	1
Columbus	3	5	0
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	2	7	1
Louisville	3	8	1

RICH BABY NEEDS LARGER INCOME

$20,000 a Year Not Enough, His Mother Asks for More—Fortune is $3,000,000

New York.—The report of Mrs. Madeleine Talmadge Force Astor as general guardian of her three-year-old child, John Jacob, the posthumous son of Colonel John Jacob Astor, shows that $64,009 has been expended in the child's interest since his birth, Aug. 14, 1912, and that the mother does not consider $20,000 a year allowed by the court sufficient for his proper maintenance.

Of the $60,000 permitted to be taken from the infant's estate during the three year period, soon to expire, $40,000 had been paid over by the trustees

Photo © by American Press Association.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

prior to Dec. 31 last. It was on this date that the accounts in the report were closed. The balance expended has come from Mrs. Astor's private purse.

She does not ask that the deficit be refunded to her, but she leaves a way open for such request to be made in the future and also for the filing of a petition asking for a larger maintenance income.

Prophetic of such a demand, Mrs. Astor calls attention to a provision in the will of Colonel Astor, who met death when the Titanic sank, by which a $3,000,000 trust fund was set aside for their child. The interest from this amounts to $140,000 a year. Regarding this income, she says, it is plain that her husband intended the child to enjoy every comfort money could buy.

"The necessary expenditures since the birth of the infant to Dec. 31, 1914," she reports, "for professional services rendered the said infant by physicians and lawyers, and for my bond as general guardian, all paid by me, have been upward of $8,000.

"From an examination of the accounts of various merchants and others with whom I have dealt, I find that there has been expended for clothing, supplies, toys, etc., for the use of said infant since the date of his birth to Dec. 31, 1914, and paid by me, a sum upward of $5,000.

"I have not charged the infant with any portion of the rent paid by me for my summer home at Bar Harbor, Me., or of the cost of various trips on which he has accompanied me; or of the cost of the upkeep of automobiles maintained by me, from all of which he has received substantial benefit, and with a reasonable portion of which expense, as I am advised by my counsel, Hon. Henry A. Gildersleeve, the said infant might properly be charged.

"From this it would seem that the expenditures I have incurred for the benefit of my said infant are far in excess of the moneys received by me.

"By the provision made in the will of my late husband for the creation of a trust fund of $3,000,000 for the benefit of each child of mine that might survive him it clearly appears that it was his intention to provide a sum for the maintenance and support of such infant ample to secure everything for the comfort, welfare and education of such child that money could provide."

Mrs. Astor then incorporates section 8 of Colonel Astor's will, in which the trust funds are created, and continues:

"I am informed by the trustees of the trust created for the benefit of said infant, John Jacob Astor, under the above quoted provision of the eighth clause of the will of my late husband, and verily believe that the annual net income from said trust amounts to the sum of $140,000."

Solving the Mystery.

"What do you make of his name?" asked the police chief.

"Well," responded the detective, "from the spelling, I should judge that he's either a parlor car or a Russian dancer."—Philadelphia Ledger.

BRINGING HOME THE FISH.

—Rehse in New York World.

ROBBERS GOT AWAY WITH HOWARD'S SUNDAY DINNER

Robberies are not uncommon in the direction of peaceful Mt. Pleasant, the latest one to occur was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howard who live a short distance northeast of Mt. Pleasant.

Last Sunday the Howard family went to church secure in the belief that all would be well at home during their absence. Before leaving home Mrs. Howard had prepared one of her toothsome Sunday dinners, from chicken to ice cream. At the conclusion of church services the Howards were prepared to attack that Sunday dinner, but when the farmhouse was reached vacuum took the place of food, and continued observation told the family that from garret to cellar the house had received the most careful raking that a man or men could give. Old relics were missing, articles that were reverenced by the family and 50 cents in real live money too had disappeared along with many old coins. Clothing also was removed from drawers and closets, and jellies, jams and conserves were added to the Sunday feast and eaten by the marauders who made good their escape prior to the arrival of the Howards.

Officers were brought from Phoenix Monday and together with Deputy Sheriff Frank Wright have been working to run down two men who are suspected of knowing a "leetle" about the disappearance of the Howard property, as well as one or two other jobs in the vicinity.

VETS GIVEN A REAL ELKS TREAT LAST NIGHT

Schenck Post, G. A. R., was the guest of the Fulton Lodge of Elks last night at the Elks' Home. Some twenty members of the post marched to the home at 8 o'clock and the exercises were held on the veranda. The Elks' band occupied seats at one end of the veranda and the veterans and Elks with the speaker of the evening were seated at the other end.

After some selections by the band, William S. Hillick of the Elks, introduced the speaker of the evening, William Rubin of Syracuse. Mr. Rubins' address was in the nature of a resume of the work done by the Grand Army and of the debt which posterity owes to those men.

The band entertained until late in the evening and the members of the Post were given an appetizing lunch, and enjoyed all the privileges of the club house.

THOUGHT OLD MATTRESS WAS DROWNED PERSON

Policemen Boland and Smith answeder a hurry call this morning, sent in by a farmer who noticed a pile of clohting under the lower dam. The man though the clothes contained a human body and the police came on the run.

Investigation disclosed an old mattress wrapped in bed-quilts, although from a distance the pile of bedclothes assumed the form of a woman's dress. The police returned to the station house out of breath but satisfied.

LOCAL O. E. S. LODGE ENTERTAINED OSWEGO

Seventy members of Oswego Lodge, Order of the Eastern Star, were the guests of the Fulton lodge at a reception and banquet given in the local lodge rooms last night. The guests of honor were two officers of the Grand Lodge, Lecturer Latham of Phoenix, and District Deputy Johnson of Oswego.

The banquet was served in the diningroom of the lodge, where four tables were laid. The tables were decorated with syringa and American flags in honor of Flag day, and each guest was given a small silk flag as a favor. As the company came into the diningroom, "America" was sung, and the spectacle was most beautiful and edifying. The banquet was an elaborate affair served under the direction of Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. Hobbie and Mrs. Rappole, assisted by the Misses Ruth Rogers, Florence Stephens, Osia Rumsey and Mesdames Morgan, Bailey, Adams, Druse, Richardson, Beadle and Huff.

During the evening Miss Osia Rumsey entertained the assembly with harp selections, rendered in an excellent manner and the lecturer and district deputy gave short talks concerning lodge work and the possibilities evident in this city. The Oswego delegation made the trip by private car.

DAMAGED CAR HUSTLED HOME TO ONEIDA

The Ford car which was damaged in the accident north of this city Sunday afternoon, left this city under its own power yesterday, driven by a negro chauffeur. The car had been stored in the VanWagenen garage, awaiting repairs.

The young man who drove the machine when it turned turtle, throwing the two young women and two young men out, did not appear yesterday. He refused to divulge his identity Sunday, but it was learned that the owner of the car lives in Oneida. Although the steering gear was broken, and the top, fenders and radiator suffered badly when the car turned over, the engine hummed merrily yesterday as the car took to the road.

CLERK BEAT FIRE WITH BARE HANDS

A fire among some loose paper and infammable merchandise under a counter, almost caused a panic in the Shipman store yesterday noon. The flames were discovered by one of the clerks who cried for help and then attempted to beat out the flames with her bare hands. Mr. Shipman extinguished the flames with chemicals before any great damage was done. The loss will total $25.

Naturally.

Visitor—What was the matter with the man they just brought in? Doctor—Stuck his head through a pane of glass. Visitor—How did he look? Doctor—His face wore an injured expression.

Those Dear Girls.

Miss Oldup—I'd just like to see any man kiss me. Miss Young—What a hopeless ambition!—Boston Transcript.

Suffers Greatly in Commercial Way Since Beginning of War.

Washington.—The war to date has cost France more than $1,143,000,000 of her foreign trade, according to figures sent to the department of commerce by United States Consul General A. M. Thackara at Paris.

Of this vast amount over $800,000,000 was sacrificed in the first four months of the conflict, up to Jan. 1, 1915. In that period the republic also was deprived of 900,000 tons of wheat grown on her own soil and seized by the German armies occupying her northern provinces. There was, too, a decrease in that time of 6,162 in the number of ships arriving at and 5,196 in the number of ships departing from French ports.

In the first three months of 1915 the loss in France's foreign trade was nearly $344,000,000, being $411,200,000 as against $755,000,000 in the same period in 1914.

The imports since the first of this year have been $286,000,000 as against $442,300,000 and the exports have been $125,100,000 as compared with $312,600,000.

The imports of foods fell off $3,500,000, those of industrial materials $160,000,000, while those of manufactures, mostly war munitions, increased over $7,000,000.

The exports of food products decreased nearly $7,000,000, those of industrial materials over $64,000,000 and manufactures $96,000,000.

The imports into France in 1914 totaled $1,225,397,000 as against $1,625,317,000 in 1913, and the exports from France in 1914 were $931,131,000 as compared with $1,327,882,000 in 1913, a decrease of $396,751,000.

The crushing extent of the blow dealt by the war is shown by the fact that in the first six months of 1914, before hostilities, France's foreign trade increased $33,391,000.

The tendency of the war toward economic exhaustion is indicated by the fact that the decrease in imports and exports was almost entirely in material for the industries and in manufactures.

The United Kingdom suffered less than any other nation by reason of the decrease in French trade, and the United States came next. The Belgian trade was almost entirely destroyed through the occupancy of that kingdom by the German armies. The shipments from Belgium to France in 1914, before the war, were valued at $60,405,000, while the shipments after the war began, up to Jan. 1, 1915, were only $[illegible]77,000.

HE WANTS AN INDIAN WIFE.

Requires Not Beauty or Grace, Only Means.

Pendleton, Ore.—The following is taken from the East Oregonian:

"Wanted—An Indian girl with means by a young man with forty acres of land."

If there is a daughter of the Cayuses, the Umatillas or Walla Wallas on the reservation who is tired of the wigwam of her father and who would like to pass up the young braves who are angling for her hand and land and ally herself for life with a paleface she need wait no longer. The opportunity is here being tendered her.

William Hadenfeldt of Rupert, Ida., is looking for her. In fact, he is so bent on his desires that he has enlisted the aid of the paper in discovering her. In the local column will be found his ad. He gives his age, weight, height and grade, also his landed wealth. He does not show himself to be a particular man. He requires not beauty or grace in the girl he wants. His only specification is that she must have means.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 152 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, 1915 | Price One Cent

Rome and All Italy Prepares for Rush of the Teutonic Allies

Italian Troops Dynamite Alpine Passes to Halt Advances; Russians Crushed and Hurled Back West of Lemburg

Rome, June 16.—It is reported here that Germany is preparing to throw a great mass of troops along the Austro-Italian frontier. The fighting is growing harder daily for the Teutonic allies, and the Italians are making constant advances.

The Germans and Austrians will, it is expected, endeavor to regain the ground they have lost and to sweep over the Italian frontier, as they did in Poland, Belgium and France.

Confirming this report, a telegram received from Innsbruck, Austria, states that 25,000 Austrian soldiers left Trent yesterday and are now advancing against the Italians on the Riva-Roverto frontier.

Heavy fighting is reported from Gorz and Gradisca. It is said the Austrian casualties amounted to 1500, while the Italian killed and wounded numbered about the same. An ammunition depot at Tolmino has been destroyed by the Italians.

The Austrians are using dynamite in the Alpine passes, loosening great avalanches of the sharpshooters.

The following official statement was issued at the headquarters of the Italian general staff:

"The Austrians persistently attacked Montepiano last night, after an all day bombardment from forts Platz and Wiese, but were repulsed each time.

"Our artillery caused the explosion of ammunition depots towards Corte, in the Cortevole Valley, and seriously damaged the Austrian works at Cassassi.

"Our bombardment of Marlborgetto in Carnia resulted in an explosion in the lower part of the fortress.

"Further reports of the night attack of Italian Alpinists in the difficult region of the [illegible] of [illegible] give details of considerable booty taken there, besides a number of prisoners.

"Our batteries dispersed a camp of the Austrians in the region Monte Nero.

"All prisoners taken near Plava (in the Isonzo region) agree the Austrian losses up to this time have been serious. Most of prisoners belonged to regiments heretofore operating against Serbians.

"The Austrians tried yesterday to set the forest of Monfalcons e, but our troops drove them back and extinguished the flames."

Charges that the Austrian military authorities are fostering brig-age in districts to the rear of the advancing Italian army are tained in an additional opcial statement issued tonight at the r Office. The comunication follows:

"It is certain that Austria has left in territory actually occupied us emissaries who have been given orders to practice brigandage. n of the landstrum, gendarmes and forest guards are involved. turally they are disguised and provided with munitions. In adon they are paid $250 or more.

"These men have fired into the backs of our troops, at isolated diers and officers and provision convoys. Following provisionally acking columns, especially in wooded regions, which permit wait- in ambush without difficulty, these brigands even have fired at ctors while they were treating wounded, upon the wounded themves and upon ambulance staffs."

The Mayor the town of Grado, recently captured from the strians, issued a proclamation today declaring the loyalty of the ulation to King Victor Emmanuel. The reunion to Italy was ressively celebrated by the people.

The inhabitants, driven from their homes by the war, are now rning to the district captured by the Italians. In some places n names are being substituted in the streets for those bearing trian names.

ARDANELLES ATTACKS TO BE PUSHED WITH VIGOR

London, June 16.—Rumors of every color concerning the Dar-elles operations have been circulated in London recently ranging n circumstantial reports that the straits had been forced to others ally circumstantial that the operations would be abandoned. To le the question officially Mr. Asquith, the Premier, made the unlified statement that the straits had not been opened. The Pre- said it was not in the public interest to say anything now about Dardanelles.

"The operations are of the highest importance," he added, "and will be pushed to a successful conclusion."

The statement was made in response to a question by Sir James Dalziel, who voiced the rumor that the allied campaign had reach-

(Continued on Eighth Page)

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 3

Because It Encourages Merchants to Keep a Larger and Better Stock

Quick turn-over of his stock is financially advantageous to the merchant. The merchant who can sell out his entire stock eight times a year—very few can do so well—is obviously better off than the merchant who only turns over his stock twice a year. This is one of the great problems of the Retail Trades. It is a matter of importance to the buying public. The quicker the turn-over the better the selection, the fresher the goods, the newer the styles. Volume of business is, together with shrewd buying, the secret of quick turn-overs. We can trust our merchants to buy well and wisely—that is their business and their splendid stores and fine assortments tell of their success. We, however, can help ourselves to larger and better stocks to select from, if we add to the volume of their business by buying in Fulton.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Chamber of Commerce Credit Bureau to Protect Merchants; Promotes Business-Like Methods

The Retail Trade division of the Chamber of Commerce has just completed the installation of a Credit Bureau for the use of the members of the Chamber doing a mercantile or credit business. Each member in this class has been given a code number and has been asked to list and rate his credit customers. Already more than 1,000 names are on file and more are coming in daily. Members desiring information are required to give the name and code number in asking for information from the office. This insires the service to those for whom it was intended and prevents the abuse of the system.

This credit system is not in any way to be confused with a black list. The retail trade division has been insistent on this point. It has repeatedly asked merchants to send in their prompt customers as well as their slow-pay customers, because the members believe that justice demands that if a man be prompt he be rated as such.

This scheme has been used with marked success in Johnstown, Pa., and has been the means of not only protecting the merchants but in stimulating the people of the City to be more prompt and business-like in their methods of handling accounts.

Hunter Arms Plant Believed to Be Sold

It was rumored today in business circles that the Hunter Arms plant is to be sold at once, and that agents of prospective purchasers are expected in the city next week to inspect the plant. The company announced recently that the plant would open after a temporary suspension Monday next, June 21, but men who are in a position to know claim that the plant will not open then, at least under the present management.

When the Hunters resumed operations here after their financial difficulties there was a time when the plant was wanted by the Smith Gun Company, according to a reliable informant, but public sentiment was in favor of continuing the plant under the management of the Hunters. It is understood that the Smith Company is still willing to buy the plant, and inasmuch as the local company has thus far failed to land the big war order that was anticipated there is every reason to believe that the works will close down, at least under local management.

The company has not as yet, announced whether or not the plant will resume next Monday. Many expert gun makers have gone to Connecticut where the arms facorties are working on over time in an attempt to fill the ever-increasing flood of war orders.

MISS ELLEN MEHEGAN BRIDE OF GEORGE F. GILLARD

This morning at 8 o'clock at the Church of Immaculate Conception Miss Ellen Lucile Mehegan and George Frederick Gillard were united in marriage. Rev. J. L. Lindsman officiated.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a robe of white embroidered tulle with veil, and carried an arm bouquet of white bride's roses. Miss Mary Mehegan, a sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor and wore a frock of pink silk crepe and white pictuer hat, and carried pink tea roses.

Miss Florence Follen, youngest sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore corn colored silk crepe and carried yellow tea roses.

The Misses Rose and Teresa Mehegan were the flower girls. Both of the little ladies were dressed in simple white frocks and scattered roses from their baskets in the bride's path.

After the ceremony a pretty wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives of the bridal couple. Mr. and Mrs. Gillard left for a two weeks' trip in the Adirondacks.

WEATHER FORECAST

Probably showers tonight and Thursday; warmer tonight, with southwest winds.

Widening of Street Will Not Be Done Without Opposition

J. W. Stevenson Informed That East First Street Residents Nearly All Oppose Making the Street Three Feet Wider

The Board of Public Works held a meeting last night in its official capacity, and then convened as a paving board, with Commissioners F. C. Gage and George E. Mason, as well as the members of the Public Works Board present. During the meeting one of the liveliest as well as one of the most amusing discussions in some time held the attention of the many spectators who had appeared to watch the board at work.

Commissioner F. A. Gage and President Stevenson were the parties at odds, and the topic was the widening of the 1st st. roadway, between Rochester st. and Broadway. The question of widening the street by taking off three feet on the west side was discussed by the Board of Public Works some time ago and the action was approved. Last night Messrs. Gage and Mason appeared to protest against the action, and stated that almost every resident on the street was opposed to it. This took President Stevenson somewhat aback as he had anticipated no such decision on the part of the property owners along the street, and conscientiousl ybelieved that the street should be wider. He asked further evidence that the residents were opposed to the action, and Mr. Gage promised to show him.

President Stevenson stated, in any event, the street should be wider whether the few property owners along the street wanted it or not, as it was for the good of the city at large, and it would be a monumental mistake to pave the street now without taking the oporunity to widen it. Mr. Gage said it could be widened ten years from now if the city's growth justifies it, at the same expense that the work could be done now. Mr. Stevenson took exeception to that statement and said he was surprised that a business man like Mr. Gage should say an improvement could be made at the same cost and with the same result after the paving had been down some years.

"Look at 1st st. here in the business section," said Mr. Stevenso. "Look at the way the trolley company has torn up the street. Will it go back in line with the rest of the paving? No! That company gets a perpetual franchise here for nothing and now they tear up the streets."

"I didn't give it to them," interposed Mr. Gage.

"I'm not so sure of that," said Mr. Stevenson, "I think you had a hand in that deal."

Mr. Gage denied having anything to do with the trolley franchise. He admitted being connected with the Quirk faction at the time the franchise was given, but claimed he fought the free franchise. He further stated he had no interest in protesting against the widening of the roadway other than to save the city money.

Mr. Stevenson laughed outright when Mr. Gage made this remark, and said "You make me laugh when you talk about saving the city money."

"Why," asked Mr. Gage.

Mr. Stevenson replied that he did not wish to bring up any events which had transpired, but Mr. Gage said, "I don't know of anything I've done. This Chamber of Commerce was going to do something but they haven't done a thing yet."

City Attorney Fanning then read the resolution calling for the improvement in accordance with the plans and specifications drawn up by the State Highways department, which plans do not include the widening of the street. The Board will meet again next Monday night at which time action will be taken in the matter, and if the street is to be widened, a supplemental agreement will be made with the contractor.

According to a statement made by Mr. Stevenson, the city gave the property holders two feet of the street when it was macadamized some years ago, and the city has the right to take that amount now without consulting the property owners.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Wednesday, June 16, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Save the Sane Fourth

If the Fourth of July is not celebrated safely and wisely it will be likely to fall back into the orgy of noise and danger, fear and destruction, wounds and death, which it was when Cleveland did invaluable service to the country as a pioneer in Independence day reform. The only sure way to keep the nation's birthday safe and sensible is to make it a success as that kind of a holiday.

This takes money, not much in proportion to the results gained and the importance of the reform protected against reaction, but money, nevertheless. The municipal government is too hard pressed by many demands for its funds to devote even $5000 to the celebration of Independence day. It is for the citizens of Cleveland to contribute that sum.

Many donors may hope and expect to get back the money they give by the profits of the trade they encourage and the visitors they help draw to the city. Others can only charge their contributions to public service and the general welfare of the city which has been the source of their business success.

Every adequate celebration of the Fourth of July, wisely and safely carried out, means a better and more attractive city. It promotes good citizenship and helps to ward off grave ills. This year, of all years, Cleveland must not fail to do justice to the birthday of the American republic.—Cleveland Leader.

An Entering Wedge

Rev. Harry Westbrook Reed, speaking in All Souls' Universalist church, on Sunday baseball, gave the real reason why professional baseball, demanding gate money, should not be allowed. It simply comes to the point of commercializing Sunday. If men may work at playing baseball on Sunday for money, there is no reason why every other industry should not be kept at work on Sunday, and, unless Sunday is guarded against commercializing influences, that would be the final result. Sunday is the poor man's day and the poor man ought to be the first to guard it against the invasion of commercialism, or it will result in no one's having a day of rest. France passed through that. It had no Sunday. All the trades were as active on Sunday as any other day of the week; all the shops of Paris were open; the visitor to Paris could not distinguish Sunday from any working day. Then the workers, through their organizations, rose up and demanded a Sunday of rest and they secured it. It was the workers of Paris, not the rich or the idle, who demanded a Sunday and Sunday has ever since been kept in the gay capital by driving commercialism out of the day. No one nowadays believes in or keeps the old Puritanic Sunday. It is not only a day of worship, but a day of recreation and rest. No one denies the right of recreation and rest and there would be no objection raised if men who wanted to play baseball on Sunday, after the hours of church service, did so, as long they did not disturb the Sunday rest of others. It is only when it is made a business to be operated on Sunday that the objection is made. The commercializing of Sunday is dangerous to Sunday as a day of rest and right recreation. That is the objection to it. If it once became commercialized the workers themselves would be the first to demand a return to a day of rest just as did the workers of Paris some twenty years ago.—Watertown Times

A Medicine Chest for 25c

In this chest you have an excellent remedy for Toothache, Bruises, Sprains, Stiff Neck, Backache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism and for most emergencies. One 25c. bottle of Sloan's Liniment does it all—this because these ailments are symptoms, not diseases, and are caused by congestion and inflammation. If you doubt, ask those who use Sloan's Liniment, or better still, buy a 25c. bottle and prove it. All Druggists.

WHY NOT BOOST THE OFFICIAL?

In Superintendent Frank H. Rumsey this city has indeed an official conscientious in his ideals of what the city should be in appearance and what it should obtain for the amount of money expended for public work.

That Mr. Rumsey is doing his utmost with the means at hand to make the streets of the city look clean is obvious to the most critical person; that he is not unlike the average worker in a certain respect is natural. By this is meant that Mr. Rumsey likes to see credit placed where and when it is due, and blame attached whenever it is coming and wherever it is due. It is the opinion of The Evening Times that Mr. Rumsey gets all that is coming to him in the matter of blame when things on the streets are not just right, and very little indeed in the way of praise when his work is well done.

Last Sunday morning did not differ greatly from other Sunday mornings, in the appearance of at least three of the city's down-town streets. For a brief space of time the streets were very clean, because, quite early in the morning the genial Superintendent of Public Works ordered as usual the powerful street flusher to make the rounds. This work was done before the arrival of proprietors or attendants of retail stores, and the presence of the flusher and the absence of the offending men effected a pleasing and happy result in the appearance of the streets—but for a very brief time only, for upon the arrival of the proprietors, et al, of the stores there ensued numerous lively scrimmages with men and brooms on the one side and paper, dust and dirt on the other, and the flushed streets as the objective points for the refuse left after a Saturday night of trading.

The effect and the result were inevitable, as they went hand in hand. The streets that had been clean but a short time before were made to bear the brunt of the awful onslaught of more than one belligerent storekeeper, each one of the offenders apparently doing his utmost to make his own particular section of street bear a close resemblance to a recently vacated Sunday school or German singing society picnic ground.

It is said there is no excuse for the devil, he's old enough to know better, which is true in the matter under discussion. The city provides at certain street corners receptacles for the collection of refuse and no one could over-exert himself by gathering up the loose material and in making sure that the stuff reaches one of the big iron cans.

Superintendent Rumsey is doing good work, but like everything else of a public or private nature there must be co-operation; and surely the official is entitled to receive full measure of this commodity of municipal life.

LET REAPPORTIONMENT ALONE

It is an ill-advised proposal which is being made by some Republican delegates to the Constitutional Convention that there be a reapportionment of Senate and Assembly districts by that body. Nothing but a grab at partisan advantage lies in the scheme. No good could result to the State in having the convention make a new apportionment rather than the Legislature next year, as would be the natural course of events under the present constitution's policy. Much harm might result to the proposed new constitution.

President Root has announced a policy of non-partisanship in the proceedings of the convention. That is eminently desirable, but absolutely impossible of attainment if squabbling and bickering over political districts become the order of the day. This convention is—or at least ought to be—a body of some dignity, discussing matters of policy rather than details. It is hardly on the plane of duty of the convention to spend hours debating whether Livingston county shall be joined with Steuben rather than with Genesee and Wyoming, whether Richmond shall travel with Queens rather than with Rockland.

Such questions not only should be outside the duty of the convention on principle, but also on the score of practical, efficient work. This convention, if it is to be worth anything to the State, must produce a constitution better fitted to the State's needs than the present document, and must so commend it to the voters that it may be ratified by them next fall. The partisan and factional divisions and bitterness bound to result from the injection of a flagrant political issue into the convention's proceedings will not tend to make votes for the proposed new constitution.

Neither would the making of an apportionment now work out surely to the advantage of the Republican delegates who might obtain a victory for their plan, as they seem to think. It should not be forgotten by them that, thanks to a huge direct tax, the Republican party is not too popular with the voters at present. An attempt such as this to take advantage of the Republican majority in the convention for purely partisan, if not factional, purposes would be quite likely to overreach itself and so to endanger the proposed constitution.

This convention has yet to settle what kind of Legislature the state shall have under a new dispensation, how many members there shall be, whether New York City shall have its fair proportion of the membership according to its population or be limited unfairly, as it is now. These are weighty questions, properly within the scheme of the convention's work, and not matters of partisan political controversy. These are questions of the kind the delegates were elected to settle. They should devote their attention to such matters, follow the lead of President Root in endeavoring to keep politics out of the convention and let the reapportionment issue alone.—New York Tribune.

Hints For Housewives

American Housewives Can Mix Their Own Flour.

That the American housewife is herself quite capable of doing all the flour mixing desirable, is the commentary of Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Vroomas on the mooted mixed flour question. He says further that the American housewife could materially reduce the cost of living if she were to get the flour mixing habit.

"There are some thirty substitutes that can be mixed with wheat flour in making bread. Many of these are more nutritious than wheat flour; some of them are cheaper than wheat flour, and of these two or three at least are commercially obtainable almost anywhere.

"Potatoes, corn flour and rice (in certain sections) can be used with profit in mixture with wheat flour in making yeast bread. With wheat flour as dear as it is now, the careful housewife stands to effect quite a saving by using one of these products to eke out her wheat flour. Experiments have shown that the substitutes can be used successfully in the proportion of one part to three parts of wheat flour. At least three-fourths of the mixture must be good wheat flour.

"Potatoes have a certain advantage in this regard, since potato bread can be made without going to the trouble to get the commercial potato meal. Plain mashed potatoes, four parts of mashed potatoes to three parts of wheat flour, will serve the purpose quite well. If the dry potato meal or flake is used the ratio should be one part of potato to three parts of flour. Boiled rice can be used in much the same way as mashed potatoes, care being taken to allow for the water in the rice and to use about three times as much in bulk as would be used of the rice flour.

"In making potato bread the sponge should be used and just enough water to serve to mix the yeast with the potato, since the sponge becomes very soft after partial fermentation. The remainder of the flour is worked in afterward, care being taken to make an extra stiff dough, which should be raised till quite light. This bread is much moister than bread made of straight wheat flour.

"Corn flour, which should cost about two-thirds the price of wheat flour, may be mixed with wheat flour direct, one part of corn flour to three parts of wheat flour. Use the mixture just as though it were wheat flour, and mix it yourself.

"It should be remembered that the addition of starchy materials, such as potatoes, rice or cornstarch (which is sometimes used to adulterate wheat flour in baking), tends to make a loaf less rich in protein and hence less nutritious than the straight wheat flour. The addition of corn flour makes little if any change in the nutritive value of the bread, but makes it cheaper.

"There are other flour substitutes, such as soybean meal and pea flour, which serve to add greatly to the nutritive value of the loaf when mixed with wheat flour. These products unfortunately cannot be recommended in the present emergency, since they are not as yet common articles of commerce in this country.

"In this connection it should be said that a great saving could be effected if the housewife would emulate the professional baker and buy low grade wheat flours. There are flours on the market quite as good for home baking as the fancy patent flours, which cost in bulk from 25 to 40 per cent less than the fancy grades. Such are the so called 'second clear' and 'low grade' flours, which are graded lower than patents merely because they are darker, not because they are any less nutritious or less palatable. In fact, the darker color may be evidence that the flour is more nutritious than white flour.

"Boston brown bread may be mentioned as a good and very popular medium for the profitable use of flour substitutes. It is made of equal parts of corn meal, rye meal and graham flour and is a very nutritious bread.

"There are various ways of making over bread itself so as to effect a considerable saving. Thus stale bread, crusts, crumbs, etc., can be worked into palatable products such as bread pancakes, breadcrumb biscuit and breadcrumb cookies.

"The nub of the mixed flour question hangs on who does the mixing. If the housewife does the mixing she gets the saving entailed. If the baker or the wholesaler does it he is very apt to get the saving as additional profit."

To Make That French Twist.

A simple way to arrange the French twist is to gather up the hair that grows upon the crown of the head, as if one were to form an old fashioned roach, as displayed in the old time photographs. Pin this so it will be out of the way. Take the back hair and a bit above the ears and do in a French twist. With the topknot hair form a thick, wide roll from one side to the other. Anchor with a hair net. You will look a bit weird, but what matter? You will be in style, and think what glory that is. Though the freaks of fashion be absurd, to disregard them entirely is to drop behind. And then who knows? It may be comfortable to be frumpy, but it creates a positive dislike for the lady in the looking glass.

3 PRISONERS ESCAPE AT CONEY ISLAND

New York, June 16.—Samuel Schulman, charged with burglary; Israel Gorenstein, charged with picking pockets, and James McLaughlin, arrested for begging, escaped from the Coney Island police station today.

Waiting in a corridor to be called into court, they picked a lock, opened the door into the lieutenant's room, and dropped from a second story window.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Post Office June 16, 1915. Inquirers will please say advertised.

Men — Comstock, Frederick L.; Kimball, Master Fravor; Murphy, W. H.; Patter, Willard; Perton, Jessie; Romyn, D.; Warren, Guss.

Women—Baldwin, Miss Florence; Dodge, Mrs. Mable; Goldberg, Mrs. Jos.; Harvey, Mrs. Harriet; Phelps, Mrs. P. H.; Potter, Mrs. Lucy; Smith Mrs. Nina; Worden, Mrs. Levina.

Peter T. Conley, P.M.

Steer this way for the Insurance that spells peace of mind—our Automobile Accident and Liability Insurance.

The accident that generally occurs is the unavoidable one—but that does not stop the "hold up" suit that costs money to defend against—BUT our insurance protects you against property and personal damages and the company fights the case.

See us today for rates.

DAVID & MASON AGENCY
35 N. FIRST STREET

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

THEY LACE IN FRONT
To know them is to love them.
GOSSARD CORSETS
Sold and fitted at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
R. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4346
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

CHICHESTER S PILLS
DIAMOND BRAND

Beware of Counterfeits. Refuse all Substitutes.
LADIES!
Ask your Druggist for CHI-CHES-TER S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. TAKE NO OTHER. Buy of your Druggist and ask for CHI-CHES-TER S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for twenty-five years regarded as Best, Safest, Always Reliable.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS
TIME TRIED EVERYWHERE WORTH TESTED

Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh is a good leg wash for horses and cattle.

Your Shoes
Do They Need
Repairing?
This is the best and quickest shop.
Wilson & Dwyer
207 Cayuga St.

M. KATRIB
Cleaning, Pressing, Dyeing, Repairing. Ladies and Gents Tailor. All Work Guaranteed. Free Delivery
Phone 3353 21 1-2 So. Second st.

Up-to-Date Tailoring
in all its branches. Let me convince you by giving me a trial. The slogan
"TRADE AT HOME"
is good, but why not practice what you preach?
M. J. FELDMAN
Merchant Tailor
Over Whitaker and Bogardus
2d and Cayuga

HANNIBAL NEWS

Mrs. George Minor, Ithaca, spent last week with friends in town.

E. S. Cooper of Syracuse spent the first of last week visiting friends here.

Mrs. Fred Wiltsie, formerly of this place, has been taken to a Syracuse hospital to be treated for goitre.

Bimk Van Hoesen, a graduate of the Hannibal training class, will teach at North Hannibal the coming year.

V. J. Adamy spent the week-end with his parents, returning to Syracuse Monday, accompanied by his family and Miss Adamy, who has been spending the week in town.

Miss Gaynell Albing attended the State Sunday School at Auburn last week as a delegate from the Baptist church.

Helen Hann, has been quite ill the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Durbin are visiting friends in Auburn and vicinity.

Rufus Day and John Peters were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Day of Sodus last week.

Mrs. Fryphena Barlow is the guest of friends in Syracuse.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Barlow and family were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Barlow, Saturday and Sunday.

The pupils of Hannibal High school enjoyed a picnic at Fair Haven Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cox and family and Mrs. Harry Hewitt spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Bernham Moore at Rose Hill.

Mrs. Harvey Perkins and daughter, Mrs. R. A. Darrell of Newark, N. J., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Williiam Dickerson last Thursday.

Edward Hart was called to Hudson Falls Tuesday by the serious illness of his mother.

Mrs. Edward Taylor of Marcellus was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kent.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Rice and daughters, Frances and Elizabeth, expect to leave Friday for California where they will attend the Exposition.

Miss Elsie Farnham will be organist at Grace Presbyterian church, Oswego, for the summer.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church will be held in the church o'clock. Everybody welcome. Supper served from five to seven o'clock.

Hannibal Center school will close Wednesday. Teachers and pupils enjoyed a picnic last Friday.

A representative from the Home Economics Department of Cornell University will visit Hannibal under the auspices of the three Cornell reading clubs of the town. Meetings will be held in Grange hall on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, June 15. There will be food demonstrations and talks on subjects of interest to housekeepers. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Wade Gillis was quite seriously ill the past week.

The truthseekers class of the Baptist church will give a lawn social at the home of William Fowler Friday evening, June 18th.

Mrs. William Fowler and son Stanley were guests of Mrs. Wilfred Adamy Tuesday.

Misses Sadie and Mary Adamy and Mrs. V. J. Adamy of Syracuse were guests of Mrs. Edward Fairley, Thursday.

Allen Lockwood has returned from Cornell for the summer vacation.

The following program for commencement week has been arranged: Baccalaureate sermon, Rev. F. W. Dunning, at the Methodist church, Sunday, June 20, at 7:45 p.m. Singing by a union choir organised by R. A. Bradt and Mrs. Bessie Barnum, rehearsals are being directed by the Misses Farnham. Annual promotion exercises in Assembly hall at 8 p.m. Monday, June 21. A program is in charge of the teachers of the elementary grades. Commencement at the Presbyterian church, Tuesday, June 22, at 8 p.m. Rev. J. B. Stallwood of Oswego will deliver the address; Miss Elinor Babcock, valedictorian; Miss Marian Willsie, salutatorian. Alumni re-union and banquet in the Presbyterian church parlors, Wednesday at 8 p.m., Blanche Hall, '03, toastmistress; Belle Brackett, '02, is president of the Alumni Association, Sadie Adamy, '01, secretary. Officers elected by the class of 1916 are as follows: President, Helen Cole; vice president, Arthur Hall; secretary, Lucille Crockett; treasurer, Susie Spafford.

Regents examinations will keep teachers and pupils busy this week.

Miss Julya Hill is ill and unable to attend examinations Monday.

The Misses Sadie and Mary Adamy and Mrs. V. J. Adamy of Syracuse were guests of Misses Eva and Belle Brackett.

The contest supper was a success in every way. A good program was provided by Miss Sadie Adamy, leader of the winning side, and a fine supper by the losing side, Raymond Shutts, the leader of that side.

Mrs. John McFarland is recovering very slowly from the injuries received by her fall recently.

The Hannibal Center tent of Maccabees will hold a public ice cream festival Friday evening of this week.

Children's Day will be observed at Golden Sheaf Grange Saturday evening. Ice cream will be served free to children who take part; all others come. Ladies, please bring cake and plenty of it.

REDUCED FARES

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

Ontario Beach . $1.90
(Charlotte)

Round trip. Every Sunday and holiday. June 27 to Sept. 6, inclusive. Good going and returning same day.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

This Summer—let the Children play at the

New England or Long Island Coast

Few places have the charm for children—and grown-ups, too—as does the ocean and the seashore. The "swish" of the surf, the passing boats, the bathing, the sports—can you resist the call?

Through cars to New York and Boston, the gateways to Long Island and New England resorts.

LOW SUMMER EXCURSION FARES

For information about tickets, ime of trains and low excursion fares, and frequent 15-day excursions to Boston at one way fare plus $3 for round trip, consult local ticket agents.

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

MT. PLEASANT

A delighted crowd enjoyed the Children's day exercises last Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Williams reached home on Saturday and attended the services, but went to Utica on Monday to return with Mrs. Williams and daughter.

Edward Grant is convalescing from pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Grant, Miss Hazel Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kellar motored to Arthur Grant's at Bowens on Sunday.

A fence was struck by lightning on Sunday night near Charles Green's barn; the barn was saved.

The stork left a new son, named Amos at Howard True's last Sunday.

Aleze Lockwood and Dorothea Vant of Fulton were week-end guests at Richard Vant's.

The L. A. S. meet with Mrs. Arthur Lewis this week.

"Thieves laugh at the locksmith," is the new proverb around Hubbard Corners ince Sunday's robbery. But this not not the first of the thieving. It has been going on for years, but a long suffering public has rebelled this time. One neighbor of Henry Howard remarks that she always raised 50 extra chickens on purpose for these maranders as they always make her a visit each fall.

Mrs. Gertrude Vant continues in a critical condition with a trained nurse in attendance. Rheumatism is the cause of her intense suffering.

Mrs. Ernest Rowlee spent Monday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Brown, on Cayuga st. where Mrs. Sperry continues quite low.

Edward Darley was called home from Antwerp last week by the illness of his aunt, Elizabeth Durfey in Fulton. Mrs. Durfey died on Saturday and burial was made from the M. E. church on Monday. She was a sister of W. B. Howard.

Mrs. Milton Graves is no better.

Rural pupils are in Fulton this week taking regents examinations.

Miss Mable Grant spent the weekend in Fulton. She expects to leave ofr Michigan soon to take a course in summer school. She will stay with her cousin, Mrs. Lillian Bunn Denison.

Miss Pauline Hale was the guest of Miss Evelyn Rowlee on Tuesday.

VOLNEY CENTER

Children's Day exercises were held at the Bristol Hill church Sunday morning. Many persons attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bateman spent Sunday with Willard Bateman of Volney.

James Laws of Volney has sold his farm to A. Diamond. Mr. Laws will remain with Mr. Diamond for a time.

Miss Marie Davis of Syracuse has been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis, of Volney.

Miss Grace Johnston of Volney visited the Fulton High school last Friday.

Miss Beulah Barrett of Fulton has been spending a few days with Mrs. Cramer of Volney.

Mrs. Cramer of Volney spent Sunday in Syracuse.

Lucien Parker spent Saturday with the Cramer boys of Volney.

Mr. and Mrs. Bates and family spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. Seeley of Volney.

Henry Ives spent Sunday with Bert Ives.

Simon Gallagher has opened a barber shop in the Volney Center House.

Mr. Gallagher formerly ran a barber shop in Phoenix.

Hugh Jewett has returned from Wheeling, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson of Syracuse are spending a few days with Dr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson.

Irene Bateman spent a few days last week with her aunt, Mrs. Stanley Bateman.

Sprains relieved by thorough applications of Hanford's Balsam, well rubbed in.

Paint?

There are two good reasons for painting often-enough or even too-often. One, to look prosperous; two, to be so.

Nothing does one more credit or gives one more credit than paint, supplemented of course by what goes with it; and paint costs nothing.

True, the first cost is $5 or $6 a gallon put-on; but it saves more than that in the property; saves it from slow going-down—not always slow—it drops with a jump when water gets in on wood and iron.

Dry wood and iron cost nothing, kept dry by paint.

Better paint when it needs it. Paint never goes-down in the sense of being more profitable next year.

DEVOE

L. P. Smith Co. sells it.

REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA

IS COMING SOON

With the Finest Array of Talent to Date

FIRST DAY

THE WEATHERWAX QUARTET
In Two Splendid Concerts.

EDW. AMHERST OTT
In a Really Great Lecture.

SECOND DAY

THE AIDA QUARTET
And O. Pol Plancon With High Grade Musicale.

HON. FRANK J. CANNON
"On "The Mormon Kingdom."

THIRD DAY

THE MUSICAL BARNARDS
Debate on Woman Suffrage.

HELEN TODD
Vs. LUCY PRICE
A Spirited Contest.

THE BEN GREET PLAYERS
In Shakespearean Comedy.

FOURTH DAY

QUINTANO'S GREAT BAND
In Two Big Concerts.

HARRY BARNHART
The Community Songster.

FIFTH DAY

THE M'GRATH BROTHERS
Banjo Specialists de Luxe.

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY
Of Denver Juvenile Court Fame. A Great Character.

KATHARINE RIDGEWAY

SIXTH DAY

GILES BINGHAM CO.
In Gingery Programs.

J. S. KNOX
The Community Builder.

GRAND GALA NIGHT

CHRISTINE GILES
RALPH BINGHAM
The Best Ever.

BERNHARDS BAY

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Winn, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dickerson, Mrs. Clara Deline, L. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sylyea, Mr. and Mrs. William Whipple from Bernhards Bay Grange attended the Pomona Grange at Parish June 8.

Mrs. William Slayter, who is ill, has not improved.

Mrs. J. E. Peachin entertained Mrs. James Peachin, Miss Edith Potter, Miss Lois Potter, of Cleveland, also Mrs. Claud Peachin and two children of Utica, Thursday.

Mrs. O. S. Bronson entertained for a few days Mrs. Jane Hall.

Miss Flossie Coady, a guest of Mrs. James Peachin, returned to her home last Sunday.

Mrs. David Spoon and two children have returned to their home in Camden.

Mrs. Harry Myers, Mrs. Earl Dickerson, Mrs. J. S. Peachin, Miss Pearl Curtiss went to the homes of Mrs. Roswell Woolridge, also to Mrs. Wm. Slayter, who are ill, with flowers, gifts of Bernhards Bay Grange.

Mrs. E. Deline called on Mrs. R. Woolridge Saturday. Mrs. William Wood returned home with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Lord spent Sunday at the home of his brother, R. Lord, of West Monroe.

For galls use Hanford's Balsam.

PENNELLVILLE

Those who attended Pomona Grange at Parish from this place were Frank Butts, Mr. and Mrs. T. Washer, Mrs. George Garrison and Miss Edith Greeg.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Bishop, wife of Joseph Douglass, was held at the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Grange services at the grave. Burial in Pennellville cemetery.

The Ladies' Aid was well attended at the home of Mrs. Frank Riefenkugle, Thursday afternoon.

The Rev. Mr. F. C. Schorge has a new automobile.

Mrs. Ira Foster's Sunday school class held an apron sale and served iie cream and cake at the church parlor Friday evening. The receipts of the evening were $22.50, to be applied on the minister's salary.

The three-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dieffendorf died Thursday. Funeral was held from the home Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson of Syracuse spent the week-end with their brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Nelson.

The M. E. Sunday school held Children's day Sunday evening.

Mrs. Emma Pickard expects to spend the coming week with friends in Phoenix.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Ford Fire Protection.

Paints and enameling liquids, due to their composition, are, of course, extremely combustible, and were a fire to start in one of the large paint vats of the Ford plant it would be very difficult to put out as long as the fuel lasted. In one tank alone, that used for giving the fenders a second coat, about 1,200 gallons of enamel are kept constantly on hand. Should this inflammable liquid suddenly take fire it would be very hard to control were no provision made for emptying the vat. For this purpose a large tank has been placed underground, outside the factory wall, connected to the overhead tank by a large pipe line of sufficient size to enable the entire contents to be withdrawn in three minutes. The enameling tank is on the fourth floor and the valve in the pipe on the third floor. Therefore it is not necessary for the workman to approach the fire in order to empty the tank. A system of steam jets, easily reached, make the extinguishing of the fire, caused from the remaining enamel in the tank, a matter of only a few minutes.—The Engineering Magazine.

Homemade Fire Extinguishers.

In many situations, especially in rustic localities, an abundance of hand grenades for extinguishing fire is a very necessary precaution. Many persons who hesitate to provide themselves with sufficient store of these because of the expense will be glad to know that they can easily be manufactured at home at a trifling cost. A late number of La Nature gives three new inexpensive formulas for solutions which make excellent grenades when placed in mineral water bottles, which are easily broken when required.

Hagnard grenades are flasks containing not quite a liter of the following solution: Calcium chloride, 157 grams; magnesium chloride, 56 grams; water, 797 grams.

Howen grenades contain a scant half liter of the following solution: Marine salt, 200 grams; sal ammoniac, 90 grams; water, 710 grams.

The Schwenberg Death to Fire grenades contain a trifle less of the following mixture: Marine salt, 65 grams; solvay salt, 17 grams; water, 928 grams.

Drawing Board Extension.

All draftsmen are familiar with the trouble of removing a drawing from the board in order to draw arcs whose centers are beyond the edge of the paper. This can be avoided by the use of the easily made extension shown in the illustration. Two pieces of wood and a small clamp costing a few cents are all that is required. A suitable width for both pieces is two inches. The upper piece, which can be made twelve inches long, should be a trifle less in thickness than the drawing board at the base so as to allow the clamp a leverage. From the end of the clamping piece to the tip both edges and under side are tapered to make it lighter and have a better appearance. A hole is bored through both pieces, after they are fastened together for the clamp to slide in easily. It will be seen that nothing projects above the drawing surface except the upper part of the clamp and that no difficulty will be experienced in drawing radius lines with a straight edge bearing on a pin stuck in the extension piece at the center of the circle.

EXTENSION ARMS ATTACHED TO DRAWING BOARD.

Wasted Steam.

Ever since the introduction of electricity we have had and made free use of electrical meters, but it has only been within the past few years that reliable steam meters have been on the market, and these meters, with the accompanying coal and water weighers, have done more to demonstrate the wasteful use of steam and arouse the interest of the plant owner than anything else known. In one large plant the newly installed steam meters unearthed leaks and other waste amounting to over $60,000 a year, and this is by no mean an extreme case.—Engineering Magazine.

An Oil Can With Bellows.

Ordinarily the bottom of the oil can of commerce has but a movement through a small fraction of an inch, and this small motion is relied upon to force the oil through the narrow opening at the top. A new oil can, however, has just appeared on the market which has a metal bellows as the oil container, which is held extended by a small spring. Pressure upon the bottom of the can forces the bellows together and the bottom of the can upward, so a strong and steady stream of oil can be injected where desirable.

To Prevent Drill Catching.

The regular slope of a drill will cause the cutting edge to catch as it breaks through the metal on the opposite side of the piece being drilled. But if a twist drill is ground more flat, like a flat drill, it will not "grab" into the metal as it passes through.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

6

D/34

FOR WOMEN

"The New York Shop"

JUNE SALE

of Dainty Tub Silk and Crepe de Chine WAISTS

in the latest designs and colors. On Sale Tuesday, at your selection $1.98

These Waists usually retail at $2.50 and $2.75

M. J. McDONALD & CO.

National Merchandise Stamps save you 2 1-2% on your purchases

PURE ICE CREAM

THE RICHEST AND MOST SANITARY

Served at our Fountain and Tables. Made with Heavy Cream, the Best Flavors and Fresh Fruits.

OUR FOUNTAIN DRINKS ARE UNEQUALED

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

Community Notes

The Daughters of Liberty Council will nominate officers tonight for the ensuing six months.

* * *

Four of Fulton's young women left today for their summer vacation in the Adirondacks: the Misses Gertrude Whitaker, Bessie Dexter, Ethel Knapp and Doris Barnes. They will locate at Silver Bay on Lake George.

* * *

The Daughters of Liberty gave a miscellaneous shower at their club rooms in honor of Miss Nellie Darling.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dunton of Phillips st. are entertaining their son Fred of Philadelphia.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Sylvester of Oneida st. are home from their auto trip to Hartford, Conn., where they visited their son Harold.

* * *

Miss Doris Barnes has gone to Lake George for the summer.

* * *

Mrs. Amanda Metcalf of Oswego, who has been visiting Fulton friends, has returned to her home.

* * *

Philo Page, jr., has gone to Detroit.

* * *

The W. H. M. S. of the First M. E. church will hold its Mite Box meeting and annual picnic at the home of Mrs. J. H. Howe, Friday afternoon. Supper will be served on the lawn. All members are asked to bring their mite boxes.

* * *

The pupils of Miss Mabel Hubbard's music class gave a very interesting recital last week.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George Snyder of this city has been the guests of out of town friends.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Hubbard and Mr. and Mrs. Morton Adkins of Syracuse will be guests at the Morton homestead, Emery road, today.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Sylvester have returned from Hartford, Conn., where they were guests of their son.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunton have as their guest their son, Fred Dunton of Philadelphia.

* * *

The T. A. E. Embroidery club will meet on Thursday with Miss Pratt, 515 State st.

* * *

James Fairgrieve and Harold Caffrey are taking the Princeton University entrance test.

The Gift Distinctive

for the JUNE BRIDE or the YOUNG GRADUATE

The gift that some one else will not think of can be found in our collections.

Wm. C. Morgan
Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

SUMMER COMFORTS

Is your kitchen equipped with modern devices?

Have you considered the advantages of gas, of electricity, of cooking by oil?

Have you looked into the savings of the fireless cooker?

And how about the refrigerator? Is it built so that it gives the maximum of service?

All of these are questions bearon summer comfort.

They suggest problems that perhaps the advertising columns of The Fulton Evening Times can answer.

AT THE QUIRK

Today is presented a photplay entitled, "The Lone Star Rush," in five parts—a strong romantic tale of the great Australian gold fields taken from the book of Edmund Mitchell. Tomorrow No. 6 of the "Who Pays" Series, "Houses of Glass," the Pathe Weekly and No. 1 of "The Romance (not exploits) of Elaine." This new serial is said to be far ahead of any yet produced by the Pathe studio.

REBEKAH'S FOOD SALE

The members of Nehasane Lodge of Rebekahs will hold an apron and baked food sale, in the Palmer-Hope store, Saturday, June 19.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

REGENTS' STANDING of FULTON STUDENTS

HIGH SCHOOL

SHORTHAND ADVANCED

Ramon Lewis, 92; Mae Roach, 78; Leland Root, 80; Mabel Snow, 66; Helen Wellwood, 66.

SHORTHAND, FIRST YEAR

Lena Campbell, 66; Frederick Martin, 90; Amelia Rolfe, 90.

AM. HISTORY AND CIVICS

Frances Allen, 67; Clarence Bray, 68; Harold Caffrey, 70; Matthew Frawley, 90; Harold Gillespie, 67; Mazie Gorman, 69; Earl Hopkins, 80; Lena Kaplan, 70; Marian Lake, 70; Ramon Lewis, 77; Harry Lynch, 88; Lola Palmer, 70; Marshall Penfield, 70; Ralph Pierce, 67; E. M. Pullen, 65; Albert Sanford, 85; Howard Shaff, 78; Andrew Sharp, 73; Edward Sullivan, 84; Katharine Sullivan, 67; Harold Thompson, 80; Rose Walsh, 67; Ethel Washburn, 77; Mary Weston, 67; Jessie Wilcox, 77; Muriel Winters, 71.

ANCIENT HIST. (3 HRS.)

A. Atwood, 80; B. Babcock, 78; L. Babcock, 73; F. Baker, 94; B. Beebe, 69; M. Bradley, 77; N. Butts, 81; C. Chapman, 80; A. Chesbro, 92; G. Churchill, 77; B. DuBois, 77; H. Fitch, 75; M. Ford, 83; A. Harris, 75; M. Haskins, 85; C. Holly, 82; C. Hunter, 86; E. Jennings, 70; H. Mangeot, 68; E. Nichols, 68; R. Nipper, 72; H. Palmer, 68; W. Perkins, 74; L. Prevost, 82; R. Quirk, 68; E. Randall, 68; L. Rhodes, 82; D. Roach, 69; C. Rowlee, 77; C. Sikes, 70; R. Tucker, 68; L. Watts, 70.

ANCIENT HIST. (5 HRS.)

Rose King, 80; J. Fairgrieve, 70.

PL. GEOMETRY

Gladys Kresge, 62; Mary Carroll, 69; Laura McKenna, 60; Harriet Nichols, 69; Zada Whipple, 87; Donald O'Brien 68; Willard Stewart, 85; Esther Aylesworth, 64; F. Hilda Clark, 80; Hazel B. Dunton, 80; Esther Freeman, 66; Alvin Harris, 66; Lee Jacobs, 71; Lena Kaplan, 62; Marian J. Lake, 74; Emma Lalonde, 64; Margaret Mulcahy, 64; Floy E. Norton, 63; Mary O'Connor, 62; Mildred Paige, 72; William Perkins, 64; Herman Robillard, 84; Delitar Rounds, 69; Ralph Seymour, 85; Lillian P. Simmons, 60; Dorothea L. Vant, 64; Leila J. Wilcox, 62; Edna M. Wolcott, 70.

COMMERCIAL ARITHMETIC

Harry Lewis, 87; Earl McClellan, 70; Edward Ward, 63; Loren Wells, 99; Mae Whitcomb, 78; Sheldon Wood, 63.

PRELIMINARY

ARITHMETIC

Erie Street

Miles Evans, 85; Maro Reed, 80; John Schneider, 95; Larkin Smith, 86; Clara Cronk, 93; Sara Dickinson, 88; Hellum LePointe, 90; Clara Smith, 86.

Phillips Street

Charles Atwood, 95; Norman Barry, 95; Ruth Black, 92; Francis Buell, 98; Joseph Carroll, 100; Mildred Clute, 93; Mildred Cook, 82; Leland Cusack, 95; John Donovan, 96; Robert Fitten, 98; Mary Hopkins, 87; Margaret Hughes, 93; Gerald Lum, 95; Grace Lyons, 82; Frances Mangeot, 86; Dorothy Martin, 84; Walter Parke, 90; Francis Taylor, 84.

Fourth Street

Helen Austin, 79; Wahnoeta Beebe, 96; Alma Bray, 75; Laurence Dann, 90; Earle Delano, 95; Gertrude Holmes, 100; Elizabeth Howe, 97; Margaret Howe, 94; Geneyieve Sant, 87; Mildred Sharp, 95; Theodore Stanley, 94; Leonard Youmans, 98.

Non-Resident

Ruth Loomis, 78; Lela D. Osborne, 79; William J. Packett, 86; Gilbert Tice, 90.

ELEMENTARY ENGLISH

Fourth Street

John Barnes, 80; Wahnoeta Beebe, 95; Grace Churchill, 82; Lawrence Dann, 86; Albert Durfey, 78; Ralph Ferguson, 85; Gertrude Holmes, 75; John Myers, 85; Catherine Otis, 81; Elon Rowlee, 80; Mildred Sharp, 91; Churchill Trageser, 90; Leslie Wilcox, 77; Leonard Youmans, 90.

Phillips Street

Charles Atwood, 95; Norman Barry, 98; Ruth Black, 99; Francis Buell, 96; Joseph Carroll, 96; Mildred Clute, 100; Mildred Cook, 95; Leland Cusack, 99; John Donovan, 94; Roberts Fitten, 94; Mary Hopkins, 98; Margaret Hughes, 98; Grace Lyons, 90; Gerald Lum, 91; Frances Mangeot, 98; Walter Parke, 90; Dorothy Martin, 100; Francis Taylor, 75.

Erie Street

Miles Evans, 90; Maro Reed, 87; John Schneider, 95; Larkin Smith, 88; Howard Tracey, 76; Clara Cronk, 93; Sara Dickinson, 91; Hellum LePointe, 80; Clara Smith, 80.

Non-Resident

Ruth Baker, 84; Elsie Davis, 88; Edna Frost, 84; William Howard, 78; Ruth Loomis, 90; Glenn Parker, 78; Wm. Pachett, 83; Melrose Taft, 79.

State Street

Robert Brackett, 92; Karl Feldmann, 87; Florence Freeman, 75; Percy Grier 88; Hazel Ingalles, 90; Ariel Palmer, 95; Frances Reynolds, 95; Edna Roy, 90; Marie Roy, 100; James Sylvester, 92; Harvis Wilson, 100.

GEOGRAPHY

Phillips Street

Doris Austin, 94; Irving Blackley, 89; Florence Brown, 94; Arthur Challes, 93; Francis Dewey, 98; Anna Hartnett, 100; Emma Lynch, 98; John Neyhart, 95; Earl Osborn, 96; Mabel Perkins, 98; Eernest Quigg, 93; Earl Rowley, 96; Glenn Seaton, 95; Mildred Sellman, 99; Marian Taylor, 92; Frank Wilber, 90; Frances Wilson, 99.

Erie Street

Ernest Beaudien, 92; Leila Chesbro, 92; Gladys Haines, 82; John Kellum, 91; Lola Lamphear, 96; Ernest London, 75; George McNamara, 91; Claude Pierce, 75; Clarence Streeter, 76; Hazel Wagner, 85; Marion Weaver, 90; Elsie Wood, 91; Floyd Wright, 80; Marion Young, 90.

COMMISSIONERS APPROVE CONCRETE BRIDGE PLANS

The Board of Public Works approved the plans and specifications of the new bridges in Sixth st. and over the Hunter tail race in North 1st st. The 6th st. bridge will be a concrete arch affair and will cover 40 feet over all. The Hunter bridge will also be a substantial arch bridge with concrete abutments and two wide spans. The contracts for these bridges will be let immediately and the work will be supervised by the City Engineer.

George E. Mason, a member of the City Planning Committee, announced at last night's meeting that he had inspected the bridges last week accompanied by Dr. Haviland, and had also reviewed the plans and specifications drawn up by the City Engineer. He was of the opinion that both bridges were all that they should be and their construction would mean a permanent improvement.

AUTO RUN AND DINNER

The Fulton Auto club left for South Bay this afternoon on the first run of the season. The cars met at the City Hall promptly at 4.30 o'clock. In the absence of President McCully, Secretary Morin will act as pathfinder on the run.

Dinner will be served at the Crown Heart hotel at the bay at 6.30 o'clock, covers being laid for fifty. About twenty cars made the trip. The return trip will begin about 9 o'clock.

ANTONIO - GRADAGNO

Dominick Antonio was haled into court last night on complaint of Cella Gradagno, who claimed a breach of promise to marry. Antonio decided to follow the line of least resistance and agreed to marry the young woman this morning. Father Lindsman performed the ceremony at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

F. H .SIMPSON GRADUATED FROM TROY POLYTECHNIC

Foster Hawks Simpson was graduated at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., on June 16th with the degree of civil engineer. He was prepared at the Fulton High school and entered the institute in September, 1911. While a student there he was elected a member of the honorary societies of Sigma Xi and Tau Beta Pi. The title of his graduating thesis was "Design for an Open Spandrel, Reinforced Contrete Arch Highway Bridge; Span 142 feet, rise 23 feet."

CLERK ISSUES LICENSE

Salvatore Cristofaro and Caterina Camardo took out a marriage license at the City Clerk's office this morning. Cristofaro gave his occupation as laborer andhis birthplace as Italy, while his fiancee is also Italian born, and is a mill-worker at present.

IN BENEFIT RECITAL

The Royal Guards of the State St. M. E. church have arranged with Mrs. Georgetta Foster-Shaver and her pupils, to give a concert in the church Friday evening. John Shaver, basso, will assist in the program, which will be as follows:

Trio—"Amaryllis" Gavotte—Parlow
Miss Cassie Wells; Miss Sorrell Wells; Miss Frances Wells.
"A Winter Lullaby" . . . . DeKoven
Miss Susan Hezar
(a) 'Wiegenlied" . . . . Taubert
(b) "O Shoen Zeit" . . . . Gotze
Miss Annette Frieberger
"Flowers of May" . . . . Werkerlin
Miss Madora Halstead
Duet—"Greeting" . . . . . . Mendelssohn
Miss Serrell Wells
Miss Frances Wells
"Be Ye in Love with April Tide"—Ward Stephen, Miss Serrell Wells.
Aria—"Vision Fugitive" . . From Herodiacle . . Massenet.
Mr. John Shaver
"Were I Gardiner" . . . . . . Chauminade
Miss Frances Wells
(a) "A Birthday" . . . . Woodman
(b) "My Shadow" . . . . Hadley
Miss Cassie Wells
Aria—"Domain," from Asterice, Stilla
Mr. John Louise.
"Summer" . . . . Chauminade
Miss Winifred M. Strong
Cavatina—"The Faro," from Orhpeus Gluck
Mrs. Marietta Flint Dolbear
"Frivictus" . . . . Huhn
Mr. John Shaver
Duet—"Passage-Bird's Farewell" Hildack
Miss Strong, Mr. Louise

BUNDY'S CROSSING

William Larock, who has been ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. Lewis Burchin, was taken to the hospital for treatment.

Harry Maloney has bought a Harley-Davis motorcycle.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Loughrey and son of Oswego Center spent the weekend with herm other, Mrs. Alice Adams.

Mrs. Byron Wells called on Mrs. C. J. Echard one day the past week.

The Fishermen's picnic was held in C. J. Echard's grove on Saturday. A pleasant day was spent in fishing and a fish dinner was served at 2 p.m.

Alonzo Brown has gone to Caughdenoy after his daughter, Miss Ethel Brown, who finishes her school on Tuesday; she is to be our teacher the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. James Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Ula Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Echard and Misses Bertha and Elizabeth Echard went to Fairview with their auto on Sunday for a fishing trip. They report a pleasant day.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Echard were in Oswego on Tuesday.

John View called on F. VanBuren on Sunday.

Mrs. B. Wells is entertaining her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Huffman, from South Bend, Indiana.

DISBARMENT MAY BE RECOMMENDED BY BAR

Fred T. Cahill, whose disbarment by the Oswego County Bar Association is receiving a lot of notice, must cause his record to be submitted to the Appellate Division, according to District Attorney Culkin.

Ing iving Cahill a suspended sentence of nearly three years in State prison, Judge Coville in sisted that the prisoner stop drinking and keep hisp romise. This injunction was the result of the report received from physicians who examined Cahill's mental condition, the doctors finding in effect that Cahill's excessive indulgence in alcoholic dritiks made him mentally irresponsible.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

MERCHANTS and SHIPPERS

Save 25% on your Freight Bill, Order Goods Shipped by Boat.

STEAMER "CITY OF FULTON" Now Running

Freight House on Rochester St. Dock, open from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. Man in charge all day.

C. S. BURLEIGH, Captain

SOUTH GRANBY

There were services at the school house Sunday evening, Rev. Bull preaching a sermon and then had a prayer and testimony meeting.

Mr. William Quade, who died at his son Kenneth's home in Fulton Thursday, was buried Sunday from Mrs. Rose Rumsey's at Jacksonville, Rev. Charles Olmstead officiating. He was an old resident of this place, being 89 years old. His son Kenneth was the only near relative.

The funeral of George Rumsey was held at his home on Sunday. He died Thursday, Rev. Charles Olmstead officiating. He was born in the town of Victory and lived there until he was eight years old and has always lived in Granby since. He was 73 years old. Besides his wife he leaves four sons and one daughter, two brothers and two sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Rumsey of Marcellus came out to attend both funerals.

Mrs. Myrtie Andrews and her sister, Mrs. Mary Brennan, were over Sunday guests at Fred Andrews.

School closed Friday with exercises inthe evening, the house was full in spite of the hard showers and some got wet on their way to the school house.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Taylor and Grandma Taylor visited their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Finley Taylor Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edson Stewart and daughter Bertha and son Orson of Baldwinsville were Sunday guests at Dan Stewart's and called on their uncle, Wilson Stewart.

Alonzo Luke is serving on jury.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Palmer called at Mr. Dickenson's, and Fred Chapman and lady friend were there Sunday.

NORMAL DANCE WILL DRAW FROM THIS CITY

Several Fultonians expect to attend the closing dance of the season at Oswego Normal school Friday evening. The dance will begin at 7 o'clock and will be formal. Invitations for 200 have been issued. The affair will be held in the gymnasium of the school, and a banjo orchestra has been engaged to furnish music.

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

We Want Your
ELECTRICAL WORK
ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.
D. B. KANE
Phone 1598 118 Oneida St.

THAT BIG SALE of BICYCLES TIRES SUPPLIES
WILL CONTINUE ALL THIS WEEK
Many are taking advantage of this opportunity to get a guaranteed bicycle at a big reduction.
WE DO REPAIRING
BOGUE--- "THE BICYCLE GARAGE" 61 First Street

Have You Seen

THE LATEST STYLES

of

SOLID SILVERWARE

G. B. FARLEY

21 First Street,

Can show you a full line. Just the kind for

WEDDING GIFTS

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Chattel Mortgage Sale—One gasoline truck wagon, in good condition, with top; also one light truck same as above, without top. Sale at VanWagenen garage, Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. A. Bristol, Mortgagee's agent. 154

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

For Sale—2 H.P. marine steam engine with tubular oil burning boiler; complete from stack to propeller. 307 Cayuga st. 152

To Rent—New house in Park st.; modern conveniences; electric light; bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

Lost—Near Baptist church, silver mesh bag containing purse and key. Return 321 Rochester st. for reward. 153c

To Rent—Downstairs flat at 311 Atlantic ave. Inquire Crandall, 261 S. 7th st. Pone 252. tf

Found—A bunch of keys with Ardley Club tag. Owner may have same by applying at Times office.

Nurse Girl—Wants position in good family; experience; references given. Phone 3281. 154c

Wanted—2 Polish chambermaids and woman cleaner. Pontiac, Oswego. 152

Upper Flat to Rent—408 Erie street. Phone 4480. 153

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

THOMAS H. MARVIN

HEADQUARTERS FOR

BUILDERS' SUPPLIES

Some of our specialties are:

Lehigh Portland Cement.

Peerless Wall plaster

Robinson Sewer Pipe

Onondaga Vitrified Brick

Fire Brick, Fire Clay, etc.

Land Plaster Hydrated Lime

Yard:

Corner First and Broadway

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 16.—Much interest is being taken by the delegates to the Constitutional Convention in the fate of the propsed amendment submitted by Delegate Andrew E. Tuck of Rochester, which would require boys between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one to serve one year in the National Guard of the State. The proposition is now before the committee on Militia and Military Affairs.

It is estimated that there are close to 200,000 young men who would be affected by the provisions of the Tuck amendment should it be adopted and ratified by the people. At present the strength of the militia in New York State is 16,655 and the law sets forth that the maximum strength shall not be more than 18,000.

Partially because the war clouds of Europe seemed to have cast a gloom upon the United States and partly because it is believed in many quarters that there should be a larger proportion of citizens possessed with a certain amount of military training, Delegate Tuck presented his proposition. The fact that it is strongly endorsed by the highest officers in the National Guard is regarded as being an indication that the resolution may be permitted to get upon the floor of the convention for debate.

Because of the requirements now exacted of recruits, the popularity of the National Guard has in a measure waned and it is considerably below its maximum strength. Since enlistments are not compulsory, there is no way of keeping up the strength of the militia in the State if the military enthusiams of the youth wanes.

While admitting that his proposed amendment would require cumpulsory service in a manner somewhat similar to that of the German government, Delegate Tuck explains that but one year of training is required and that the effect would be highly beneficial upon the recruit as well to the State.

Delegate Tuck is an officer of the National Guard, being connected with a military organization in the city of Rochester. He was at one time a deputy attorney general.

The present Constitution states that the legislature may provide for the enlistment into the active militia force "of such persons as may make application to be so enlisted." It is therefore seen that it is not mandatory for all to enlist. All able-bodied male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five who are residents of the State, however, constitute the militia.

It is provided by law that at no time shall the strength of the militia be less than ten thousand. Of recent years the maximum strength has not been recruited.

Delegate Tuck is arranging for a hearing upon his proposed amendment. When the date is set many officers of high rank in the National Guard will come to Albany to be heard. The department of the State adjutant general favors the proposal and it is said that Major General John F. O'Ryan looks kindly upon the idea promulgated by Delegate Tuck.

The chairman of the Constitutional Convention committee on Military and Military Affairs is Hon. Almet R. Latson of the eight district, a resident of Brooklyn. The other members of the committee are Messrs. Westwood of Fredonia; Dennis, of Whitehall; Parker of Oswego; McLean of Brooklyn; Groffin of New York, and Byrne of Brooklyn.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

PERSONAL DEVIL EXISTS

The perennial strife among members of the New York Presbytery on whether the Union Theological Seminary teaches heresy bobbed up again at the April meeting of the Presbytery in the Old First Presbyterian church, at Fifth avenue and 11th st. A large majority decided that belief in a "personal devil" is a part of the creed of the Church.

An argument, long and spirited, began when the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin of Union Theological Seminary, presented his answer to a complaint recently made by the Rev. Dr. John Fox against the licensing to preach of four young graduates of Union who were judged by Dr. Fox to be unorthodox in their theology. Dr. Fox said that one of these young men had "declared categorically that he did not believe in the existence of a personal devil, and, further, that he would not teach definitely that there were any souls who would finally be lost."

Concerning this specification Dr. Coffin said: "As to the existence of a personal devil we have not heard that this is a cardinal article of the Christian faith. It certainly has ot been held by many leading theologians of evangelical churches."

The Rev. Dr. David G. Wylie said: "I do not like the devil, but I believe it is a doctrine of the Presbyterian Church that there is a personal, malignant evil spirit against whom we are fighting, and I, in common with others members of the Presbytery, want to do all I can to put him out of business."

Louis Passione and Romeo Chiradella, of the Italian Presbyterian Church of the Ascension, in E. 106th st., who are studying to become clergymen, were taken under the care of the Presbytery.

The Rev. Dr. James H. Hoadley, permanent clerk of the Presbytery, said: "The man who has influenced these young men to enter the ministry is known as the arch heretic" of this Presbytery. I pray God that He will raise up multitudes of men like Mr. Thomas and Dr. Coffin."

"I called no names," interrupted Dr. Fox, "but if Mr. Thomas wants to be known as the arch heretic I have no desire to deprive him of this laurel."

Dr. Fox presented another report attacking the seminary as teaching heresy.

GOES 900 MILES FOR SHAVE AND HAIR CUT

New York,—Carl Zahn, head barber of the Plaza Hotel, started yesterday on a nineh undred mile journey to shave a man and cut his hair. That is, he started on a four hundred and fifty mile jaunt, and he must come back. It was like this:—

W. G. Green, of Denver, who has been at the Plaza, thought no barber could cut his hair and shave him so weel as Zahn. Mr. Green went to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to stay at the Greenbrier. He thought that he would be away for three days and suddenly changed his mind and decided to stay three weeks.

He needed a hair cut and the management of the Plaza received a telegram asking that Zahn be sent to White Sulphur Springs to serve Mr. Green as before.

Fred Sterry, managing director of the Plaza, knew that Mr. Green meant what he said and Zahn was sent in the train that left at eight minutes past five o'clock. The fare is about $50. A shave and hair cut in the Plaza costs sixty cents.

BLACKSMITHS GET ALONG WITHOUT HELPERS

Batavia, June 16.—Batavia master blacksmiths are doing all the work in their own shops today, owing to the fact that ten of their former employes are out on a strike, demanding three months of Saturday half molidays. The employes offered them two months, July and August, but the employes stick out for three months. The shops are all open today, but the proprietors are doing their own work, and claim they are handling their business well.

PONTIAC DIRECTORS ARE ALL RE-ELECTED

Oswego.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Oswego Hotel Corporation was held at the Pontiac yesterday. The terms of J. D. Higgins, W. V. Burr, F. W. Barnes, L. C. Rowe and Frank Schilling expired as directors but they were re-elected for five years. Clair Light was elected as director for two years to fill an existing vacancy on the board. Financial and other matters were talked over and reports showed that everything was running very satisfactorily.

WISCONSIN TO BE GOOD TO ALL

Legislative Bill Would Relieve Many Public Officials of Stress

Madison, Wis.—Although the present Wisconsin Legislature has been classified by political science experts as "an imperiously reactionary body without social vision," it is on the verge of passing a law that sets a new paee for radicalism in America.

If the bill now before the Wisconsin Legislature becomes a law the state, through a special committee, will take an official squint at the virtues and faults of social insurance.

Not satisfied with seeking to relieve the distress of the proletariat, the Wisconsin Legislature wants to hold out a helping hand to judges and teachers. It may also take steps toward having the state assist the municipalities in providing funds for pensions for policemen, firemen and other public officers and employes.

The following section of the bill indicates the wide authority to be vested in the investigation committee and the broad scope of its proposed inquiries:

"A joint committee, consisting of three Senators and four members of the Assembly, is hereby authorized and directed to make an investigation into the necessity and the provisions madef or pensions, annuities or other retirement funds or relief for judges, teachers, policemen, firemen and other public officers and employes, and for relief from unemployment, accident, sickness and old age and other dependency.

"Such investigation shall include the entire subject of protection, relief or indemnifying of persons against accident, sickness and invalidity, including all methods of granting or administeering public relief, and all organized or unorganized charitable efforts toward such relief, and generally to investigate any and all matters relating to the aforesaid subject, and to the betterment of the public service and the relieving of the individual and of the state and its agencies from the burdens incident to the care of dependents. The subject of inquiry is not hereby limited, and the said committee shall have full power to enter upon and make any investigation or inquiry which in its judgment relates to the aforesaid subjects."

RAIN HAD ITS TERRORS FOR 40 WORKMEN

Forty men at work on the Walter Bradley contract quit work yesterday morning when the rain began to fall in torrents. In spite of the efforts of the foremen to get the men to return to work, they refused to brave the elements, and a lay-off of the entireg ang resulted. The men will not be re-employed on the work according to a statement credited to Mr. Bradley.

The coffer dam around the old pulp mill is now complete and the work of tearing down the building has begun. The new power house will be built upon the site of the old mill.

CHILD SLAYER TRIES DEATH LEAP AT TOMBS

New York.—Hyman Lebman, accused of dropping two of hisc hildren from a window and killing one, attempted suicide when ordered to court for his trial by dropping from the top tier of cells at the Tombs to the basement.

Warden Hanley, at the risk of his life, stood under Liebman and shifted his body so he landed on his feet instead of his head. Both escaped serius injury.

BRITAIN NEEDS FARMERS

London, June 15.—There is a war shortage of 170,000 male agriculturai laborers on the farms of England, Scotland and Wales, according to a report from the Board of Agriculture. During the next two months the board hopes to fill virtually all these vacanoies with women.

Constipation Causes Most Ills

Accumulated waste in your thirty feet of bowels causes absorption of poisons, tends to produce fever, upsets digestion. You belch gas, feel stuffy, irritable, almost cranky. It isn't you—it's your condition. Eliminate this poisonous waste by taking one or two Dr. King's New Life Pills tonight. Enjoy a full, free bowel movement in the morning—you feel so grateful. Get an original bottle, containing 36 pills, from your Druggist today for 25c.

BASS SEASON OPENS TODAY

ALL YOU ANGLERS---GET BUSY

Reports from the out-lying districts state that the fish are plentiful this year.

You will need some Tackle—We have it!

BRISTOL STEEL RODS BASKETS

A FLY FOR EVERY FISH

REELS NETS LINES

Every article at bed-rock price and Guaranteed

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

7 South First Street

WALL PAPER and PAINT

PAPER HANGING — PAINTING

The cost of Paint is advancing daily---due to the European War. Get Your Supply Now!

HULETT-TAFT CO., Inc.

208 ONEIDA STREET

JUNIOR CLASS DANCE COMES NEXT WEEK

The Junior class of Fulton High school will give a post-graduation dance to the graduating class and invited guests at Davis' hall, Wednesday evening, June 23. A special orchestra will furnish the music and the program, which will consist of twenty four dances, will comprise all the latest modern steps.

A committee has been appointed to manage the dance and plans for several new features have been made. The dance will be a subscription affair. The committee in charge comprises Messrs. O'Brien, Reynolds, Wallace and Johnson.

EARLY FISHERMEN WALKED AWAY WITH THE HONORS

Local fishermen are busy stocking up for the bass season which opened this morning. As soon as the first grey light of day appeared today, several enthusiastic local anglers were out of bed and hiking for the lake, where some good catches were made. W. L. Woodbury landed twelve fine bass before breakfast and several other anglers had good luck. The fish are said to be very plentiful this year.

COMMISSIONER STEVENSON REFUTES PASTOR'S CHARGE

Rev. M. G. Buck, pastor of the First Baptist church, who charracterized Fulton as the worst city in the state in a recent address, came in for some criticism last night at the meeting of the Board of Public Works. In speaking of the indebtness of the city, and of the money that has been wasted in making improvements and then tearing them out again, President Stevenson ofthe Board of Public Works said, "This city isn't the worst one in this State, even if the Rev. M. G. Buck says it is."

R. L. McCULLY IMPROVES

Robert L. McCully, secretary and treasurer of the VanWagenen, Inc., who has been ill for the past three weeks, was reported as slightly improved this morning. Yesterday Dr. Wallace of Oswego and Dr. F. E. Fox held a conference.

Happy Hour Theatre

TODAY

Charles Chaplin in a brand new feature

TWENTY MINUTES OF LOVE

Big Three-Reel Drama

"THE DANCER"

featuring Cleo Madison

Five Reel Feature

AN EXTRAORDINARY BILL

Admission 10c

PATENT MEDICINE MAN EMULATES JOHN D.

Binghamton, June 16.—At the meeting of the board of managers of the Binghamton city hospital tonight it was announced that Willis Sharpe Kilmer had made an unconditional offer to erect and equip a pathological department in connection with the institution and to place in charge, at his expense, for five years, a patheologist of international reputation. Mr. Kilmer plans to found in Binghamton an institution that, in its own field, will do for the Southern tier of New York what the Rockefeller Institute does in its wider field.

COKE MEN GET WORK

Connellsville, Pa., June 16.—The H. C. Frick Coke Company has issued orders for the firing of 1000 additional coke ovens in this district, which will afford employment to more than 1000 men. The company already has 12,895 ovens in operation out of a total of 19,224.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

FOR SALE

CASH GROCERY STORE

210 CAYUGA STREET, CITY

A paying Proposition. Will bear investigation. Inquire of

240 W. Genesee Street SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Cahill's Perfection Bread

is the

BEST BREAD MADE

TRY A LOAF—Sold only at

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c

1 Word 3 Times 2c

1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.

Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c

CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY

"THE LONE STAR RUSH"

A Romantic Tale of the Great Australian Gold Fields in 5 parts.

THURSDAY

No.6 of "Who Pays" Series, entitled

"HOUSES OF GLASS"

No. 1 "ROMANCE OF ELAINE

and PATHE WEEKLY

FRIDAY

Beulah Poynter in her great success,

THE LITTLE GIRL HE FORGOT—in 5 parts.

D/34

The Fulton Evening Times

IS A PART OF THE BUSINESS LIFE OF FULTON

¶ Because it is identical with every interest in this city. The Fulton Evening Times is a public institution purely. It's interests are mutual with those of every Man, Woman and Child of this city. It's success spells for the success of every Fulton Merchant. The town having successful Merchants is a successful town. A home Daily helps to make the home Merchant a successful man. One dollar spent in a paper published out-of-town deprives a Fulton workman of a dollar's worth of support.

IF YOU DEPRIVE

A Fulton Workman of His Wages it's Your Loss as well as the Workman's

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

SNAPSHOTS AT NOTABLE PERSONS

Simeon E. Baldwin Says Insurance Would End Wars.

Photo © by American Press Association.

At the recent conference on international arbitration, held at Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Simeon E. Baldwin, ex-governor of Connecticut, suggested that insurance would end wars. "Insuring nations against pecuniary loss in wars would tend to discourage war for the capitalists, and granting the insurance would then work for peace in the interests of their bank accounts," said Mr. Baldwin.

Ex-Governor Baldwin is famous in New England as a lawyer. He has been chief justice of the supreme court of Connecticut, president of the American Bar association and has written books on law and history. In 1911 he was elected chief executive of Connecticut and on the expiration of his two year term was chosen to succeed himself. He is a Democrat.

The governor's father, Roger Sherman Baldwin, was also a noted lawyer in his day. In 1839 he was the principal attorney in a suit that was celebrated not alone in this country, but in Europe. Slaves, a ship load of them, on the way to Cuba, poured out of the hold at a signal, overcame the officers and took possession of the vessel. An American ship, finding them adrift, towed them into the harbor of New York. Spain claimed that the slaves were the property of Spanish planters and speculators. Abolitionists in the north defended the Africans. The case went to the United States supreme court, finally and was argued for the black men by Governor Baldwin's father, John Quincy Adams being his assistant. His skill, learning and thoroughness caused the renowned Chancellor Kent to say that he was one of the ablest jurists of his time.

Crown Prince of Greece.

In the event of Greece taking up arms in the European war Prince George, heir apparent to the throne of the Hellenes, is likely to become a figure of importance. His father, King Constantine, has been reported to be in feeble health, and in the event of the king's death or incapacity Prince George would be either king or regent. The young man was born in July, 1890, and is therefore twenty-five years of age. During the Balkan wars a couple of years ago the young prince was an active participant in the fighting.

Photo by American Press Association.

PRINCE GEORGE OF GREECE.

On his father's side Prince George is of Danish and Russian blood. He was born at Athens, is a member of the Greek national church and is thoroughly Greek at heart, as his father is also. His mother was Princess Sophia of Prussia, sister of the present German kaiser, so Prince George is a nephew of Emperor William II. Relationship, however, doesn't count for much in European affairs once the sword is drawn, so it is not improbable that the crown prince may eventually find himself opposed to the forces of his imperial uncle.

YOUNG FOLKS CORNER

Hunting For Diamonds.

About 1,000 two-inch tickets are used in this game, says Scouting. These are marked with a blue pencil in the shape of a diamond, and numbers ranging from one to thirty are marked inside the diamonds. These are supposed to be diamonds worth so many dollars—if a diamond has a figure nine in it, it is worth $9.

Another lot is marked with the diamond only, without the figures; these are smaller "diamonds" and are worth only $1 each. The third lot are left entirely blank and are supposed to be diamond quarts, being worth only 25 cents each.

The "diamonds" are scattered all over the woods, in the branches of trees, among prickly bushes, in pools of water and other hiding places. The game commences at a whistle signal, the troop starting from different ends of the woods and working every inch of the ground hunting for the "diamonds."

The patrol finding "diamonds" of the greatest total value is declared the winner.

The Golden Robin.

Among the most brilliantly dressed, as well as sweetest singing birds that summer anywhere in the United States is the Baltimore oriole, or golden robin.

The nest of this beautiful bird is very interesting, and displays great skill in the making. In shape it resembles a long pouch, and is swung hammock fashion from two twigs at the extremity of a lofty, drooping branch. It is formed of vegetable fiber and wool, closely interwoven, then securely sewed in place with very strong stitches. The thread used for the sewing is usually long horsehairs, though, especially if the nest is within close range of civilization, bits of string, thread or silk floss are used. The mother bird does the building, while her mate searches for and brings the material.

Conundrums.

What goes most against a farmer's grain? The reaping machine.

What relation is that child to its own father who is not its own father's own son? His daughter.

What does a young lady do when she gets into church? Looks for the hims (hymns).

What beats a good wife? A bad husband.

What is the best thing out? A conflagration.

Why is life the greatest of riddles? Because we must all give it up.

Why is a lady's dishabille like a postman? Because it's a morning wrapper.

Telegraph Bee.

Here is a game for boy scouts on a rainy day in camp. Let the scouts arrange themselves around a table with a telegraph sounder on it. One of the scouts operates the sounder and sends letters in the Morse code to the other scouts, each in turn. If a scout fails to know the letter he is placed at the end of the line. In order that all the boys may take part it is best for the operator to send letters slowly to the tenderfoot, faster to a second class scout and fastest to a first class scout. The line will be continually changing, and the boys are sure to be interested. —Scouting.

Hidden Dress Goods.

1. The verse was musical. I composed it long ago.
2. I prefer the drama to singing. Hamlet is my favorite role.
3. I sent Rob Linscott on up the hill.
4. That evil is the lesser, George thinks.
5. I bought the fossil. Keep it for me, please.
6. He is a tinsmith by trade.
7. We heard the guns pop. Lincoln was near.

Answers: 1. Calico. 2. Gingham. 3. Cotton. 4. Serge. 5. Silk. 6. Satin. 7. Poplin.

Work For Boy Scouts.

Boys might work off their zeal for hunting by declaring war on rats. If old granaries or warehouses are available they might indulge in a wild rat hunt. Rats accomplish a great deal of destruction, and in port cities, at least, they are credited with carrying many dangerous diseases. If a troop could clear its village of the pests it would be a creditable service.

Changed Words.

Without changing letters turn a viscid substance into an undesired domestic animal, wrathful into a means of restraint, duration into a send forth, fashioned into a kind of cheese, a piece into a snare, a singer of old times into dull colored.

Answers.—Tar, rat; mad, dam; time, emit; made, Edam; part, trap; bard, drab.

Your Cough Can be Stopped

Using care to avoid draughts, exposure, sudden changes, and taking a treatment of Dr. King's New Discovery, will positively relieve, and in time will surely rid you, of your Cough. The first dose soothes the irritation, checks your Cough, which stops in a short time. Dr. King's New Discovery has been used successfully for 45 years and is guaranteed to cure you. Money back if it fails. Get a bottle from your Druggist; it costs only a little and will help you so much.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

A Mythical Lover

By MARTHA V. MONROE

My dear, you being my most intimate friend, I write you first of all to announce my engagement. Harry after hanging about me for two years has at last proposed. How much longer he would have continued to do so had I not by my own skillful manipulation brought him to terms I don't know. As it is, I had a hard time landing him and did so only after a number of efforts had failed.

Now, I wish to assure you, my dear, that if you have occasion to bring a man to terms, do not adopt any of the old fashioned methods that are well known—that is, if you are playing a man who is as adept at the game as you. I tried a number of them on Harry, and he was too smart for them all. First I told him that I was intending to study the law and would make a vow of celibacy that I might be wedded only to my professional work. He laughed me to scorn; drew ironical pictures of my arguing a case before a jury; said he would like to be the judge before whom I pleaded a case, and all that.

About the time of this first failure the European war broke out, and I threatened to go abroad and take care of sick and wounded soldiers. He said he was thinking of going to France and enlisting in the Foreign legion. I didn't go as a nurse, and he didn't go as a soldier. He had met my bluff with one of his own.

Then Howard Wentworth came to town, and of all the girls here he seemed to prefer me. Taking advantage of his preference, I encouraged him, especially in presence of Harry. What did the scamp do but devote himself to Agnes Woodruff. I was frightened for fear she would get him away from me and dropped Mr. Wentworth immediately. After I had done so Harry gradually ceased to pay marked attention to Agnes, but I knew that he was still more or less devoted to her, and it worried me.

Having heard that Aunt Caroline had been in her youth skillful at the game of hearts, I confessed my failures and my anxiety to her and asked her to help me.

"The trouble with your expedients," she said to me, "is that they are too palpable. One of those you have tried is excellent, but you did not apply it in the right way. I refer to your attempt to pique your lover by accepting the attentions of another man. You should not have called in the attentions of a real admirer, but an imaginary one."

Not understanding what Aunt Carrie meant, I asked her to explain. She did so and gave me the identical method by which she brought Uncle John to terms twenty years ago. I made up my mind to try it.

My first move was to nerve myself to treat Harry with indifference for a stated period. This being a part of a general plan, I was enabled to play the part pretty well. I was careful not to overact it, in order that he might not see through what I was up to. Having apparently grown more indifferent to him for three or four months, I accepted an invitation from Elinor Trask to make her a visit. I remained away six weeks, and when I came home I talked a great deal to my intimate girl friends about a fascinating fellow I had met, or, rather had not met, during my visit, giving them the impression that I had been much taken up with him. Of course they spread a report that I was either engaged or was likely to be engaged, and it reached Harry's ears.

Nevertheless so confident was he that he could drop me and take me up when he pleased that he placed but little confidence in my preference for him having been diverted to another channel. He came to see me on my return from my visit, twitted me on having lost my heart during my absence and asked for a description of this "Adonis," as he called my mythical lover, who had been so fortunate as to win such a prize as myself. I turned the conversation upon other topics. Harry asked me to go to the theater with him the next evening. I told him so decidedly that I had a previous engagement that he did not ask for another evening.

Harry did not call again for some time. Meanwhile I was talking to my chums about the fascinating man I had met, confident that what I said would reach the man I really loved. The next time he called on me I telephoned to a florist, with whom I had left an order for flowers to be filled on call, to send them at once. Half an hour later the flowers came and were brought into the room to me where I was sitting with Harry. Pretending to be anxious about them, I opened the box containing them. Inside was a little envelope. I seized it and without opening it held it in the palm of my hand.

This was altogether too much for Harry's equanimity. He demanded to see the card of the sender, and I refused to give it to him. He turned very red, then pale, and I saw that an emotional storm was raging within him. I let him go on till he had committed himself, after which he lost all interest as to who sent the flowers, for we were engaged.

I assure you, my dear, I am very happy, and Harry says he is very happy, and, as for my mythical lover, I think it is perfectly honorable for me to have used him, for he can't be a bit disappointed.

SEES VILLA LOSE GREAT BATTLE IN WHICH 5,000 MEN ARE KILLED

Invited to Trenches to Witness Big Fight, Correspondent Is Caught In Thick of Conflict.

While Mexicans and Their Wives Fall Dead Beside Him, He Describes Scene Until Wounded.

A THRILLINGLY realistic picture of the great night battle at Sildo, in which Villa was crushed and 5,000 of his men are said to have died, is given by John W. Roberts, special correspondent of the International News Service, in a dispatch to the New York American. The writer was in the trenches with Villa.

Mr. Roberts wrote his description as the battle proceeded. He was shot through the leg, but was rescued by one of Villa's gunners, an American named T. D. Taylor, who carried him to the shelter of a box car after the defeat and sent off his message for him.

Villa had been teasing Roberts about correspondents reporting fighting they did not see and invited him to see what he promised would be one of the greatest battles ever fought by his men. Roberts went with Villa to the advance trench and began making notes.

It is an old dry ditch, four feet deep, he wrote. Nearly 8,000 soldiers are in this place, the rest of the Villa army having taken positions on the hills to our right. The only sign of the enemy is a cloud of dust four miles away.

No one seems to be excited. It seems as though we are going to have a huge picnic.

A mounted officer just informed Villa that it appeared as though Obregon's forces are going to take the offensive. Villa seems to take this as a huge joke.

Villa Was Confident.

"Let them come," he said, laughing. "Before morning more than half of them will have turned their toes up toward the stars."

Villa invited me to peep over the trench and see the enemy through his field glasses. I could see nothing but a hazy cloud of dust two miles long. Villa has gone to place his artillery.

I have been friends with one Manuel Sosa. He has been a soldier in Villa's army for two years and has never been wounded. He is a good natured fellow and is always grinning. I like to see him smile.

His soldadera has begun to broil a couple of chunks of beef. "You must eat with us, amigo," Manuel said as he borrowed a cigarette from me.

As we ate I asked him if he had no children.

"Si, senor, we've had two, but during the battle of Torreon, while they were sleeping under a tree, a shell struck them, and we never saw them again."

Manuel saw me looking at the red sunset and laughed. "That's sangre," he said. "God predicts the spilling of much Carranzista blood tonight. God is on our side. That's why we always win."

An infernal sound like the ripping of canvas split the silence overhead. A moment later a whistling explosion was heard in our rear. I jumped from where I sat, trembling violently. Manuel didn't even look up.

"The enemy has begun its cannonading," he grinned.

I am the only excited person in the whole trench. The other soldiers, who have not finished their suppers, are still eating. The soldaderas don't seem to be afraid, either.

The red in the sky has turned to a deep purple. The Villa artillery on our right has begun to boom. To me the air seems charged with a sinister something that I can't describe.

Carranzistas Open Attack.

Away to our left there is heavy rifle fire. Each shot sounds like two because it echoes against the hills. No one seems to worry. A great, fat soldier to my right is sound asleep. He is lying on the sand, and his face is covered with his big sombrero.

A young captain not over eighteen years of age has ridden up to our part of the trench.

"The enemy is sending a column in this direction!" he shouts. "First sergeants, prepare your men! There is a column of our own men to the rear who will shoot down any one who attempts to flee!"

He looked curiously at me, smiled and galloped away.

A soldadera woke up the fat man, and he has begun to curse for all he is worth.

It is dark now. There seems to be fighting all around us, but I can see none of it. Each side has discovered the positions of the other's artillery by the tongues of fire emanating from the cannon at each shot.

Every man in our trench is patiently waiting. The soldaderas—most of them—are sitting down in the ditch, smoking—like myself. A horse which was standing outside the trench near us was killed, and it rolled in on our right, putting out the campfire.

I wonder if I am only greatly excited or deathly scared. Perhaps it's both. I have broken three cigarette papers trying to roll a cigarette. Manuel's soldadera smiles and offers me one of her own ready made chorritos.

A young girl farther up the trench just screamed, "There come the d—— Carranzistas!" She is [illegible] now, greatly excited. Her hair is down, and a fixed grin gives her a diabolical expression. No one seems to notice her. She runs, screaming the news:

"There they come, the Bribones Carranzistas! Viva Villa! You are all my lovers if you fight bravely!"

I have never heard so much noise in all my life. It seems as though I had taken a peep into hell.

The fat man is swearing again. He was hit in the shoulder. He claims that he killed over ten Carranzistas, and because of the bullet in his shoulder has promised to annihilate the enemy's army if it attacks again.

I am not trembling so much now because I can see that I am comparatively safe so long as I keep low in the ditch. No one in our immediate vicinity was hurt except the fat man.

Terrific firing is going on all over the prairie. Fifty of Villa's cannon are trying to dislodge as many of the enemy's cannon on the hills.

Villa Now Looks Worried.

Thousands of shots are popping to our right, to our left and on front. I have decided not to peep over the trench.

"There they come again!" Manuel says.

The fat man, despite his wounded shoulder, has jumped up and is ominously clicking his rifle. I am sure that our men will repulse the enemy again, so I am not afraid. I have begun to enjoy it.

The popping has commenced again all around the trench like so many firecrackers. None of the men seems to be taking careful aim. They just fire, click the chamber and fire again. When the five bullets have gone they snatch a clip from their belts and refill the gun. The fat man is firing faster than anybody else, grunting and cursing in the meantime.

General Villa dashed up madly a few moments ago, accompanied by some officers. For the first time since I have known him he looks worried and greatly excited. His teeth are gritted and his white silk shirt is bespattered with blood.

"Fight like you have never fought before, muchachitos," he roars. "The enemy are going to try and break us at this place. I have sent for re-enforcements, but the enemy are hurling the bulk of their army here. For the glory of your country, fight! We can hold them until the re-enforcements arrive."

He turned to me, but there was no smile on his face. "I am sorry I got you into this, but since you are here, lie low in the trench. There is no chance for you to go to the rear now. God help you!"

He has gone now, but I can hear him urging his men farther down the trench. The blood seems to be clogged in my veins.

Woman Dies Near Him.

I reached for the botija of water, but dropped it. Manuel's wife—Lord, but she's brave—holds it for me while I drink. Everybody is becoming excited. Manuel's hand is trembling when he reaches for cartridges. The fat man has stopped cursing.

A fragment of stone hit Manuel's wife on the cheek. She is bleeding. Lord, but she's brave! The enemy's cannon have been turned upon us.

The fat man was killed. He was shot in the throat and falls besides me, the blood oozing like red foam from the hole.

Manuel has shouted hysterically that an enemy's column of infantry is approaching. He has told his wife to leave him and run to the rear. A shell bursts over our heads to the right with a horrible explosion and the balls of shrapnel whistle on their mission of death. No one seems to be calm.

Everybody is yelling. Sounds of men shouting and women weeping mingle with groans and curses. Manuel says. "God has gone against us."

Some one is crying for water. Manuel's wife is weeping. Manuel's wife dies. The enemy are within seventy yards of us. Manuel has dropped his rifle and has burst out crying. He holds his wife's head. Her face is full of blood.

* * * * * * * *

(Next day) I am lying on a blood covered cot in a box car, five miles away from the trench. Taylor, an American machine gun operator, brought me here. I remember having heard some one yell: "Retreat! Retreat!"

The next thing I remember was that some one dashed Manuel's brains out with a butt of a gun. I had tucked my notebook under my belt. I don't remember what became of my hat, my blankets or camera. I was running with the rest, but suddenly felt very weak.

All the muscles in my right leg seemed to refuse to work. I knew I wasn't shot, because I felt no pain. I fell down. Taylor picked me up. The doctor says a bullet pierced my leg above the knee. It is not a bad wound—nothing but a clean cut Mauser bullet hole. I shall be able to walk in a few days.

Rural Free Delivery Extensions to Benefit 87,850 Families.

Washington.—Establishment of 710 new rural mail delivery routes to serve 82,390 families and the extension of existing service so as to reach 15,460 additional families were announced the other day by Postmaster General Burleson. Nearly all of the new routes went into operation June 15.

Enlargement and extension of the rural service were made possible, a post office department statement explains, by a readjustment in April and May resulting in a reduction of operating expenses amounting to $511,262.

Orders are now awaiting the postmaster general's signature providing for new rural automobile service in many localities, as authorized by the last appropriation bill. People on these routes, when living within a radius of twenty-five miles, will enjoy local rates. The first of the routes will go into operation on Aug. 1.

LIVING COST LAID TO WOMEN.

Durand, Ex-Census Director, Says Homes Lack Efficiency.

St. Paul.—Dr. E. Dana Durand, formerly director of the United States census bureau and now in the department of economics of the University of Minnesota, placed the chief blame for the high cost of living on the consumers. And those, he said, were primarily the women.

"If the home continues to be reactionary and spurns efficiency no amount of law or theory will alter conditions," he said. "Even if the women began changing their ways now solution of the problem will take about fifty years, for a complete revolution in the moral character of the public is necessary to effectually reduce the cost of living."

MELODY DEAFNESS.

To Those Who Are Afflicted With It Music Is Simply Noise.

Every one has heard of color blindness, but few people are aware that there is such a malady as tune deafness. It prevents those affected from appreciating music, which to the melody deaf is nothing but noise.

The most intelligent people often suffer in this way. Empress Catherine of Russia used to declare that for her music was a nerve trying din, and Napoleon I. hated any form of melody. Victor Hugo had to be coaxed by the composer who put his famous lines to music. "Are not my verses," he used to say, "sufficiently harmonious to stand without the assistance of disagreeable noises?"

Doctors say that the power to appreciate music depends upon a perfect combination of the nerves and brain. Some people's nerves readily carry musical sounds to the mind, while in others nerves impede their passage to the brain cells.

Good musicians are more often born than made. Nature has provided them with nerves which instinctively carry musical chords to the brain. That is why a good musician can memorize a tune after hearing it played over once. Every note has been clearly recorded in his brain.

Those with less sensitive musical nerves receive a dull impression of any music they may hear, and thus they are unable to remember it unless it is drummed into their brain by repeated playing.—Pearson's Weekly.

Ingenious Air Bombs.

Bombs thrown from the air are usually exploded by contact. With the Martin Hale bomb, designed specially to be dropped from aeroplanes, there is a "safety pin" which renders the bomb harmless until it has been withdrawn and until a fall of about 200 feet through the air has caused the propeller to rotate and release the firing mechanism. All destructive explosives cause damage by the actual shock of the explosion—that is, by the disturbance in the air created by the expansion of the contents of the shell, by the fragments of the shell or the bullets which it contains flying in all directions, by the fumes which may be given off on explosion and which may have a stupefying or fatal effect on people in the vicinity and by the falling of bricks and mortar displaced by the bombs.—London Mail.

English as She Is Spoke.

The professor who in his address on the correct pronunciation of English said he preferred "of'n" to "often" is on the winning side. No "pronouncing dictionary" with a reputation to lose ever sounds the "t" in the middle of such words as Christmas, mistletoe, castler, often or chestnut. Good actors, whose duty it is to speak "trippingly on the tongue," can cite authority to support their pronunciation of han'kerchief and We'n'sday. And no one who knows his way about in the elocutionary field pays any regard to the spelling of such words as "extraordinary."—London Chronicle.

Early Closing Scheme.

She—Papa says that when coming to see me you must not come in a street car any more. He—Really! Does he expect me to walk all this distance? She—Of course not. He says all he asks is that you will come in a carriage hired by the hour.—New York Weekly.

Engineering Triumph.

"Why are you studying that dachshund so intently?"

"I consider him an architectural triumph of Mother Nature's," explained the bridge builder. "See how nicely the strain is calculated to the span."—Judge.

MAJOR POINTS IN WAR ZONE NOTES

Extracts Show Chief Steps In Protests to Germany.

ALSO THE GERMAN REPLIES

Kaiser Disclaims Responsibility For Neutrals on Belligerent Ships and Asserts Lusitania Was Armed—Wilson Replies Liner Was Unarmed and Insists on "Strict Accountability."

Below are given the high lights of the correspondence between the United States and Germany beginning with Germany's "War Zone" decree and including the note which led to the resignation of Mr. Bryan as secretary of state.

Feb. 4.—Germany's "War Zone" decree said:

"Every enemy merchant ship found in this war zone will be destroyed, even if it is impossible to avert dangers which threaten the crew and passengers.

"Also neutral ships in the war zone are in danger. It cannot always be avoided that attacks meant for enemy ships endanger neutral ships."

Feb. 10.—America's note of protest said:

"The sole right of a belligerent in dealing with neutral vessels on the high seas is limited to visit and search, unless a blockade is proclaimed and effectively maintained.

"If the commanders of German vessels of war * * * should destroy on the high seas an American vessel or the lives of American citizens it would be difficult * * * to view the act in any other light than as an indefensible violation of neutral rights.

"If such a deplorable situation should arise the government of the United States would be constrained to hold the imperial German government to a strict accountability * * * and to take any steps it might be necessary to take to safeguard American lives and property and to secure to American citizens the full enjoyment of their acknowledged rights on the high seas."

Feb. 18.—Germany said in reply:

"The German government is resolved to suppress, with all the means at its disposal, the importation of war material to Great Britain and her allies.

"Neutral vessels, which, despite this ample notice * * * enter these closed waters, will themselves bear the responsibility for any unfortunate accidents that may occur. Germany disclaims all responsibility for such accidents."

May 13.—America's note, following the torpedoing of the liner Lusitania without warning and the consequent loss of more than a hundred Americans, said:

"The objection to their (German submarines) method of attack * * * lies in the practical impossibility of employing submarines in the destruction of commerce without disregarding those rules of fairness, reason, justice and humanity which all modern opinion regards as imperative.

"American citizens act within their indisputable rights in taking their ships and in traveling wherever their legitimate business calls them upon the high seas.

"It (the United States) confidently expects, therefore, that the imperial German government will disavow the acts of which the United States complains, that they will make reparation, so far as reparation is possible, and that they will take immediate steps to prevent the recurrence of anything so obviously subversive of the principles of warfare.

"The imperial German government will not expect the government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens."

May 30.—Germany in response declared:

"It is known to the imperial government from trustworthy reports from its agents and neutral passengers that * * * the Lusitania had cannon aboard which were mounted and concealed below decks and that the Lusitania, as on earlier occasions, carried Canadian troops and war material.

"The German government has no intention of submitting neutral ships in the war zone which are guilty of no hostile acts to attacks by a submarine or submarines or aviators.

June 10.—America's reply states:

"The Lusitania was not armed for offensive action. She was not serving as a transport. She did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States.

"But the sinking of passenger ships involves principles of humanity which throw into the background any special circumstances of detail.

"The government of the United States therefore very earnestly and very solemnly renews the representations of its note transmitted on the 15th of May, * * * deems it reasonable to expect that the imperial German government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect of the safeguarding of American lives and American ships and asks assurances that this will be done."

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhoea. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

NEW X RAY SHOWS HAND BEHIND DOOR

Danger of Burning Eliminated by New Invention.

New York.—After fifteen years of experimentation marked by many reverses and disappointments, Charles H. Stanley, an electrical engineer, announced that he had perfected an X ray device which will mark as great an advance in the science of surgery and therapeutics as the original X ray of Roentgen.

A demonstration of the machine in Stanley's laboratory made it appear that the forecast by Guglielmo Marconi that one would some time be able to look from one room into another through the dividing walls is about to be realized.

Through an ordinary door an inch and an eighth thick and twelve feet from the ray generated by the electrical machine a reporter was able to distinguish clearly the bones of the hand of Stanley moving on the other side, as well as to see the outlines of his hand. This test was made simply to illustrate the immensely greater power of the new machine over the old X ray devices. It is only one of the improvements claimed by Stanley.

The principal value of the discovery lies in the fact that the rays may be applied to patients for extended periods of time without the slightest danger of burns resulting. The danger of burns, often incurable, has been one of the most serious drawbacks to the use of the old X ray and often has offset the advantages accruing.

The Roentgen rays are ordinarily applied only long enough to obtain a picture of the wound, fractured bone, dislocation or diseased portion of the body on which it is proposed to operate. With the new rays a photograph is not necessary, as the rays may be continued an indefinite length of time on the patient, and the surgeon may work directly in the ray.

JESS ORDERS BIG SHOES.

Measurement Shows the Champion Has "Some Feet."

Olathe, Kan. — Jess Willard, the world's champion heavyweight, formerly a cowboy in the west, ordered a pair of "cowboy boots," sending his measurements by mail to a cowboy boot factory here.

The boots are number 10½ of regular boot width, and the calf measurement is twenty inches, the largest by two inches of any of the 130,000 pairs of boots made by this firm, who have been in business here thirty-five years.

Every stitch is hand sewed, and before the pair is completed they will have passed through the hands of sixteen shoemakers, each of whom does one particular part.

For Tired Feet—Feather-weight Arch Supports, at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair Shop, 110 Cayuga St.—adv.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. —Adv.

TESTS NEW GAS BOMB.

American Inventor Tries Out His Chemicals on Condemned Cattle.

Chicago.—A series of exhaustive experiments are being conducted at Fort Sheridan, under the supervision of United States army officers, with the chemical bomb recently invented by Dr. L. R. Fowzer. Condemned cattle are the subjects. Dr. Fowzer declares their death will be instantaneous.

A representative of the war department conferred with Dr. Fowzer, and it developed that government chemists have been working for a year to perfect a bomb almost identical with Dr. Fowzer's.

"I would not be afraid to tell any one everything used in the bomb," said Dr. Fowzer, "and defy production of the bomb. The manufacturing process is the secret. I am glad the United States government is investigating my bomb. This country can have it for a tithe of what it would cost any foreign nation.

"My bomb will accomplish more toward eliminating war than your pleas for peace. When science succeeds in making war so deadly that men will recoil from it in horror then peace will have made gigantic strides."

While Dr. Fowzer's claim pertains only to the chemical properties of the bomb, the method of loading and shooting it from a cannon is something which he expects will require considerable experiment. This problem, however, seems to have already been solved by the government. The containers and a thin steel casing have been perfected.

$2,000,000 HOUR WAR'S COST.

Total For First Year Will Be $17,400,000,000, Says French Economist.

Paris. — Captain Edmund Thery, widely known as an economist, estimates that the total military expenditures for the first year of the war will be 50,000,000,000 francs ($10,000,000,000) for the seven allies and 37,000,000,000 francs ($7,400,000,000) for Germany, Austria and Turkey.

This makes an average of 7,250,000,000 francs ($1,440,000,000) a month, 242,000,000 francs ($48,400,000) a day, 10,000,000 francs ($2,000,000) an hour.

He believes the economic powers of Great Britain, France and Russia can support the strain much more easily than their opponents.

Rastus Again.

"Well, Rastus, what did that chap say when you kicked him out of the house?" asked the colonel.

"Nothin', cunnell," replied the old darky. "He was jes put out, dat's all."—Judge.

Tommy's Answer.

Teacher—Tommy, you may define the difference between "awhile" and "a time." Tommy—Why, when pa says he's going downtown for awhile ma says she'll bet he's going for a time.—Boston Transcript.

Worms Cause Many Children's Ills

Worms, by thousands, rob the child of nourishment, stunt its growth, cause Constipation, Indigestion, Nervousness, Irregular Appetite, Fever and sometimes Spasms. Kickapoo Worm Killer gives relief from all these. One-fourth to one of these pleasant candy lozenges, taken as directed, kill and remove the Worms, regulate your child's bowels and restore its health and vitality. Get an original 25c. box from your Druggist. Don't endanger your child's health and future when so sure and simple a remedy can be had.

D/34

DO YOU KNOW THAT

The Harley Davidson

is the only high-class motorcycle company which has not cut the price on any machine this season?

THERE'S A REASON!

The Harley Output is almost sold—if you want a machine ... ORDER NOW!

Prices from $200 to $285. Get Our Easy Payment Plan.

THE HARLEY SHOP

121 South First Street

FARM BOYS AT FAIR

A change will be made this year in the selection of the farm boys who will be guests of the State during fair week. Commissioner Huson is authority for the statement. Heretofore the granges throughout the State have named candidates for the honor of being enrolled in the agricultural regiment of 100 sturdy young farmers, from which selections were made.

In an effort to broaden the scope of work and extend the interest Commissioner Huson has worked out a new plan for recruiting members. In a personal letter he will ask each of the teachers of agriculture in the fifty high schools of the state having such a course to designate one boy to represent the institution in the camp. This will make a company of fifty, which will be brought up to full strength through the selection of candidates by the granges.

The encampment will occupy the same site as a year ago. It will be under strict military discipline, the boys being subject to the same regulations as soldiers in the field. The tents and other camp materials will be borrowed from the National Guard. The educational program will be worked out early this month.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	3	11	0
Louisville	1	9	1
At Indianapolis—	R.	H.	E.
Milwaukee	7	14	4
Indianapolis	9	9	2
At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	13	7	2
Columbus	5	8	5
At Cleveland—	R.	H.	E.
Kansas City	7	13	2
Cleveland	0	11	3

Mrs. Mitchell Fitzer, of Syracuse, is visiting her brother, Julius Prowda, manager of the Happy Hour theatre.

Fulton Keynotes

Mrs. Earl Brown is improving under the environs of Clifton Springs.

* * *

Miss Carrie James of Hannibal has been the guest of Fulton friends.

* * *

Ansel P. Barry of the Safety First Chemical Co. of Syracuse is the guest of L. J. McQuade of the Clark House. During his stay in the city Mr. Barry is renewing many old acquaintances here.

* * *

Charles O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. O'Brien, has returned from Yale to spend the summer in this city. Mr. O'Brien, who has been taking an arts course at the university, expects to enter Harvard Law school in the fall.

* * *

Miss W. C. Bogue of S. 1st st., who spent last week in New York city returned home today.

* * *

Undertaker E. S. Brown has completed some extensive alterations ih his place of business in 1st st.

* * *

The Walker barber shop in the Clark House is in the hands of a competent interior decorator.

* * *

E. H. Geisler, the Cayuga st. druggist, has just completed a model windshield which he claims will revolutionize the industry. The model is on exhibition in his store and can be attached to any car in a few minutes.

* * *

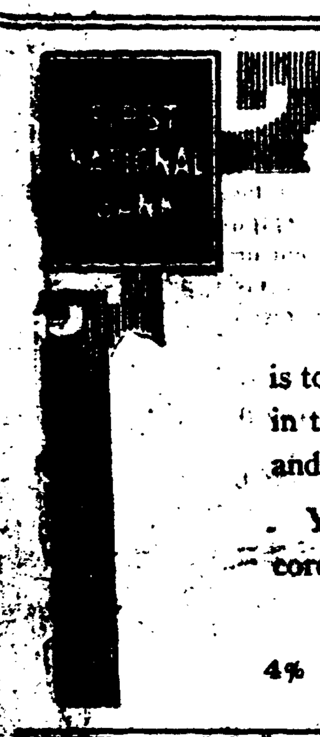
Leland Rogers last week purchased a new Buick car.

* * *

Miss Trixie Dix, with a number of friends, motored this week to Adams, where they were the guests of Miss Dix's sister, Mrs. Beth Dewey.

* * *

Earl Osborn left today for his future home at Angola, N.Y.



THE SAFE WAY TO SAVE

is to deposit each surplus dollar to your credit in the First National Bank where it is secure and earns more money for you.

Your account, whether large or small, is cordially invited.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BUFFALO—Daily May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo ... P. M. Leave Cleveland ... P. M.
Arrive Cleveland ... A. M. Arrive Buffalo ... A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Chicago.
New York at Cincinnati.
Brooklyn at St. Louis.
Philadelphia at Pittsburgh.

Results Yesterday

New York, 8; Cincinnati, 0.
St. Louis, 4; Brooklyn, 2.
Chicago-Pittsburgh; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	27	20	.574
Philadelphia	27	20	.574
St. Louis	27	26	.509
Brooklyn	24	25	.490
Boston	23	24	.489
Pittsburgh	22	24	.478
New York	19	25	.442
Cincinnati	19	25	.432

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Cleveland at Boston.
Detroit at Philadelphia.
St. Louis at New York.
Chicago at Washington.

Results Yesterday

New York, 9; St. Louis, 4.
Other games postponed; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	32	19	.627
Detroit	32	21	.604
Boston	25	18	.581
New York	25	23	.531
Washington	22	22	.500
Cleveland	20	27	.426
St Louis	19	32	.373
Philadelphia	18	31	.367

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Newark.
Chicago at Buffalo.
Pittsburgh at Brooklyn.
Kansas City at Baltimore.

Results Yesterday

St. Louis, 1; Newark, 0.
Kansas City, 9; Baltimore, 4.
Pittsburgh, 5; Brooklyn, 2.
Chicago-Buffalo; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	32	21	.604
St. Louis	26	21	.553
Pittsburgh	26	22	.542
Brooklyn	27	24	.529
Newark	26	24	.520
Chicago	26	25	.510
Baltimore	19	30	.388
Buffalo	19	34	.358

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Utica at Albany.
Syracuse at Troy.
Scranton at Binghamton.
Wilkesbarre at Elmira.

Results Yesterday

All games postponed; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	20	13	.606
Elmira	21	15	.583
Troy	17	15	.531
Binghamton	17	15	.531
Scranton	16	16	.500
Wilkesbarre	17	18	.486
Albany	14	20	.412
Syracuse	12	22	.353

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Buffalo at Montreal.
Rochester at Toronto.
Newark at Providence.
Richmond at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Richmond, 3; Jersey City, 1.
Rochester, 3; Toronto, 0.
Other games postponed; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	22	13	.629
Providence	22	17	.564
Rochester	21	19	.525
Richmond	21	20	.512
Montreal	21	21	.500
Newark	18	20	.474
Toronto	19	23	.452
Jersey City	15	26	.366

J. J. Williams of Boulder, Col., after successfully using Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh for sores, mud fever and thrush, writes: "Your Balsam is worth many dollars to horsemen and stock owners."

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

EAGERLY ENTERING THE FRAY.

—Carter in New York Evening Sun.

Nearly 1,000,000 Men of Roumania Wait Signal to Join Allies

Bucharest, June 15.—Roumania has always passionately supported thec ause of peace, and would never have provoked a general war in order to build up a greater. Roumania. But Wilhelm II. and Count Tisza have diabolically brought about the catastrophe.

The more enemies Germany has against her the quicker the war will be ended. The dawn of peace would be hastened not only on account of the number of her enemies but also because the German spirti of confidence would be shattered and many lives would be spared.

But Roumania has another reason for going to war against Austria, under whose sway live 4,000,000 Roumanians in Transylvania, the Banat of Temevar and Bukomina. These Roumanians are suffering real martyrdom and yearn for their salvation at our hands. If we should create a Roumania of 14,000,000 souls instead of 8,000,000, we could thus serve the cause of progress of civilization with greatr energy.

To all seeing men the victory of the Quaruple Entente is certain with or without Roumanie's help. Nevertheless, we have 90,000 trained troops, who could occupy important strategic positions. Our army would be valuable to the allies. We could furnish a new battlefront on the Hungarian plain, where the allies could join us by the Danube after the capture of Constantinople.

We should already be fighting Austria-Hungary if a complete agreement had been reached with the allies regarding Greater Roumania's future frontiers. It is impossible, I insist, impossible that an agreement will not be reached; or that Roumania will not enter the campaign. The nation is trembling with impatience to begin them ost popular and most just war in which a people ever engaged.

DARDANELLES ATTACKS TO BE PUSHED WITH VIGOR

(Continued from Page One)

ed a definite and successful end and asked if there was any truth in it.

"None whatever," was Mr. Asuqith's reply.

The War Office late in the afternoon issued this announcement regarding the campaign for Constantinople:

"The situation on the Gallipoli Peninsula has developed into trench warfare. After our success on June 4 the Turks have evinced a great respect for our offensive, and by day and night they have to submit to captures of trenches.

"On the night of June 11-12 two regiments of a British regular brigade made a simultaneous attack on the advanced Turkish trenches and, after severe fighting (which included the killing of many snipers, succeeded in maintaining themselves in spite of bombs, in the captured position."

PROHIS LOSE ARIZONA FIGHT OVER CHRISTENING

New York.—Champagne will be used to chirsten the new $15,000,000 superdreadnought Arizona at the Nevy Yard, Saturday, despite the fact that Arizona is a prohibition State and over the protests of national, State and local temperance leaders.

It had been stated that Governor Hunt, of Arizona, with whom the choice of a christening fluid lay, had selected water from the first flow over the spillways of the great Roosevelt dam in Arizona.

The ship will be christened by Miss Esther Ross, 17, daughter of W. W. Ross, of Prescott, a wealthy pioneer of Arizona. Miss Ross is considered one of the most beautiful young women of the State. The Right Rev. Julius W. Atwood, Episcopal Bishop of Arizona, will pronounce the invocation.

ORDUNA CARRIED GUNS, SAYS U. S. ENGINEER

Milwaukee, June 16.—Walter F. Byer, engineer in charge of lighthouses on the Panama Canal, has sent to the State Department an affidavit that the Orduna, now a Cunarder, mounted what appeared to be six-inch guns after clearing from the American port of Balboa for Liverpool.

He declares the ship's officers claimed the supposed guns were dummies, btu declares they would by their appearance warrant an enemy ship in firing on the Orduna without warning.

3 BOROUGHS PARADE FOR "HONEST WEIGHTS"

New York.—"Our business method is to give honest weights and measures. We believe honest goods can be sold to honest men by honest methods."

That was the slogan of three parades yesterday in Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn, by many thousands of retail dealers and their delivery wagons and motor trucks. It was the chief feature of "Honest Weights and Measures Week" an innovation of Commissioner Joseph Hatrigan.

SAYS SUNDAY DAMAGED HOUSE; ASKS $3034

Philadelphia, June 16.—Charles M. Keekan, has started suit for $3034.75 against the Philadelphia Evangelist Association for damage, which he claims was done to his house while Billy Sunday and his workers occupied it during the recent revival campaign.

LOCAL FISHERMEN GET RECORD CATCH

This morning Raymond Haggerty and Roy Pollard of the West Side made a record for themselves as "fishers of fish."

From the waters of Lake Neahtawanta eleven black bass were hauled by the two men. The largest of the finny creatures landed weighed four pounds. The total weight of the catch was about thirty pounds.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 153 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1915 | Price One Cent

SWAT THE FLY— For the Baby's Sake

Child Welfare Day—Sunday, June 20

By Order State Department of Health

SWAT THE FLY— For the Baby's Sake

Concrete and Masonry Trenches, Metal Lined, Protect Austrian Frontier Line

ITALIAN ARMIES READY FOR STRONG OFFENSIVE

Rome, June 17.—Messages coming from the Isonzo front show that the Austrians have been making extensive preparations for the defence of the Gorz line. Elaborate trench works have been constructd, one after the other, for miles along the river. These trenches for the most part are built of concrete and masonry and ingenious system of mines has been devised to protect them.

The War Office is making no announcement of the operations along the lower Isonzo except a reference to the completeness of the Austrian guard against night surprise attacks. Elsewhere on the frontier isolated engagements are occuring. The greatest concentration of Austrians is taking place in the Carina zone, where the Italian leaders are looking for a sharp Austrian offensive.

The last War Office statement, available for publication this morning, says:

"On the Tyrol-Trentino-Cadore front we gradually are occupying dominating points. Except for distant artillery fire and new but unsuccessful attacks on June 13 against the summit of Vallone, in the upper valley of the Piave (Carnic Alps), our adversary has not [illegible]

"More intense attacks have been made repeatedly by the enemy in Carnia, either near the defiles of Val Sesis, which still is strongly held by us, or especially against the rear line of Mont Avostanis, to the defile of Monte Croce. Here on the morning of June 14 the enemy made a vigorous attack, preceded by an intence artillery fire, which began in the night and became very violent at daybreak. The enemy was repulsed and pursued at the point of the bayonet.

"Along the Isonzo, on the line from Podgora to Montforton and to the intersection of the Monfalcone Canal, reconnaissances showed the precise quality of the defensive works prepared by the enemy on th Isonzo front. They include entrenchments(sometimes in several lines and often in masonry or in concrete reinforced by metallic sheeting and protected by a network of mines or batteries often placed below the earth.

"A very active night surveillance is exercised by the enemy, aided by searchlights and rockets with telegrahic and telephonic communication.

"An examination of some of our wounded shows that the enemy is using explosive projectiles. An inspection of the remnants of projectiles where there has been fighting also shows that the enemy has been fighting also shows that the enemy has been employing devices eyplicity condemned by international conventions."

MOVABLE BATTERIES NOW TURKS' SOLE DEFENSES

Athens, June 17.—All the forts in the Dardanelle Straits have been destroyed and the defense now depends netirely on movable batteries.

The enormous number of wounded in Gallipoli, which the Turks themselves admit is 80,000, has sown despair among the Turks in Constantinople. Though confidence is still felt, the straits are impregnable, it is realized that if the losses continue at the same rate the defence will soon break down.

A shortage of cereals and in fact a shortage of water have commenced to be felt. There is also great scarcity of petroleum. Other necessities of life are normal, and money is plentiful.

Anxiety is felt as to the supply of ammunition. The factories organized by the Germans run with German skilled labor are now working night and day.

The number of German officers and non-commissioned officerrs with the Turkish troops is placed at 12,000. All the guns on Gallipoli are manned exclusively by the Germans.

Even if Enver Pasha, Talaat Bey and their followers were so [illegible] action that would render them free agents. The conduct of the war and the administration of the departments of state are effectively controlled by the Germans. The Sultan is a mere figurehead.

The grip obtained by the Germans is not only effective on the country in general, but also on Enver Pasha. It is impossible for the latter to break away from Germany even if he wished. Every Turk who counts has résigend himself to the idea that no other alternative is left to them but go on fighting and trust the Germans to see them through.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 4

Because the Fulton Merchant Helps Your Newspaper, Your Lodge, Your Church, Your Home

These factors in what makes life worth living to all of us are the same factors making life worth living to our merchants. They advertise in our Fulton papers, enabling them to collect news that keeps us informed of what is going on in the world. They are members of your lodge, your benevolent associations, your club. They sit in the next pew to you in your own church, helping you support the religious and charitable activities of our community. Their home is in the same block as your own; your wives may be friends and your children may be playmates. If this home is attractive and well kept, you enjoy and its enhanced value adds to the value of your property. If he is prosperous and happy, if his children are healthy and well educated; if his family is cultured and contented; he raises for you the standard of living in Fulton. The local merchants' social interests are identical with your own. Support him and you make Fulton do much the more livable a city.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

BLUE JACKETS TO RESCUE IMPERILLED AMERICANS IN MEXICO

Washington, June 17.—Six hundred marines and bluejackets have been ordered ready at San Diego to proceed to the rescue of one hundred Americans near Esperanza, in the State of Sonoro, Mexico, where there is momentaary expectation that they will be attacked by the Yaqui Indians, who are again on the warpath.

Simultaneously with this news, the American Red Cross gave out reports showing that in wide areas of Mexico, there will practically be no harvest. The peasants have been robbed by soldiers of their horses and cattle and men, women and children are leaving the farming districts for the cities in large numbers.

"The only source of supply of food for the coming year is the United States and with no work and prices for food payable in United States currency or its equivalent, there will undoubtedly be much suffering unless charitable persons come to their assistance, says the Red Cross statement.

The expeditionary force of sailors and marines will be under Rear Admiral Howard, who is now on his flagship, the Colorado, at San Diego. The Raleigh and the Buffalo are [illegible] at Quaymas.

It is expected that Colorado will stop at Tabari Bay, which is opposite the valley. The Americans in danger are about twenty-five miles in the interior.

Admiral Howard will advise local Mexican leaders that the United States "has no intention of acquiring territory". Similar advice has been sent to Villa and Carranza.

The State Department will try first the "Hugh Scott" method, sending a naval officer or two to parley with the Indians and represent to them the seriousness of the consequences if they do not abandon attack on Americans and American property.

Officials of the State Department are fast coming to the conclusion that the negotiations between Villa and Carranza will prove abortice and that before long it will be necessary for the administration to act.

J. D. JR. ACCUSED BY U. SINCLAIR

Oil Magnate's Son Blamed for Mine Deaths by Writer

New York, June 17.—Upton Sinclair has made an open letter to John D. Rockefeller, jr., holding the son of the oil magnate responsible for Colorado mine "murders" and recommending that the United States Government confiscate the properties.

Mr. Rockefeller's answer could not be obtained last night. Leonard Abbott, one of the thirty-one who signed the letter, said:

"Mr. Sinclair originated the letter, I agree with all it says."

Some of the most startling passages in the letter to Mr. Rockefeller are:

"In April of last year you appeared before an investigation committee of Congress and assumed, under oath, responsibility for the policy of the Colorado coal companies. Soon afterward came the Ludlow massacre, and for the first time the truth about the strike situation was forced into the press.

"You then endeavored to evade the responsibility you had admitted, and in a statement to the President of the United States, and in your testimony before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, you professed ignorance as to what had been done and lack of power to prevent it.

But since then we have been given the opportunity to read your correspondence with the president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. And we know, beyond possibility of doubt, that you directed the policy of the companies, and are personally responsible for all they did.

"It is true that the situation in Colorado is the result of a long series of acts of cruelty committed before you came into control. But these acts you have made your own and the policy of oppression and violence has been adopted whole-heartedly and completely by you.

"The miners in Colorado live in towns owned outright and managed autocratically. They live in company houses; they worship in company churches, they trade in company stores with company money. They have no redress for any grievances through political methods because the Mayor of the town is a company clerk the justice of the peace a company boss, the sheriff a company superintendent.

"For thirty years you and your associates have banished American institutions from the coal countries of Colorado and have reduced the mining population to utter slavery. You kill twelve times as many men in accidents are are killed in similar mines in Austria. Your control of justice is such that in most cases there has not been even a coroner's inquest. There has not been a cent of damages paid in some districts for ten years.

"We, the undersigned men and women, having watched the course of evetns and made up our minds concerning them. * * * we indict you before the bar of humanity.

GREAT LOCUST SWARMS HIDE SUN HOURS

New Orleans, June 17.—After doing millions of dollars of damage to cereal and fruit crops of Nicaragua, swarms of locusts so vast as to obscure the sun for hours, have invaded the Atlantic coast section of Honduras and are ravaging the great banana plantations near Ceiba and Truxilla. Passengers who arrived in New Orleans today from Ceiba told of the appearance of the locusts over the city of Ceiba on June 9.

They said that for several hours the sky was hidden above and to the south of the city by millions of insects. They had the appearance of a great cloud, moving rapidly and getting more dense every minute. The high mountains back of the city were entirely obscured for more than an hour.

After hanging over the city the locusts began to settle down in the rich banana valleys to the south. In spots the ground was even covered to a depth of several inches and so numerous were the hungry insects that they left great trees bare of leaves and bark.

LAD ARRANGES BIG WILSON RECEPTION

Washingtong, June 16.—President Wilson shook hands yesterday with several hundred boys and girls from different parts of the country.

Charles Beales, small son of Representative-elect C. W. Beales, of Gettysburg, Pa., wrote the President saying he would like to see him. The President made an appointment and the lad brought his brothers and sisters. Children from the Immaculate Conception school in Baltimore also saw the President.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Thursday, June 17, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

A Record of Failure

Any impression abroad that Mr. Bryan must be taken seriously, and that his attitude on international issues is a matter of importance, is due entirely to ignorance of his career in American politics. His record has been one of unbroken defeat, even though his eloquence and powers of endurance always insured him an extended hearing on any issue which it pleased him to champion.

From the time when he sprang into national prominence in 1896 down to the day Woodrow Wilson was elected president he never succeeded in winning a majority of the citizens of the United States to his side. He experimented with numerous issues, but always with the same result.

He ran for president the first time on the issue of free silver and was defeated. In the years following he advocated anti-imperialism, government ownership of railroads, the guarantee of bank deposits, and a variety of minor fads. The public always distrusted him, no matter how plausible the terms of his appeal, and invariably defeated him.

The division in the ranks of the Republican party in 1912, due to the ingratitude and vindictiveness of Theodore Roosevelt, made Wilson president, and Wilson, actuated solely by reasons of practical politics, made Bryan secretary of state. But the President never had any illusions either about his judgment or his discretion, and he was always merely a figurehead when there was important business in the Department of State.

The people three times repudiated Bryan at the polls and would do so a fourth time more emphatically than ever before if they had opportunity. The greatest mistake foreigners could make would be to assume that he could rally an influential following, or that his utterances carried any weight in our national councils.—Rochester Chronicle-Democrat.

Small Profit for the State

George N. Ostrander, whose company controls 200,000 acres of land and who is one of the largest lumbermen in the State, admitted before the constitutional conservation committee that the revenue which the State could obtain by lumbering on State lands would be small. Since he advocates the cutting of timber on State land, he certainly put it as high as he reasonably could. Nevertheless, he said that judging from his experience the income would be about $405,000 annually, "without taking into consideration the cost of administration." It is absolutely certain that the expenses of administration would be very high, so that a net income would be extremely small, if any were reached at all.

The State did a little lumbering at the tract of the Dannemora prison. The tact was cleared up and the State obtained $30,000 from 6,000 acres, according to the man in charge. Over a million trees were planted. But in the testimony before the commission, nothing was said about what it cost to get the $30,000. As a million trees will plant about 1,000 acres, it is apparent that the cleaning up of the 6,000 acres left 5,000 bare. As it costs a private corporation from $8 to $10 to plant an acre of land with trees, according to the testimony of Mr. Ostrander, it appears that it would cost the State more than $40,000 merely to plant the trees from the land that was cut over, and from which it got $30,000.—Watertown Times.

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

SUNDAY CONCERTS

The recent probability for Sunday afternoon band concerts in Fulton received a damper when the Common Council did not see fit to contribute toward that end. It is supposed the council saw the big crying necessities in other local affairs demanding "first aid" from the city's treasury.

However, in spite of the fact that Sunday band concerts are not financially backed, it is not believed that such concerts are regarded only as a luxury on the city's program. Such a provision would be meeting a necessity. Anything that is good and binds together in a common interest the people of any place is a medium for community building.

When a lot of people are happy together then they work better together; hence, greater things may be accomplished.

Aside from boating and visiting the movie houses our city is narrowly confined in harmless, healthy-minded amusements. Were Sunday concerts possible hundreds of people would wend their way parkwards and a good two hours or more would be spent in the open amid beautiful surroundings. The joy afforded whole families would be so wholesome as to leave neither heartache nor headache in its wake next day.

Would it not be possible for each fraternal organization in the city to vouch for one band concert? Reliable information states the cost per concert need not exceed $30.

MORBID MEN DEFENDED

[COMMUNICATED]

Editor Times: We would rally to the defence of the so-termed morbid man who "Silent Partner" finds no use or good in.

"There are a few morid men in this country. A morbid man is a cold-storage product, and cannot command much in the market. Managers have little, if any, use for morbid men. The fellow with a prostrated purpose, with atrophy of ambition; the chap that has distemper in his wanting to do, is at best a boil."

What a sweeping denunciation of probably some perfectly well meaning people. And, above all, what a fib is discovered, when the story is related that a cold-storage product cannot command much in the market. Truly this is good shop reasoning. Really this tries our patience, and with a haughty sniff—do deny it. A whole hogshead full of general managers that we have met were the chilliest propositions—or hams—you ever knew. Men—not porkers—who were there with a tidy stipend of from $10,000 to $20,000 per annum—like slabs of marble and perhaps as responsive and not even greasy. Morbidly speaking, why are they valuable, as it is a fact, they are? Is it because they are not imbued with an overdose of prostration or ambitious atrophy? Excitement doesn't supplant brains with them.

Intelligent effort is sometimes confused with morbidity, and according to Silent Partner, the victim should suffer. Perhaps the victim is a gentleman, and as a result, is none too demonstrative—what then? Is gentle breeding tabooed?

Morbidity in the human race is unknown. A cow may be morbid in the pure sense, because we doubt if she has the think-tank capacity of even the worst sample of the human race. "Prostrated Purpose" and "Atrophy of Ambition" are inspiring phrases, but they sometimes cause a manager considerable trouble, worry and annoyance. We know because one told us all about it.

But continuing, "Silent Partner" defines the faults of 100,000 systems at a crack:

"One unbraced, drooping, flagging member of an organization can get every other member of the working force walking lame, halting, hesitating. One man with mangy manners, one kinked, contaminated individual, can put a first-class bunch of men on the blink. If you have any spavined balkers, any kickers, strikers or squealers, quietly slip them out of the organization. To tolerate a mule-man is injustice to the horse-sense fellows who are willing to work."

Now this may be so, knowing what we do about animals. What about the manager though? Is he showing the highest grade of efficiency by ignorance or refusing to sound the depths of the unbraced, the drooping, flagging member?

Probably not—if he lets him go, and besides—many a rascally manager has dropped an apparent drone for less than morbidity.

A few years ago, an immense house adopted a new and novel plan for deriving the greatest efficiency. Of course this plan might not suffice for an establishment which was dealing in strictly fresh meat. Anyhow the president of the concern—somewhat of a student of psychology—issued a call to all former employes who had left the firm or had been dumped by a department head. Upon the response, each was asked why he had left. Other detailed information was sought. It was found that in over twenty per cent. of the cases, the fault laid with the manager or department head who lacked interpretation in the case. Most of the former employes were given another chance, either in another department or with a different understanding. The results were marvellous and most of the morbid ones received their proper advancement in time.

All in all, Mr. Editor, in a brief summary, we would suggest the gentler term, depicting a lack of interest, to Silent Partner, that which is so common with the mistakes of managers—"misinterpretation." As for morbidity—why there hain't no such animal.

Defender.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 17.—In the opinion of George W. Wickersham, a delegate-at-large to the Constitutional Convention and a former United States attorney general, there are two vital problems which the delegates are quite likely to solve and recommend to the people for adoption. One is a re-organization of the method of doing business now employed by the State; the other is to empower the legislature to enact a simple practice act which in a word would eliminate delays and simplify the intricate and voluminous machinery of the law with relation to the judiciary and its powers.

General Wickersham is convinced that there is a great waste each year in the administration of the State government and that the functions of departments overlap in numerous instances. He argues that there should be proper appropriations for needed purposes but a curb should be affixed to the custom of needless amounts.

"This all leads up to the proposed budget system," said the general. "If adopted I have no doubt but that the State would save large sums annually. As I remember the report of the commissioner of efficiency and economy, there are one hundred and sixty-nine different bureaus of departments in the State government.

"And what I have said concerning the budget leads in turn to the proposed amendment relative to a short ballot. The fewer the officers, the more efficient the service, providing of course, none but useless positions are done away with."

General Wickersham is impressed with the proposition which would make longer the terms of State officers. He feels that under the present method scarce time is permitted for the mastering of office details before there is a change of administration.

In discussing the various proposals with reference to the judiciary, General Wickersham explained that the delays attending trials and appeals have long been a source of dissatisfaction. He himself has presented a proposed amendment to the Constitution by providing that there shall be a standing commission on the rules and procedure in the courts in which shall be vested exclusive power to establish rules of procedure not subject to amendment or abrogation by the legislature. The commission shall be composed of the chief judge, and an associate judge of the Court of Appeals selected from time to time by the associated judges of the court, the presiding justices of the several appellate divisions, a county judge from each of the second, third and fourth judicial departments and a surrogate from the first judicial department, and four members of the bar, one to be designated by the governor from each judicial department.

Few of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention are likely to play a more important part in the deliberation of that body than General Wickersham and his opinion to the effect that but a small proportion of the proposed amendments will be approved appears to be founded upon excellent grounds grounds. During the last Constitutional Convention, four hundred and fifty proposed amendments were presented and but thirty-five were adopted by the delegates.

WILSON THINKS WAR IS ENDING

Predicts Peace at Early Date in Storm-Tossed Mexican Republic

Washington, June 16.—Statements made by President Wilson and Manuel Bonilla, the envoy of General Villa, indicated an optimistic view regarding an early peaceful settlement of affairs in Mexico.

President Wilson told callers the situation in Mexico seems to be taking shape.

"A peaceful agreement can be made, and I have very strong hopes that it will be reached," said Bonilla.

The incident of holding up the Red Cross supplies at Piedras Negras by General Rosalio Hernandez, a Villa comander, which created alarm last night, was considerably cleared up by the receipt of the following telegram at the Villa agency here:

Piedras Negras, June 15, 1915.

"I have never refused to let provisions from the Red Cross go to Monclova, and only delayed by answer awaiting further instructions from General Villa, who has already ordered all kinds of guarantees to the Red Cross. I deeply appreciate the philanthropic services of the Red Cross to our people.

"General Rosallio Hernandez."

Coupled with these developments came the discovery that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, former Charge d'Affaires in Mexico City for the United States, has been recalled from Europe, presumably to be sent back to Mexico. The belief exists here that the President intends to send him to General Carranza and General Villa in an effort to induce them to agree to an armistice pending peace negotiations.

"The proposition made by General Villa to Mr. Carranza," said Bonilla, "is a real test that will demonstrate whether the latter is a patriot and a civilized man willing to economize the lives of his countrymen and the resources of his fatherland for the highly important task of reconstructing Mexico, or a man possessed with the idea that he is the only one that must rule over the Mexicans."

COMPENSATION LAW FOUGHT BY RAILROAD CO.

Albany, June 16.—The constitutionality of the workmen's compensation law attacked by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was defended today before the Court of Appeals by Deputies Attorney General E. Clarence Akin and Harold J. Hinman. The main contention of the railroad company that the law offends the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution which provides against the deprivation of life, liberty or property without due process of law, was upset by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, third department. The appellate court sustained the decision of the workmen's compensation commission awarding damages to the widow and children of Christen Jensen, a longshoreman, killed while unloading the Southern Pacific Steamship El Oriente at New York. The test of the constitutionality of the law is being made on the Jensen and two similar cases.

The compensation law is also attacked under the decision of the Court of Appeals in the Ives case which held that the Wainwright compensation law was unconstitutional. Attorney General Woodbury contends that the amendment of the State Constitution by a vote of the people as subbested in the Ives case decision overcomes this objection. He also points out that the Southern Pacific Railroad in taking advantage of the provisions of the workmen's compensation law by becoming a self insurer exempted itself from liability of suit for industrial accidents. This act, he maintains, indicates that the company waived the question of the constitutionality of the law in the first instance.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

THEY LACE IN FRONT
To know them is to love them.
GOSSARD CORSETS
Sold and fitted at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4386
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

PASS A LAW

Are your neighbors very bad?
Pass a law!
Do they smoke? Do they chew?
Are they always bothering you?
Don't they do as you would do?
Pass a law!

Are your wages awful low?
Are the prices much too high?
Do the wife and babies cry
'Cause the turkeys all roost high?
Pass a law!

When M. D. finds new diseases,
Pass a law!
Got the mumps or enfermisis,
Measles, croup or "epertitis"?
Lest we all fly to pieces,
Pass a law!

Are the lights a-burnin' red?
Pass a law!
Paint 'em green or paint 'em white,
Close up all them places tight
My! Our town is such a sight.
Pass a law!

No matter what the trouble is,
Pass a law!
Goodness sakes, but ain't it awful.
My! What are we going to do?
Almost anything ain't lawful,
And the judge is human, too,
Pass a law!
—Rochester, Mich., Clarion.

Woman's World

Suffragist Worker From Denmark Visits America.

HELENE BERG.

The first words Helene Berg said when she was asked about the reasons for her coming to this country were: "I am really here on account of the war, and I hope America will not get into it too. It will only make it harder for all the other neutral nations if she does. You cannot help those who are already dead. You would only add your dead to ours in Europe. We 'little peoples' turn our eyes over here to this big country and are glad that one nation is at peace. No one here knows what war is. Europe is a madhouse. There will be an untold value in having one nation out of war when peace is declared."

Helene Berg is an academician, a graduate of the University of Copenhagen, social worker, lecturer and leader in the effort to better the condition of the abnormal child. For many years she has been eager to see what America is doing for its children—its defectives, delinquents, illegitimates, its helpless and its handicapped—and now that there is a lull in what she can achieve in her own land because of the war she has chosen this time to come here.

Also in another sense she has reached a stopping place in her life work since the long fight of women for the ballot has been successfully terminated in Denmark. In May the Danish diet passed a resolution conferring full suffrage upon women. There remained only a final ratification of the act, but this was felt to be a mere formality.

Helene Berg was also a leader in the woman's congress which undertook to remedy the position of the unmarried mothers of Denmark. The Danish law, when it is finally passed, will give the illegitimate child the right of inheritance from its father and the use of his name.

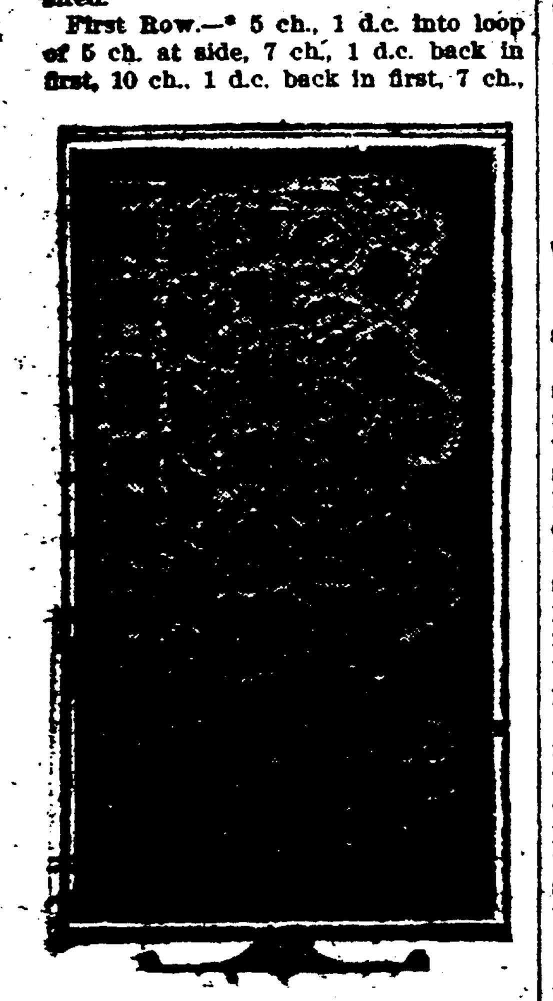
"Cora" Crochet Lace.

Abbreviations.—Ch., chain; d.c., double crochet; tr., treble.

This pattern, which measures two inches across, is suitable for trimming dainty underwear. Crochet cotton No. 30 is a good thread to use for it, and narrow ribbon may be run through the footing holes as a finish.

Insertion.—6 ch., join to form a ring, * 2 tr., 2 ch. and 2 tr. into ring; turn with 5 ch. and repeat from * (putting a group into 2 ch.) for the length desired.

First Row.—* 5 ch., 1 d.c. into loop of 5 ch. at side, 7 ch., 1 d.c. back in first, 10 ch., 1 d.c. back in first, 7 ch.,



1 d.c. back in first and 1 d.c. into same loop, repeat from * all along.

Second Row.—5 ch., 1 d.c. under each loop of chain except between trefoils, when the chain must be omitted.

Third Row.—* 5 d.c. under first loop, 5 d.c. under second, 3 picots of 4 ch., and a sl.st. into first ch., 5 d.c. under next loop, 5 d.c. under next, 5 ch.; turn—1 d.c. in first picot, 5 ch., 1 d.c. in next picot, 5 ch., 1 d.c. in next, 5 ch., 1 d.c. in first d.c. made (at beginning of row); turn and work 5 d.c. under each loop of ch., and repeat from *.

Footing, First Row.—5 ch. and 1 d.c. into each 5 ch. loop.

Second Row.—5 d.c. under each loop.

Third Row.—2 ch., 1 l.tr. into each second d.c.

Fourth Row.—2 d.c. under each 2 ch.

The Housewife by Careful Planning May Find Her Day Free From Care.

It is often true that holidays for the family in general are not at all holidays for the housekeeper—so much food to cook, so many dishes to wash, extra work at all times. But every housekeeper can make the glorious Fourth a true Independence day, free from work and worry, even if she has a number of guests.

Make the cleaning as easy as possible and do it several days in advance, so that the rooms need only the very slightest brushup the day before the holiday. Plan your menu for the six or more meals of the week end and market for them in the middle of the week before the stores are crowded, when you will get better service and materials. As it is likely to be "typical scorching" weather, your menu might be almost cold.

A meat loaf, a fresh ham, a veal or chicken aspic can be made two days in advance and should serve two meals or more. A quart of boiled mayonnaise and cake made either in a loaf or in small shapes will also serve for double meals, different vegetables being used on different days and the same cake being iced differently. All of the desserts of the Bavarian cream type can be made in advance and left on ice until needed. A quantity of lemonade sirup and cocoa sirup can be prepared so that an instant beverage will be at hand.

A dozen hard boiled eggs can be used cold with potato salad or in delicious supper dishes in combination with cheese and toast. If there are many guests it is really only fair to have each make his own bed and leave his bedroom in order, and if they are informal guests none of them should mind giving a "helping hand."

Elaborate service is not necessary, and the simpler the table the more attractive it may be made. Perhaps many meals can be eaten outdoors in true "picnic" fashion. If almost all the cooking is done beforehand, as suggested, and paper plates and dishes used for at least some meals the dishwashing problem should hold no terrors.

It is much better to really enter into the spirit of a holiday than it is to have everything in the house so immaculately clean that much of your time is taken away from your guests on the day itself. Mothers too seldom enter into the fun of things, they are so often wondering whether this or that is "right." But a holiday is just the time to develop "chumship" with sons who are perhaps beginning to feel that mother doesn't know anything except housekeeping or with other young people to whom you may serve as a stimulus if you only stop thinking of housework and such things long enough to enter into their play and plans.

Cotton Wedding Gowns.

At a recent fashionable wedding the bride's dress was of fine cotton voile, almost like chiffon, made up in 1820 period style. The trimming was sheer white cotton lace, frilled to form the border of the long court train and in the form of ruchings on the short skirt. Garlands of lilies of the valley were used. The white net veil was arranged in cap style, held in place by a wreath of lilies of the valley. The shower bouquet was of the same delicate flowers, tied with long loops of white satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids' dresses were of printed organdy, trimmed with ruchings and festoon ruffles of lace, one dress being in a blue and yellow combination and the other in pink and lavender. To keep the wedding attire simple long directoire canes of white enamel were carried instead of bouquets. The hats were wide brimmed leghorns, quaintly trimmed with velvet ribbon and nosegays of tiny, old fashioned flowers.

MAKING OTHERS HAPPY.

Why Put It Off Till Tomorrow When It May Be Done Today?

Why should we postpone our loving and the being happy that goes with it?

The wife we are going to show more affection for as soon as we have made a little more of a pile. The husband we are going to be more companionable and sunshiny with as soon as we get a little more service in the house, the children whose lives we will enter into more fully as soon as we feel the pressure of circumstances a little less, the people we are going to show how genial we really are as soon as we have time—none of these ways of loving depends on the things we are waiting for.

Indeed, our opportunity comes more now than it will come when we have these things. The very pressure of our days bring us in contact with many people who most need a show of kindness and who will most warmly respond to it. The wife most needs and will most value love in her days when she is most being a helpmeet. The husband most needs and most prizes love in his years of struggle.

What are we waiting for? The kingdom of heaven is within and will not come of circumstances.—Nautilus.

Poi In Hawaii.

Poi, the Hawaiian national dish, is made by pounding up the cooked root of the taro plant—the Arum esculentum of the botanists—with water into a thick paste. When slightly fermented it has a pleasant, fruity, acid taste.

The Solution.

"I wish I knew how Blinks lives without working?"

"Open a grocery store in his neighborhood and you'll soon find out."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Taffeta Gown of Delft Blue

Designed by Hickson & Co., New York.

UPON the clever details of the costume depends to a great extent its style appeal to the feminine mind. In the costume pictured here the full skirt has as a finish at the bottom multitudinous slashes, which are bound by narrow black velvet ribbon. The color of the gown is a delft blue, with tiny Martine figures of a deeper blue. The material is a soft pussy willow taffeta, which is extremely popular this season.

Blue, for many reasons, is the most popular color that women wear because it is becoming to almost every age and almost every complexion. But, to return to the description of the gown, the full skirt is attached to a wide girdle of the material, and the tiny bodice is worn over a blouse of wide georgette crape. The front of the blouse is embroidered, and the neck is finished by a wide sailor collar with a frill of plaited net. The long sleeves of the blouse end in a ruffle which comes well down over the hands. It is tied about the wrist with black velvet bows.

The hat worn with this costume is of the broad sailor type.

Its only trimmings are a strip of figured silk, of which the gown is made, around the crown and long black velvet ties coquettishly tied under the chin. White silk stockings and black patent leather pumps complete a costume which has nearly all of the salient style features of the present season, and which, beyond question, is decidedly attractive.

ANNA MAY.

VILLAGES IN EUROPE ARE RUN BY WOMEN

Weaker Sex, Forced by Necessity, Takes Up Odd Callings.

London.—Owing to the war women are taking up many odd callings to make up for the shortage of men, but in the country women have always done whatever lies nearest to their hand.

In the village the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, may all be women, and there is at least one small town in Devon in which women form the chief business element. The principal hotel is run by a woman and her daughter; a woman deftly cuts the joints and orders her son about.

A bakeress bakes the nicest bread, and her daughter trudges far into the country with two baskets slung on her back, a picturesque figure of the female worker. The wine merchant is a woman who worked up a nice little business, while a chemist's shop is owned by a woman, to say nothing of the trades which are to be found everywhere, sweetstuff shops, fancy shops and the like.

France, being a country where universal service is the rule, is nowadays depending largely on the work of women, but even in the times of peace there were places where they were the chief citizens. At Froissy, in the department of Oise, most of the public appointments are held by women and will be until their present holders die.

There is a postmistress instead of a postmaster; the telegraph department is run by a woman; a station mistress directs the porters at the local station; a lady barber cuts the hair of the community, and the town crier also tacks "ess" on to the name of her calling.

In most cases these posts were held by husbands or brothers, and the villagers considered their female relatives were their legitimate successors. This is also partly the case in the English town mentioned, although in some cases daughters have succeeded mothers to the general satisfaction.

Another French community is also directed by women; not by chance, but by custom and necessity. This is the rocky island of Ushant, dreaded by sailors, which breeds a hardy race of seamen engaged either in the French navy or mercantile marine or in fishing, the work on land being done by women.

In Russia a community of seven villages with long names is entirely ruled by women. Each village possesses a mayoress, and the offices of magistrate and policeman and postmaster—in fact, every administrative post—are also filled by the gentler sex. Some fifty years ago a bad epidemic occurred, and the men made such a muddle of affairs and behaved so badly that the women took over the government to save themselves from starvation. So successful were they that they have continued to direct affairs ever since.

Power.

Power is a good deal like strong drink—mighty few know how to use it wisely.—Detroit Free Press.

IN BLACK AND WHITE.

Indestructible Veils In Stripes Builds Fashionable and Chic Gown.

FOR AFTERNOON.

Charming afternoon frock of wide black and white striped indestructible voile. On the skirt the stripes run crosswise, and on the plaited apronlike tunic the stripes run up and down. Vest and collar of soft, creamy lace. Wide girdle of black moire ribbon, a plaited heading finishing the lower edge.

HOLDUP MAN USES FUMES.

Thief Taking Tip From War Experiments With Poisonous Gas.

Poisonous gases are now being used by yeggmen, the New Jersey police say.

Mrs. Emma Boeglins was alone in her grocery store at Paterson when a man asked to have a can filled with kerosene. Instantly, as she removed the cap, the air was filled with sickening fumes. Dizzy, she rushed to the door and threw the can into the street, and the man ran out of the store.

The police believe the man tried out a new method to make robbery easy and expected the woman to be overcome sooner.

A Definition.

A smile—the lighting system of the face and the heating system of the heart.—Woman's Home Journal.

Curious Formation.

"Professor, you seem interested in my jelly cake."

"Yes," said the eminent geologist, "you seldom see such regular and sharply defined strata."—Kansas City Journal.

Of Two Evils.

Madge—Why should you wish to be married? It would only bring you worry.

Marjorie—I know it, dear, but I'm worrying more because I'm not married.—Life.

Financial Outlay.

This is an excellent time to get the summer slip covers made, for dressmaking will probably be at its height just at the time they will be needed. Making slip covers at home is a most economical procedure, for well made slip covers are usually rather high priced when ordered from a good upholsterer. No special skill is required for the making of such covers, but a great deal of patience and care will be essential. No sketchy fitting or sewing may be tolerated and the finished effect must be distinctly tailored. Choosing slip covers is like choosing rugs or pictures—one makes selection for a lifetime, so good material of substantial weave and attractive color should be sought, and it will be wise to purchase several yards more than the estimated need, so that new chairs added to one's collection later may be covered.

Linen in tan or striped green and tan is delightfully cool for summer slip covers and all edges should be bound with green cotton braid which comes for the purpose. Plain tan linen is liked best by some housekeepers. In some rooms cretonne slip covers will be charming. English drawing rooms are almost invariably slip covered in flower chintz during the summer months, and the effect with light muslin curtains and plenty of fresh flowers about is delightful. A winter bedroom done in pink may be changed to blue or green in summer by fresh slip covers, curtains and bed cover of cretonne.

Cut a pattern for every slip cover first. For this pattern an old sheet or strong wrapping paper may be used—and the tape measure should not be spared, for guesswork is not to be commended in making well tailored slip covers for a formal room. Pin the paper pattern over chair or lounge just as the slip cover is to go, then cut out your material. Snap fasteners are better than buttons and buttonholes, for they prevent gaping and sagging of the fabric. Make long bags also for the portieres and snap fasten them together at the top, between the hooks of the portieres.

"No Quarter Given."

"It is forbidden to declare that no quarter shall be given." So say The Hague regulations. That is a more modern rule than you would think. The Duke of Wellington said that he understood that the defenders of a fortress taken by storm had no right to quarter, although he himself did not, as a rule, adopt such a cruel practice. A century ago, when a feeble garrison stubbornly held out in a feebly fortified place against a force manifestly superior and apparently able to take it eventually, it was usually refused quarter. There was an attempt to justify the refusal by a doctrine of "futile resistance"—that he who uselessly resisted and caused assaulting or besieging forces unnecessary loss of life did not deserve to have his own life spared. But that doctrine has been rejected. Carried to its logical conclusion it would mean that every member of a weaker force in any kind of armed contest could be killed.—William M. Collier in Forum.

A Troublesome Cargo.

"An elephant's shoulder is never still" is a Hindu saying with reference to the restlessness of the animal. An Englishman tells how the elephant's passion for moving about once came near wrecking a ship.

A number of elephants were taken on board a vessel at Calcutta, and the steamer went down the Hugli river. At night it anchored off Sangor point. The sea was as still as oil, but the ship rolled so much that she was in danger of going over. The elephants had found that by swaying to and fro all together they could produce a pleasant rocking motion. As the ship had no other cargo and rode light the captain was much frightened. The mahouts, or keepers, were hurried down into the hold, and each one, seated on his own beast, made him "break step," but they had to stay there for a long time.

FLOWER FANCIES.

The most economical housewives in the world—the French—do not dream it an extravagance to keep always on their dinner tables a few cut flowers. Even the wife of the poorly paid artisan will stop to market and will not be content to go home with her purchases till she has bought a few cents' worth of flowers for her table.

And a good many American housewives feel the same way about flowers for the table. They have found that for a quarter or less flowers may be bought which with a few sprays of green thrown in by the florist will make the table attractive for a week. Yes, for a week, for with proper care cut flowers can be made to last a week—that is, except in the warmest weather, and in the warm weather we are most of us located so that we can get some sort of fresh flowers every day or so, if it is only a bunch of daisies or buttercups.

One of the best ways to keep cut flowers from fading is to see that the moment they are cut from their stems they be placed in water. But of course we cannot be sure that this is done in the case of florists' flowers. The thing to make sure of is that the sap in the stems does not dry out and one way to accomplish this—a way used by many florists—is to put a piece of wax over the stem of the flowers as soon as they are cut.

NEARLY COMPLETE

Arizona, Just Launched, Has So Far Cost $7,425,000.

TOTAL TO REACH $16,000,000

Uncle Sam's Newest Dreadnought Carries Twelve Fourteen-inch Guns and Twenty-two Five-inch Rifles. Is the Thirty-ninth Warship Built For American Navy Since 1892.

Washington.—The thirty-ninth battleship built for the American navy since 1892 took the water when the super-Dreadnought Arizona slipped from the ways of the New York navy yard. Compared to the first American battleship, the Indiana, launched in 1893, the Arizona is nearly twice as long, half again as wide and of three times as great displacement. Against the Indiana's four thirteen-inch guns and eight eight-inch the Arizona will carry twelve fourteen-inch and twenty-two five-inch rifles, the same armament as her sister ship, the Pennsylvania, that was recently launched at Newport News.

The Indiana's thirteen inch guns were identical with those aboard the famous old Oregon, which played their part in the battle of Santiago.

With the fourteens of the Arizona in her turrets, the Oregon could have halted any one of the fleeing Spanish ships almost without leaving her station. The Arizona's guns have a range, even at the low elevation of American navy mountings, of fifteen miles or more against eight or nine miles for the old thirteens.

The Arizona is the fourth battleship built by the United States in its own navy yard at New York. The others were the Connecticut, the Dreadnought Florida and the super-Dreadnought New York, at present one of the largest, swiftest and most powerful of American fighting craft. Against the New York's displacement of 27,000 tons, however, the Arizona displaces 31,400 tons and measures 600 feet in length and ninety-seven feet six inches in width. She will mount twelve fourteen-inch guns to the ten fourteens carried by the Texas, and they will be carried three to a turret, as aboard the Pennsylvania.

MISS ESTHER ROSS, SPONSOR FOR THE ARIZONA.

Immediately the keel of the navy department's greatest experiment in naval construction, the electrically driven super-Dreadnought California, will be laid at the New York navy yard.

She will be nearly 1,000 tons heavier than the Arizona, although carrying the same equipment and arrangement of guns, but is expected to develop a greater speed than the twenty-one knots desired of the Arizona.

Comparing the most recent government built battleship to the first turned out, navy officials point to the fact that although the Arizona has twelve guns to the Connecticut's four and displaces 15,400 tons more water, being nearly twice as large, she will carry only 915 men as against the 1,012 men who are needed to handle the smaller ship.

This is due to the improvement in mechanical appliances for battleships in the last decade and also to the fact that oil has been substituted for coal as fuel, decreasing the necessary fire room force and that only two sizes of guns compose her armament against the four sizes aboard the Connecticut.

The Arizona was sponsored by Miss Esther Ross of Prescott, Ariz., nominated by Governor Hunt of Arizona. As she lies in the water today the ship has cost the government $7,425,000. An even greater sum will go for her guns and armor and other equipment, and when she goes into commission her cost to the country will have reached the huge total of $16,000,000 or more. This cost represents a reduction of nearly $500,000 in guns and armor, according to the navy department, under the prices paid for the Pennsylvania's offensive and defensive equipment. It was in dealing with contracts for the Arizona's armor that Secretary Daniels demanded competitive bidding and succeeded in effecting the saving.

D/34

BANISHED

Those old-fashioned flatirons of yours—they are a tiresome pair.

When our great grand-mothers called them sad-irons, they were rightly named. They are the cast-iron symbol of many generations of "sad" ironing days and are entirely out of place in our comfortable and modern households.

So throw them away and get an Electric Flatiron.

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY

103 Oneida St. Phone 144

PURE ICE CREAM

THE RICHEST AND MOST SANITARY

Served at our Fountain and Tables. Made with Heavy Cream, the Best Flavors and Fresh Fruits.

OUR FOUNTAIN DRINKS ARE UNEQUALED

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

Community Notes

Mrs. D. L. Reynolds of Lansingville, is visiting her son, Merton Reynolds, of Utica st.

* * *

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. David LaDue died at the parents' home, 209 Phillips st., yesterday afternoon. The funeral took place this morning and burial was made at St. Mary's cemetery.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wienkie of Utica are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Stevens of West 1st st.

* * *

The Misses Marion Shattuck, Corinne Goodrowe, Nina Blake will leave soon for the Thousands Islands.

* * *

Mrs. John Hollenbeck is visiting Fulton friends.

* * *

Beulah Barrett of West 1st st. is spending a few days with Miss Rosamond Cramer at her country home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goodjon of New York are guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon of Buffalo st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Patterson motored to Auburn Wednesday where they called on friends.

* * *

Mrs. David Hoy and Mrs. W. W. Rowlee of Ithaca have been in the city. They attended the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Durfey.

* * *

Mrs. E. Brownell has gone to Pennsylvania to visit relatives.

* * *

Mrs. W. T. Browne is entertaining friends from out of town.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Howe of S. 4th st. are attending commencement at Cornell where Willard Hall, formerly of this city, will be one of the graduates.

* * *

The Misses Minnie and Jennie True left Monday for New York and Washington, D. C., where they will be guests of Gordon True.

* * *

Miss Marion Edgarton of Syracuse University is home for the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Edgarton.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. O'Brien have been entertaining Hugh O'Hare of Syracuse.

* * *

Leon Goman, of 710 Academy st. and Bertha Bero, of 423 S. 5th st., took out a marriage license at the City Clerk's office this morning. Miss Bero formerly lived in Gouverneur.

* * *

Mrs. L. E. Hope of Chatham, has been visiting with friends in this city for the past week. Mr. Hope is connectedw ith the Palmer-Hope Hardware company.

* * *

Francis LaBoeuf of the West Side has purchased a new motorcycle.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Streeter of West 1st st. has been entertaining Orla Van Ostrand of New York.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Roy have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Shepherd of Batavia.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Wright of East Broadway were the over Sunday guests of friends at Palermo.

An

Edison Disc Phonograph

for the June newlyweds. What gift could be more appropriate—what gift more appreciated?

THE NEW RECORDS ARE HERE.

Wm. C. Morgan

Jeweler & Optometrist

Fulton, N. Y.

SIDE CAR PARTED FROM MAIN SECTION OF MACHINE

Mr. and Mrs. F. LaTour of West 2d st. and their two young children narrowly escaped serious injury in a motorcycle accident which occurred while the LaTour machine was running up West 1st st., about 7 o'clock last night. A side car was attached to the LaTour motor, and Mrs. La Tour and the children occupied the car, while Mr. LaTour operated the machine. At the junction of West 1st and Phillips sts. the tubing by which the car is attached to the motorcycle suddenly snapped. At the time, Mr. LaTour had shut off power preparatory to coasting down the hill at that point, and to this fact Mrs. LaTour and the children owe their escape from injury. The side car rolled over and threw out the occupants, while the motorcycle also overturned. Mrs. LaTour was the most seriously injured, sustaining a bad gash on the head. Mr. LaTour was shaken up and bruised, but the children were unhurt.

After several stitches had been taken in the wound Mrs. LaTour was able to go home. She is reported as greatly improved today.

JAIL FARM PROMISES TO BE MADE PROFITABLE

According to the Oswego Times Sheriff Buck proposes this year to make the jail farm produce a profit. One source of income is the cream from the herd of cows. Between five and six gallons of cream at 70 cents a gallon are sold each day.

Under the direction of Lee Summerville, superintendent of the jail farm, excellent progress has been made in the cultivation of the farm. Three acres of land covered with muck have been sown to vegetables, including beets, lettuce, onions, etc. This piece of land is expected to be highly remunerative also.

The corn, hay, oats and other staple crops are in good condition just now and will have excellent yields if nothing interferes. The dry weather has had some effect but not enough to cause great damage.

Black's Cookies tickle the palates of old and young, because they are right. adv.

REGENTS' STANDING

of

FULTON STUDENTS

HIGH SCHOOL

COMMERCIAL LAW

Leland Carner, 89; Fred Eames, 80; Raymond Eames, 92; Harry Lewis, 94; Harold Pierce, 80; Mae Roach, 78; Amelia Rolfe, 94; Leland Root, 98; Seymour Van Buren, 79; Edward Ward, 95.

ELEM. REPRESENTATION

Evadne Austin, 80; Marion Brown, 75; Mildred Brown, 82; Esther Freeman, 71; Jennie McMahon, 63; Mildred Myers, 70; Grace Pitcher, 72; Dililah Rounds, 78; Nicholas Wallace, 89.

ELEM. DESIGN

Madge Allen, 75; Evadne Austin, 80; Ester Freeman, 78; Marion Lake, 80; Brooks Parks, 67; Delilah Rounds, 78.

CHEMISTRY

Mildred Brown, 67; Marion Brown, 65; Elizabeth Jewett, 60; Stella Johnson, 62; Edward Sullivan, 60; Markey Pullen, 60; Harold Scholz, 80; Leland Carner, 60; Claude Barker, 61; Joseph Johnson, 61; Bernard Reswick, 80; Charlton Hunter, 67.

TRIGOMETRY

Lester Gillespie, 63; James Fairgrieve, 60.

TYPEWRITIN

Ruth Beels, 70; Lena Campbell, 68; Beatrice Huggins, 83; Harold Pierce, 75; Ralph Pierce, 62; Mae Roach, 80; Seymour VanBuren, 70.

ADV. DESIGN—LEATHER

Ruth Beels, 95-5 counts; Hilda Clark, 85-3 counts; Helen Cusack, 78 3 counts Peal Foster, 80 3 counts; Harriet Hudson, 75 3 counts; Mary Marvin, 80 3 counts; Ruth Nipper, 75 3 counts; Fanny Perry, 78 3 counts; Elizabeth Royce, 85 5 counts.

ADV. DESIGN—LEATHER

Ruth Beels, 85 3 counts; Hilda Clark, 88 3 counts; Marg't Clark, 85 5 counts; Fred Emes, 70 3 counts; Fred Johnson, 70 3 counts; Mary Marvin, 80 3 counts; Isabel Marriam, 90 5 counts; Ethel Washburne, 88 3 counts.

ENGLISH III.

Esther Aylesworth, 73; Charlotte Burnette, 60; Leonora Eames, 81; Raymond Eames, 60; Mary Carroll, 75; James Fairgrieve, 80; Reine Gilbert, 66; Marian Goodjon, 73; Stella Johnson, 63; Harry Lewis, 61; Frederick King, 92; Lucille Lomasyeny, 67; Genevieve McCormick, 61; Mildred Myers, 61; Dorsis Osborne, 80; Wilbur Parsons, 67; Bernard Reswick, 60; Delilah Rounds, 82; Herman Robillard, 66; Elizabeth Royce, 86; Winifred tSanton, 60; Seymour Van Buren, 68; Ruth Wilcox, 60; Edna Wolcott, 61.

PHYSICS

Raymond Eames, 67; Matthew Frawley, 86; Harold Gillespie, 71; Earl Hopkins, 95; Eliza Hubbard, 61; Fred King, 78; Harry Lynch, 60; Fred Martin, 65; Wilbur Parsons, 91; Marshall Penfield, 66; Markey Pullen, 68; Fred Rust, 81; Harold Scholz, 71; Marian Shattuck, 72; Harold Thompson, 85.

MANUAL TRAINING EXHIBIT SHOWS FINE RESULTS

The exhibit of manual training under the direction of the pupils of the Manual Training department of Fulton High school is attracting favorable attention from the many visitors to the school during the past week. The pupils of the wood-work department are now finishing their assignments for the season and several of the exhibits are worthy of a craftsman of many years' experience. Chairs library tables, small tables, stands and other articles in general use have been made by the boys of the department. Most of the articles have already been sold and are being eagerly waited by the purchasers. The boys pay the school for the materials, and are allowed to keep the proceeds of the sales, which oftimes amount to large sums. The work of the department has also arqused the interest of undergraduates who will enter high school next year, and several have already announced their intentions of taking up the manual training course.

The instructor, Mr. Jesse Lawton, is to be commended for the excellent results produced at the close of the department's first year.

RELIEF SOCIETY MEETS

A special meeting of the members of the Catholic Relief and Benevolent Association will be held tonight in the rooms, West Side, at 8 o'clock.

PRELIMINARY

ELEM. U. S. HISTORY

Phillips Street

Fred Bennett, 87; Walter Buell, 87; George Clearey, 96; Leslie Dewey, 87; Royal Fields, 100; Sherman Fisk, 100; Clarence Kelly, 98; Charles Nettleton, 95; Lucien Parker, 90; Norman Patrick, 95; Carlyle Pooler, 98; Almeta Boyd, 86; Ruth Burleigh, 88; Lillian Cheney, 96; Evangeline Hopkins, 100; Rhoda LaBeef, 91; Marion Lewis, 88; Mary McCaffrey, 94; Marion Nichols, 97; Louise VanSooy, 100.

Erie Street

John Buell, 98; Edith Campbell, 84; Marie Cary, 88; Joseph Connors, 99; Sara Dickinson, 92; Thomas Fitzgerald, 84; Eleanor Harding, 85; Ivan Jones, 100; Fred Kitts, 88; Lola Lamphear, 85; Claude Pierce, 76; Clara Smith, 81; Mary Smith, 81; George Tromblay, 92; Edward Tyrrell, 84; Helen Tyrrell, 95; Marion Young, 91.

State Street

James Blakeslee, 100; Harry Crandall, 95; Dexter Edgarton, 98; Vincent Edgarton, 98; Vernon Kimball, 97; Angie McNally, 91; Muriel Morgan, 100; Leland Palmer, 100.

Fourth Street

Wahnoeta Beebe, 88; Ruth Bennett, 92; Clarence Chesbro, 88; Lawrence Dann, 77; Anthony DeBarber, 84; Harvey Goodman, 97; Ida LaMay, 91; Elsie Merriam, 90; Evelyn Martin, 78; Susan Murphy, 98; John Myers, 76; Catherine Otis, 82; Frances Payne, 87; Hazel Rice, 84; Mildred Sharp, 96; Marion Ware, 94; Eva Wells, 76; Milton Wise, 87; Mildred Withers, 87.

Non-Residents

Irene Bateman, 89; Blanche Cole, 79; Walter R. Cole, 92; Edna Frost, 81; Leo Harris, 77; John B. Howard, 77; William Howard, 88; Grace Johnston, 88; Ruth Loomis, 88; Ellen A. Nolan, 77; Glenn M. Parker, 83; William J. Patchett, 79; Victor Simons, 81.

LOCAL BANKERS HELD THEIR ANNUAL OUTING

The local bankers held their annual outing this afternoon at C. S. Hall's camp near Pathfinder Island. Fine weather and a sumptuous repast combined to make the accasion a very enjoyable one. Informal speaking was in order and the advisability of forming a chapter of the American Bankers Institute in Fulton was discussed. Secretary H. L. Stout of the Savings Bank gave an informal talk on the subject, and it was agreed to take up the matter with the secretary of the institute at New York city. Mr. Stout's fine record in the Syracuse chapter, where he stood second highest in the recent examination in that city is highly commendable.

The organization of a glee club among the local bankers was also discussed, as it was found that much latent talen exists in their ranks. Talks of an exceptionally interesting character were given by Mr. Hall and Mr. Charles Richards of the First and Citizens National Banks respectively. The party broke up late in the evening.

EIGHTEEN AUTOS TOOK PART IN CLUB RUN

The Fulton Auto club enjoyed the first run of the 1915 season yesterday afternoon. The Hotel Crownheart at South Bay was the objective point, and eighteen cars left the City Hall at 4.30 o'clock. The trip to the hotel was made without incident, and the party, numbering forty-six people, satdown to a bountiful dinner about 7 o'clock.

After dinner several members of the club enjoyed canoeing, motorboating and fishing in the lake, while some of the elderly members of the party left for this city early in the evening. The vanguard arrived about 10 o'clock, and the run was voted a big success.

Although nothing definite has been decided upon, it is probable that the club will go to Weedsport on its next run, where Mine Host L. M. Sneden, formerly connected with the Citizens' club of this city, who purchased the Hotel Willard at Weedsport recently, extends a cordial invitation to Fultonians at all times. The next run will take place early in July.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

Week-End Specials

FIRDAY and SATURDAY

50c Baby's White Dresses, 1 to 6 years 39c

Ladies' White Waists, new lot 50c

SATURDAY—7 p. m. to 10 p. m.

$1.00 White Waists at 85c

O. HENDERSON COMPANY

Oneida Street Phone 200

SMITH COMPANY MAY COME BACK

Desirous of Securing Gun Patents and Arms Co.'s Water Power Rights

The report that the Hunter Arms plant is to be sold at once is gradually gaining more credence in local business circles. It was learned this morning that a prominent local business man recently inviewed the Smith Company of Syracuse on the question and the conversation as reliably reported, covered the following points:

The Smith firm is still in the market for the plant but will not use it for making guns. The machinery is not adequate, according to the conversation recorded, and the Smith Co. has no object other than to control the property and the water power. However, the company proposes to move one of its other branches of industry here, if the property is acquired, although no definite line of manufacturing was mentioned in the conversation.

When the Smith company sold its interest in the local plant to the Hunters, the gun patents, machinery, etc., were included in the deal. The Smith company wishes to regain the gun patents, it is said, as well as the plant and the location.

There has been no announcement thus far regarding the opening of the Hunter plant Monday, on which date it was to resume. The company announced a week ago that the plant would resume its regular schedule Monday and thus far has not contradicted that statement. Business men here, however, do not anticipate the opening of the plant, others insist it will not be opened until it changes hands.

RICHEST CAR CONDUCTOR HAD TO TAKE A VACATION

Chicago, June 17.—Henry Taberg, a street car conductor, whose wealth is estimated by his fellow workmen to be $250,000, is today enjoying his first vacation since 1887, as a result of the street car strike.

Toberg has been termed the richest conductor in the world. He owns stock in the Chicago Railways, which he purchased more than twenty years ago. Dividends from his stock, his associates say, amount to three or four times his annual wages. Toberg owns other valuable stocks and bonds, also a hotel and a number of apartment buildings from which he receives big rentals.

Toberg has been a street car conductor for forty years.

You can get Black's baked products at the right hour for meals. They are at your grocer's, fresh every afternoon. adv.

MERCHANTS and SHIPPERS

Save 25% on your Freight Bill, Order Goods Shipped by Boat.

STEAMER

"CITY OF FULTON"

Now Running

Freight House on Rochester St. Dock, open from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. Man in charge all day.

C. S. BURLEIGH, Captain

Onyx Billiard Room

The Coolest and the Best Equipped.

The only Billiard Table in the City

G. J. POWELL, Mgr.

PHONE 560 QUIRK THEATRE BLDG.

SEVENTEEN BASS WEIGHED 32 POUNDS

H. M. Appleton, the West Side barber, and Russell Rogers of Hannibal st., landed one of the best catches of bass yesterday reported in some years. Between them, the two anglers drew seventeen of the game fish from the waters of Lake Neahtawanta, and the string weighed 32 pounds, almost an average of 2 pounds a fish. Several parties recorded larger catches than this, but very few strings averaged up as well as the Rogers and Appleton catch.

THE QUIRK

The offering today is No. 6 of the "Who Pays" series, known as Houses of Glass, in three parts; also No. 1 of the "Romance of Elaine," a new serial that follows "The Exploits of Elaine" and that is said to surpass it in every detail. The "Who Pays" series, each three reels of which is a complete story, has been received with great praise by patrons. One of the ever pleasing Pathe weeklies will also be shown completing a program of genuine merit.

INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds

Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER

Phone 122.

THAT BIG SALE

of

BICYCLES TIRES SUPPLIES

WILL CONTINUE ALL THIS WEEK

Many are taking advantage of this opportunity to get a guaranteed bicycle at a big reduction.

WE DO REPAIRING

BOGUE— "THE BICYCLE GARAGE" 61 First Street

WAS REJECTED

Manager of Carthage Plant Refuses to Treat With National Vice President

Carthage, June 17.—A committee of the employes of the West End Paper Company and George Schneider, one of the national vice presidents of the International Brotherhood of Papermakers, went to the office of the West End Paper company's mill, in West End avenue yesterday forenoon to present to E. B. Sterling the requests of the union. When the men told Mr. Sterling, the manager of the mill, the object of their visit, he told them that he would talk with the committee of the employes of the mill, but would not talk with the committee in the presence of Mr. Schneider.

Mr. Schneider left the office and then Mr. Sterling heard the committee The requests presented resemble those that were presented to the manager and the directors of the Degrasse and Pyrites mills. Mr. Sterling, it is understood, told the men that he had no right to commit his company to any policy without the consent of the directors of the company. He told the men that he would endeavor to get the directors together on Thursday afternoon and would explain to the directors the stand that the employes had taken and would also call in the committee and ask them to present their cause before the directors in the same manner that they had to him, but would exclude any representative of the union from out of town or any employ of any other mill.

Mr. Sterling also told the men, it is understood, that he considered the question one that the men themselves should settle with the directors and not with the aid of any outsider.

It is understood also that Mr. Sterling told the men if they declared a strike, none of those that went out need ever apply at the West End Paper company for work again, for none of them would be taken back. It is said he also told them that if the mill was closed down because of the strike that it might stay down for some time and possibly until winter.

There are more union men in the West End mill than in any other mill in this village. The company has always used the employes in a square manner and the mill is steadily running.

The company makes no hesitation in employing a man if he is a good man, whether he is au nion man or not, and intends to stand firmly behind this policy. It is hoped here that no strike will be declared in this mill and the chances are that there will be none, or at least, no definite stand will be taken until after Thursday.

Mr. Sterling would have no talk with Mr. Schneider and said that he did not care to discuss the matter with him at all, but believes that the question is one to be settled within the mill itself.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Chattel Mortgage Sale—One gasoline truck wagon, in good condition, with top; also one light truck same as above, without top. Sale at VanWagenen garage, Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. A. Bristol, Mortgagee's agent. 154

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st.

To Rent—New house in Park st.; modern conveniences; electric light; bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

Lost—Pocketbook, containing change and Elk's pin. Finder can keep change if pin is returned to Times office. 155

Lost—Near Baptist church, silver mesh bag containing purse and key. Return 321 Rochester st. for reward. 153c

To Rent—Downstairs flat at 311 Atlantic ave. Inquire Crandall, 261 S. 7th st. Pone 252. tf

For Sale—Household furniture, on Friday and Saturday at 502 Buffalo st. 154c

Found—A bunch of keys with Ardley Club tag. Owner may have same by applying at Times office.

Competent Cook—Must furnish references. Apply in person to Supt. of Hospital. 155

Nurse Girl—Wants position in good family; experience; references given. Phone 3281. 154c

Teamster Wanted—Sober and honest. S. Ehrman, R. D. 8, Fulton 155

Upper Flat to Rent—408 Erie street. Phone 4480. 153

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

Fair tonight and Friday for lower lake. Light west to northwest winds.

CHAUFFEUR DIDN'T WANT TO CARRY STRIKEBREAKERS

Watertown, June 16.—When another small group of strikebreakers arrived here at 9:20 this morning from New York on their way to the Deferiet mill of the St. Regis Paper company, they had difficulty in securing transportation from here to Deferiet without going by train, which they were not anxious to do, having had instructions not to make the trip in that way.

There were seven in the party and hailing the driver of a public automobile in front of the New York Central station, they endeavored to get hi mto take them to their destination.

When askew if they were strikebreakers, they replied in the negaitve and stated that they were going to Deferiet to attend a picnic. The automobile driver could not be convinced that they were not strikebreakers, and he assured them that it might be a picnic for them, but that he had no desire to accept the job.

Later they succeeded in getting transportation on the 'bus running between this city and Deferiet. Although there has been little trouble in getting the strikebreakers in to Deferiet, the company has adopted a plan of bringing them in by a different route nearly every time.

It is said that there is little change in the strike situation, although there may be some trouble after June 20, the day upon which most of the 450 strikers are supposed to be out of the company's houses at Deferiet, having been served with 30 days' notice a month ago to vacate. Should any of these men refuse to get out on the day mentioned, it is expected that efforts will be made to move their belongings into the street and trouble may follow.

REBUILDING BURNED GOULD PAPER MILL

Port Leyden, June 16.—The work of rebuilding the Gould paper mill B, at Kotserville, which was destroyed by fire a week ago, has begun. New saw-screens will have to be provided to replace those ruined in the fire. The building material is expected very soon and it is the hope of the company that the mill will be running full time in the near future. The steel and concrete flume, with a capacity of 1400 horse power, was undamaged and will be used in the new plant.

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

MADE KNOWN

Complete List of Those Who Answered Requirements of Board's Ruling

The following pupils who are members of A classes are promoted to higher grades with honor. The following from the school manual tells how a pupil may earn this honor: "Pupils who have not been tardy, who have not been absent more than eight half days during the half year nor had more than eight dismissals, who have 90 per cent or more in deportment and have attained a standing of not less than 75 cent in every subject, will be disignated as honor scholars and will be entitled to promotion without examination and their promotion cards marked 'with honor.' No pupil can be an "honor" pupils who has more than one unexcused absence.

4th and Rochester St. Schools

1st Grade, Miss Farrell, teacher—Clifford Dodge, Joseph Hart, Ralph Lyttle, Foster Sheldon, Dorothy Fox.

2d Grade, Miss Everts, Teacher—Edward Fredette, Wayne Fox, Harold Mullen, Carolyn Bailey, Catherine Mullen, Corinne Sheldon.

3d Grade, Miss Sisson, teacher—Clinton Chesbro, Charles Guyer, Luella LaVeck, Ida Payne, Noreen Schneider.

4th Grade, Miss Knapp, teacher—Raymond Knight, Joseph Bennett, Helen Clements, Ruth Wood, Harriet Trask, Mary McKay.

6th Grade, Miss Bullis, teacher—Robert Cole, William Crahan, Lawrence Moity, Merald Orth, Ruth Barnes, Elsabeth Buck, Sarah Kaplan, Norma Lipsky, Helen Lomasney, Mary Park, Doris Wood.

7th Grade, Miss Decker, teacher—Grace Beebe, Mary McCann, Marguerite Stanley, Winton Bennett.

8th Grade, Miss Benson, teacher—Elizabeth Howe, Margaret Howe, Susan Murphy, Mildred Sharp, Ida LaMay.

Phillips St. School

1st Grade, Miss Heagerty, teacher—Sylvia Blann, Genevieve Denesha, Mildred Price, Ralph Dudeck, Frederick LaGrew, Robert Ketchum, Edward Witouski.

2d Grade, Miss Tillapaugh, teacher: Marjorie Todd, Clinton Dories, John Trepasso, Clara Feliska, Florence Wilbur.

3d Grade, Miss Dwyer, teacher—Ruth Best, Madeline Merant, Ruth Clinch, Mary Brown, Lealand Rice, Chester Kinney.

3d Grade, Miss Skinner, teacher—Howard Abbott, Andrew Black, Royal Cheney, Cecil Perry, Charles Rothbell, Walter Wainman, Alice Brennen, Gladys Bryant, Monica Gaffney, Kathleen Ottman, Berneice Palmer.

4th Grade, Miss Broderick, teacher: Horace Brooks, Richard Burleigh, Ralph Dolbear, Clifford Halstead, Harold Platt, Donald Pratt, Floris Austin, Theodore Cheney, Norma Kane, Myrtle O'Neil, Ethel Sawyer, Mabel Sellman, Bridgie Smith, Margareta Warren.

5th Grade, Miss McCriskin, teacher: Mary Casey, Harold Challes, Harris Dines, Ruth Dingle, Sadie Fisk, Edward Goode, Helen Kenyon, Miles Lewis, Frederick Stoddard, Gladys Wybron.

6th Grade, Miss Curphey, teacher—Harry Hopkins, Carl Rowley, Albert Williams, Helen Black, Lucille Dingle, Mildred McCann, Doris Painter, Susie Savey, Mabel Sullivan.

7th Grade, Higher English Department—Francis Dewey, Earle Osborne, Frank Wilber, Dorris Austin, Florence Brown, Anna Hartnett, Emma Lynch, Mildren Sellman, Marion Taylor, Frances Wilson.

8th Grade, Higher English Department—Norman Barry, Francis Bugll, Joseph Carroll, Leland Cusack, John Donovan, Roberts Fitten, Walter Parke, Francis Taylor, Ruth Black, Mildred Clute, Mildred Cook, Mary Hopkins, Margaret Hughes, Frances Mangeot, Dorothy Martin, Mabel Perkins.

Erie Street School

1st Grade, Miss Brumfield, teacher: William Murray, Stanley Scudder, Fannie Ingersoll, Agnes Miner.

2d Grade, Miss Sprague, teacher—Wayne Bateman, Francis Benway, Merrill Scudder, Thomas Zaia, Norma Nichols.

3d Grade, Miss Hawkins, teacher—James Brannan, Agnes Howe, Barnett Levy, Mary Morrison, Clara Owens, Harriet Waugh, Charles Wood, Harold Wood.

4th Grade, Miss Kendall, teacher—Edwin Campbell, Edward Dyer, Elliott Erhardt, Donald Lamphear, Max Shapiro, Nellie Barnard, Roberta Kellam, Beulah Keeney, Margaret Georgiana Keyes.

5th Grade, Miss Walworth, teacher: Nancy Cincotta, Alta Dyer, Helen Fitzgerald, Helen Loucks, Leland Lampear, Vernard O'Neill, Jane Rogers, Wilson Smith, Doris VanValkenburg, Harl Wolever.

6th Grade, Miss Rogers, teacher—William Adams, Walter Barkley, Ervin Brown, Tony Cincotta, Vernon Cooper, George Gardner, Glen Salsbury, Herbert Waugh, Emily Deuel, Florence Falardeau, Helen Hare, Helen Payne, Beatrice Richards, Marion VanSanford, Helen Ward.

7th Grade, Miss Graveley, teacher—Ernest Beaudien, George McNamara, Floyd Wright, Leila Chesbro, Gladys Haines, Marion Weaver, Elsie Wood.

8th Grade, Miss Lynch, teacher—Miles Evans, Maro Reed, John Schneider, Larkin Smith, Clara Cronk, Sara Dickinson, Clara Smith.

State Street School

1st Grade, Miss Metcalf, teacher—Lester Billings, Mabel Chubb, Ruth Hall, Suvilla Pollock.

2d Grade, Miss Cates, teacher—Worth Allen, Beatrice Ansermet, Leo Bidwell, Lucy Ducret, Harriet Edgarton, Bertha Favalora, Alice Francis Tony Fusco, George Hall, Frances James, Leeman Pratt.

3d Grade, Miss Keane, teacher—Myrtle Chubb, Frank Edgarton, Marion Holmes, Gladys Post, Leon Skelton, Robert Taggart, Emma Warner.

4th Grade, Miss Failing, teacher—Milton Fanning, Dorothy Hurd, Elma Ingamells, Joseph Lynch, Kenneth Padgett, Thelma Palmes, Florence Thiebeau, Fay Walts.

5th Grade, Miss Wright, teacher—Harold Baker, Leroy Haas, Ruth Haskins, Eddie Littlebrant, Germaine Michaud, Vera Platt, Vernon Woodside, Vivian Waterhouse, Hazel Wood.

6th Grade, Miss Beebe, teacher—Ruth Abel, Leonard Amdursky, Virginia Cook, Helena Donovan, Howard Hunter, Lillian Kimball, Florence Kingsley, Helen Reavey, Caroline Steele.

7th Grade, Miss Seymour, teacher—Marguerite Fivaz, Elizabeth Ingamells, Mary Murphy, Beulah Roy.

8th Grade, Miss Harrington, teacher—Percy Grier, Ariel Palmer, Frances Reynolds, Edna Roy, Marie Roy, Harvia Wilson.

Oak Street School

1st Grade, Miss McNamara, teacher: John Dymon, John Ziemba, Morris Loveland, Marion Casey, Sophie Mbynovska, Bessie Stephenson.

1st Grade, Miss McCully, teacher—Lawrence Parker.

2d Grade, Miss Mackin, teacher—George Edward Buell, Freddie McAree, Daisy Cooper, Lucille Dashnau, Mary Libera, Annie Moros, Helen Parkhurst, Helen Sharp, Francesca Scurti.

3d Grade, Miss A. Melody, teacher: Robert Colton, Richard Culkin, Frank Libra, Dominick Procepio, Raymond Stoddard, Mary Clark, Josie Libra, Mary Moros, Jennie Simons.

4th Grade, Miss M. Melody, teacher: Zita Boyce, James Dashnau, Philip Guadgno, Clifford Kelly, Harold Tompson.

5th Grade, Miss Dowdle, teacher—Charles Denesha, Maurice Donovan, Otis Hudson, Andrea Pipitone, Clarence Rice, Clarence Stuber, Helen Hughes, Frances Hughes, Katherine Kowalski, Ruth LePoint.

6th Grade, Miss Bunker, teacher—Charles Brooker, William Chetney, John Flynn, Tony Gigliotti, Lawrence Murphy, Fay Whipple, Wendell Wilcox, Bertha Davis, Helen Deveraux, Margaret Frawley, Nellie Krawcek, Anna Malone, Syliva Whipple.

7th Grade, Miss Sadler, teacher—Charles Culkin, Eva Boyce, Bridget Okoniewski, Erthus Dashnau, Percy Andrews, Kathryn McKenna, Muriel Harris, Helen Mott, Joseph Frawley, Frank Stuber, Harold Chesbro, Gladys Loveland.

Academy Street School

1st Grade, Miss Whitaker, teacher—Louise Beadle, Rose Trombley, Belva Wheeler, Roy Wallace, Frederick Wood.

2d Grade, Miss VanDuzer, teacher: Calvin Austin, Harry Blakeslee, Raymond Coe, Arthur Myers, Eldred Stevens, Evelyn Crandall, Eleanor Hunter, Margaret McRae, Frances VanSanford.

3d Grade, Miss Cunnan, teacher—Lloyd Allen, William Morton, Etta Outerkirk, Dorothy Garrett.

5th Grade, Miss Walworth, teacher: Dorothy Barney, Mildred Bort, Charlene Beebe, Neatrice Cole, Charlotte Cole, Goldie Courtney, Elsie Dewey, Sarah Ford, Mary Herner, Bernice Mullen, Kenneth Carle, Harold Roe.

Walradt Street School

1st Grade, Miss Marden, teacher—Elmer Bogardus, Bernard Dumas, Edward Foederer, Arthur Nettleton, Oliver Shattuck, Helen Ottman, Ruth White.

2d Grade, Miss Marden, teacher—Frank Abbott, Joseph Casey, Russell Casey, John Collins, George Dumas, Donald Hartnett, Edgar Lamb, Willis Lamb, Helena Dolbear, Gertrude Thompson.

WOMAN WARNS WOMEN OF DANGERS OF TRAVEL

"No one should go to the Pacific coast without sufficient money for the round trip and enough for support during the visit there," writes Martha P. Tracy of Syracuse, a member of the Travelers' Aid Society, in a letter to the Standard today. "There is absolutely no work to be had and the large cities have already thousands from the East who have come with the false hope of getting work. This urgent warning has been sent out by various welfare societies in California."

It is the object of these warnings sent out by the aid society to protect girls and women while traveling. These societies are being organized throughout the country. Warnings are now being sent out to women travelers regarding the ways in which they should protect themselves. At San Francisco members of the organization meet all trains and steamers and give advice as to suitable lodging houses and places of employment.

The fllowing list of addresses is given for the benefit of those who are going West this spring: Travelers' Aid Society of California, 909 Hearst Building, San Francisco; Young Women's Christian Association, No. 1249 O'Farrell st., San Francisco, and Women's Hotel, No. 642 Jones st., San Francisco.

TO ELECT BASEBALL OFFICIALS TONIGHT

Captain Michael Bray of the Fulton High school baseball team will entertain the team and a few guests at his home on the West Side tonight. The affair will be in the nature of a dinner and general good time. After the dinner, the captain and manager for the 1916 season will be elected and several members of the squad will be called upon for rmarks. Coach Bill Stauring will be the guest of honor. The festivities will begin at 8.30 o'clock.

MOVIE ACTRESS IN TOWN

Miss Pearl White, the Pathe film company star, motored through this city this morning in her automobile, and was unrecognized except by a few. Miss White's company is now in Oswego and she will appear in several pictures which will be produced there during the next few months. She will be remembered for her fine work in the serial photoplay, "The Perils of Pauline."

DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK ILL, SUFFERING FROM TYPHOID

Sagamore, Mass., June 17.—The Rev. Francis E. Clark, founder and head of the Christian Endeavor movement, who has been ill with typhoid fever at his summer home here for the past two weeks, was reported today to be in as favorable condition as could reasonably be expected.

Dr. Clark's age, 64 years, and the fact that the disease has not reached its crisis, have caused some apprehension as to his recovery. Dr. Clark is believed to have contracted his illness during a recent trip through the west.

ENGLAND'S WAR CREDIT

London, June 17.—Premier Asquith on moving a vote of credit for 250,000,000 pounds informed members of the House of Commons today that the expenditure in the next three months would be not less than $15,000,000 daily. The house voted the credit.

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
No.6 of "Who Pays" Series, entitled
"HOUSES OF GLASS"
No. 1 "ROMANCE OF ELAINE
and PATHE WEEKLY

FRIDAY
Beulah Poynter
in her Great Success
THE LITTLE GIRL HE FORGOT
in 5 parts
and others.

SATURDAY
The Great Six-Reel Feature "THE SPAN OF LIFE"
See the Wonderful Human Bridge.

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN
"The New York Shop"

JUNE SALE
of Dainty Tub Silk and Crepe de Chine WAISTS
in the latest designs and colors. On Sale Friday and Saturday, at your selection $1.98
These Waists usually retail at $2.50 and $2.75
M. J. McDONALD & CO.
National Merchandise Stamps save you 2 1-2% on your purchases

WALL PAPER and PAINT
PAPER HANGING — PAINTING
The cost of Paint is advancing daily — due to the European War. Get Your Supply Now!
HULETT-TAFT CO., Inc.
208 ONEIDA STREET

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

100% Efficiency
The Result of Using
Miscellaneous
Want Column
in
The Evening Times
PRICES:
1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c
Minimum Charge
10 Cents

The Fulton Evening Times

IS A PART OF THE BUSINESS LIFE OF FULTON

¶ Because it is identical with every interest in this city. The Fulton Evening Times is a public institution purely. It's interests are mutual with those of every Man, Woman and Child of this city. It's success spells for the success of every Fulton Merchant. The town having successful Merchants is a successful town. A home Daily helps to make the home Merchant a successful man. One dollar spent in a paper published out-of-town deprives a Fulton workman of a dollar's worth of support.

IF YOU DEPRIVE

A Fulton Workman of His Wages it's Your Loss as well as the Workman's

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Heinie Wagner, Boston Red Sox's Infielder.

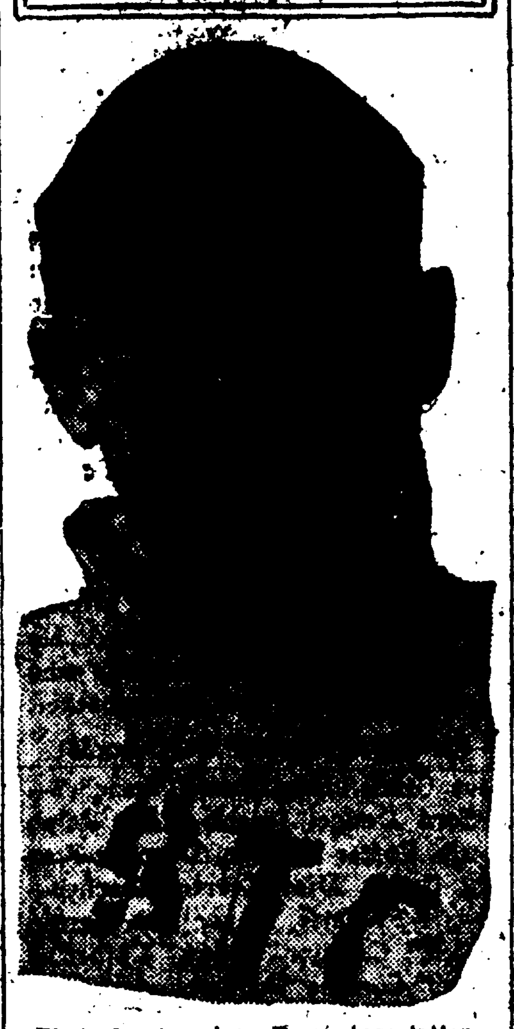

Photo by American Press Association.

Heinie Wagner, second baseman this year on the Boston American league team, is considered by his fellows one of the brainiest men in the game. For the past two years Heinie has been a little off in his play, an injury to his arm having impaired his throwing ability. This season he has been playing in his 1912 form, when as shortstop he was an important factor in his club's success in winning the championship of the American league, and also in its victory over the New York Giants for the world's championship of that year. It is said that Heinie has the managerial bug, and his friends believe that before long Heinie will be guiding one of the big league clubs.

Big Fish In the Tieton.

Never before have fishermen found such large salmon in the upper waters of the Yakima river, Washington, and its tributaries as they have the past spring. By some the condition is attributed to the completion of the Celilo locks. A party of fishermen from North Yakima has, so far at least, the biggest fish story to tell. They brought in, after one hour and forty-two minutes' hard work, a Chinook salmon weighing twenty-four pounds and measuring forty and one-quarter inches, which they took in the Tieton river, and with it nine others, the smallest of which weighed nine pounds.

An Eyeglass For Golfers.

An Englishman has recently invented an optical instrument for golfers that can be worn over the eyes like a spectacle and by which the sight of the player is concentrated on the ball, the opaque "blinkers" having a relatively small aperture through which, and through which alone, the wearer can see and thus the distance in front and behind the ball is so small that he must see it definitely, and he is thus compelled to keep his eye on the ball. The blinkers are adjustable so they can be set to suit the eyes of different persons.—Scientific American.

Adjustable Golf Stick.

There has recently been put on the market a golf club the head of which is formed to permit the convenient interchangeability of heads or striking faces. Each of the head pieces has two faces, either of which may be adjusted into playing position. There are several different forms of head, each being interchangeably applied to the head of the club, so that each loose head is the equivalent of two ordinary clubs and by carrying a number of loose heads the necessity of carrying numerous clubs will be avoided.

White a Knockout Fighter.

Of all the fighters now before the public Charlie White is the only one in any class, from heavyweight to bantam, that wins his battles by the knockout route. He is the greatest fighter in this respect since Terry McGovern used to flatten his men out by a swift poke on the jaw.

White wins all his bouts this way. He has put eight out of the last ten opponents to sleep by way of a short left hook to the point of the jaw, and the blow rarely fails to call for the full count.

Ted Meredith Honored.

Ted Meredith has been unanimously elected to succeed Don Lippincott as captain of the University of Pennsylvania track team for the season of 1915-16. By winning both the quarter and half mile races, the former in record time, in the recent intercollegiate games Meredith stamped himself as one of the greatest short middle distance runners of all time.

Zimmerman on the Umpires.

Heine Zimmerman of the Chicago Cubs has this to say about the National league umpires: "They're as honest as the day is long—always call 'em as they see 'em. The only trouble with them is that they always see them wrong."

It Was Also Right to the Point, and the Jury Did the Rest.

A Chicago lawyer tells of a prosecuting attorney in a circuit court of an Illinois county some years ago whose early education had been defective, but who was so shrewd and "long headed" that few more dangerous antagonists could be found at the bar in that region.

At one time he had procured the indictment of a man for theft. The amount alleged to have been stolen was $5, and at that time the penalty for stealing $5 or more was imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary. For stealing less than that amount the punishment was confinement in the county jail without labor.

The evidence proved beyond dispute the theft of a five dollar note of the State Bank of Illinois, but the prisoner's counsel brought several business men to swear that it was not worth its face value in gold, but all agreed that in ordinary transactions it would pass for $5.

Over this testimony the prisoner's counsel quibbled for two hours while the prosecuting attorney listened in patience.

When his turn came he arose and delivered himself as follows:

"Gentlemen, I hope the learned counsel won't get offended if I don't talk but just one minute. All I've got to say is this: The prisoner don't pretend to deny that he stole our money, and all he asks of you is just to give him the privilege of stealin' it at a discount!"

He sat down, and the jury sent the thief to the penitentiary.—Case and Comment.

TECHNIC OF PAINTING.

Modern Color Methods and Those of the Old Masters.

Many persons think that the paintings by the old masters owe their permanency in some degree to secret processes now lost. In the Journal of the Franklin institute Dr. Maximilian Toch points out that as a matter of fact the old masters used only those few colors (madder, for example) the permanency of which was well established, and that they avoided mixing colors known to have a bad chemical effect on one another.

Incidentally he describes the scientific methods of detecting later day copies. Zinc white, where flake white would have been used, protoplasmic remains in the cells of the wood used for the picture and the transparency of the bitumen in the shadows are proofs that a picture is not a genuine antique. In respect to deterioration the author mentions the bad effects of smoke and modern gas fumes and, after saying that either light or darkness may bleach a picture, points out that some pictures that have been kept in the dark can be restored by placing them in bright sunlight.

Finally Dr. Toch condemns those modern painters who substitute the collapsible tube or palette knife for the brush on the ground that the flakes of color thus attached to the canvas will crack off and become detached. If that method had been used by the ancients no trace of their work would now exist.

The Heroines of Novels.

If I were his Satanic majesty and a novelist came to me for judgment I should beetle my brows in a horrible manner and quiz him thus:

"Did you ever make your heroine eighteen years old? Did you ever endow a maiden with the repartee of Pinero, the intuition of Blavatsky, the carriage of Garden, the hauteur of the Medici, the beauty of Aphrodite and the wisdom of Athene—all at the age of eighteen years?"

If the novelist answered me "Certainly not!" I should say, "To heaven with you!" But if he answered, "Sure, I did!" I would blast him where he stood.

For of all the iniquitous, fallacious, unfair and dangerous doctrines this takes the icing off the cake—that the female species reaches her apogee at the immature age of eighteen.—George Weston in Saturday Evening Post.

Types of Feet.

Among the various races of men, three types of feet occur. Certain pure races have one type of toe which is characteristic of each race. Thus, the Zulus, the Basques and probably most pure Celts have the even toed foot, while the Papuans, the Boschmen and a number of African tribes, as well as both ancient and modern Egyptians, have the arch toed foot. Many European nations, however, have a mixture of the three types. But it is certain that among the English, and probably among the Germans, French and Greeks, the even toed foot is the commonest.—Strand Magazine.

Reward of Writers.

Writers of nonfiction today seldom fare more handsomely than did Chief Justice John Marshall, who, 110 years ago, received $80,000 for his life of Washington. After Stevenson's death the royalties on his books amounted every year to ten times the sum he had received a few years before.

The Swordfish.

So powerful is the jaw of the swordfish, from which the sword projects, that it has been known, in attacking vessels, to pierce through oak timbers to the depth of ten inches.

The Cossacks.

No matter how old a Cossack is he belongs to the reserve forces of the "national defense" in Russia and, if required, accompanies his sons and grandsons to battle.

THE MESSAGE TO A BURGLAR

Strange Adventure of a Young Woman In a City.

Winifred Bolles, an unsophisticated country girl, went to town in search of employment. Walking from store to store she at last found herself unwittingly in the private office of a benevolent looking old gentleman, Mr. Herman Knowles, who, though she did not know it, was the head of the firm.

"What is it, little girl?" he asked kindly.

Winifred asked for work and was sent to the proper person with Mr. Knowles' order that she be employed. She was directed to begin her labor the next morning.

As she was leaving the store a man stepped up to her and said:

"Would you mind taking this to the telegraph office over there, my dear? Here's a quarter to pay for it."

"Certainly," said Winifred, and, without even asking why the man didn't take it himself, she started for the telegraph office. The message was inclosed in an envelope, and when she reached the window where messages were received and handed it in the clerk took it out of the envelope and with it a peculiar looking instrument made of steel wire.

"H'm!" he said, looking at the girl suspiciously. Then he read the message.

Ben—Don't come tonight. We are watched. ROSE.

Again the clerk looked at the girl, scanned her features closely and said:

"Sit down while I count the words."

Winifred obeyed, but had not been seated five minutes when a policeman entered and went to the window, where the clerk handed him the message and the wire instrument. Then the policeman turned to Winifred and told her to come with him. She was taken to a police station and led up before an inspector, the policeman at the same time producing the articles he had received from the clerk, saying:

"The girl tried to send the telegram, evidently warning a burglar. She'd unintentionally left the skeleton key in the envelope and handed both to the clerk at the telegraph office."

"Did you order the message sent and its receiver arrested?"

"Yes."

"All right. Take her away."

Poor little Winifred was led away to a cell without the slightest knowledge of where she was going. When she found herself behind bars she was in an agony of distress. After crying awhile she bethought herself what to do. She knew no one in the city, but the face of the kind looking gentleman who had employed her kept coming up to her, and she determined if possible to send word to him of her misfortune. Her message was delivered, and the firm's lawyer was instructed to attend to her case. He called to see Winifred, listened suspiciously to her story, then heard the statement of the inspector, forming the opinion that Winifred was in service and had a lover whom she had been intending to introduce into her employer's premises for the purpose of robbery. This opinion he reported to Mr. Knowles, with the remark, "All depends upon whether the telegram reaches its destination. Thus far the messenger has not been able to find the person to whom it was addressed."

"Nor will he," said Mr. Knowles. "The man who gave her the message watched her and saw her arrest. He doubtless found a way to a warning."

"How do you account for her having a skeleton key?"

"I have no theory as to that. I judge of the girl only from what I saw of her for a few minutes, and I am never deceived as to an honest face. What is your explanation?"

"That the girl put the key which her lover had given her into the envelope and forgot it."

"I do not believe it."

"And you do not consider her application to you for work a mere blind?"

"Certainly not. Please assume that she is innocent and do the best you can for her."

The plan adopted by the police was to have Winifred held for trial and the trial put off in hopes of developments or an implication by the girl of her confederate. When Winifred was brought up for examination there was really nothing to be said in her favor. One thing and one alone gave her hope. Among the visitors in the courtroom she saw the kindly face of Mr. Knowles.

The judge heard the statement of the prosecution and would have listened to the evidence of the defense if there had been any. Since there was not, Winifred's attorney contented himself with forming improbable theories as to how Winifred came into possession of the incriminating articles. The judge remanded the prisoner for trial, fixing her bail at $1,000.

"I will furnish that bail," said Mr. Knowles, rising, and, the paper being signed, Winifred was discharged. Her benefactor told her to go to work at his store the next morning.

Before the trial came off, by Mr. Knowles' orders, Winifred's history from the time of her birth was collected, testimonials as to her character were obtained from her home in the country and were produced by able counsel. Winifred was acquitted and became one of the most important of the employees of Knowles & Co. But neither the man who gave her the telegram nor the one to whom it was addressed was ever found.

SPEED OF ALLIES IN LANDING AT DARDANELLES AMAZES GREEKS

Getting Foothold on Gallipoli Under Fierce Fire Took Forty Hours Instead of Seven Days.

Thrilling Operations Described in Dispatch Called One of Most Brilliant Acts In War.

A GRAPHIC and stirring description of the landing of the allied army at the Dardanelles is given in a dispatch from Athens by an American war correspondent who has seen the reports of the foreign military observers accompanying the British and French forces.

The general staff of the Greek army, he says, regards the achievement as one of the most remarkable operations of the war. The troops accomplished their landing in forty hours, forcing their way despite heavy losses under hot fire, while thousands struggled in the glare of searchlights and amid a terrific cannonade to put the supplies ashore.

In the reports of the military attaches two features are mentioned as standing out—the careful, systematic and detailed preparation, and then the surprising speed with which the disembarkation was carried out and the foothold on the soil seized.

The plan of action was arranged eight weeks before at a series of military conferences in London, Paris and Malta. Every detail of it went through without a hitch. Concentration of troops and supplies began immediately. Thousands of men left England secretly under cover of darkness, crossed the English channel and proceeded to Marseilles to embark on transports for Egypt.

Army Silently Formed.

At the same time those French troops that could be spared from Europe also were transported to the land of the Nile. Australian and New Zealand contingents reached Egypt through the Suez canal. Finally there were available more than 110,000 British troops, including Australians, New Zealanders and Indians, and about 60,000 French soldiers, including Algerians.

Simultaneously a monster staff was ransacking both countries for supplies. Every preparation was made for maintaining a great army for a long time on foreign soil.

Alexandria was the first advanced base. It is 700 miles from the Dardanelles. A nearer base was absolutely necessary. Consequently the British fleet suddenly occupied the islands of Mudros, Tenedos and Imbros. Tenedos is only twelve miles from Kum Kale and Siddel Bahr.

England asserts a right of occupation. Greece took the islands from the Turks in the first Balkan war. The London conference stipulated that the islands should be returned to Turkey. Turkey refused to sign the treaty, and then Greece consequently continued to occupy the islands. There was a mild Greek protest when the British took possession, but it was overcome. England promised to give back the islands at the end of the war and even yet the civil administration remains Greek.

Tenedos as Supply Depot.

A fleet of cargo boats freighted to the islands huge quantities of food, scores of heavy siege guns and thousands of boxes of ammunition. Although most of the supplies destined for the use of the troops after they landed in Turkey were taken to the islands of Tenedos and Mudros, the troops themselves remained in Egypt until the final rush for the Dardanelles.

When eventually one morning before daybreak the transports steamed out of Alexandria they made a line nearly eighteen miles long. The admiral at Mudros was advised by wireless. At Mudros and at Tenedos were stored thousands of tons of supplies. Every available warehouse was filled to the roof. Monster piles of boxes and bales extended along the beach. At once the work of loading hundreds of lighters, requisitioned from half the ports of the eastern Mediterranean, was pushed to completion.

A little less than forty-eight hours after it left Alexandria the fleet of transports, convoyed by a dozen battleships and half a hundred destroyers, passed Tenedos. Three hours later powerful tugs, towing long strings of lighters, steamed out of Tenedos and Mudros and fell into line many miles to the rear of the transport fleet.

Started at Daybreak.

Just at daybreak ten or twelve boats loaded to the gunwales with khaki clad soldiers wearing big tropical helmets put off from each transport to be the first to land on the tip of Gallipoli. Steam launches from the battleships towed the boats to shore in strings of five or six. It was three-quarters of a mile to shore.

Half the distance had been covered when a perfect hail of bullets and shrapnel spattered among the small boats. The men did not reply. They could see nothing to fire at.

The boats were run on to the beach. The men jumped out, ankle deep in water. They ran up the beach for seventy-five yards and threw themselves prone on the sand behind any little hummock they could find. Three or four men remained in each boat and poled it frantically back to the steam launch, which took it in tow and headed for the transports for another load.

Hour after hour men piled ashore from the transports. The line of disembarkment was more than a mile long.

The second detachment ran forty or fifty feet in advance of the first landing party before throwing themselves flat on the sand. The third party went the same distance in advance of the second, and so on.

At first the firing line was only a mile broad. It was gradually lengthened to cover the whole nose of the peninsula. Finally the line was more than two miles long.

The first detachment took terrible punishment. Dead and wounded were everywhere. The wounded had little show. There was no place to move them. They received rough first aid treatment and were dragged to the shelter of some small hills. They suffered greatly later in the day from the sun and heat. At the close of the day the medical corps got supplies ashore and erected temporary hospitals under the lee of a cliff.

Losses Were Terrific.

Every man was at last ashore, and an advance in open order was made. Slowly but surely the allies' army covered ground. The French had landed at Kum Kale, on the Asiatic side. That was only a trick to keep the Turks guessing as to where the real attack was to be made.

While the land forces were striving mightily to make their position secure the great battleships strung out from each end of the transport fleet thundered out fire and shell at a tremendous rate. The terrific bombardment and the vicious attacks of the Australian troops won the day. The Turks retreated behind their second line of defense. They left many dead and wounded on the field. They also lost many prisoners.

The British troops built rude breastworks and prepared to hold the captured ground at any cost. The first day's losses were terrific. More than 2,000 were dead.

When the position on Gallipoli peninsula became secure the big part of the disembarkment started. Great strings of lighters, piled high with all sorts of war materials, were beached. Thousands of sweating, swearing, half clad men toiled frantically in the hot afternoon sun. As accompaniment they had the cheerful music of a dozen or more battleships banging away at the Turk entrenchments.

Many Fell Exhausted.

At dark the men juggling supplies were relieved. It was time too. They were nearly done for. Most of them dropped exhausted in the warm sand. Also there had been some suffering because of the water. Emphatic orders had been issued prohibiting men from drinking water from Turkish wells. All the water for the men came from the ships. The small boats were so occupied they had little time for water, consequently all the afternoon there was a constant cry for "water, water."

But the work did not stop. Thousands of fresh men leaped to relieve their exhausted comrades. At night half a hundred searchlights made the beach as light as day. The men worked in shifts. Toward morning the commissary got some portable kitchens ashore, and the men had breakfast.

The second day of the landing operations was, however, its real trial. From morning until dark 15,000 men worked to their utmost to get the last of the supplies ashore. Men struggled alternately with heavy siege guns and with barbed wire. The men at the front, frantically engaged in digging trenches, used up the barbed wire as fast as it could be taken to them. But the task was done.

Forty hours of terrible, life taking toil did it—that is, the time it took the British forces to land on the extremity of Gallipoli peninsula. It was really one of the remarkable incidents of the war. The operation was a marvel of perfection as to systematic preparation and execution. The Greek general staff had estimated that if the allies succeeded in landing at all the attempt would take them seven days.

DUTCH GIFT TO NEW YORK.

Amsterdam Sends New City Flag In Token of Historical Affection.

The new orange, white and blue flag of New Amsterdam, which is to be raised over city hall, New York, on June 24, will be a gift from the city of Amsterdam, Holland. An offer of the gift from the mayor of Amsterdam has been accepted.

The people of the Dutch capital are presenting the flag "as a token of historical affection and good will so long existing between the two cities." The banner will be formally accepted on June 24, the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the installation of the first mayor and board of aldermen and the adoption of an official flag of the city.

HABIT SAVES MAN'S LIFE

When He Heard "Right" Would Be Suicide Changed Aim.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Habit saved George Lee, forty-five, recently when he plotted against his life. He placed the muzzle of a revolver in his mouth, put his mind in order for the end and was pulling the trigger when he heard some one call "Right!"

It was a word used more frequently than any other in his work in a downtown grocery. There Lee was accustomed to carry packages across a long room. Several persons were similarly occupied, and when they would meet, going in opposite directions, the one with a load on his shoulder would always cry "Right!" The right hand of the other would go up in signal that he would observe the rules of the meeting, for the contents of the boxes were fragile and any interference might cause a loss that would be deducted from their wages.

While his finger was drawing at the trigger, from outside came the clear call "Right!" voiced by chance in the conversation of passersby.

From habit Lee's right hand started to lift in signal, the finger released the trigger, and the shell exploded, but the minor twitch that had come when he heard the word of warning switched the aim so that the bullet left a harmless wound in his cheek. Persons who heard the shot rushed to the room and took Lee off to the receiving hospital, where his wound was dressed and his spirits revived by the promise that a job would be given him.

BLIND WINDOW CLEANER.

"Earns His Living," Says Owner of Hotel.

Beloit, Wis.—Totally blind as a result of a railroad accident near Milwaukee seven years ago, John Gibson, forty-eight years old, is earning his living by scrubbing floors and washing windows at the Transient hotel in Beloit. The proprietor of the place says Gibson is earning his living as well as any full sighted porter he ever had.

The man does this cleaning work entirely by the sense of touch and a system of mental measurements and calculations. There is nothing in his work to denote disability.

"Seven years ago," Mr. Gibson said, "I was working on a railroad near Milwaukee when an explosion occurred in some blasting powder. When I left the hospital I was totally blind."

THANKS FOR AID TO RYNDAM.

Holland-American Line Praises Naval Men For Brilliant Seamanship.

Secretary Daniels has received a letter from the Holland-American line expressing the company's appreciation and gratitude for the aid given by the battleships Texas and South Carolina to the steamship Ryndam when she was injured in collision off Nantucket May 26.

The South Carolina took on board the passengers and crew of the Ryndam, totaling 230 persons. Among the passengers were thirty-two women and ten children, including four babies. The accident occurred at 3:40 a. m., and all the passengers and crew were transferred to the South Carolina by 4:30. The Texas convoyed the Ryndam to the Ambrose lightship.

The letter remarks on the efficient work done by the officers and crew of the naval vessels and the hospitality shown the passengers and crew of the stricken ship and states that it will always be remembered as a brilliant example of good seamanship and splendid comradeship.

WAR NO BAR TO RED TAPE.

French Surgeon Checked In Work by Lack of Printed Forms.

One of the best known doctors, who is directing a French military hospital, recently had need of a certain surgical instrument. He wrote to the authorities for it.

"Make your request on a printed form," came the answer. The doctor replied that he had no printed forms. Second reply from the administration, "Make a demand for printed forms." The doctor again wrote and received a third reply, "Make your demand on a printed form."

WAR CUTS DOWN BIRTH RATE.

Paris Has 2,040 Fewer Babies In Month, Statistics Show.

Births in France are beginning to show the effects of the war.

According to the statistics for Paris there were 1,850 births in May, the tenth month of the war, as compared with 3,890 in the same month last year.

Camp Benefits For Thousands.

It is estimated that fully 50,000 boys had camp experience during last summer, as a result of the leadership of the boy scout movement.

The Road to Learning.

I wish I knew my letters well,
So I might learn to read and spell;
I'd find them on my pretty card
If they were not so very hard.

Now, S is crooked, don't you see?
And G is making mouths at me,
And O is something like a ball,
It hasn't any end at all.

And all the rest are—my, so queer!
They look like crooked sticks—oh, dear!
Nurse counted six and twenty more;
What do they have so many for?

Tapping a Hole.

A plug tap should never be started in a hole where it is convenient to start the thread with a taper tap.

ZEPPELINS TO FIRE AERIAL TORPEDO

New Device Is Guided by Radio From Aircraft.

ITALY HAS NEW DESTROYER

A Double Biplane, With Place For Mounting Big Guns, Is In the Service to Fight Hostile Airships—New German Machines Can Also Make Their Own Poison Gas.

London.—Much ingenuity is being expended in adding to efficiency for destruction by German airships. The Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The latest device is an aerial torpedo which is proposed to be used by the new super-Zeppelins. It is made of aluminium and filled with gas. When discharged from a tube in the airship the torpedoes, it is stated, are sustained by gas and controlled by wireless from the airship. They can be directed from a great distance and exploded at any point required.

"Professor Rohland of Stuttgart has invented a trench protection against shell fire. It consists of an artificial stone, which it is stated will stand a pressure three times greater than reenforced concrete. It is manufactured in slabs two yards square and will stand a temperature of 1,000 degrees. The latest infantry rifle fired at fifteen yards did not even crack it, although it was less than one and one-half inches thick."

The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent says:

"The new type of Zeppelin airship is rounded at the front and has a sharp tail. The vessel is heavily armed. Three tanks for carrying poisonous gas bombs are slung beneath the gondola or navigating chamber and are fitted with a newly invented bomb dropping apparatus.

Photo by American Press Association.

COUNT ZEPPELIN, INVENTOR OF THE GERMAN DIRIGIBLE.

"The new airship has a smaller crew than the ordinary Zeppelin, but her speed is reported to be much greater. Among the crew are men able to make a fresh supply of poisonous gas bombs during a voyage.

"It is reported that ten airships of the new type are already built. Several more are stated to be in course of construction for the purpose of taking part in a proposed aerial invasion of England."

An aeroplane "destroyer," designed for attacking dirigible airships, has been perfected in Italian government workshops in the last few months. It is an enormous machine with three separate engines and with a total energy of more than 250 horsepower.

It consists, in fact, of the bodies of two ordinary tractor biplanes placed side by side and far enough apart so that there is room between them for the propeller of a third engine. Each of the two main bodies has its own engine and tractor screw in front, so that it looks at first like two ordinary tractor biplanes flying hand in hand.

On the section of wing which joins the two bodies is placed the body work of an ordinary pusher biplane, with the engine and propeller behind. In this way the body projects well forward in front of the screws of the other two engines, so that it can carry a gun of considerable size and have a clear field of fire forward, backward and on both sides, without danger of hitting its own screws or wings.

The machine is capable of lifting a huge cargo of bombs large enough to be certain to destroy a Zeppelin if they hit it, and even capable of doing serious damage to a battleship.

Plowed Up Lost Bills.

Huntington, Ind.—Clifford F. Owens, a farmer living south of Huntington, lost his purse when plowing a field on his place two years ago. The purse contained a $10 bill, two $1 bills, two nickels and some silver. While plowing the same field recently his plowshare turned up the lost pocketbook.

BUSINESS IMPROVING, OFFICIAL FIGURES SAY.

Railroads Earn More Than Year Ago. Treasury Balance Expands.

With the decision of the federal court that the United States Steel corporation is not a trust it is confidently expected that business will now quickly take big leaps.

That conditions are greatly improved is emphasized by a statement by Comptroller of the Currency Williams showing that on May 31 the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency still outstanding aggregated only $2,508,940 out of the $383,502,645 originally issued. This outstanding currency is held largely by banks in the cotton states.

A report by the interstate commerce commission shows that the net revenues of the great railroads for April were $33,821,308 as against $30,322,791 for April, 1914. The gross revenues were $2,000,000 less, but the operative expenses were $6,000,000 less.

Secretary McAdoo and other officials of the treasury department are confident that the turning point has come in national finances and that by July 15 there will be in the general treasury fund a working balance of at least $100,000,000.

KAISER HAS PLENTY OF MEN.

But Losses Are Seven a Minute and Flower of Youth Is Gone.

Colonel Repington, the military expert of the London Times, discussing the new German army, says:

"The classes of 1915 and 1916 and part of the ersatz and landsturm will soon be supplying the Germans with their usual quota of good men, and it would be a fallacy to suppose that the German operations will be any more hampered this present year by a lack of men than by a lack of munitions and food.

"The Germans do not lack the means to continue the campaign vigorously. Nevertheless it must not be forgotten that the German casualties have been ten times those of the British, and the strain of fighting simultaneously on two fronts has been immense.

"No nation can go on losing seven men a minute day and night. The original German army disappeared long ago. Their supply of men is not exhausted, but to a large extent the flower of the German youth has withered."

THE MARKING OF BILLS.

One of the Secret Service Methods Is the Use of Pin Holes.

In their surveillance and apprehension of suspected persons government secret service officers often find it necessary to "mark the money" handled by such persons. There are various methods of so marking the national currency, one of the most novel of which is the pinprick.

The note to be marked is, say, the five dollar silver certificate bearing the vignette of an Indian chief in his full regalia of feathers and trappings and presenting a full face view. With the aid of a pin the secret service man makes two punctures in the bill directly in the pupils of the Indian's eyes. To the casual and sometimes even critical inspector of the note these pinpricks are invisible. If raised to the light, however, the bill will distinctly reveal them.

The markings are complicated by the following process: The pin point is applied in the twist of the large figure 5 at the two upper corners of the note. These tiny twists do not appear in the "necks" of the two figures 5 that are at both ends of the bottom of the note. The note is now pierced again, this time in the ends of the scrolls on each side of the word five in the lower center of the bill. The marking is now complete. In secret it is exhibited to one or more persons for purposes of identification and is then placed in the till or money drawer to which the suspected person has access.

It is said that the pinpricks will remain perfect for some time. When such bills are produced in court and their marking is explained under oath conviction is practically certain.—Every Week.

Knew What He Meant.

"It's five years ago today, and I'm going to celebrate my wouldn't wedding."

"Wouldn't wedding? Wooden, you mean?"

"No; wouldn't. Five years ago today since I asked a girl if she'd marry me and she said she wouldn't."—Browning Magazine.

PRZEMYSL FAMED IN STORY OF WAR

Thrice It Has Been Besieged, Twice It Has Fallen.

GREAT AUSTRIAN VICTORY.

Russians, Who Held Powerful Galician Fortress Seventy Days, Fled Before Hail of Shells From Big Austro-German Guns to Which They Lacked Ammunition to Reply.

Three separate sieges of Przemysl, or Peremysl, as the Russians renamed it during their brief occupation, has made the great Galician fortress one of the memorable centers of the war. Nor probably is its story yet concluded.

It was early in the war's history that the Russian forces, with little of resistance before them, first swept across the Galician plains and planted their heavy guns before the stronghold. The first shots were fired on Sept. 16, and from that date until the present time Przemysl has been in the front of important events as much if not more than any other single city.

The first Russian attempt against Przemysl was undertaken too hastily, or not hastily enough. In any event, however, their big howitzers had not pounded away at the strong fortifications for many days before Austrian re-enforcements appeared in great numbers and drove the invaders back.

Early in October, however, the Russian forces, greatly strengthened and dragging heavy guns in their wake, pressed up to the outskirts of the city and again began, this time in deadly earnest, a bombardment of the various forts which formed the great stronghold, Przemysl.

Austrians Slowly Starved.

The attacking army was variously estimated at from 125,000 to 200,000 men. There were probably 150,000 Austrian soldiers within the fortress to defend it.

In a few days the city had been surrounded and entirely cut off from outward communication, and thus it was held and gradually starved until March 22, when General Kusmanek, the Austrian commander, raised the white flag.

Several attempts had been made to relieve the besieged city, but for some reason as yet unexplained the Austrian general staff could not release a force of sufficient strength to drive off the invaders or even to break through the ring of iron.

No sooner had the city fallen and yielded its more than 117,000 Austrian soldiers as prisoners than the Russian armies released from the siege rushed south and east to the various Carpathian passes, bent upon surging across those mountains and into the Hungarian plains. They advanced to the summit of the mountains and held them until the concerted Austrian and German drive, which rolled them back, began last month.

Meantime the Russians were able to restock the forts of Przemysl to some extent and to repair the damage done by their own guns. But it is supposed that it was lack of ammunition which eventually forced them to retire.

Russians Out Pell Mell.

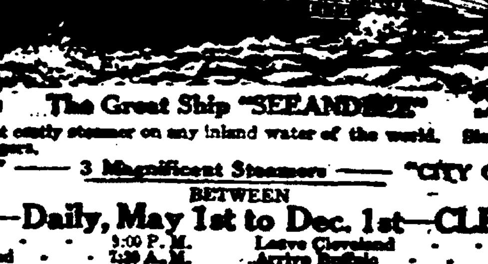
With the Russians beaten back in the Carpathian fighting General Mackensen at the beginning of May began the drive that sent the Russians reeling back in West Galicia. Two weeks later he arrived before Przemysl with a great Austro-German army and began the actual siege operations.

Mackensen's left wing crossed the San and menaced Przemysl from the north. His right wing pressed northward from the south to complete the movement to encircle Przemysl by seizing the Przemysl-Lemberg railway.

In front of Przemysl the famous 42 centimeters began battering at the forts guarding the city from the west. The fortress was not completely surrounded, nor was the railroad seized. The Russians did not stay for that. When they found they could not reply to the terrific hail of steel poured upon them they made the best retreat they could back along the railroad toward Lemberg and on back beyond that city to their own frontier, the Austrians report.

The capture of Przemysl was one of the great victories of the war. That was achieved by the slow grind of siege, starving out the garrison. The recapture is a no less stirring and important victory.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND



The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo - - 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland - - 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland - - 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo - - 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

D/34

HAVE YOU MADE A GOOD CATCH?

Everybody's doing it. A lot depends on your equipment, such as:

BRISTOL STEEL RODS — BASKETS

A FLY FOR EVERY FISH

REELS — NETS — LINES

Every article at bed-rock price and Guaranteed

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

7 South First Street

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at St. Louis.
New York at Pittsburgh.
Brooklyn at Chicago.
Philadelphia at Cincinnati.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 2; Philadelphia, 1.
Boston, 4; Chicago, 3.
St. Louis, 4; Brooklyn, 3.
New York, 5; Cincinnati, 3; 12 in.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	27	21	.563
Philadelphia	27	21	.563
St. Louis	28	26	.519
Boston	24	24	.500
Pittsburgh	23	24	.489
Brooklyn	24	26	.480
New York	20	24	.455
Cincinnati	19	26	.422

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Boston.
Chicago at Philadelphia.
Cleveland at New York.
Detroit at Washington.

Results Yesterday

Philadelphia, 3; Detroit, 2.
Washington, 5; Chicago, 2.
Boston, 4; Cleveland, 3.
St. Louis-New York; postponed.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	32	20	.615
Detroit	32	22	.593
Boston	26	18	.591
New York	25	23	.531
Washington	23	22	.511
Cleveland	20	28	.417
Philadelphia	19	31	.380
St. Louis	19	32	.373

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Newark.
Chicago at Buffalo.
Pittsburgh at Brooklyn.
Kansas City at Baltimore.

Results Yesterday

Brooklyn, 3; Pittsburgh, 2.
St. Louis, 3; Newark, 2.
Kansas City, 6; Baltimore, 5.
Chicago, 8; Buffalo, 0; 1st game.
Chicago, 3; Bpuffalo, 1; 2d game.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	33	21	.611
St. Louis	27	21	.563
Brooklyn	28	24	.538
Pittsburgs	26	23	.531
Chicago	28	25	.528
Newark	26	25	.510
Baltimore	19	31	.380
Buffalo	19	36	.345

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Syracuse at Troy.
Scranton at Binghamton.
Wilkesbarre at Elmira.
Utica at Albany.

Results Yesterday

Syracuse, 8; Troy, 3.
Utica, 3; Albany, 1; 1st game.
Ablany, 3; Utica, 0; 2d game.
Scranton, 10; Binghamton, 4; 1st.
Binghamton, 5; Scranton, 4; 2d.
Elmira, 4; Wilkesbarre, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	21	14	.600
Elmira	22	15	.595
Binghamton	18	16	.529
Troy	17	16	.515
Scranton	17	17	.500
Wilkesbarre	17	19	.472
Albany	15	21	.417
Syracuse	13	22	.371

MOVIE STAR HURLED INTO HUDSON RIVER

New York.—Betty Marshall and Frederick de Belleville, heroine and hero in a moving picture play, were thrown into the Hudson river, off Hastings, yesterday by the premature explosion of 200 pounds of dynamite.

Miss Marshall was to throw herself into the water. De Belleville was to leap to her rescue and then the boat they had left was to blow up. Something went wrong, and the boat blew up first.

Fortunately the two actors in the drama were the length of the barge from the dynamite. They went high in the air and then into the water simultaneously with the terrific flash and a detonation thats hook windows a mile away.

Marshall W. Taggart, head of the Gotham Film Company, which had purchased the dynamite and the barge, was in a launch some distance away ready to pick up the pair when the got in the water in the proposed "stunt." Taggart got into action in earnest and soon pulled them out.

Miss Marshall's burns on face and body are severe, but not serious. De Belleville was struck on the head by a timber, and has a scalp wound and slight burns.

Three photographers rowing from the barge to get ready for the picture were upset but managed to right their boat and clamber back. The cameras went to the bottom.

COULDN'T MAKE TEAM, BOY TRIES TO DIE

Dejected at being unable to play on the school baseball team because of an injured finger, Henry Lavine, 15, of No. 102 Third avenue, Brooklyn, swallowed idoine in a class room of the Boys' High school today. An ambulance was called from St. John's hospital and eggs and starch administered.

The boy is now progressing favorably. The iodine was a 4 per cent solution, too weak to poison him.

RESENT SEC. DANIELS' COURT OF MIDDIES

Annapolis, June 17.—Officers at the Naval Academy have expressed resentment and regret at the necessity for a court of inquiry such as was appointed by Secretary Daniels to investigate irregularities in Naval Academy examination papers.

Lieutenant M. E. Manley, aid to Superintendent W. F. Fullum, and Lieutenant-Commander J. T. Tompkins, head of the department of physics, testified they had heard such expressions.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Buffalo at Toronto.
Rochester at Montreal.
Newark at Richmond.
Jersey City vs. Providence at Syracuse.

Results Yesterday

Rochester, 3; Toronto, 1.
Jersey City, 4; Richmond, 3.
Providence, 5; Newark, 1.
Montreal, 4; Buffalo, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	22	14	.611
Providence	23	17	.575
Rochester	22	19	.537
Montreal	22	21	.512
Richmond	21	21	.500
Newark	18	21	.462
Toronto	19	24	.440
Jersey City	16	26	.381

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Columbus—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	8	15	2
Columbus	3	8	3

WIRELESS GIVES TROUBLE NOW

Static Disturbances Giving German System Worry; Nothing Unusual at This Season

New York, June 17.—That efforts are being made to keep up direct communication between this country and Germany by wireless was made known yesterday by Dr. Karl G. Frank, secretary of the Atlantic Communcation Company, whose giant stations at Sayville and Tuckerton form the link with the Nauen station in Germany. Dr. Frank said that the problem is to overcome the "static" disturbances that during this season so constantly interrupt transatlantic wireless waves, and that his experts are experimenting with new apparatus that may remove the trouble.

"We expected to have trouble; it is always so during this season of the year," said Dr. Frank, "and we shall not be free from it until August. For the last few weeks we have been troubled very much by 'static.'

"Frequent changes in temperature and thunderstorms have added to the atmospheric disturbance. But that is to be expected. We are working to put an end to it, if possible."

The interruption to the direct transmission of messages from Germany to this country during the last few weeks is said to have proved a serious drawback to the German government. Ordinarily the Nauen station has little difficulty in hurling its powerful waves out on the ether to Sayville, and Sayville is also able to get Nauen unless conditions are very unfavorable.

The spring and summer "static," however, has worked such havoc with the signals that it has been necessary to repeat messages many times before they could be correctly read. Usually Sayville in sending repeats each word of its message at least three times. This practice is customary also at Nauen, but repetitions of six and seven times have of late been necessary.

"Statements that atmospheric disturbances have increased the wireless distance between Nauen and Sayville by thousands of miles are erroneous," said a wireless expert. "The roaring and buzzing in the receivers, which the undamped waves of static electricity make when they occur, break up the signals by rendering them unintelligible.

"It is the mixture of noises that confuses the operator. The regular signals keep coming in just the same as usual, but they cannot be read because of the row made by the 'static.' It is impossible at times to read even nearby stations, as the waves caused by 'static' are undamped and come in all over the receiving coils and cannot be tuned out. The higher the wave length the worse the disturbance caused by 'static.'"

DIRECT PRIMARY IS DENOUNCED AT ALBANY

Albany, June 17.—A return to the convention system of nominating State and judicial officers was advocated today before a Constituoian Convention committee by George W. Wickersham, formerlly United States Attorney-General; William D. Guthrie, of the New York Bar Association, Republicans, and D-Cady Herrick, former Supreme Court Justice and one-time Democratic nominee for Governor.

"In my opinion," Mr. Wickersham said, "this convention will have performed one of its principal public duties if it provides for a return of the convention system."

Inauguration of a system of thumbprint identification as a solution of the election fraud problem also was recommended by Mr. Wickersham.

Mr. Guthrie declared the present direct primary plan was "a step in the direction of anarchy and corrupt despotism."

The direct primary was workable in small districts where people know the qualifications of the prospective nominees, Judge Herrick thought, but was utterly impracticable in the nomination of State officers.

WASTED ONE LEGACY, EXPECTS ANOTHER

William L. Heath, 24, of Plainfield, N. J., who ran through a legacy of $100,000, from a grandmother, in four years, and is now clerking in a factory, was ordered to pay $8 of his $60 a month salary to a former employe to whom he owes $211. Heath is married.

PERILS OF BAD AIR.

Reduced Vitality, Loss of Appetite and General Bad Health.

Air is bad when it is overheated, when it contains an excess of moisture and when it is chemically contaminated. This is the conclusion of the New York state commission on ventilation as summarized by Professor C. E. A. Winslow, chairman.

The first indictment against bad air shows that an increase in temperature beyond the normal 70 degrees produces serious derangement of the vasomotor mechanism of the body, resulting in a rise of temperature, increased pulse and a lowered blood pressure, with a corresponding decrease in efficiency, both physical and mental. In addition to this, overheating conduces to an undesirable congestion of the mucous membranes of the nose, thus possibly paving the way for colds, sore throats and attacks of various germ diseases.

The work of the commission also proves that chemical accumulations in the air as a result of air stagnation bring about a decreased appetite for food, which, in turn, must have an unfavorable effect on the entire body. In the commission's experiments the people living in fresh air ate 4½ to 18 per cent more than those living in stagnant air.

"These experiments," says Professor Winslow, "indicate that fresh air is needed at all times and in all places. While we have changed our ideas as to what causes bad air, ventilation is just as essential to remove heat produced by human bodies as it was once thought to be to remove the carbon dioxide produced by human lungs, and it is now proved also to be essential for carrying away chemical products which exert a measurable effect upon the appetite for food. People who live and work in overheated and unventilated rooms are reducing their vitality and rendering themselves an easy prey to all sorts of diseases."

WARRING ON RUST.

Problems With Which Iron and Steel Experts Are Wrestling.

This age of steel has roused a world wide battle with rust, and more chemists and other experts are studying possible weapons for this battle than are busy on almost any other industrial problem. Concrete owes much of its present growth to the difficulty of protecting steel and iron against rust.

Absolutely pure iron will not rust, and fairly pure iron will rust only slowly. One way, therefore, is to improve the grade of iron, and manufacturers now sell iron that is guaranteed to withstand rust for considerable periods. It is possible, though expensive, to purify iron completely by electricity, and electrolytic iron, as it is called, may before long be common commercially.

Surface coats of protection are, however, the favorite methods of today, and many such coatings have appeared lately. The latest one is a metal coat that can be applied on an iron or steel structure after it has been erected in much the same way that paint is applied. Finely powdered metals—such as tin, lead or zinc, or all three in proper proportion—are mixed in oil and painted on the bridge or column or other structure that needs protection. Then the painted surface is heated by a hand torch or in whatever way is most convenient.

The oil burns away, and the powdered metal melts, but does not run. As the metal cools it takes a tight grip on the iron surface and forms a tin or alloy coat, which stops rust.—Saturday Evening Post.

Selecting the Golf Ball.

The small heavy ball will go farther than the lighter or larger ball for the player who can hit it extremely hard owing to its less resistance from the air. Because of its weight and small size it can bore its way through the air almost like a bullet. In the case of a lady or a very light hitter I firmly believe they will get much better results with the large light ball since because of its greater resiliency it will get the maximum distance from a much lighter blow. So my advice would be for a light hitter to use the light ball, the average hitter the medium weight and the hard hitter the heavy ball.—Outing.

Phi Beta Kappa.

Phi Beta Kappa are the names of three letters of the Greek alphabet, the initial letters of three Greek words, Philosophia Biou Kubernetes, which means "philosophy the guide of life."

This is the name of the oldest of the Greek letter college societies. Membership is bestowed as an honor for exceptionally good scholarship. The society originated at William and Mary college in 1776, but has extended to many other colleges and universities. There are about 17,000 names in the catalogue. Members wear a gold watch key as a badge, with emblem and inscriptions.—Philadelphia Press.

They Help in a Way.

"Riches are not everything," declared bitterly the poor, but honest, suitor, who had just been rejected. "They cannot insure happiness."

"Perhaps not," replied the practical maiden, "but they at least provide means to pay the premiums on the policy!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Correct.

Jack—You say Jones is living above his income.

Bill—Yes; he gets his income from an apartment house and lives on the top floor!—New York Globe.

The nobleness of life depends on its consistency, clearness of purpose, quiet and ceaseless energy.—Ruskin.

MAKES NEW JAWS OF WEDDING RINGS

German Dentist Works Marvels For Wounded Soldiers.

WOMEN GIVE UP THEIR GOLD

Faces Shattered by Bullets or Shrapnel Are Rebuilt at Duesseldorf From Precious Metal, With Shinbones and Pieces of Rib Taken From the Injured Men Themselves.

"You need not thank me for this. It long ago lost its significance." The "this" was a woman's wedding ring, worn and scratched.

The message, blurred and poorly written, and the ring, indicating some hidden tragedy that never will be revealed, were sent, says a dispatch from Duesseldorf, Germany, to the Chicago Daily News, to Dr. Christian Bruhn, one of Germany's most distinguished dental surgeons, for the furtherance of his work—the patching up of soldiers whose jaws have been shot away.

The patching up process requires much gold. Dr. Bruhn's clinic is free, one so far unsupported from any official source. As his fame has gone out over Germany, however, his gold reserve has increased amazingly.

A famous actress has given a heavy medallion, the gift of the ruler of a German state. A noted litterateur has donated a similar gift from the king of Sweden. Wedding rings, seal rings, necklaces, gold coins from England and from Turkey, even old gold teeth, are pouring in on Dr. Bruhn, to be melted up and find their way into the mouths of wounded soldiers.

Soldiers Made New Again.

The orthopedic institutions, where the soldiers are made new again, so that they may go back to the front, are depressing. But they cannot compare for sheer horror with the great institution in Duesseldorf where scores of men, with half of their faces left, sit or lie in a steel framework that supports a broken jaw until newly inserted bones shall have had time to knit.

The Duesseldorf institution is devoted exclusively to the care of soldiers who have been injured in the jaws and is the largest of its kind in Germany. Weekly it is turning out men who, aside from scars and somewhat impeded speech, are about as good as before the war, men who a few weeks or months before were brought in in such condition that the layman, if he could endure to gaze for long, would despair of their ever being saved.

The patients frequently are found to have rifle bullets imbedded in the bones of their jaws, bullets often that have been flattened out or twisted by the impact against the bone. More serious are the shrapnel and grenade wounds, which tear away whole sections of the face.

Each Supplies Own Bone.

Through use of the X ray the patient's exact injury is established. In a majority of cases there is some part of bone missing—a part that must be replaced by gold or by bone from some part of his body. Each patient is his own bone supply, so to speak, and generally it is the shinbone that serves. The ribs also are a fertile field. So fast does nature work that the place of bone taken out for use in the jaw is replaced rapidly by new growth.

One patient in the hospital slowly recovering from a wound that gouged out his whole jaw has a strip of shinbone in his mouth. On top of that is a new set of serviceable teeth. The man is healthy and reasonably happy.

In dozens of cases it is not only necessary to replace bone, but skin as well. Here again each man must supply his own. Great strips of skin are taken from the patient's arms and grafted on to cheeks or chins. Aside from the scar along the line of stitching there is usually little indication of the original injury.

Each man is photographed on the day of arrival and at intervals as his recovery progresses. To the layman the results accomplished are little short of miraculous. It is almost incredible that so much can be accomplished.

URGE AMERICANIZATION DAY.

Mayors Indorse Welcome to New Citizens on July 4.

The mayors of 250 cities in New York state, in session at Troy, adopted a resolution indorsing the movement to be made the coming Fourth of July a day on which newly naturalized citizens shall be guests of honor. They urged all other cities in the state to follow suit in appointing committees to arrange for citizenship receptions and rallies.

More than fifty other cities throughout the country have now keenly taken up the idea.

AN OFFICER'S LIFE, 23 DAYS.

Briton Has but Little Chance Once He Reaches Firing Line.

It has been figured out from the casualty returns that the average life of the British officer when once he has reached the firing line is only twenty-three days.

The latest lists, which give the British casualties in a single week, contain the names of 913 officers and 20,011 men.

PLANTING TREES AND SHRUBS

Federal Experts Give Advice For Various Localities.

WIDE RANGE OF CHOICE.

The Country Is Divided Into Five Sections and Suitable Varieties Are Suggested For the Various Divisions. Beauty of Shade Trees Depends Upon Normal Growth.

"What kind of trees shall we plant to beautify our grounds? What shrubs would be suited to our schoolyard?" asked a specialist in trees and shrubs of the department of agriculture.

The department specialists have prepared a list of trees and shrubs suited for general use in private grounds, streets, private parks and schoolyards for each of five general divisions of the United States. The divisions are:

First—New England states, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri and Iowa.

Second—Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Third—Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.

Fourth—New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, western Texas, western Oklahoma and western Kansas.

Fifth—California, Oregon and Washington.

The specialists suggest in district No. 1, which includes New York and adjoining states, the following: Deciduous trees—Red oak, white oak, pin oak, American linden, American white elm, white ash, scarlet maple, sugar maple, green ash, Norway maple. Evergreens—White spruce, white pine, Scotch pine, hemlock, balsam fir, Colorado blue spruce. Shrubs—Lilacs, viburnums, philadelphuses, hydrangea, Japan quince, flowering currant, cornuses, spireas, weigelas, coralberry, snowberry, bush honeysuckle, wild roses, rugosa bush, Thunberg's barberry, calycanthus, Regel's privet, elders, sweet pepper bush.

In district No. 2, which includes Delaware and the southern states as far west as Texas, the department would plant the following: Deciduous trees—Tulip, sycamore, pin oak, white oak, black oak, live oak, red oak, white ash, bald cypress, Norway maple, red elm, American white elm, Kentucky coffee, American linden, catalpa, liquidambar, hackberry, sour gum and southern section willow oak and laurel oak. Evergreen trees—Long leaf pine, magnolia, live oak, cedar of Lebanon. Shrubs—Golden bell, hydrangeas, lilac, elaeagnuses, loniceras, hibiscus, roses, Japan quince, calycanthus, smoke tree and viburnums, philadelphuses, cornuses, jasminums, spiraeas, wiegelas, coralberry, snowberry, Thunberg's barberry, crape myrtle, privets, hollies, evergreen, barberries, elders, rose of Sharon. South of Charleston, S. C.; Camellia japonica oleander.

"The beauty of a shade tree depends upon its normal and symmetrical growth," says a department official. "In order to insure this, before planting cut off the ends of all broken or mutilated roots; remove all side branches save upon evergreens, so that a straight whiplike stalk alone remains. Dig holes at least three feet in diameter and two feet deep in good soil and make them four feet across in poor soil. The sides of holes should be perpendicular and the bottom flat. Break up soil in the bottom of hole to the depth of the length of a spade blade. Place twelve or fifteen inches of good top soil in the bottom of the hole and use the fine top soil, free from soda or other decomposing organic matter, about the tree roots. On top of this bottom layer place the roots of the tree, spread them as evenly as possible over the earth, put in and cover with two or three inches of fine top soil. Tramp firmly with the feet and fill the hole with good earth, leaving the surface loose and a little higher than the surface of the surrounding soil. When the work of planting is completed the tree should stand about two inches deeper than it stood in the nursery.

"In order to insure symmetry of growth trees must be allowed unrestricted area for development. At least forty feet should be allowed between trees intended to occupy the ground permanently. Quick growing nurse or temporary trees may be planted between the long lived ones to produce immediate results, but as these are seldom removed as soon as they should be to prevent interference with the development of the permanent plantations the practice is not to be recommended."

Shower Baths For City Horses.

Shower baths have been provided for horses in certain of the larger cities through the kindness of the humane societies. Arrangements have been made with the municipal fire departments by which the societies are allowed to tap the fire plugs and attach hose and spray, so that teamsters and others may give their steeds a bath by merely halting for a moment and turning on the spray. Water for drinking purposes may also be drawn.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 154 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1915 | Price One Cent

Commissioner Wiltsie, whose Vote will Decide Whether the City Shall Bear an Additional Burden of Taxation for the Widening of East First Street, Asks for Your Assistance. Let Him Know Your Decision

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

The Division of Industries of the Chamber of Commerce announce the installation of an Employment Bureau. This bureau will try to bring together the "jobless man and the manless job" without cost to either.

Letters were sent yesterday to all persons in Fulton who employ labor or whose business is such that they might need labor. They have been asked to call up the Chamber stating the character of work, number of workers needed, probable duration of work, probable wages per hour, etc., for any position they have to offer.

The Division of Industries now wishes to announce to all persons in the City of Fulton who are seeking employment that cards are available at the Chamber office and if they will report there and fill out an application card it will be placed on file so that when any employer of labor calls for helpers, the Chamber may be in a position to bring the worker and the work together. There is absolutely no charge to either party for this service. It can be as effective as the employers and the unemployed make it. If they all register and report their needs, it is quite likely that this bureau may be of real help to both.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

MR. WILTSIE BELIEVES ULTIMATE COST WILL EXCEED THE ESTIMATE

East First Street is about to be paved with brick. The contract will soon be let. The Board of Public Works has passed a resolution favoring the widening of the pavement from Rochester street to Broadway about three feet, by moving the west curb that distance further to the west. The contract will first be let to pave the existing roadway and the cost will be approximately $2,400 to the property owners along the street, and $3,000 to the city as a whole.

If the pavement is made wider as proposed, the added cost will be arranged for subsequent to the awarding of the contract by making a supplementary agreement with the contractor. According to information furnished by the city engineer the proposed widening will cost four or five thousand dollars additional, thus doubling the cost to both the property owners and the city.

Please note that the engineer's estimates are likely to be under actual cost and that the proposed widening involves the destruction of some magnificent shade trees that are highly prized by the residents.

Most people will [illegible] and the dangerous curve in lower East First street, through the business section, is one of the most serious mistakes in the planning of our city. Business is gradually moving toward the south and similar conditions may prevail in the future, at the Library curve.

Now, will you seriously consider the following questions:

Will the slight additional width be sufficient for the future growth and development of the city?

Will the value of the proposed additional pavement be commensurate with the cost?

Is it wise to incur the expense, now, while so many people are out of work and money is so hard to get?

Are you in favor of widening the street as proposed?

Please answer "Yes or "No". Your voice will be heard; the majority will decide my vote and it appears that my vote will decide the question.

The appeal is to all taxpayers, of full age, both men and women.

The matter will come up for consideration Monday evening, June 21. If you have sufficient interest in the matter, please put your answer "Yes" or "No" on a postal card, sign your name and direct the same to me.

A. W. WILTSIE.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 5

Because You Get What You Want

Getting just what you want usually depends upon one or both of two things. You must know where to look for it, and have the time to look. You must have the selection possible from a good assortment. Right here in Fulton you know pretty well what goods, and even what class of goods each of our merchants carries. You can go to the most likely store first, and then to next most likely, and so on. Nine cases in ten, however, you can find it at the first store. You know where to find what you want and you save time in looking for it. It is safer to say that any reasonable "Want" can be filled by our merchants. If your want is unusual, however, our merchants will always be glad to fill that want for you. In a strange city you do not know where to look, you waste time, and if you cannot find just what you want, no merchant knows you or takes enough interest in you to fill your want by a special order.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Under Cover of 300,000 Shells French Press Germans Back—Advance Made at Arras and in Alsace—Two Towns Taken on the Vosges Front

Paris, June 18.—For two days a battle has raged all along the line from Arras to Alsace and tonight's official statement from the War Office is that among the many engagements three decisive victories are noted.

At Neuville the French avain employed their "iron curtain" in preparation for an infantry attack with bayonets and hand yrenades. The unprecedented number of 300,000 explosive shells were fired on one seection of the German trnches, literally shatterinb them into ruins.

This attack was followed by a series of violent counter attacks by the Germans in which it is estimated they threw fully eleven divisions into action, but the French assert they maintained their gains.

Around Souchez the French have made almost uninterrupted progress toward the town, which is one of the most important points held by the Germans in the defence of Lens.

Lastly, in Alsace, the French have captured the towns of Altenhof and Steinboucho, which lie along the opposite sides of the River Fecht. Altenhof is a suburb of Metzerel, and when the Germans saw this place was in danger they set it on fire.

The official report containing these and other details is as follows:

"There has been great activity on the front during the last two days.

"The fighting to the north of Arras since yesterday has taken on a character of extreme intensity. The infantry actions have been numerous and desperate, the duel of artillery violent and continuous.

"We have realized important progress, almost all of which has been maintained, notwithstanding the furious counter-attacks of the Germans, some of which were markedly accentuated today.

"It is especially in the north part of the sector that we have progressed, carrying several lines of trenches on botth sides of the road from Aix Moulette to Souchez. The Germans are still holding on in the Fond De Buval, but they are almost completely surrounded.

"We made advances yesterday and today toward Souchez, in the directions northwest, southeast, west and east in an uninterrupted fashion.

"Further to the south we have gained footing in the park of the Chateau de Carleul, the moats of which, filled with water, served as a base for the German defences; captured the cemetery of Souchez and gained ground on the slopes to the southeats and Souchez (Hill 119) thanks to several brilliant assaults.

"The gains of yesterday were enlarged today.

"To the north, to the east and to the south of Neuville we took by assault the Germans' first line, and at certain points the second line. The units engaged fought at the point of the bayonet and with grenades under a violent artillery fire.

"Our infantry, after having attacked with great spirit, very efficaciously supported by a fire of nearly 300,000 sheels, was obliged to make front during the night of Wednesday-Thursday against violent and repated counter attacks, carried out by large effectives and repulsed the malong the entire front.

"We have evacuated only a small wood conquered yesterday morning to the south of Hill 119, which the German artillery fire rendered untenable.

"The Germans brought into the engagements eleven divisions, which suffered heavy losses. On our side we have suffered serious losss. The morale of our troops isp erfect. The number of prisoners taken by us exceeds six hundred, including more than 20 officers.

"Our air squadrons have effectively bombarded the German reserves at Givenchy and in the Forest of Le Folie and dispersed contingents in the fact of taking up their formations.

"The grave check suffered by the Germans in their counter attacks at Quennevieres is confirmed by the great number of German dead found in front of our trenches.

"A long range piece has twice bombarded Villeres, Cottereta. Oen person was wounded.

"The Rheims an examination of the points where German projectiles fell establishes the fact that more than eighty shells, several of which were of incendiary type, have fallen on the town and more particularly on the Cathedral."

DRAKE PETITION FILED

A petition has been filed in Surrogate's Court for letters of probate on the estate of Adin L. Drake, late of Fulton. Mrs. Mary A. Drake, the widow, is made the executrix and the entire estate of $700, personal, except $10 to an adopted daughter, Estella M. Vaughan, is left to her.

Residents of London Are Told to Store Water and Sand in Homes to Guard Against Danger from Aerial Raiders—Curtiss is Building Planes for Britain

London, June 18.—Housholders in London are advised by Scotland Yard to store water and sand in their homes with which to combat fires started by hostile air craft and to provide themselves with respirators with which to protect themselves against noxious gases. There is a general belief here that the season of Zeppelin raids is only beginning and the authorities have decided to take every precaution against the success of an attack. In regard to the most satisfactory homemade respirator Scotland Yard says:

"To this question there really is no satisfactory answer, for until the poison used is known, no antidote can be indicated."

It is suggested that cotton waste saturated with washing soda makes a good respirator. The attention devoted by the authorities to this precautionary detail leads London to expect gas bombs, in addition to incendiary and explosive missles, the next time the Zeppellins appear.

The statement in the House of Commons on Wednesday that Britain is developing a larger and more powerful aeroplane for offensive service led to many inquiries yesterday, and it was learned that Curtiss, the American aviator, has been commissioned to produce these machines. The aeroplane, a landing biplane of 320 horse power, is in coure of construction at the new factory recently built by Mr. Curtiss in Toronto, Ont.

In addition to the officers Dr. Albert F. Zahm, recorder of the aerodynamic laboratory of the Smithsonian Institution, in Washington, has been employed on behalf of the constuctors to watch the construction of the big machine. Mr. Curtiss also has employed to aid in the work Anthony Jannus, of Baltimore, well known aviator and builder of aeroplanes. Mr. Jannus flew 1900 miles down the Mississippi in 1912.

It is learned that the lines of the big biplane will be much like those of the America so far as the wings are concerned. These were designed originally by Douglas Thomas, a young Englishman, now associated with Thomas Brothers, an American firm at Ithaca, N.Y. They will spread wider than the America's wings, however, being designed to carry large loads of explosives and fuel.

The giant aeroplane is expected to have a spread of nearly one hundred feet as compared to 72 feet in the Wanamaker flying boat. Its power will be supplied by two engines of 160 horse power, instead of the 100 horse power motors, used in the America. These will add obout 350 to 400 pounds weight, but this will be more than made up by dropping the heavy boat and substituting a landing chassis.

It is estimated the new craft will life at least 700 pounds more than the America. The latter, it is understood, recently ascended 6000 feet in

(Continued on Eighth Page)

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Friday, June 18, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

End of the Chicago Strike

The 14,000 Chicago street railway employes have resumed work and their demands for higher pay and shorter hours will be arbitrated by a board consisting of a representative of either side and the Mayor of the city as a neutral members.

It is gratifying to know that threatened serious disorders have been averted and that pending a decision by the arbitrators the city's transit facilitities are again in operation. But the question occurs, why could not the decision to arbitrate have been reached before the strike?

For two days hundreds of thousands of persons were compelled to walk to and from their work. They were subjected to discomfort and suffering, merchants whose stores were deserted endured heavy losses and the business of a great city was paralyzed.

The strikers themselves suffered the loss of two days' wages. Why strike and then arbitrate? Why not arbitrate to begin with?—N. Y. Herald.

Greek People for War

Elections of members of a new parliament were held in Greece yesterday, to succeed the one dissolved when M. Venizelos resigned as Premier because King Constantine opposed his policy in favor of war on the side of the allies. The returns show that the adherents of the ex-Premier elected nearly two-thirds of the members. They had majorities in all of the provinces except Macedonia. In several provinces they made a clean sweep. In Patras, the division of Gounaris, the present Premier, they carried all but one seat. Two members of the Gounaris Cabinet, the Minister of Marine and the Minister of Finance, were defeated.

As the result of the election ex-Premier Venizelos will again enter the chamber and assume power. A change of ministry will be impossible, however, until parliament meets, and the session may be postponed by the Gounaris Government for 40 days. The present Cabinet consequently may remain in power until the end of July. Eventually, however, Venizelos will again become Premier, backed up by a large majority in the chamber. He will undoubtedly insist on Greece's entering the war on the side of the allies, despite the opposition of King Constantine. The latter is reported to be in a very weak condition because of his recent serious illness, and it is possible that he may not survive very long. His son, the Crown Prince, is said to favor the Venizelos policy.—Utica Observer.

Chicago's Car Strike

Assuredly voluntary and compulsory arbitration both of international questions affecting the honor of governments and the safety of peoples will have to remain a grotesque dream so long as there can be such flagrant outrages against the innocent public as the Chicago street railway strike.

It is true that the companies and the men have now agreed to submit their differences to a selected board for adjudication. But before doing so they threw the whole city of Chicago into confusion and disorder. Hundreds of thousands of wage-earnesr were unable to reach their employment for the better part of three days, the business of merchants, big and little, was demoralized and all but stopped, and the general life and activity of the second largest city in America were paralyzed.

Meanwhile labor union chaos-breeders were no more violating the rights and the privileges of several million human beings than municipal government politicians were disgracing their offices and discrediting all democratic institutions.

Some day the great American public is going to let drive and kick that kind of leadership—the cheap politician and the labor agitator, competing with each other to bedevil the general welfare—so high that it will never come down.—N. Y. Press.

Concerning the Navy

Sea power was indispensable to the success of the War of the Revolution.

The navy fought and won the War of 1812.

The Union was preserved, and the outcome of the War of Secession was determined, as much by the blockading navy as by the army of the North.

The navy decided the outcome of the Spanish war.

England's navy has given Great Britain uninterrupted peace on the water for nearly one hundred years and her shores have not been successfully invaded for nearly one thousand years.

The navy has 21,000 miles of sea coast to defend.

Battleships are cheaper than battles.

The money for American battleships is paid to American workingmen, American builders and American craftsmen.

The navy as a trade school has been called "Our Great National University." It returns to civil life annually as many trained, efficient and patriotic young men as are graduated from the five leading universities of the country.

The annual cost of the navy is cheap insurance against war.

The navy suppressed the African slave trade and piracy, and opened the doors of Japan and Korea. It protects missionaries and citizens abroad and has repeatedly rendered invaluable service in times of insurrection and earthquake.

Navies are needed to enforce the decree of a Court of Arbitration.

Power and strength are essential for the nobel task of peacemaker.

Might does not make right, but right backed by might is irresistible.—N. Y. American.

WHY OVERLOOK OUR POSSIBILITIES?

Fulton people are not exceptions to the rule in other places where quick results are looked for; that is why one hears complaints first on one side and then on the other about the activity or apparent inactivity of an organization having for its object the promotion of all that is good in civic life. This is all the result of lack of faith. It is the old, old story of people not having faith in themselves, and when faith in oneself is lacking we cannot expect others to have faith in us.

At present the merchants of this city are trying to startle the consumers and users of commodities with the information that here in Fulton everything needful may be bought at prices to suit every thickness of the purse; and the consumers come back with the retort that the merchants lack faith in themselves. More than that, the consumers are asking the merchants to show some essence of consistency—that they practice what they preach; that if they would have us trade at home they themselves should be the preceptors by spending their money where it will benefit the city generally—with the newspapers printed and published in the city, for everywhere it is acknowledged that newspapers are public assets.

While the arguments are carried on and the blunt truths are spoken some of us are bound to be hurt in some places, but no real harm can be done, provided we are stimulated toward doing better things for the "city of diversified opportunities." A little criticism now and then is good treatment for the best and the worst of us.

While in the act of criticising a booming, boosting organization it would be well for us to participate in a little retrospective jauntlet. In the first place is not each one of us guilty to a certain extent of the very things we are laying at the feet of the other fellow? Have we not, and are we not still co-operating at the wrong end of the line to make our city as great as its potentialities warrant? While bragging about our fertile field, are we not failing to cultivate that field? The Evening Times thinks we are doing this—by bragging about one or more of our industrial plants as we would about owning a gold mine, but at the same time neglecting to dig for gold. In other words, why keep our eyes fastened upon one asset to the exclusion of others round about us?

As an example of what other towns have done to dig the gold there is recorded a place of less than 2,000 inhabitants where every farmer within trading distance received a special invitation to attend a festival on a certain date. These invitations were signed by each merchant of the town. Tickets accompanied the invitations to add a little more formality to the occasion, which comprised a parade, a visit to the movie house an da dance in the municipal building—all free to the holders of the tickets. More than 2,500 persons visited the town, many of them for the first time in years. During the evening of this festival all livery stables were thrown open for free hitching and a committee was on hand to see that teams received proper care.

In order to eliminate any appearance of mercenary motives and make the farmers feel that they were in fact the guests of the town no special bargains were offered for the afternoon. No question of trade was involved, and one of the best features of the whole show was the fact that the merchants of the town ran the festival to suit themselves. The success attending the afternoon of festivity made itself evident in the way the farmers talked of the town and its merchants for months afterward.

Surely, if a town of 2,000 population can make itself talked about for months by such a simple process as has been noted, would not the experiment be worth trying as an advertising feature in a city of 12,000 population? Co-operation of this nature builds up and does not tear down. It is the kind of work that startles the country and silences unfair, unjust criticism, leaving no bruises for the doctors to mend.

Let us all have faith in Fulton, and having it wonders can be accomplished.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 18.—Judging from the predictions which are being made by prominent members of Tammany Hall, the proposition to change the method of establishing the legislative representation in the State is unlikely to be advocated by the present Constitutional Convention.

Because a proposed amendment has been presented which seeks to give to Greater New York additional senators and assemblymen, the increased number to be based upon its population, it at once became rumored about that the Democratic organization in the metropolis was behind the supposed scheme to permit New York to have the balance of power in the State legislature. It appears that there was no foundation for the rumor, in that the Democratic members of the Constitutional Convention from New York city are quite likely to oppose the proposition.

Delegate James K. Foley, a State senator from New York city and prominent in the councils of Tammany Hall, believes that the proposed amendment will be defeated. The discrimination which would result, he says, were the amendment presented by Morgan J. O'Brien be adopted, would be worse than that incorporated in the present Constitution, because that document now reads that no two adjoining counties shall have more than one half of the senators. The Brackett proposed amendment provides that the five counties comprising Greater New York, shall not have more than one-half of the legislative representation.

It is also the belief of Delegate Foley that as the result of the recent enumeration in this State Greater New York will be entitled to twenty-five senators and in 1926, twenty-seven.

At the present time there are twenty-one senators from Greater New York, yet the metropolis contains over one million inhabitants than the remainder of the State.

If representation in the legislature were based upon population, New York city would have twenty-eight of the fifty-one senators and eighty-three of the one hundred and fifty members of assembly.

If the total number of senators and assemblymen is not changed New York city shoulld have, on the same basis, thirty-one senators and ninety assemblymen in the year 1920. This is prohibited by the present Constitution, however.

A glance at the ratio of increase in population in New York city shows that in 1910 the number of residents there was 4,766,833 against 4,346,777. In 1914, it was 5,583,871, as compared with 4,540,719 in the remainder of the State. It is accordingly estimated that in 1920 that there will be seven millions of people in the metropolis and but 4,890,000 in the outlying counties.

It is pointed out that if the representation in the legislature should be based upon the number of voters, then New York city should have had twenty-two instead of twenty-one senators in 1910 and sixty-five instead of sixty-four assemblymen. It is also claimed that on the basis of actual voters, New York city had in 1910 all the representation in the legislation is was entitled to. In 1914, however, allowing the same percentage of male aliens twenty-one years of age as in 1910, thec ity of New York should have had twenty-four State senators and seventy assemblymen in 1914, instead of twenty-one of the former and sixty-four of the latter.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

Denmark which has just gone on the equal suffrage map is not worrying about the illiterate woman vote, for in that educated country but one person over ten years of age in a thousand is illiterate.

Denmark is not afraid of women although there are more women than men in the country. Denmark is afarid of youth. Under the new constitution neither a man nor a woman can vote until 29 years of age and to vote for a member of the upper house one must be 35.

* * *

Los Angeles has elected a woman member of the city council, Mrs. Estelle Lindsey, a prominent club woman and social worker, and formerly a newspaper writer and school teacher. Mrs. Lindsey is the first woman to serve on the Los Angeles Council and one of the very few women in the country to occupy the position of city mother in the group of city fathers.

* * *

Fellsmere, Florida, will go down in history as the first place in the South to give equal sufirage to its women in the city housekeeping. Governor Trammell has signed the new charter which provides for municipal suffrage for women.

* * *

On June 4 the Georgia Bar Association in the heart of the land of chivallry defeated a resolution asking the Legislature to give women the right to practice law in that State.

* * *

The civic organization of Connecticut—and everybody knows that such groups are composed largely of women—besought the last legislature for a minimum wage for women; a woman's reformatory; a law to regulate the hours of work for women and children in special industries; a law requiring children to have health and school certificates before being permitted to work for wages. But they got none of these things. Woman suffrage! Bless you, no. They wouldn't even talk about it.

* * *

The suffrage leaders have notified the Chamber of Commerce of the District of Columbia that the proposition on foot to get the vote for the men residents of the District will never be anything but an academic question unless it is widened to include women. It is rumored that a secret poll has been taken of the Senate and a majority of the Senators stand pledge to oppose the bill if women are not included.

Women have as yet failed to get Congress to provide for the enfranchisement of women, but they don't intend to have that body enfranchise any more men and leave women out.

STATE BORROWS 6,000,000

Six New York Banks Lend One Million Each.

Albany, June 17.—Negotiations for the $6,000,000 with which to meet State administrative expenses unless funds appropriated this year become available on October 1 were completed today. Controller Travis announced.

As a result school moneys, which have been held up temporarily, will be forwarded to the districts immediately. The loan was negotiated thru six New York banks, each of which loaned $1,000,000 at 3 per cent. interest.

A HIGHLAND STORY

By I. E. Hyde

A Sottish Donald loved a girl;
She kept his heart in a sad whirl;
For, Donald loved her plenty;
But, she was just wise twenty.
Then one day Don said to his love,
"Please make my skies shine bright above.
I love you so, my Mary."
But, lassie said, "We'll tarry;
For Don, dear lad; now you must know,
Your Mary lass can never go
And leave her father all alone
In his little old shanty."
Then Donald said, "My Mary, dear.
There's nothing now for you to fear.
Don't let a worry bother.
I mean to take your father."

Now, Mary coos just like a dove;
Her skies are ever bright above.

The father of Don's Mary,
You'll often see him carry
Another wee, wee Mary.

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

THEY LACE IN FRONT
To know them is to love them.
GOSSARD CORSETS
Sold and fitted at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4346
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo,
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

SAYS LAW GIVES BOY TO NATURAL FATHER

New York.— "The law gives the child to his natural father. The only thing that would debar him would be unfitness."

With this statement Justice Tompkins, in White Plains, adjourned for one week the legal battle between W. Mills, jr., of Venice, Cal., the natural father, and T. Frederick Lee, of White Plains, stepfather, for the guardianship of eleven-year-old William Crossman Lee, who is heir to an estate of $1,000,000.

LEGAL NOTICES

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF OSWEGO.—Edna I. Sharp, Plaintiff, against Lewlla Newton, J. Clifton Larkin, Bridget Gibbons, Henderson & Thompson Company, Defendants.

Pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale made in the above entitled action, at a Special Term of the Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the City of Syracuse, New York, on the 22d day of May, 1915, and duly entered in the Oswego County Clerk's Office, on the 24th day of May, 1915, I, the undersigned, the referee, duly appointed in and by said judgment for that purpose, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, the 10th day of July, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the City Hall, No. 67 East First Street, South, in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego, New York, the real estate directel by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: ALL THAT TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, situate in the City of Fulton, New York, known and describel as three rods off from the East end of Lot No. 1 of Block No. 512 of the original Village of Fulton.

Dated May 24, 1915.

H. L. GILMAN,
Referee.

FRED'K G. SPENCER,
Attorney for Plaintiff,
28½ East First Street,
Fulton, N. Y.
5-24-5t

WALL PAPER and PAINT

PAPER HANGING — PAINTING

The cost of Paint is advancing daily — due to the European War. Get Your Supply Now!

HULETT-TAFT CO., Inc.

208 ONEIDA STREET

An

Edison Disc Phonograph

for the young newlyweds. What gift could be more appropriate—what gift more appreciated?

THE NEW RECORDS ARE HERE.

Wm. C. Morgan

Jeweler & Optometrist

Fulton, N. Y.

FORMER STYLES AND FABRICS

Grenadines and Voiles; Transparent Hats; Angular Lines; Elaborate Simplicity Conserving Economy

New York, June 18.—Never were this Metropolis and its many suburbs so closely connected, for swift motorcars make nothing of a run to town for shopping or a lunch at some of the fashionable places, or a cross country trip to one of the other centers where festivities are enticing.

Practically everyone gets about in this fashion or goes part way by train if that is more convenient, hence, all sorts of top coats have come to play a most important part in the wardrobe. One can put several of these to good use, or if clever at planning make one or two do as much service as seven. A plain stylishly cut coat of velvet finished wool or gofine, will go nearly anywhere suitably and top with equal propriety a plain dress or a fussy one, while for warmer days the Tussore silk and taffeta coats are both comfortable and pretty.

Grenadines and Voiles

Grenadines and voiles are back in favor in both the silk and cotton weaves. Silk trimmings are so much employed on the cottons with little silk overblouses that these are quite as much used for festive affairs as are the more costly fabrics. It is this combination of plain and figured, thick and transparent weaves which creates an effect of elaboration when very often the dress itself is quite simply gotten up, and quite within the skill of almost any good home dressmaker.

All the fallals and fashions dear to our grandmothers are revived in today's styles. Transparent sleeves of chiffon or net make taffeta and other silk gowns comfortable and attractive, while a host of sleeveless models for evening and dance wear with dainty floating draperies of tulle show a perfect arm to advantage, but are a bit trying to one that needs first aid to beauty to be presentable. Our Grandmothers solved this same problem more than half a century ago, by using X Bazin depilatory powder, which removes any unsightly hairs promptly without injuring the skin, but comparatively few women know that this can still be obtained, if one will take the trouble to ask for it at any well-stocked counter where toilet articles are carried.

The smart shops on Fifth avenue are showing very pretty "Bridles" made of cretonne with straps that go over the shoulders and pocket pieces that set over the skirt on either side, all held in place with a strapped belt. With most of these there is an extra collar of the figured cretonne to top the coat collar of the suit. Skirts of flowered cretonnes in stripes are another fad of the moment. These are at their best topped with a black velvet harness, or a black silk coat.

Hats with their brims or crowns of transparent material accord so perfectly with fussy Victorian styles that their popularity is easily accounted for. One sees quite a lot of hat brims either square or triangular, and parasols take the same freakish lines, only more so. The latest thing is a parasol of broadcloth unlined and embroidered at the edge in a cross stitch design. For beach use parasols of cretonne are modish and durable.

A Girlish Get-Up

At a garden party on Long Island a girlish frock that was greatly admired was of white dotted swiss muslin, the full gathered skirt trimmed with three tucks of blue taffeta and the simple transparent blouse of the muslin topped with a short sleeveless blouse of the silk which was cut away sharply in front, from bust to waist line, where it was held in place b ythree narrow straps. A little frilled peplum completed this.

The hat of blue crin, in flat wide shape, was wreathed with pink crush roses and black velvet streamers fell well below the waist lien at the back.

Lucy Carter.

6372

McCall Design

FATHER McCORMICK'S CHURCH GETS GIFT

Mexico, June 18.—The Rev. W. H. McCormick, pastor of St. Mary's church at Mexico, has received $1000 toward the fund for a new church. Father McCormick declined to make known the name of the generous donor at least for the present.

Definite plans have not been made regarding the new church at Mexico but Father MsCormick hopes to have sufficient funds on hand to start it very soon. It is believed that the new church will cost about $6,000 and at least half of this sum is now in hand. A fair next falll lwill raise quite a large sum, it is believed. Father McCormick is desirous of starting a new church practically free of debt and in this wish he has the support of his parishioners.

MEXICO ACADEMY COMMENCEMENT WEEK

June 18.—The exercises for commencement week of Mexico academy and high school are as follows: Friday evening, June 18, annual grade exericses at Washington hall. At the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, June 20, Rev. David L. Roberts will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. Monday, June 21, 2:30 p.m., the eighth grade commencement exercises will be held in Washington hall. Monday evening the 1915 graduating class will present a scene from Mt. Olympus in Greek costume, in connection with the class day exercises.

The 29th annual commencement of Mexico academy and high school will take place Wednesday evening in Washington hall.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Miss Molla Bjurstedt, Tennis Champion.

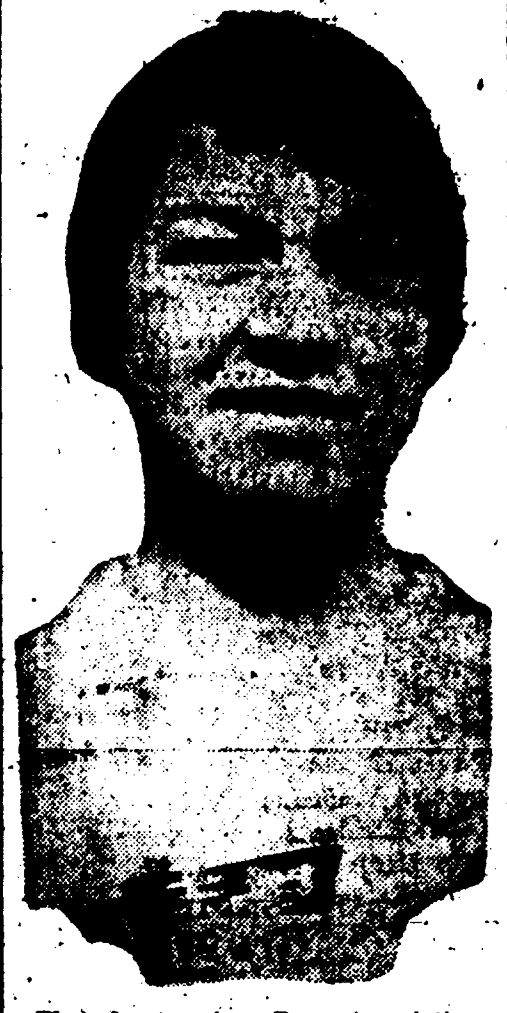

Photo by American Press Association.

Twice in recent weeks has Miss Molla Bjurstedt of Christiania, Norway, won tennis championships from some of the best women players in this country. First she won the national indoor tennis championship from Miss Marie Wagner, who had held the championship for several years. This match was played in New York city. Next she captured the women's metropolitan singles in straight sets from Mrs. Barger-Wallach, former national champion. For ten years Miss Bjurstedt was undisputed woman singles champion in Norway, doubles champion with her sister, Miss Valborg Bjurstedt, and third for world championship at the Olympic games. By profession Miss Bjurstedt is a nurse, and she came to this country last December. She has lived an outdoor life since childhood, and tennis has been her hobby for the past twelve years. It only took her two years to achieve the highest honors in her native land. Miss Bjurstedt has great strength and stamina and will endeavor to win every tennis honor that the United States has to offer.

Clarke Making Good.

Tom Clarke is certainly living up to a promise he made Herzog and himself when they met in New York during the winter. "I'm going to show you and the rest of 'em," said Tom, "who's the real first catcher of this ball team. Watch and see how I work when I get that old harness on this spring." And Clarke has surely been more than delivering, both with the bat and with the big mitten. He is the same hustling, fiery, gingery catcher. He seems to throw rather better than last season, and he is moving faster, more brilliantly in every possible manner.

Gilmore After Ritchie.

Willie Ritchie announced recently that he was through with the lightweights and intended to cast his lot with the welters. Fred Gilmore, who has been trying in vain to get a match with any of the boys of his weight, is willing to box Willie any time or any place, according to statements by Doc Krone, Gilmore's manager. Krone says, "If Ritchie really wants to enter the welterweight class we would be very glad to accommodate him with a match any time or any place he wants and will make 142 pounds at 3 o'clock for him."

Makes His Own Luck.

Barney Dreyfus struck the nail on the head when he said that Catcher Bobby Schang of the Pittsburgh Nationals makes many of his own breaks in luck. And the same is true of every ball player. The man who "gets the best of it" in the long run is the man who is fast enough both in the feet and the head to take chances, to figure out in advance what show he has to get away with what he plans to try. Let us, by all means, have more players of the Schang stripe. They are winners.

A Baseball Family.

The Schang family, of which Wally, the Athletics' catcher, is the most noted and Bobby of the Pirates is the oldest, is getting a lot of advertising these days. There are two other brothers playing in the minors and coming along fast enough to soon get a chance in the majors. Father Schang was a player, but never got out of the minors. Their home is in Wales Center, near Buffalo, N. Y.

Harper Won't Play Sundays.

Harry Harper, the Washington pitcher, has a contract that stipulates that he will not have to play ball on Sunday. He is of a religious turn of mind and spoke recently before a Sunday school in Cambridge.

Reds Aptly Named.

The Cincinnati Reds are well named this year. No less than seven red headed players are on the list. Wingo, Dooin, Ames, Killifer, Mollwitz, Griffith and Lear have highly colored "thatches."

STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at St. Louis.
New York at Pittsburgh.
Brooklyn at Chicago.
Philadelphia at Cincinnati.

Results Yesterday

New York, 3; Pittsburgh, 1.
St. Louis, 2; Boston, 0.
Cincinnati, 2; Philadelphia, 1.
Chicago, 4; Brooklyn, 3; 19 ings.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	28	21	.571
Philadelphia	27	22	.551
St. Louis	29	26	.527
Boston	24	25	.490
Pittsburgh	23	25	.479
Brooklyn	24	27	.471
New York	21	24	.467
Cincinnati	20	26	.435

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Boston.
Chicago at Philadelphia.
Cleveland at New York.
Detroit at Washington.

Results Yesterday

New York, 7; Cleveland, 3.
Chicago, 3; Philadelphia, 0.
Detroit, 4; Washington, 2.
Boston, 11; St. Louis, 10.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	33	20	.623
Detroit	33	22	.600
Boston	27	18	.600
New York	26	23	.531
Washington	23	23	.500
Cleveland	20	29	.408
Philadelphia	19	32	.373
St. Louis	19	33	.365

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Kansas City at Baltimore.
Chicago at Buffalo.
Pittsburgh at Brooklyn.
St. Louis at Newark.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 8; Brooklyn, 3.
St. Louis, 3; Newark, 2.
Kansas City, 9; Baltimore, 5.
Chicago, 5; Buffalo, 2; 1st game.
Buffalo, 7; Chicago, 5; 2d game.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	34	21	.618
St. Louis	28	21	.571
Pittsburgh	27	23	.540
Brooklyn	28	25	.528
Chicago	29	26	.527
Newark	26	26	.500
Baltimore	19	32	.373
Buffalo	20	37	.351

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Syracuse at Troy.
Scranton at Binghamton.
Wilkesbarre at Elmira.
Utica at Albany.

Results Yesterday

Elmira, 13; Wilkesbarre, 10.
Binghamton, 9; Scranton, 1.
Other games postponed; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Elmira	23	15	.603
Utica	21	14	.600
Binghamton	19	16	.543
Troy	17	16	.515
Scranton	17	18	.486
Wilkesbarre	17	20	.459
Albany	15	21	.417
Syracuse	13	22	.371

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Buffalo at Toronto.
Rochester at Montreal.
Jersey City at Providence.
Newark at Richmond.

Results Yesterday

Providence, 3; Jersey City, 1.
Rochester, 9; Montreal, 4.
Toronto, 5; Buffalo, 4.
Richmond, 5; Newark, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Buffalo	22	15	.595
Providence	24	17	.585
Rochester	23	19	.548
Richmond	22	21	.512
Montreal	22	22	.500
Toronto	20	24	.445
Newark	18	22	.450
Jersey City	16	27	.372

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively.
Adv.

HAVE YOU MADE A GOOD CATCH?

Everybody's doing it. A lot depends on your equipment, such as:

BRISTOL STEEL RODS — BASKETS

A FLY FOR EVERY FISH

REELS — NETS — LINES

Every article at bed-rock price and Guaranteed

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

7 South First Street

MOTOR BOAT SUPPLIES

Everything that is needed to Equip a Boat

AT

J. B. BUELL'S, 17 N. Second Street

Agents for W. D. ANDREWS CO., Syracuse

STATE AUTOISTS TO MEET IN NIAGARA FALLS

Albany, June 18.—Motorists from every part of the State, at least 1000 in number, will gather at the midsummer meeting of the New York State Automobile Association which is to take place in Niagara Falls, Monday, July 19. At an executive meeting of the New York State Automobile association which took place in Albany yesterday, the plans for the meeting were discussed and a program tentatively adopted.

The Niagara Falls Automobile Club will act as the host and many of the clubs situated in the western part of the State, affiliated with the New York State Automobile Association, will co-operate with the Niagara Falls Automobile Club.

BASEBALL GAMES WANTED

George Exhart of 69 Hamilton ave., Auburn, wants to learn of fast independent teams in this city who are ready to play games here or in Auburn.

LOCOMOTIVE WORKS GETS BIG CONTRACT

Philadelphia, June 17.—Baldwin Locomotive Works has started work on a sub-contract for 365 traction locomotives, valued at $1,500,000 for export to Russia, according to reliable information obtained here today. This order is in addition to that announced several days ago for 250 locomotives costing $6,000,000 for the same country.

While the traction engines are of two classes, one much heavier than the other, they are to be built according to the same general plan and description as those furnished the French Government three months ago.

New York.—Announcement was made yesterday by the Lima Locomotive Company, which has offices in No. 50 Church street and facorties in Lima, Ohio, that it has received orders from the French Government for sixty-four locomotives, and from the Russian Government for fifty. Both countries want the Pacific type of locomotive. It is understood they will cost about $25,000 each.

There were persistent rumors yesterday that belligerents have been making inquiries among motorcycle manufacturers for the delivery of thousands of these vehicles. It could not be learned what countries have been making inquiries or whether any orders have been placed.

NO DRINKING ON LAKE BOATS THIS YEAR

The Kingston Standard says:

"Those members of the community who worship at the shrine of Bacchus will not be able to remove the dark brown taste of the "morning after" aboard the lake-going passenger boats this season. Notices have been posted prohibiting the sale of "joy juice" on all lake going boats both by the Canadian and American lines. Consequently the passenger boats plying between this city and Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton will be floating prohibition districts while in years past one has been able to quench his thirst by a morning glory nip, a Manhattan, John Collins or a schooner of bubbling beer."

Onyx Billiard Room

The Coolest and the Best Equipped.

The only Billiard Table in the City

G. J. POWELL, Mgr.

PHONE 560 — QUIRK THEATRE BLDG.

MERCHANTS and SHIPPERS

Save 25% on your Freight Bill, Order Goods Shipped by Boat.

STEAMER "CITY OF FULTON" Now Running

Freight House on Rochester St. Dock, open from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. Man in charge all day.

C. S. BURLEIGH, Captain

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents

Every Style Every Size

SHORT SLEEVES
LONG SLEEVES KNEE LENGTH
3-4 LENGTH
ANKLE LENGTH

Coolest Union Suits Made

$1.00 - $1.50

B. V. D. UNION SUITS $1.00

S. LIPSKY & SON

27 First Street Fulton, N. Y.

REGENTS' STANDING of FULTON STUDENTS

HIGH SCHOOL

BUSINESS WRITING

Marjorie Fairgrieve, 78; Elizabeth Farley, 72; Ethel Hewitt, 88; Joseph Keenan, 83; Susan Kezar, 78; Ruth Loveland, 93; Doris Osborne, 91; Henry Randall, 75; Amelia Rolfe, 78; Carlton Rowlee, 85; Howard Shaff, 75; Edward Ward, 65; Mae Whitcomb, 70; Sheldon Wood, 80.

ELEM. BOOKKEEPING

George Cole, 82; Beatrice Huggins, 60; Lee Jacobs, 89; Lillian Kelley, 69; Earl McClellanfi ½7; Frances McCully, 63; Florence Moody, 88; King Moss, 92; Doris Osborne, 90; Howard Shaff, 64; Loren Wells, 81.

COM. GEOGRAPHY

Aven Chesbro, 75; Ramon Lewis, 94; King Moss, 80.

CÆSAR

Delilah Rounds, 83; Harold Scholz, 80; Marion Gorman, 79; Charles Calkins, 78; Frank Baker, 76; Ruth Quirk, 75; Gladys Kresge, 74; Grace Pitcher, 74; Alfred Fivaz, 74; Hilda Clark, 73; John Murdock, 71; LeRoy Wise, 70; Marguerite Platt, 69; Laura McKenna 68; Edward Frawley, 67; Adelaide Harding, 64; Hazle Durixon, 62; Katherine Mangeot, 61; King Moss, 60; Leah Rhodes, 60; Lennie Walts, 60.

BIOLOGY

Wilfred Allen, 66; Edith Arnold, 62; Ella Ballard, 75; Robert Boland, 66; Marjorie Brackett, 78; Edith Brown, 65; Jennie Burton, 68; Grace Churchill, 65; Irvin Clark, 81; Newell Davenport, 74; Marion Dickinson, 65; Joseph Donovan, 68; Minnie Ferguson, 77; Geraldine Foster, 63; Pearl Foster, 85; James E. Frawley, 81; Alice Gorman, 87; Leland Hill, 74; Henry Holly, 75; Emma Ives, 70; Alice Kaplan, 64; Hazel King, 79; Lula Kio, 76; Marion Little, 62; Wm. Lum, 61; Helen Mullen, 79; John O'Brien, 79; Fred Pollard, 60; Ellen Powers, 85; Gertrude Rath, 63; Wm. Rugg, 74; Florence Schnur, 80; Alice Somers, 72; Emma Sullivan, 63; Frederick White, 64.

ENGLISH HISTORY (3 hrs.)

Claude H. Barker, 69; Joseph Johnson, 67; Emma Lalonde, 74; Charles Jos. Mangeot, 69; ~~Floy Norton, 72~~; Elizabeth Royce, 96; Winifred Stanton, 64; Vera Wood, 64.

ENGLISH HISTORY (5 hrs.)

Margaret Kimber Clark, 86.

LATIN III.

Clifford Bishop, 67; Charlotte Burnette, 70; Mary Carroll, 70; Margaret Clark, 82; Lenora Eames, 86; Nelson Hopkins, 72; Eliza Hubbard, 67; Frederic King, 90; Lucille Lowasney, 62; Joseph Mangeot, 62; Caroline Pearl, 64; Clar Sylvester, 60; Louise Taggart, 74; Mary Weston, 60; Ruth Wilcox, 60: Elizabeth Royce, 75.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL SCHOLARS

List of Those Who Are Promoted to the High School.

The following grade pupils have passed in reading andw riting which are the last subjects required to secure a State preliminary certificate.

By passing these two subjects the pupils become entitled to promotion to the High school.

There are 62.

	Reading	Writing
Charles Atwood	83	90
Helen Austin	89	86
John Barnes	84	96
Norman Barry	90	90
Wahnoeta Beebe	95	98
Ruth Bennett	86	78
Ruth Black	86	92
Robert rBackett	90	90
Alma Bray	85	96
Joseph Carroll	90	90
Mildred Clute	83	86
Mildred Cook	83	90
Clara Cronk	82	90
Leland Cusick	92	92
Lawrence Dann	85	82
Sara Dickinson	84	91
John Donovan	86	90
Albert Durfey	86	82
Miles Evans	84	82
Ralph Ferguson	88	80
Roberts Fitten	80	85
Florence Freeman	86	92
Percy Grier	90	92
Mary Hopkins	88	90
Margaret Howe	94	88
Elizabeth Howe	93	92
Margaret Hughes	90	90
Lda LaMay	94	90
Helen LaPoint	84	75
Gerald Lum	83	96
Frances Mangeot	83	92
Dorothy Martin	86	92
Susan Murphy	85	85
John Myers	84	86
Catherine Otis	92	88
Ariel Palmer	89	91
Walter Parke	83	75
Fred Picket	86	95
Maro Read	82	78
Frances Reynolds	92	92
Elon Rowlee	88	75
Edna Roy	90	92
Marie Roy	90	92
Genevive Sant	92	96
John Schneider	83	90
Mildred Sharp	93	90
Clara Smith	85	90
Larkin Smith	90	75
Theodore Stanley	80	80
James Sylvester	88	85
Churchill Trageser	89	88
Marion Ware	90	92
Eva Wells	90	80
Leslie Wilcox	87	85
Harvia Wilson	92	80
Leonard Youmans	85	89
Non-Residents
Elsie Davis	92	82
Irene Bateman	90	80
Edna Frost	90	75
Grace Johnston	89	80
Ruth Loomis	90	80
Glen Parker	90	75

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN

"The New York Shop"

As Results from Our Capable Buyer Being in the New York Market

We have just received a wonderful line of DAINTY SUMMER DRESSES in Voiles, Silks and many other new materials and will place these on sale for Saturday at your choice . . . $5.00 each

Special Line of New Models in WASH SKIRTS $2.98 each

Sale of Tub Silk and Crepe Waists will be continued for Saturday at .... $1.98 each

M. J. McDONALD & CO.

ONEIDA STREET

Community Notes

John Morton of this city attended the baseball yesterday between Providence and Jersey City, played at the Syracuse Stadium.

* * *

Miss Lillian Pratt entertained the T. A. E. Embroidery club Thursday afternoon, at her home in State st.

* * *

Mrs. Aurie Palmer of Route 9 delivered mail for the first time on Thursday in her new auto.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Cramer and a party of friends motored today to Beach Oswego to spend the day.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chesbro of West 5th st. announce the birth of a daughter.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Watson A. Butts of S. 4th st. are spending a few days at Sodus.

* * *

W. E. Perry has purchased a new auto.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Druse have been guests of out of town friends.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth Frazier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Frazier of the West River road, will be one of the June graduates at the Oswego Normal.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. P. Coleman have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coleman and family of Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. Edward Buell of this city has been entertaining out of town friends.

* * *

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lybolt of Worth st. is ill.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wright of Cayuga st. have been entertaining friends from Bridgewater.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Anderson will entertain tomorrow afternoon one of the circles of the Congregational church, and her home in West 1st st. will be given over to the enjoyment of the guests.

* * *

Mrs. Russell Draper of Emery st. has returned to her home after spending some time with friends in Plymouth, Mass.

* * *

A delegation from the Eastern Star will visit the Hannibal chapter this evening, making the trip in autos.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Clair Whitbeck are spending a short vacation at Daysville.

* * *

Several Fultonians attended the exhibition baseball game in Syracuse yesterday between the Providence and Jersey City teams of the International League. Most of them made the trip by auto.

* * *

Among those from this city who will attend the annual dance of the Oswego Normal school tonight in Oswego, are Thomas Johnston, Harold O'Brien, Leonard Foster, George Washburn and E. J. LaPorte.

THE QUIRK TODAY

The dramatic success, featuring Beulah Poynter in "The Little Girl That He Forgot," in five parts, will be the special feature and is promised to be worthy of large patronage. Tomorrow "The Span of Life," that for many years met with immense patronage in the best dramatic theatres, including the human bridge, will be shown with Lionel Barrymore in the lead.

HAVE YOU SEEN "JACK"? —"JACK THE HUGGER"

It is reported that a "Jack the Hugger" has made his appearance in this city during the past few weeks. While no cases have been reported to the police of actual assault committed by the man, who is a stranger here, several young women and men have been followed long distances at night by the mysterious prowler.

Last night a young man on his way home was walking up Oneida street about 12 o'clock, when he was approached by a man and subjected to close scrutiny. No words were exchanged and the young man walked on. Looking around further up the street he noticed the stranger following him, and in spite of the fact that the young man quickened his pace, the prowler persisted in following him until he reached his home. The description of the man tallied with that given by several young women who have been approached late at night by a stranger, who in some instances spoke to them. One girl reports that the man grasped her arm and she was compelled to run to get away from him.

The police have not been informed of any of these occurrences but any stranger who acts in a suspicious manner on the streets late at night will be closely watched hereafter.

QUOITS AND BASEBALL AT THE ISLAND TODAY

Favored with beautiful weather, the members of the Pathfinder Boat club and their guests are expected to turn out in large numbers today for the Field Day at the island south of the city. An auto bus will make regular trips between the city and the island. This afternoon a ball game between two picked teams has been scheduled and four quoit matches have been arranged. In spite of the fact that the tennis court has not been put in first class shape, many of the younger members of the club are planning some matches, and several adventurous young men propose to take their initial swim of the season today.

This evening a special dinner prepared by the steward will be served, and dancing will be enjoyed until a late hour. A Victrola will furnish the music and this feature has also met with unanimous approval, inasmuch as there are no prolonged waits for the orchestra.

Personal cards were sent out yesterday to each member of the club informing them of the program for today, and the House Committee hopes to see a record attendance of members.

For Tired Feet—Feather-weight Arch Supports, at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair Shop, 110 Cayuga St.—adv.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

White Trousers

in Serviceable Serges and Flannels

$5.00 and up

FOR GRADUATION and EVENING WEAR

A full line of Full Dress Shirts, Ties and Hose — Correct as well as up-to-the-minute.

The McKinstry Store

FIRST STREET

BEST
Blue Serge Suits
IN THE CITY
$10.00

BEST STRAW HATS
50c to $3.00

NEW PANAMAS, $3 to $5

NEW SUMMER SHIRTS

LOW SHOES
at Lowest Prices in town.

Everything in Summer Wearables at

ROSENBLOOM'S

New Location
55 SOUTH FIRST ST.

Week-End Specials

FIRDAY and SATURDAY

50c Baby's White Dresses, 1 to 6 years . . . 39c
Ladies' White Waists, new lot 50c

SATURDAY—7 p. m. to 10 p. m.

$1.00 White Waists at 85c

O. HENDERSON COMPANY

Oneida Street Phone 200

Latest Improvements in

BABY CARRIAGES

The reversible gear of our WHITNEY CARRIAGES enables you to stand either in front or behind Baby when you wheel it about. Other features to notice in this carriage are its Adjustable Hood, Roomy Body, Durable Upholstery, Light Flexible Springs, Etc.

We also have the Easy Riding, Collapsible which are so convenient because you can fold it up and take it aboard the Train or Street Car when you want to go some distance with baby. We have a Large and Complete Stock which cannot help but meet with your approval.

GO-CARTS

J. R. SULLIVAN

West Broadway Fulton, New York

SPECIAL SALE
of
MEN'S SUITS

All the Newest Patterns and Shades, including Blue Serge. Formerly priced up to $17.00.

FOR ONE WEEK ONLY $11.50

SETZ & McCORMICK
28 East First Street

Graduation and Wedding Presents
AT VERY LOW PRICES—FOR JUNE

Watches—Elgin, Waltham, Rockford, Hamilton, Howard and others. Wrist Watches, Rings, Diamonds, La-Vallieres, Cut Glass, Silverware.

J. F. BROWN

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Chattel Mortgage Sale.—One gasoline truck wagon, in good condition, with top; also one light truck same as above, without top. Sale at VanWagenen garage, Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. A. Bristol, Mortgagee's agent. 154

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

To Rent—New house in Park st.; modern conveniences; electric light, bath and furnace. A. T. Jennings, 9 S. 1st st. Phone 14.

Lost—Pocketbook, containing change and Elk's pin. Finder can keep change if pin is returned to Times office. 155

For Sale—Grocery store doing good business; will bear investigation. Good reason for selling. Inquire C. Times office. 159c

To Rent—Downstairs flat at 311 Atlantic ave. Inquire Crandall, 261 S. 7th st. Pone 252. tf

For Sale—Household furniture, on Friday and Saturday at 502 Buffalo st. 154

Found—A bunch of keys with Ardley Club tag. Owner may have same by applying at Times office.

Competent Cook—Must furnish references. Apply in person to Supt. of Hospital. 155

Nurse Girl—Wants position in good family; experience; references given. Phone 3281. 154c

Teamster Wanted—Sober and honest. S. Ehrman, R. D. 8, Fulton. 155

Work Wanted.—A few ironings to do. Address K., Times office.

Furnished Rooms for light housekeeping. Inquire 312 S. 1st st. 156

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate southeast to southwest winds; rain tonight or Saturday.

Fulton Keynotes

Miss Irma Dunn of Utica is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Milvo, of Park st.

* * *

Several high school and college students who will spend the summer vacation in this city have secured responsible positions. Thomas Johnston of the University of Pennsylvania, has secured the territory of northern New York as salesman for a brush manufacturing company. Don Cavanagh of Syracuse, and Harold O'Brien of Fulton High school will start work next week as time-keepers on a road contract at Palermo.

* * *

It was erroneously reported in yesterday's Evening Times that Fred King secured a percentage in the Regents examinations of 78 in physics, whereas the figures should have read 98.

CONCRETE WORK ON MILL IS BEING RUSHED

Work on the Walter Bradley contract for the new plant of the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper company is progressing rapidly. The large coffer dam which encloses the work on the new power house has now been completed. The dam extends fifty feet below the upper bridge and is one of the largest coffer dams ever built in this section.

A trestle from the land owned by the company on the west bank of the canal to the east bank has been built on the spot where the new bridge which the state has agreed to build will be erected.

Excavation for the foundation on the main building of the new plant has been started and the concrete tower and mixers are now in position. A largef orce of laborers is employed on the work at present and the number is being increased rapidly.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
Beulah Poynter
in her Great Success
THE LITTLE GIRL HE FORGOT
in 5 parts
and others.

SATURDAY
The Great Six-Reel Feature
"THE SPAN OF LIFE"
See the Wonderful Human Bridge

SUNDAY
Featuring
"DEEP PURPLE" AND OTHERS

FINE WASH DRESSES
Value—$4.00, $5.00, $6.00 — $2.47

All the latest and best Summer Styles

On Sale SATURDAY ONLY

New Summer Silks, per yd., 45c
Selling for 50c, 69c and 79c, including some of our best selling, newest fancy silks, 24 in., 27 in., and 36 in. widths.

Fancy Parasols at $1.00
An assorted lot of all silk and silk mixed Parasols, selling usually up to $2.50, while they last at............... $1.00

$15.00 and $17.50 Tailor-made Suits . $7.98
Choice of any New Spring or Summer Suit in our stores, selling up to $17.50.

NEW MILLINERY
Special lot of latest shapes in silk, net, chiffon and straw combinations, usual prices $2.50 to $3.50; on sale Saturday at $1.98

Fancy Trimmed Hats at 98c
Including all the hats we have been selling at $1.98 to $3.98.
Newest Auto Hats at.............. 69c
$1.25 Panamarette Hats at....... 79c

SEE WINDOW

$150 Complete Dining Room Outfit . . . $124

A complete set including the best high grade pieces in our store. Furniture all quartered oak, hand rubbed and polished, and every article guaranteed to give a lifetime of satisfaction.

$16.00 China Dinner Set.
$24.00 Dining Table.
$40.00 Buffet.
$21.00 China Closet.
$22.00 set of 6 Dining Chairs.
$20.00 9x12 fine Rug.
$7.00 Tea Serving Cart.

ALL COMPLETE FOR ONE WEEK ONLY $124.00

M. KATZ & CO.'S
DEPARTMENT STORE — 63-65 S. First Street

NEITHER ABSENT NOR TARDY

Complete List of Pupils Who Were Faithful at All Times

The following pupils in the A classes of the public schools have been neither absent nor tardy during the present term:

High School

Miss Lowerre, teacher—Harry Dingle, Gladys Benway, Rose Dingle, Mary Favalora, Florence Furness, Ruth Jennings.

Miss Edwards, teacher — Jennie Dann, Agnes Heagerty, Alice Kaplan, Ellen Powers, Florence Schnur, Joseph Donovan.

Miss Johnston, teacher: HazelKing, Emma Ives, Pearl Foster.

Miss Dickerman, teacher — Neil Hunter, Henry Randall, Florence Bayley, Ruth Nipper.

Miss Alt, teacher—Leon Rude, Harriet Hudson, Rachel Tucker.

Miss Kimber, teacher — Gladys Kregge, Margaret Mulcahy.

Assembly Room

Lenora Eames, Rose King, Katherine Mangeot, Herman Robillard, Leland Root, Harold Thompson.

4th and Rochester St. Schools

First Grade, Miss Farrell, teacher: Carlton Ure.

Second Grade, Miss Everts, teacher: Michael Louise, Kenneth Reynolds, Morrison Reynolds, Aletha McCarthy, Lela McCarthy.

Third Grade, Miss Sisson, teacher: William Draper, Winfield Joyce, Dominick Procinio.

Fourth Grade, Miss Knapp, teacher: Gilbert Allen, Royal Furness, Wallace Weaver, Lucille Reynolds, Ruth Wood.

Sixth Grade, Miss Bullis, teacher: Robert Cole, James Knight, Martin Rice, Clinton Tramblay, Ruth Barnes, Reta Crandall, Helen Hutchins, Sarah Kaplan, Helen Lomasney, Doris Wood.

Seventh Grade, Miss Decker, teacher: Bertha Hubbard, Mary McCann, Florence Rappole, Tom Nealis.

Eighth Grade, Miss Benson, teacher—Harvey Goodman, Milton Wise, Anthony DeBarber, Jesse Wallace, Rolland McKnight, Elsie Merriam, Frances Payne, Marion Ware, Helen Austin, Margaret Howe, Susan Murphy, Alma Bray, Ida LaMay.

Phillips Street School

First Grade, Miss Heagerty, teacher—Sylvia Blann, Mary Buyers, Mary LaGrew, Kenneth Read, Frederick La Grew, Ralph Dudck, Stefan Borek.

Second Grade, Miss Tillapaugh, teacher — William Brown, Francis Walker, Eddie Mikolek, Charles Jarvis, Hazel Martin, Florence Wilbur.

Third Grade, Miss Dwyer, teacher: Helen Borek, Glenn Blackman.

Third Grade, Miss Skinner, teacher—Mary Borek, Gladys Bryant, Stella Glancy, Bernice Palmer, Helen Saydera, Elsa Stephan, William Byers Cecil Perry, Walter Wainman.

Fourth Grade, Miss Broderick, teacher—Ralph Dolbear, Clifton Rowley, Theodore Chesey, Norma Kane, Myrtle O'Neil.

Fifth Grade, Miss McCriskin, teacher—Lois Abbot, Mary Casey, Sadie Fisk, Edward Goode, Carlton Longley, Clara Owens, Gladys Wybron.

Sixth Grade, Miss Curphey, teacher—Harry Hopkins, Albert Williams, Bertha Byers.

Seventh and Eighth Grades, Higher English Department—Irving Blackley, Leland Cusack, William Dingle, John Donovan, Sherman Fisk, Frank Maher, Charles Nettleton, Earl Rowley, Edward Summerville, Doris Austin, Jennie Bowen, Florence Brown, Mildred Clute, Mary Hopkins, Clara Klein, Frances Mangeot, Ruth MacEwen.

Erie Street School

First Grade, Miss Brumfield, teacher—Charles Barkley, Fannie Ingersoll, Agnes Miner.

Second Grade, Miss Sprague, teacher— Francis Benway, Merrill Scudder, Thomas Zaia, Minnie Shapiro.

Third Grade, Miss Hawkins, teacher—James Brannan, Clara Owens, Harriet Waugh, Francis Barkley, Lina Bateman.

Fourth Grade, Miss Kendall, teacher—Georgiana Keyes, Beulah Keeney, Mary Quinn, Marjorie Scudder.

Fifth Grade, Miss Walworth, teacher—Howard Campbell, Maurice Conley, Stanley Gardner, Wanda Green, Leland Lampear, Albert Payne, Jane Rogers, Doris VanValkenburg, Geo. Ward, Harl Wolever.

Sixth Grade, Miss Rogers, teacher: Glen Salsbury, Herbert Waugh, Hazel Boigeol, Marie Hollenbeck, Helen Nealis, Mary O'Brien, Helen Payne, Beatrice Richards, Marion VanSanford, Bessie Weaver.

Seventh Grade, Miss Graveley, teacher—Ernest Beaudien, David Hubbard, George McNamara, Leila Chesbro, Gladys Foster, Beatrice Gardner, Gladys Gardner, Grace Gary Sadie Waldhorn, Elsie Wood.

Eighth Grade, Miss Lynch, teacher: John Buell, Clara Cronk, Maro Read.

State Street School

First Grade, Miss Metcalf, teacher: Lester Billings, Lela Brechon, Mabel Chubb, Frances Crandall, Louis De Barber, Robert Fivaz, Ruth Hall, Grace Keeney, Tony SanTore.

Second Grade, Miss Cates, teacher: Elwin Chubb, Lawrence DeLong, Bertha Favalora, Leslie Fink, George Hall, Leonard Ingamells, Manette Ingamells, Harold Moon.

Third Grade, Miss Keane, teacher: Roger Brechon, Myrtle Chubb, Francis Devereau, Kermith Fink, Marguerite Foster, Frederick Lynch, Frances Nipper, Howard Sherman, Gladys Post.

Fourth Grade, Miss Failing teacher—Theresa DeBarber, George Ducret, Milton Fanning, Ernest Fivaz, Elma Ingamells, Fernland Laws, Joseph Lynch, Alice Myers, Kenneth Padgett, Thelma Palmer, LeRoy Reeves, Albert Rhodes.

Fifth Grade, Miss Wright, teacher: Evaydna Greene, Andrew Michaud, Palma Roy.

Sixth Grade, Miss Beebe, teacher—Marion Chubb, Virginia Cook, Helena Donovan, Marion Hayes, Howard Hunter, Leona Lepine, Louise Nipper, Dorothy Prashau, Robert Steele, Harriet Tucker.

Seventh Grade, Miss Seymour, teacher—Charlotte Able, Porter Butts, Howard Crumb, Marguerite Fivaz, Paul Hunter, Elizabeth Ingamells, Covert Jones, Henry Larabee, Edward LePine, Beulah Mansfield, Mary Murphy, Sarah Scholz, John Tompson, Esther Waterhouse.

Eighth Grade, Miss Harrington, teacher—Robert Brackett, Vincent Edgarton, Angie McNally, Ariel Palmer, Leland Palmer, Bertha Randall, Marie Roy, Lulu Sherman, Lillian Warner, Harvia Wilson.

Oak Street School

First Grade, Miss McNamara, teacher—Mary Rachwal, John Dymon, Edward Lilly.

Second Grade, Miss Mackin, teacher—John Kowal, Matthew Kowal, Daisy Cooper, Lucille Dashnau, Mary Libera, Annie Moros, Mary Tryt.

Third Grade, Miss Anna Melody, teacher—Robert Brosnehan, Robert Colton, Richard Culkin, Elijah Lake, Charles Lilly, Doris Ackroyd, Mary Clark, Marion Cook, Nellie Kudta, Jennie Simons.

Fourth Grade, Miss Mary Melody, teacher — Violet Ackroyd, Clifford Kelly, Harold Kingsbury, Bridget Kudta, Elizabeth McKenna, Lloyd Merritt, Norwood Terpening, John Tryt.

Fifth Grade, Miss Dowdle, teacher: Walter Andrews, Maurice Donovan, Adolph Krawczyk, Alanson Loomis, Clarence Stuber, Helen Pooler.

Sixth Grade, Miss Bunker, teacher: William Brosnahen, Francis Church, John Flynn, Roman Gradala, Harold Kelly, Harold McGovern, Fay Whipple, Wayland Wilcox, Marjorie Culkin, Bertha Davis, Helen Deveraux, Margaret Frawley, Nellie Krawcek, Kathleen Lilly, Anna Malone.

Seventh Grade, Miss Sadler, teacher—Joseph Frawley, Frank Stuber, Alice Lilly, Charles Culkin, Percy Andrews, Raymond McKenna, Meade Loomis, Muriel Harris, Helen Mott, John Guilfoyle, Ernest Kelly, Rets Lum.

Academy Street School

First Grade, Miss Whitaker, teacher—Rose Tromblay, Belva Wheeler, Roy Wallace.

Second Grade, Miss VanDuzer, teacher — Calvin Austin, Raymond Coe, Evelyn Crandall.

Third Grade, Miss Cunnan, teacher: Dorothy Garrett, William Morton, Neva Vincent.

Fifth Grade, Miss Lehon, teacher—Arnold Fitzgerald, Edward Fox, Leland Gardner, Harold Roe, Leon Roe, Dorothy Barney, Mildred Bort, Charlotte Cole, Sarah Ford, Mary Hernner, Yetta Kaplan, Berniee Mullen, Katherine Whitaker.

Walradt Street School

First Grade, Miss Marden, teacher: Bernard Dumas, Edward Foederer, Arthur Nettleton, Oliver Shattuck.

Second Grade, Miss Marden, teacher—Frank Abbott, Joseph Casey, John Collins, Donald Hartnett, Edgar Lamb, Willis Lamb, Clyde [illegible], Helena Dolbear, Ruby Dolbear, Gertrude Thompson.

Open Air School

Fourth Grade, Miss Rankin, teacher—Russell Bond, Susan Wickham.

Sixth Grade, Miss Rankin, teacher: Frances Hubbard.

MOTORING TO THE SCENE OF HIS COLLEGE DAYS

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Anderson left today for Williamstown, Mass., where they will attend the quintennial anniversary of Williams College, of which the doctor is a graduate, he having received his diploma there in 1900. The entire trip will be made in the Anderson automobile, besides numerous side trips will be enjoyed in the delightful Berkshires. Commencement exercises will continue from Monday until Thursday of next week and the Andersons will not return to Fulton until the close of the festivities.

LEASES LAND TO GAS CO.

Pulaski.—John Ivens has leased part of his farm in Richland, near Port Ontario, to the Pulaski Gas and Oil Company. The terms are that the party of the product in its crude state and $25 for each well, of which one-half is to be paid in cash and the remainder deposited in a savings bank to his credit.

ONE HUNDRED TRIMMED HATS
IN A SALE

Tomorrow we shall offer one hundred

LADIES' TRIMMED HATS

An accumulation of all the best Spring Styles. Regular selling prices up to $5.

YOUR CHOICE FOR
$1.98

J. C. O'BRIEN

D/34

The Fulton Evening Times

IS A PART OF THE BUSINESS LIFE OF FULTON

¶ Because it is identical with every interest in this city. The Fulton Evening Times is a public institution purely. It's interests are mutual with those of every Man, Woman and Child of this city. It's success spells for the success of every Fulton Merchant. The town having successful Merchants is a successful town. A home Daily helps to make the home Merchant a successful man. One dollar spent in a paper published out-of-town deprives a Fulton workman of a dollar's worth of support.

IF YOU DEPRIVE

A Fulton Workman of His Wages it's Your Loss as well as the Workman's

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

A FLOWER AMONG WEEDS

Story of the Eighteenth Century.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

During the reign of Louis XV. France reached a culmination of profligacy which had been growing for years. While the king was in his minority the regent, his uncle, Duke of Orleans, set the example of debauchery to the court and through the court to the kingdom.

Louis himself, on assuming the scepter, by continuing in his uncle's footsteps completed the work of laying the foundation for the French revolution which broke out during the reign of his successor.

During the regency of the Duke of Orleans the wealthiest nobles owned estates in different parts of France. Only the more moral of these lived in their country chateaus, for the profligate could not endure to live elsewhere than in Paris, where the intriguing and debauchery were going on. Among those who preferred the virtue of rural life was the young Marquis Gaston de Roquette, who, though a soldier of acknowledged bravery, had a mind capable of foreseeing the ruin the regent, the princes of the blood and the nobility were bringing upon France.

However, the marquis was obliged occasionally to go to Paris either at the call of the regent or on account of some duty connected with his station as a peer of the realm. One day on the street on which stands what was then the palace of the Louvre he passed a young lady riding in her "chair," the very sight of whom deeply impressed him. She was not only beautiful, but a natural purity showed itself in every line of her countenance. This was the more noticeable, for at that time the women of the court were as bad as the men, and the lives they led were discernible in their features.

The marquis followed the young lady with his eyes, and when he saw her carried into the palace he heaved a sigh, for he did not believe that any woman could enter that royal abode and be good. Her entrance there, however, proved that she was a lady of rank.

The marquis' duty to the sovereign later called him to the court, and he saw there the lady whom he had met in her "chair." Hanging over her was a famous but notorious duke, the most pronounced and successful beau of that period. He was a very wealthy man, and he was also the most accomplished villain of his day. Three times he had been in the Bastille, the third time for having attempted to betray France.

Another sigh marked the marquis' discovery that the girl who had made such an impression on him was probably falling into the hands of this notorious villain. Leaving the palace without even inquiring the name or rank of the young lady, M. Roquette returned to his estate and, shutting himself up in his chateau, endeavored to banish her image, which had haunted him since the first moment he had seen her.

This was not possible. To the young such impressions are very strong. What it was in that pure face that had taken hold of him he did not know. What he did know was that she was a member of a profligate court, that he had seen its most notorious rake hanging over her, and he did not doubt that sooner or later she would go down under the influences which surrounded her.

Gaston de Roquette remained on his estate for a month without returning to Paris. Often was he tempted to go there for another glimpse of the face that had enthralled him, but he believed that in yielding to the temptation he would only bring upon himself greater pain. So he devoted himself to the care of his estate and to his tenants. He endeavored to occupy himself with his books, but this was impossible, for, whatever he did, his mind was upon that pure being, growing like a flower in the midst of poisonous weeds.

Whether it was that the young marquis was a poor sleeper or that Cupid was keeping him awake, he went to bed late and at times when unable to sleep would arise, dress himself and walk about outside. Not far from the chateau was the church where he and his household and his tenants worshiped and about which their forefathers slept. Within the structure were the bones of the De Roquettes incased in sepulchers or under the flags, the sepulchers supporting marble figures of the departed, while here and there were the arms the men had borne in war.

Gaston de Roquette often strolled about during his midnight walks in the churchyard, but had never cared to enter the church at night when it was deserted. One night when troubled with sleeplessness he was strolling in the grounds near the chateau when, glancing toward the church, he saw a light apparently within the structure. Thinking that he had seen a firefly, he was turning away, when he saw the light again, this time shining evidently through a different window than before. Surely some one was moving in the church. Walking toward it, he went to a window and looked in. There was no light except that the moon, which was nearly full, shone in, dimly.

Thinking again that he had been mistaken, he was about to turn away when it occurred to him to try the knob of the door at the main entrance. To his surprise, the door was not locked. Entering the church, he found no one, but through a crack in a door leading from the chancel to a room used by the priest and acolytes came a ray of light. What could it mean? The pastor of the church was an old man, too feeble to be engaged in any church duty at dead of night. It was no religious matter that was being observed.

The marquis was about to walk toward the door through which the light came when it opened and half a dozen persons came out of the apartment. They bore lights, but so dim were they that De Roquette could not distinguish the faces of the several members of the party. There were a priest who was unknown to him, two men and two women, evidently persons of rank, and the last two to enter the church were a man and a woman. From this woman's dress De Roquette judged that the couple were about to be married. The little party moved toward the chancel, where the priest stationed himself, the couple before him, the two other men on the side of the groom, the two women on the side of the bride.

The marquis walked softly forward, hoping to get a nearer view of the faces, but before he reached a point of vantage their backs were to him. The priest faced him, and he saw at once that he was not the pastor of the church. To the marquis' astonishment he recognized in a priest's garb a worthless fellow of the neighborhood, who had served several terms in prison as a malefactor.

Assured that some piece of villainy was being perpetrated, De Roquette seized an enormous sword resting on the tomb of one of his ancestors and, pushing forward till he stood directly behind the wedding party, cried out:

"I forbid the bans!"

The false priest looked up from a book he held in his hand, and the others turned quickly.

Then did the marquis meet with a great surprise. The attendants were men and women of the court. The groom was the profligate duke, while the bride was the lady of whom the marquis had been dreaming. She had entered with apparent reluctance and now looked up like a frightened bird. The duke, with the assurance that often characterizes vice, knit his brows and said threateningly:

"Who are you, monsieur?"

"Gaston, Marquis de Roquette, proprietor of the estate on which this church stands. No ceremony is permitted here except it is conducted by Father Arouet, the pastor. Surely none will be permitted by one not in orders and the veriest scamp in the province!"

Paralyzed by these words, the group, all except the bride, stood as if discovered in a crime. Then she, breaking away from them, flew to De Roquette and, catching at him for protection, stood regarding the others in terror. Raising the ponderous sword, the length of which was nearly equal to his own height, he stood ready to bring it down upon whomsoever might interfere with him or her. The duke, drawing the rapier at his side, advanced, paused, then said to the girl:

"Emilie, will you not return to me?"

She made no other answer than to cower behind her protector.

"This is no place, marquis," said the duke, "for a dispute among men. Let us go out among the graves. The sexton will not have far to carry you in the morning."

"I will certainly give your grace an opportunity to cross swords with me," replied the marquis, "but not at the present moment, unless you force me to do so. My first duty is to protect this lady, and I see no one here with whom I may safely leave her."

One of the attendant men sprang forward and seized the duke by the arm. He was followed by the other man, then by the women. All pleaded with him to desist.

"This will make a scandal," they argued, "that will put you again in the Bastille and send the rest of us to our country estates, where we will have nothing to do but pine for Paris. We were foolish to abet you in this wild scheme. And the Countess Emilie! Do you suppose the powerful family to which she belongs will not avenge this insult if it becomes known? Give up your mad scheme. It is doubtless fortunate that it has been interrupted, and if it can be kept secret none of us may suffer on account of our part in it."

The duke stood burning to proceed, but all declared that it was of them that he should think and not of himself, though an exile to the country would be less irksome than the Bastille. Finally he sheathed his sword and, after one more appeal to the countess to come to him, he was hurried out of the church by his friends, leaving the marquis and the girl he had saved from a mock marriage alone together.

Here stops the chronicle of one of the vilest episodes of the time of the regency of Philippe of France, but one which in that day was known only to a few. Later Gaston Marquis de Roquette and Emilie Countess de Vandiere were married in the very church where the mock marriage had been interrupted. And it is a matter of record that neither of them ever again appeared at court. Surrounded by their children, adored by their tenants, they lived a life of simplicity and purity.

But when at the end of the eighteenth century the people of France rose to throw off the yoke of a profligate nobility the innocent were made to suffer with the guilty. The marquis and marquise's grandchildren paid a penalty that they did not deserve.

A Hunter's Bluff

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

In the spring of the year 1868 a party of sporting hunters numbering thirty entered the elbow of Texas between New Mexico and the Indian territory.

While the Comanche Indians were bitterly hostile at that time they had been sadly reduced by smallpox and driven to the north, and old frontiersmen stated their belief that the party would not even see one.

I had been invited to make one of the party, but was detained for a couple of days. I then mounted my horse and picked up the trail and followed after, having no fear that I should run any danger in thus riding.

It had come noon of the second day, and I had met with no adventure. I had baited and watered my horse and was ready to move on, when I heard a "Yi, yi, yi!" on my right, and I turned around to see five Comanches coming out of the timber on their ponies. They were just half a mile away and had evidently discovered me.

When a man rides for his life the greatest fear is in overdoing the matter. I had been five years on the plains and had a pretty fair stock of nerve, and I rode to favor my horse.

As the sun began to sink in the west they sought to shorten the distance between us and bring me into rifle shot, but a word to the mustang checkmated this.

Had I been able to keep the trail after 3 o'clock I should have counted on finding the party by sundown, as we were getting over the ground at a rapid pace, but at about that hour I came to a rough, stony district, where the passage of the horses had left no trail, and I went ahead at random, planning to keep my distance from the river. It was to be a starlight night, and as soon as dusk came I urged my beast to a faster pace and bore more to the left. When I believed I had gained a quarter of a mile I swerved sharply to the right, rode for forty rods and then dismounted and gave Custer the word to lie down. We were both flat on the earth when the party of pursuers swept by, and the thud, thud, thud of their ponies' feet came very plainly to my ears.

I had a cold bite in my haversack, and after disposing of it stretched out and went to sleep, hoping I had given the red men the slip. I opened my eyes the next morning in astonishment. Seated in a circle about me were the five Comanches, while their ponies were feeding with my horse. I lay on my back with my hands clasped under my head, and such was my astonishment that I could not move. Fortunately for me they took this for nerve. I looked from man to man, and finally said in Comanche:

"Had I known you were Comanches I should not have run away. I thought you were Chickasaws on stolen horses. I shall be ready to go as soon as I have eaten. I want to see the Comanche country—the vast plains—the Canadian river—the mountains full of caves and waterfalls—your chief, Thunder Cloud."

One of them asked me if I belonged to the party ahead, and I told him no. He asked me how I dared start out alone for the Comanche country, and I told him that I had trapped the mountain lion and cut out and eaten his liver while still alive, and therefore feared nothing living. I could see that they were badly puzzled, and I increased their wonder by saying, as I finished my breakfast:

"Come. It is time to go. We have a long ride, and I am anxious to see your country."

When we set out, two in front and three behind, and no Indians were ever more puzzled. In later years I met one of them and he told me that their plan was to torture me as soon as I awoke. They were beat out of this by my queer remarks, intended just for that purpose. Several times during the day I expressed my impatience at our slow pace and asked them to get on faster, and when we went into camp I saw that I had them off their guard. After eating I sat apart from them to smoke and meditate and to give them an opportunity to compare notes. Just when the five got their heads together to discuss something they did not wish me to hear I arose and stepped backward out of the light of the fire, and I believe I was a hundred feet away when they missed me.

I heard them scatter and beat about, and while they were hunting for me I crawled along and got my gun. I crept away from the circle of the fire and then got the shelter of a tree. The Indians beat about for a good half hour, and then all came in, chagrined and disgusted. I lifted my gun and took fair aim at the leader. He went down as my rifle cracked and was followed by a second and a third before the surviving two could comprehend what was going on. Neither stopped for his gun.

I stood guard all night, and when morning came was satisfied that the two who had escaped had no idea of returning. After a scanty breakfast I caught up the six animals, packed up everything of value, and then I headed to the southeast for the river, and at 3 o'clock rode right into the camp of the party, which had settled down for sport and had given me no thought. Next day a party of us rode over to give the bodies a more careful inspection, and we found on each one a silver government medal, given them during Lincoln's first term, as "good Indians."

MILLIONS EAGER TO VENERATE LIBERTY BELL ON ITS LONG TRIP

Famous Relic of Independence Visits Seventeen States In Its Journey to Panama Fair.

Special Precautions Taken For Its Safety and to Enable It to Be Seen Day and Night.

IT is a safe estimate that millions of people will see the Liberty bell during its triumphal journey across the continent from Philadelphia to San Francisco and back. Never before in all its long and stirring history has the old bell aroused such keen and widespread enthusiasm.

On its trip to the Panama exposition its special route will take it through seventeen states, and it will probably make at least 150 stops. But if the appeals of all the places that want to honor the great symbol of American independence could be listened to the bell would visit every state in the Union and even make a tour in Canada.

The famous relic has been revered by millions on its previous trips, and it has been fertile for patriotism wherever it has been seen. On this occasion its patriotic significance will be felt more than ever before, and it will bring new fervor to Americans everywhere because of the critical times in our present national relations as pertaining to our position with the big powers now at war in Europe.

Illumined at Night.

Even at night and at places at which it cannot make a stop on its trip it will be seen. Arrangements have been made for it to be flooded with light during all the hours of darkness. Every hamlet on the way will therefore see it. It will ride through 3,000 miles of swelling cheers.

The nation's most revered historical relic will form the central feature of a tographer, one representative for all the newspapers, four policemen, a rigger, the Pullman conductor, tourist agent and dining room steward.

Mayor Blankenburg of Philadelphia, head of the commission which has charge of the bell, was invited to accompany the party, but declined on the ground that he could not spare the time. He hopes, however, to make the trip direct and meet the bell on its arrival at San Francisco.

Patriotic organizations and citizens' committees all along the way will welcome the old bell. Apart from its special patriotic significance at the moment and the interest that has always attached to the Liberty bell, this occasion will be a historic one. It is almost certain that this will be the last trip the old bell will be permitted to make.

Fear For Its Safety.

There are many who fear the treasured bell will not return whole. There was strong opposition against its being subjected to the risks of the jolts of the long journey. Permission would not have been given but for the many petitions that sought it. Among those who urged the council to consent were President Wilson and almost everybody else whose name is in "Who's Who In America."

Metallurgists say the bell has a bad, chronic case of "disease of metals." There was much discussion among them as to whether its health would not be lost completely by reason of the great Fourth of July celebration at Philadelphia and will start next day on its big journey. It will remain on view in the Pennsylvania building at the exposition until October.

LIBERTY BELL AND MAP OF ITS ROUTE TO PANAMA FAIR.

The trip will take twelve days, with generous stops allowed all along the line and the party of Philadelphians who will escort the bell will remain in San Francisco three or four days, as the guests of the Golden Gate City. They will return directly to Philadelphia then and the whole trip will require about three weeks.

Brigadier General John J. Pershing of Fort Bliss, Texas, has asked that the bell on its way back stop at El Paso, as there will be 5,000 soldiers there to see it, and a fitting ceremony will be arranged.

From Baker, Ore., a petition thirty-six feet long has reached Philadelphia asking that the bell stop there, where 13,000 school children want to see it.

All along the route traversed special opportunity is to be given children to see the beloved relic. At San Francisco every boy and girl in the city and surrounding districts will line the streets as the bell passes by. During its stay at the Golden Gate 5,000,000 youngsters hope to gaze upon the bell with awe.

$29,000 For Trip Cost.

The city of Philadelphia has voted $29,000 toward the expenses of the trip. Some of the items are: Fares (100 have to be paid for), $13,500; $500 switching charges, $250 for the special construction of the bell car, $3,700 for four Pullmans, $800 for the dining car and $3,500 for meals at the rate of $1.20 a meal for each person. These charges aggregate $22,500.

There are also the expenses of the parade incident to the moving of the bell from Independence Hall to the car, the cost of printing souvenir booklets, badges and the like and the pay of board for four policemen who will remain in San Francisco four months as a guard of the bell.

The members of the accompanying party are to be assessed $150 each to defray their incidental expenses. None of the appropriated money is to be used for cigars or incidental refreshment, for instance.

The Liberty bell train is to consist of locomotive, tender, bell car, baggage car and three sleepers. The councilmanic party will be made up of twenty-four members, the presidents of the two chambers, two sergeants-at-arms, two chief clerks, a stenographer, a pho- long trip to the exposition. Some of the experts feared that it might be ruined utterly.

Imperfect mixture of metals in the original bell and the failure to get a homeogeneous admixture in the recasting are blamed for the cracks that are constantly spreading over its surface.

To minimize to the fullest extent the perils of the trip a special car, a veritable Pullman gondola, has been built to carry the bell westward. The car will offer the slightest possible vibration to the venerable metal structure. Passenger car springs have been provided, and strains and stresses will be reduced to the minimum.

The cracks in the bell are chiefly due, it is thought, to the frequent trips the bell has made about the country to various expositions. These journeys have not only extended the original crack, made at the time it was last rung, in 1835, but new hurts have been suffered, and there are a series of cracks that extend to many parts of its surface.

Old Crack Extends.

The bell was taken for exhibition purposes to New Orleans in 1885, to Chicago in 1893, to Atlanta in 1895, to Charleston in 1902, to Boston in 1903, to St. Louis in 1904, and it appeared in the Founders' day procession in Philadelphia in 1908.

A new extension of the crack to the crown is said to have developed when the bell was removed from its stand in Independence hall, Philadelphia, for the clapper to be taken out and preparations made to insure the bell's safety on the trip. Last year the old crack widened and reached the crown. The new crack is declared to have extended this at least six inches.

A steel "spider" has been clamped to the interior to prevent any further widening of the old crack by jolts and jarring on the railroad. This is of excellent workmanship and well inserted. It would even hold the bell together should a disastrous break occur. But it cannot in any way relieve the internal strain in the metal which is the cause of the cracking.

The bell has been mounted on special new supports carrying the original swinging block, and the "spider" framework inside is not visible. The old relic will be shown in its glass car on its long journey, and the clapper that helped to peal out the first glad tidings of American independence will also be exhibited beside it in a mahogany case.

ITINERARY OF LIBERTY BELL ON TRIP TO WEST.

Monday, July 5.
Via Pennsylvania railroad.
Leave Philadelphia..E. T. 3:00 p. m.
Arrive Lancaster, Pa.... 5:00 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive Harrisburg, Pa. (capitol) .... 6:30 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)

Tuesday, July 6.
Arrive Pittsburgh .... 3:00 a. m.
Via Pennsylvania lines.
Leave Pittsburgh ...C. T. 2:20 a. m.
Arrive Mansfield, O....... 7:00 a. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.)
Arrive Bucyrus, O........ 8:15 a. m.
(Stop five minutes.)
Arrive Lima, O........... 9:50 a. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive Fort Wayne, Ind. 12:00 noon
(Stop forty-five minutes.)
Arrive Gary, Ind.......... 4:15 p. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.
Arrive Chicago .... 5:30 p. m.

Wednesday, July 7.
Via Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway.
Leave Chicago .... 12:05 a. m.
Arrive Peoria, Ill......... 7:00 a. m.
(Stop one hour.)
Arrive Rock Island, Ill.. 11:00 a. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.)
Arrive Davenport, Ia.... 11:30 a. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive Iowa City, Ia...... 1:30 p. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.)
Arrive Marengo, Ia....... 2:45 p. m.
(Stop five minutes.)
Arrive Grinnell, Ia........ 3:50 p. m.
(Stop ten minutes.)
Arrive Des Moines, Ia. (capitol) .... 6:00 p. m.
(Stop five hours.)

Thursday, July 8.
Arrive Topeka, Kan. (capitol) .... 7:30 a. m.
(Stop two and one-half hours.)
Arrive Kansas City, Mo.. 12:00 noon
(Stop three hours.)
Via Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.
Arrive Leavenworth...... 4:00 p. m.
(Stop ten minutes.)
Arrive Atchison, Kan.... 4:55 p. m.
(Stop five minutes.)
Arrive St. Joseph, Mo.... 6:00 p. m.
(Stop five hours and fifty-five minutes.)

Friday, July 9.
Arrive Omaha, Neb...... 5:00 a. m.
(Stop six hours.)
Arrive Lincoln, Neb. (capitol) .... 12:45 p. m.
(Stop two hours and fifteen minutes.)
Arrive Hastings, Neb.... 6:00 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive McCook, Neb. C. T. 10:30 p. m.

Saturday, July 10.
Arrive Denver (capitol).. 6:30 a. m.
(Stop six hours.)
Via Union Pacific railway.
Leave Denver .... 12:00 noon
Arrive Greeley, Col....... 1:45 p. m.
(Stop ten minutes.)
Arrive Cheyenne, Wyo.. 3:45 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive Laramie, Wyo.... 6:30 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)

Sunday, July 11.
Via Oregon Short Line railroad.
Arrive Salt Lake City (capitol) .... 9:30 a. m.
(Stop six hours.)
Arrive Ogden, Utah...... 4:30 p. m.
(Stop one hour.)

Monday, July 12.
Arrive Boise, Ida. (capitol) .... 7:00 a. m.
(Stop one hour.)
Arrive Caldwell, Ida..... 9:00 a. m.
(Stop twenty minutes.)
Arrive Huntingdon, Ore. M. T..................... 11:20 a. m.
Via Oregon, Washington railroad and Navigation company.
Leave Huntingdon, Ore. P. T....................... 10:30 a. m.
Arrive Baker, Ore........ 11:40 a. m.
(Stop ten minutes.)
Arrive La Grande, Ore... 1:25 p. m.
(Stop ten minutes.)
Arrive Pendleton, Ore... 4:30 p. m.
(Stop ten minutes.)
Arrive Walla Walla, Wash..... .... 6:50 p. m.
(Stop three hours and ten minutes.)

Tuesday, July 13.
Arrive Spokane, Wash.. 3:00 a. m.
(Stop four hours.)
Via Great Northern railway.
Leave Spokane, Wash... 12:00 noon
Arrive Wenatchee, Wash. 5:30 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive Everett, Wash.... 11:30 p. m.
(Stop eight and one-half hours.)

Wednesday, July 14.
Arrive Seattle, Wash.... 9:15 a. m.
(Stop five hours and fifteen minutes.)
Via Northern Pacific railway.
Leave Seattle, Wash.... 2:30 p. m.
Arrive Tacoma, Wash.... 4:00 p. m.
(Stop one hour.)
Arrive Olympia, Wash. (capitol) .... 6:00 p. m.
(Stop four hours.)

Thursday, July 15.
Arrive Portland, Ore..... 6:00 a. m.
(Stop six hours.)
Via Southern Pacific railway.
Leave Portland, Ore.... 12:00 noon.
Arrive Salem, Ore. (capitol) .... 2:00 p. m.
(Stop thirty minutes.)
Arrive Eugene, Ore....... 5:00 p. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.)
Arrive Roseburg, Ore.... 8:35 p. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.)

Friday, July 16.
Arrive Marysville, Ore... 12:15 p. m.
(Stop fifteen minutes.)
Arrive Sacramento, Cal. (capitol) .... 3:00 p. m.
(Stop one hour.)
Arrive Oakland pier, Cal. 6:30 p. m.
Arrive San Francisco.... 6:00 p. m.

SEVENTEEN YEAR PEST DUE.

Farmers Are Warned to Protect Trees Against Swarm of Locusts.

That well known pest, whose reappearance at stated intervals has given him the name of "seventeen year locust," is on his way again. A warning from the department of agriculture says the coming horde of hopping, dying, buzzing things is expected to appear this month.

"Some recent experience," says the warning, "indicates that trees thoroughly sprayed with Bordeaux mixture or a lime wash are apt to be avoided, especially if there are other trees or woods in the neighborhood. The most reliable means of protecting nurseries and young orchards is by collecting the insects in bags or umbrellas from the trees in early morning or late evening.

"The worst affected branches should be removed. The less injured limbs may be coated on the wounded parts with grafting wax or moderately hard soap."

DRESS OF A SAILOR

It Is Practically the Same All Over the World.

THE BEST SUITED UNIFORMS.

Despite Numerous Demands For a Change the Old Style Remains on Account of Its Many Good Points. The Wide Trousers and Loose Blouse.

You have wondered, have you not, why the sailor wears bell bottom trousers, neckerchiefs or the loose blouse? There's a reason for every part of a sailor's uniform, explains a Baltimore naval authority.

Suggestions are continually flowing into the various offices of the navy department regarding a change in the sailor's dress, but Uncle Sam pays little attention to them. He has considered the matter thoroughly and has decided that no change for the better could be made.

The uniform of the United States sailor is practically the same today as it was when the navy was first organized. There have been a few changes in recent years, the most conspicuous of which is the abolition of the knife lanyard. The knife lanyard is a white braid that was worn around the sailor's neck, on the end of which was fastened a knife. This knife was kept in a back pocket. The lanyard was a part of the uniform characteristic of the sailors for many years back. But now that the sailing vessels are no longer used in warfare the lanyard is rapidly disappearing in all countries. The only form of lanyard used now by the United States is the black silk one, which is worn by the boatswain's mate. There is no knife on the end, however, but in its stead is tied the boatswain's call. This is a silver whistle used on board the vessel for signaling purposes.

The neckerchief for undress purposes has been done away with to a great extent, but it is still used in the dress uniform. Then there is the large sailor collar. Both the large collar and the cuffs were abolished on the working blouses some time ago, but recently the collars have been recalled, though they are not as large as in former years.

The sailor's uniform is practically the same throughout the world. But why has each and every nation accepted the same style of dress? The balloon trousers, the flap, the broad collars, the neckerchiefs, the loose blouse and the lanyards have been condemned by some of the officials of the navy department for many years, but the old style prevails.

There are various reasons why the bell bottom trousers were adopted. Have you ever watched a sailor at work? Have you ever seen him scrub the boat or wash the decks? This is his daily task. He rolls up his trousers and wades right through the water. And what would he do if he were incased in the snug, commonplace sort of clothes that landlubbers live in? The bell bottom trousers can be rolled above the knee without the least trouble, and this is one reason Uncle Sam has chosen them.

But there is a more important reason, one that involves the sailor's life. A man can surely swim more easily without his trousers than he can with them. And this is the way Uncle Sam looks at the matter. The bell bottom trousers are laced on the sides and buttoned around the waist. Should a sailor fall overboard or should he be compelled to swim for his life he unbuttons the waist and slips out of the trousers without any exertion. What could he do were he wearing the tight fitting trousers of today?

The loose blouse the sailor wears enables him to move about freely. There is nothing to hinder the movements of his arms. He can accomplish far more work with less exertion.

The blouse was formerly on the style of the middy jacket; just slipped on and buttoned in the front. This has been slightly changed, a drawing string having been placed around the bottom to secure it.

Individuals have advocated changes in the sailor's uniform for years, some believing that it should correspond to the marine's or to the soldier's. Neither the soldier nor the marine has any occasion to soil his clothing, while, on the contrary, the sailor is compelled to wash his uniform very frequently. The soldier or the marine has a locker or some other convenient place to keep his suit, but the sailor must store his outfit in a white canvas bag which has every appearance of a pillow case. If he were wearing the clothing as suggested by many he would have a daily task pressing his trousers.

The expansion of the trouser leg at the lower end and the loose blouse therefore are not used merely to convey to the eye the traditional picture of the sailor, but have been adopted after careful and close observations.—Baltimore American.

A Rebuke.

"Mary followed Edward," mumbled the high school girl who was trying to fix the sovereigns of England in her mind.

"What's that?" spoke up grandma, who had been dozing.

"Mary followed Edward."

"Then you keep away from Mary. I don't want you to go with them kind. Girls is getting too bold."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

There are two forms of discontent. One is laborious; the other is indolent and complaining.

BUILDING OUR BIG CANAL.

The Human Problem Overshadowed the Engineering Difficulties.

The general impression prevailed from the beginning that the building of the Panama canal comprised one of the world's greatest engineering feats, and the tremendous scope of the work as it developed during the construction period served to mold this impression into a fixed belief, yet Mr. Stevens, who for nearly two years had control on the isthmus not only of all construction, but of those various co-ordinate branches which were essential adjuncts to the building of the canal, expressed the opinion that the engineering features were the least difficult, describing them as "of magnitude and not of intricacy." On the other hand, his experience convinced him that the administrative problems were the greater, presenting as they did many unusual features involving an immense amount of detail and extending into every branch of business, with ramifications touching many phases of social and domestic economy.

In every undertaking of an engineering character there must necessarily be a greater or less amount of administrative detail resulting from problems of supply, labor, policy and considerations arising out of them. In the case of the Panama canal not only were these problems present, but as compared with those of engineering they made the latter appear relatively small.

The very magnitude of the work imposed difficulties which would have existed even had it been undertaken in any portion of the United States, but these difficulties were increased materially by reason of having to carry on the work in a tropical country sparsely populated, nonproductive, affording no skilled and very little efficient common labor, with customs and modes of living as different as the civilizations of North and Central America have been since the settlement of these portions of the western hemisphere, with a heavy rainfall during the greater portion of the year and with a reputation for unhealthfulness which placed Panama in the category of one of the worst pest holes of the earth.—General George W. Goethals in Scribner's.

PERJURY IN COURT.

It Is Quite Common and the Rules of Evidence Favor It.

It is a conservative averment that in two-thirds of the cases tried in court there is positive contradiction of facts. There are few arguments made by advocates in which bias and prevarication on the part of witnesses are not charged. Deplorably immoral as well as farcical is some of the evidence adduced in many cases where experts are used on both sides to support diametrically opposed propositions.

Any judge or practicing attorney knows that seldom does a party to a suit testify against his own interests in the decisive matters affecting the rights involved. Although perjury may not necessarily and invariably be predicated on these facts, yet they must lead to the conclusion of sworn misstatements in a large proportion of cases, especially when we recall that the oath of the witness requires him not only to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, but all the truth.

In this connection it is interesting to remember that the rules of evidence at present and for centuries in the past, enforced in our courts and English courts, not only tend in spite of the plain context of the oath to prevent the telling of all, but permit a witness rather to conceal much that has some bearing in truth upon the matter at issue.

We are forced to recognize, then, that perjury prevails as a common and crying evil.—Charles J. Martell in Case and Comment.

Hedgehog Fish.

The hedgehog fish is a strange creature. It has a body covered with long thin spines. When in danger it follows the custom of the ordinary hedgehog to a certain extent, but in addition it puts its nose out of the water and swallows such a quantity of air that its body is blown out into the shape of a football, with sharply pointed spines bristling in every direction. This maneuver upsets its balance. Still it floats contentedly along on its back, quite safe against the attacks of its opponents, who are kept at bay by impenetrable armor.

Naturally.

Visitor—What was the matter with the man they just brought in? Doctor—Stuck his head through a pane of glass. Visitor—How did he look? Doctor—His face wore an injured expression.

HOME MOVEMENT IN MINNESOTA

For the Beautifying of Dwelling Houses.

A FRUITFUL PROPAGANDA.

The Director of State Art Commission Ready to Supply Models For Farmhouses, Small Village Homes and Landscape Designs—Ugly Houses Disappearing.

Because of the conviction that the state should render service to the people the director of the state art commission of Minnesota, Maurice Irwin Flagg, is ready to supply models for farmhouses, small village homes and landscape designs. The purpose is to beautify the dwelling places of the people, and consequently the entire state can develop at the same time ambition and the love of the beautiful in the minds of men with small incomes.

The general adoption of the designs, which are furnished practically free, may eventually result in the wiping out of all of the ugly "shoe box" designs that are so plentifully sprinkled over the landscape. Minnesota is a wealthy state, and it is growing more so because the farmers there are making three blades of alfalfa grow where one grew before. They are buying the latest farm machinery; they are bending every effort to conserve the natural resources of the country, and they are learning how to take from the soil the greatest possible return.

While all this has been going on the physical character of the homes has been neglected. Mr. Flagg says in the Survey:

"Practical farmers stated their needs, and it remained for the architects of the state to solve the problem of a $3,500 ten room model farmhouse. The state art commission offered prizes. It brought together a jury composed of a practical farmer, Senator L. E. Potter of Springfield; Mrs. Margaret L. Blair, a specialist in the department of domestic science and home management of the University of Minnesota; Dean A. F. Woods of the [illegible] college of that state, and [illegible]man, an architect."

Thirty farmhouse desig[illegible] from the competition. So much success met this work that there followed a "model village house" competition. The houses were not to cost more than $3,000 each. Fifty plans were submitted. Then came competitions for a "model farm yard." Any one in Minnesota can get these plans at a very small cost, and all others they may get by paying a good deal more for them. Mr. Flagg says:

"This program in Minnesota has stimulated other states to action. Massachusetts has just completed, through the Agricultural college of Amherst, a 'model farmhouse' program. California, Kentucky, Texas, Indiana and many other states have appealed to Minnesota for assistance in formulating programs of the same character. The 'model farmhouse' plans have also gone to several foreign countries. Germany, Italy, France and Canada have published the results of the Minnesota competition for the benefit of their agricultural people.

"This better housing program is supplementary to the other work of the commission. It sends to towns and cities throughout the state exhibitions of all kinds. It brings into the state each year a collection of the best American contemporary art. It circulates exhibits of industrial art, sculpture, home furnishings, home industries and school art. It organizes home industries and handicraft classes and puts into the field specialists to teach such work. And it has been successful in finding a market for the product."

Wifely Tact.

Poet—Darn that editor! He has not only sent me back all my poems, but has sent me back two that I didn't write. Wife—But perhaps you can sell those two, dear—if you didn't write them.—New York Globe.

Those New York plumbers who tossed a cent to decide which should get a contract from the city of course knew the job was rich enough to line two wallets with velvet.

D/34

Deys
Syracuse

The Season's Late Styles Shoes, Pumps and Oxfords in an Extraordinary Sale

THE SALE LOT INCLUDES:

Patent vamp lace boots, with sand kid tops.

Gray kid boots, white calf tops and trimmings; Goodyear welt soles.

Patent colt lace oxfords, sand kid tops; dressy street oxfords.

Gunmetal straight lace oxfords, patty kid tops; Goodyear welt soles.

Patent colt oxfords with short vamps; hand turned soles.

Patent colt vamp pumps, sand cloth quarters—attractive street slipper.

Gunmetal vamp pumps, with gray cloth quarters, Cuban Louis heel.

All Fresh Clean and Dressy Footwear
Plenty of Opportunities for Choice Selection

The reason for this sharp reduction would not interest you. The shoes, pumps and oxfords we refer to are all here. You can take our word for it when we say that the values are so very unusual that no other explanation is necessary. Here is Summer Footwear that is far ahead of the ordinary kind in every particular. Many of the lasts were turned out by shoemakers who excel in producing exclusive styles. Late season's styles, at nearly half less in some instances—styles that are good for a long time of service.

5.50 values
5.00 and 4.00 values $2.95 Pair

There are so many good things to pick from in this offering that you won't have any trouble to get your size. There is much to be had in value, style, savings for those who need new Summer Footwear. All that is good and true in leather, lasts and workmanship can be had from this lot at 2.95 a pair—a bargain price that means a big saving for you.

Victrola-Edison Music Rooms Now on Sixth Floor

Dey Brothers & Co.

WORLD PEACE BORN YESTERDAY

Prof. Taft Presided at Conference in Old Independence Hall

Philadelphia, June 18.—Within historic Independence Hall yesterday, the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, there was formed an organization whose object it will be to promote thec reation of a league of nations with a view to preventing wars or, at least, of lessening the possibilities of them. The name adopted by the organization was "League to Enforce ePace, American Branch."

Former President Taft, who presided over the conference for a part of the time, was elected permanent president and a long list of representative Americans was named as permanent vice-presidents. A permanent executive committe was selected with instructions to take all measures necessary to promote the objects of the league.

In moving the adoption of the report of the Committee on Resolutions, which embodied the objects of the league, Prof. Taft expressed the hope "that out of this historic building may come a message that shall again help the world."

George Kirchwey of Columbia University, suggested that the name be changed to "League to Establish and Maintain Peace." The proposed elimination of the word "force" found supporters, but it was defeated after a vigorous speech by A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University and chairman of the Resolutions Committee.

"Fight Fire With Fire."

"We are here to enforce peace; otherwise we have no business here at all," he exclaimed. "When you fight a forest fire you fight it with back fire. We have here a means to discourage war, and that means is the threat to use force."

The text of the committee's report is as follows:

"Throughout 5,000 years of recorded history, peace, here and there established, has been kept, and its area has been widened in one way only. Individuals have combined their efforts to suppress violence in the local community. Communities have cooperated to maintain the authoritative state and to preserve peace within its borders. States have formed leagues or confederations or have otherwise cooperated to establish peace among themselves. Always peace has been made and kept, when made and kept at all, by the superior power of superior numbers acting in unity for the common good.

"Mindful of this teaching of experience, we believe and solemnly urge that the time has come to devise and to create a working union of sovereign nations to establish peace among themselves and to guarantee it by all known and available sanctions at their command, to the end that civilization may be conserved and the progress of mankind in comfort, enlightenment and happiness may continue.

"We therefore believe it to be desirable for the United States to join a league of nations binding the signatories to the following:

Provides International Tribunal.

1—All justifiable questions arising between the signtory powers, not settled by negotiations, shall, subject to the limitations of treaties, be submitted to a judicial tribunal for hearing and judgment both upon the merits and upon any issue as to its jurisdiction of the question.

2.—All other questions arising between the signatories and not settled by negotiation, shall be submitted to a council of conciliation for hearing, consideration and recommendation.

3.—The signatory powers shall jointly use forthwith both their economic and military forces against any one of their number that goes to war or comits acts of hostility against another of the signatories before any question arising shall be submitted as provided in the foregoing.

4.—Conferences between the signatory powers shall be held from time to time to formulate and codify rules of international law, which unless some signatory shall signify its dissent within a stated period, shall there after govern in the decisions of the judicial tribunal mentioned in article one.

Berger Plan Rejected

Chairman Lowell said that one of the principal suggestions rejected by the committee was that offered by Victor C. Berger of Wisconsin aimed to prevent the signatory nations furnishing the belligerent countries arms and ammunition.

Mr. Breger, who, with Mr. Kirchwey, voted against the adoption of the report, characterized the report as "too militaristic."

"You are fixing too muchforce," he said. "You want more militarism to fight militarism. We don't want to be the world's sheriff or the world's policeman. To apply your plan it would require a bigger army and navy and it would have the United States in trouble all the time. There is too much 'Teddy Rooseveltism' in it."

There were half-dozen brief speeches in favor of the report. John Wanamaker did not think the report went far enough. He had hoped the conference would send out a message to the warring nations thatw ould make them pause and think. He could not help but favor the report, he added, but felt that it, standing alone without any further action, would be laughed at by those on the other side of the Atlantic.

Will Start Propaganda

It is expected the Executive Committee will meet soon to adopt plans to carry out the objects of the league. One of the things that probably will be done, according to members of the Executive Committe, will be to start a propaganda in this country with a view to having the United State Senate adopt measures in line with the object of the league.

Mr. Taft, in a brief speech, said that judging by its action in rejecting treaties in the past, the chief stumbling block to the aspirations of the league would be the Senate.

Steps will be taken to get European countries interested in the league.

Residents of London

(Continued from Page One)

thirty-five minutes with a load of 1200 pounds.

A despatch from Berlin by way of Amsterdam last night contained the text of an official message giving the German version of the air raid on the British northeast coast on the night of June 15 and 16. It says bombs were dropped on fortified places along the coast, starting fires and silencing one coast battery. The airships returned undamagd.

News of remarkable activity in the Zeppelin works at Friedrichsafen comes from Geneva. It is said double shifts are now working in the factories, which are turning out a comuleted Zeppelin airship every twenty days. One of the two Zeppelins destined for operations against Italy was sent away from Friedrichshafen on Wednesday to replace the dirigible destroyed over Belgium, recently by Sub-Lieutentnat Warneford who was killed yesterday near Paris.

It is reported in Geneva that the German authorities are preparing for an important combined raid of Zeppelins and aeroplanes on Paris and London in retailation for the recent attack on German towns by aviators of the Allies.

MRS. HARRIET S. LUSK

This city has lost another one of its oldest residents, Mrs. Harriet S. Lusk who died yesterday morning at the age of 88. Mrs. Lusk's last illness occurred at the home of her niece, Miss Cornelia Whitaker, 417 Cayuga st. She is survived by one son, James K. Lusk, of Albany. The Rev. M. J. ePters of Zion church will officiate at the funeral tomorrow at 417 Cayuga st., burial taking place at Mt. Adnah.

JOSEPH C. SWEET RETURNS; HE FOUGHT IN FRANCE

Joseph C. Sweet, a former resident of this city, who has spent the last seven years in extensive travel, returned to this city yesterday from England. Mr. Sweet was renewing old acquaintances today and has been forced to recount his adventures many times.

Leaving this city in 1908, Mr. Sweet went to England and then to the Continent where he spent two years in France and Germany. Re turning to England he made his home there until last August when the war broke out. He enlisted in the Royal Artillery and saw active service in the fighting in northern France. He was disabled during the winter months and sent back to England where he received an honorable discharge. Leaving England in February, he went to South America, stopping at Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro and La Plata. He left in May and, after spending some time in the British West indies, at Jamaica, returned to England and left Liverpool for this country two weeks ago.

Mr. Sweet tells some highly interesting incidents of the war and of the work being done by the armies in the trenches. He has an inexhaustible fund of information, and his experiences are well worth publication. He intends to remain in this city indefinitely.

CIRCUS COMING TO TOWN

Bill posters are announcing the advent of a circus and wild west show in thisc ity next Wednesday. The company selected a very inauspicious date, for the graduation exercises of Fulton High school will be held Wednesday, but the show will doubtless be well attended as it is the first entertainment of its kind seen here in a twelvemonth.

SUPREME COURT TOMORROW

Justice Irving G. Hubbs will hold a special term of the Court House here Saturday next. On the folowing Saturday a naturalization term will be held.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

On These Warm Days
TRY SOME OF OUR FAMOUS ICE CREAMS
French Chocolate, French Maple Walnut
French Cherry French Vanilla
40c the Quart
Delivered to you promptly at any hour of the day or night.
TELEPHONE 3128
ROBERTS & WOOD

DON O'BRIEN SUCCEEDS BRAY

Election of Baseball Captain Held at Ex-Captain's Home; Guests Were Dined

Clarence Bray, captain of the 1915 baseball team of Fulton High school proved hmself a most efficient host last night when he entertained the members of the baseball team, and several guests at his home on West 2d st. The dinner given the team by the retiring captain is an annual event but it is safe to say that the affair last night surpassed all others both in entertainment and enthusiasm.

Almost every member of the baseball team; Professor William Merrill, the faculty supervisor of athletics; William Stauring, coach; Fred Martin, of the Syracuse Herald; Edward Walsh, Leonard Roy, Don Cavanagh, and E. J. LaPorte, of the Fulton Evening Times, were present.

The early part of the evening was passed with general singing by the company, as well as several solos by Mr. Walsh, and Michael Bray. Mr. Merrill accompanied at the piano.

Before the election of a new captain for next season, Captain Bray made a few remarks, during the course of which he reviewed the season's work, and thanked the fellows for their support and interest.

Seven men were eligible to vote for the new captain, H. O'Brien, Don. O'Brien, Bray, Pullen, Barnes, Wilcox and Thompson. The first vote resulted in a tie between Barnes and Don O'Brien, and on the second ballot O'Brien was elected. The new captain played center field this season and is one of the most popular fellows in the squad. In a few words, Mr. O'Brien thanked the team for the honor they had conferred upon him, saying it was totally unexpected, and promised that he would do his best to make next season one of the most successful in the history of the team.

After the election, the party sat down to a bountiful spread prepared by Mrs. Bray, and when the table had been depleted of almost everything in sight, general speechmaking was indulged in. Don Cavanagh, an alumnus of the school, who is now a Syracuse University man, acted as toastmaster, and Mr. Merrill was asked to say a few words. The faculty representative reviewed the season, which in his opinion was a very successful one, in spite of the fact that the team broke about even on the games played. He mentioned the excellent scholarship maintained by the squad generally, and recommended hard practice next year.

William Stauring, the coach, spoke of the need of hard practice, and said the team this year was handicapped by its late start, having no outdoor practice to speak of until a week before the first game. He spoke of an indoor practice cage next year, and mentioned a building in the city which he thinks can be secured for that purpose at very little expense. Captain Bray and Manager Harold O'Brien also made short addresses. Leonard Roy, who assisted in coaching the team this year spoke of the spirit displayed by the fellows and urged support for the next year's captain and coach.

Mark Pullen, who is spending his last year in school, and who played left field this season, was asked to make a few remarks. Mr. Pullen expressed his regret at leaving the school, and spoke of the many warm friends and pleasant associations which are to be formed on a baseball team, especially in a high school.

Captain Bray and Captain O'Brien were presented with miniature baseball bats. Each member of the team was given a miniature batsman as a favor. Among other who made short addresses were George Wilcox and E. J. Laporte. The company arose at the conclusion of the speechmaking and sang two school songs, "Old Fulton High" and "Cheer for Old Fulton" with great enthusiasm.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Bray and Captain Bray for their hospitality and the gathering broke up at a late hour.

PRATT FARM GETS SIX HOLSTEIN COWS

Will Johnson, who is manager of the dairy farms for George L. Pratt of this city, has just bought six full blooded Holstein cows for Mr. Pratt from the herd of E. C. Price, of Liverpool.

FOOD SALE TOMORROW

The Delta Alpha class of the First M. E. Sunday school will hold a food sale in the Druse hardware store tomorrow morning.

WANTED!
For the Geisler Farms, BLACK FOX BREEDING STOCK, write H. C. GEISLER, Fulton, N. Y.

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
5c A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

PURE ICE CREAM
"The Only Kind You Ought to Buy or Eat"
WE MAKE AND DELIVER IT
Only Pure Flavors, Fresh Fruits and Heaviest of Cream used. Most Delicious Fountain Drinks
FRESH FRUITS AND HIGH-GRADE CONFECTIONERY
PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

SUMMER CLEARANCE SALE
of New and Slightly Used
PIANOS and PLAYER-PIANOS
at about 1-2 Regular Prices
Included are Two Crane Factory Pianos at $97.50 cash, including Free Stool, Spread and Moving.
SEVERAL GOOD PIANOS—during this Sale from $150 to $350.
SOLD ON TERMS TO SUIT YOU
BOGUE'S 61 East First Street FULTON, N. Y.

THE CITY MARKET
Our Telephone and Delivery Service will save you many steps in this warm weather. We do your order justice, too. Phone us! Phone 42.
FRESH MEATS POULTRY FISH
VEGETABLES—everything in season.
TABLE DELICACIES—Only the Best of Everything
H. C. DANN

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 155 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1915 | Price One Cent

RUSSIANS REPORT GERMAN LOSS IS 150,000 IN GALICIA

Paris, June 19.—French troops, according to this afternoon's German official report, have penetrated the German lines at three points in the Arras sector and have taken a section of German trenches north of Lorette Hills. The German report adds that north of the La Bassee Canal the French suffered another defeat and that nearly all of the attacking force was destroyed. The French penetrated the German outer lines east of Angres, south of Souchez and north of Ecurie.

The report says that around Metzeral, in Alsace, fihting continues. In the eastern theatre of war the Russians were repulsed in attacks on the Dwina river lline; in the north, in Poland, they were forced back toward the Tanew river, and in Gallicia it is claimed that the Russians have been driven back to fortified positions in the Grodek region. There is no change along the Dneister.

While the Austro-German forces continued today their tremendous drive against the Russians from the San river lline, with the taking of Lemberg as the immediate objective, the Russian Staff reports that the Russians have pulled their forces together further to the southeast along the Dniester river and checked the Austro-German advance between the Tismenica and Stryj rivers. In a battle above Juravno (Zurawno) the Russians report tafing 8544 men, 202 officers, six guns, twenty-one machine guns and much ammunition. tI is also reported that German attacks in central Poland, along the Bzura river front, have been repulsed.

Revised reports from Karlsruhe say that eighty-nine perrsons were killed by the Allies' air raid and 100 houses were damaged.

The Italian staff reports that small encounters are taking place along the Trent and Tyrolese frontiers, which have resulted in favor of the Italians. A detachment of Austrians, advancing from Rovereto, in the Adige Valley, was defeated near Zugna. Artillery fighting is stated to be in progress along the Carnia frontier, where colmusns of Austrian troops have been broken up by the Italian guns. Northeast of Monte Nero the Austrians attacked Zakrain with a battalion of Hungarians, which was annihiliated. There is no marked progress shown along the Isonzo river, although the unofficial reports say that the outposts of the Italians are within sight of Trieste, and the fall of Gorz (Gorizia) is imminent.

For a distance of twenty miles in the sector to the north of Arras the French are persistently pushing their attacks, with the purpose of forcing the Germans out of Lens and back of the line of roads that serve as the present system of communication. The heaviest character of artillery bombardment is being used against the German trenches. During twenty-four hours the French expended 300,000 high explosive shells.

FRENCH TROOPS CAPTURE STEINBRUCK IN ALSACE

Paris, June 19.—Further progress has been made by the French in their great drive in Alsace. The capture of Steinbruck was officially announced today.

French airmen attacked Colmar and Gebweiler in Alsace on Thursday. Colmar is a link in the Rhine defences of Germany; Gebweiler is southwest of Colmar, seventeen miles from the Rhine Valley. Pamphlets bearing the following were thrown down: "Alsatians—Italy is helping to crush Germany, Long live France and Alsace."

In the Vosges, Altenhof, a suburb of Metzeral, on the River Fecht, has been captured. Metzeral itself has been set on fire by the Germans and is burning. Steinbruck, a little to the north of Metzeral, has fallen into French hands after a furious assault.

In the north between Souchez and Neuville, the fighting has been even more furious. On this front the Germans have arrayed an army of 200,000 men, with heavy reserves in the rear, and they drove forward against the French in a desperate effort to regain the ground los there during the last few weeks.

Repeated attacks were hurled back by the French forces, who, striking quickly while the Germans where in confusion, pressed forward, making important gains on three sides of Souchez, where the Germans are resisting between flooded moats and advancing in three directions from Neuville. The French batteries, during the fierce battle of the last twenty-four hours, fired nearly 300,000 shells.

The death toll in the face of such artillery work has of necessity been very large. The War Office admits that the French losses have been serious. It asserts, however, that the German casualities have been greater. The morale of the French troops is said to be excellent.

More than 1000 German prisoners have been made during this [illegible]—600 on the Souchez-Neuville front and 500 in the Vosges. [illegible] made of the number of dead and wounded.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 6

Because Your Friends Are in Business in Fulton, and You Want to See Your Friends Succeed

It is said that there have been higher and more beautiful sentiments expressed by great poets, by great leaders of men, and by great women on friendship than on any other human sentiment, activity or ideal. Pity the man who having friends is not a true friend. Every man wishes his friend to succeed. Good wishes in themselves are very like good intentions. Action is better than talk. It is easy to wish our friends well; it is hard to make practical application of good wishes in action. The merchant depends upon his customer, and the good wishes for the success of a merchant-friend can be practically applied by supporting him with your trade. It is mighty defective well wishing to pat a friend on the back and shout "Good luck, old man," and then to open your pocketbook in a store of a merchant in another city.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Petition Circulated Opposing Street Widening Project

The question of widening 1st st. between Rochester st. and Broadway at the same time that the paving work is done is causing a great deal of discussion among residents of the city, both those who reside on the stretch in question and other taxpayers who live further out. A. Bristol, one of the property owners along the street was circulating a petition today not only among the residents along the street but among the taxpayers at large, protesting against the widening of the thoroughfare. Mr. Bristol argues that the work will really cost the city $10,000 additional before it is completed and the street is wide enough at present. And again, Mr. Bristol claims, if the city wishes to widen the street five years from now, it can be done then just as cheaply as at present. The city does not justify a wider street now, and will not for some time, according to Mr. Bristol.

Several signatures have been affixed to the petition, but there are some property owners along the street who do not agree with Mr. Bristol's views. These men say the street should be widened at once, and the amount due from the property holders paid immediately which will preclude a repetition of the "maceing" process some years from now. At present the property owners will be assessed amounts ranging from $50 to $200 for the work, and some are in favor of paying the entire amount now and having the job a thorough one. The majority of the property holders along 1st st. have signed the petition however, for various reasons. Some object to the removal of the beautiful trees which will be necessary if the street is made three feet wider. Others object to the cost of the improvement.

The Paving Board will convene Monday night at the City Hall, at which time the question will be decided. Commissioners Garret and Stevenson of the Paving Board are in favor of making the street wider. Commissioners Mason and Gage object to the action. The vote of Commissioner Wiltsie will decide the question and the meeting Monday will no doubt attract many taxpayers.

RUMORS AND THEN SOME ARMS PLANT RUMORS

When topics for conversation are lagging behind a stir can be created at the sight of strangers in company with a member or members of the Hunter Arms Company. Yesterday was no exception to the rule, for immediately upon the appearance on the streets of two strangers walking with William Hunter and other officers of the Hunter Arms, there arose rumors to the effect that the men were purchasing agents for a large company in Connecticut. The company officials have [illegible] statement bearing upon the [illegible] visit.

Villa-Zapataist's Convention Warns President Wilson

Washington, June 19.—President Chazaro, of the Villa-Zapata convention government in Mexico City, in a formal reply to President Wilson's note to Mexican leaders, today agrees to the conciliatory stand taken by General Villa, but warns the United States against intervention.

He points out that President Wilson in his statement expressly disclaims any wish to intervene and that in his Indianapolis speech he pledged non-intervention, and then cites another clause in the President's note to Mexico which serves warning of possible intervention.

"If, contrary to the interpretation which the convention government in the most friendly sense p ut on the closing part of the address," Chazaro says, "it signifies a denial of sympathy with the revolution and should still further signify a threat, the Mexican convention conscious of its sacrifice, will continue to defend the dignity and rights of the Mexican nation."

General Villa is reported to be retreating to Torreon, while Constitutionalist troops are attempting to head him off, Consul-General Silliman, at Vera Cruz, advised the State Department. Obregon remains at Legos.

Consul-General Hanna, at Monterey, reported the Villlistas appear to be winning in that region. Fighting continues near the city daily. One Constitutionalist general was reported killed.

Silliman reported the resignation of Rafael Zuberan-Capmany, Minister of Gubernacion and the Minister of Justice in Carranza's cabinet, have been accepted, and further resignations are expected.

General Gonzales has captured Texcoco, fifteen miles from Mexico City, and he expects to occupy the capital today with his Carranzista troops, a cablegram to the Constitutionalist agency have announced.

More than three htousand Indlans, armed and accustomed to guerrillla warfare, have gathered in the mountains near Guaymas, and several attacks have been made upon Americans colonies. To oppose them Admiral Howard has a landing force of less than fifteen hundred men.

The Indians have made a formal declaration of war against the United States, because they claim lands are now occupied by American citizens under deeds and grants issued by Diaz's government.

GERMAN ENVOY VISITS LANSING TO MAKE DENIAL

Washington, June 19.—Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, called on Secretary of State Lansing today and denied published reports that he had "hoxed" the State Department in the matter of sending a special envoy to the Foreign Office in Berlin.

Following the Ambassador's visit the State Department announced that the Ambassador declared he did not know Dr. Alfred Meyer, the person alleged to have been sent home to Germany after a secret mission in this country under cover of the safe conduct issued to Dr. Meyer-Gerhard.

The Ambassador also declared to the Secretary of State that he personally knew that Dr. Meyer-Gerhard had no other business in this country than that of commissioner of the German Red Cross.

The protest against attacks on the Ambassador through the reports on the Gerhard affair, indicated in the telegram received yesterday by the department from the German Embassy at Cedarhurst, L. I., was not emphasized in today's interview.

The Ambassador did complain to the department that part of the American press had attacked him unfairly, and the department indicated its sympathy with him in the absence of proof that the attacks were justified.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Saturday, June 19, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Putting One Over

So W. J. B. says that the note to Berlin was changed after he resigned his job as boss of the State Department.

Well, if it was, doesn't it look as though Woodrow was seeking a chance to hang a quarrel upon the peerless one, and, having succeeded in finding something about which a fight, and a real one, could be started, he put it over, took the resignation and then fixed up the second letter to the boss of the Germans to suit himself?

If the note only dumped W. J. B. in the discard, it was not written in vain. Now that he is out, we believe he will stay so, and later he will have a lot of Democratic company.

Watch for the political gales of the early fall of 1916, and see what the wind will blow out. One of the things will be the hard times which Wilson's tariff has forced upon the U. S. of A. —Yonkers News.

An Era of High Wages

Industrial forecasters are now predicting for the coming summer and fall a scarcity of manual labor beyond precedent. Italy's war with its expected repatriation of thousands of Italian reservists now finding employment in this country, is given as one of the chief reasons for the prediction, and in Pittsburgh, where demand for the kind of labor Italians so liberally supply is particularly large, the pressure is said to be making itself feltalready.

Notwithstanding unwillingness in certain quarters to recognize labor as a commodity subject to market fluctuations, the coming conditions may vary conclusively, and in a way highly advantageous to labor itself, demonstrate its subservience to those laws of supply and demand so imperative in their government of other values. If the shortage in manual labor reaches anything like the extent foreshadowed, wages must inevitably rise to a proportionate level. Indeed it is already predicted that the day laborers will be earning as much as the skilled mechanic before the exceptional conditions are so far removed as to permit a readjustment to normal levels.

Increased development and the use of labor saving mechanical devices may serve to relieve the strain in a measure, but will fall far short of removing it, for coincidently with the indications of labor shortage come from all points of the industrial circumference equally strong assurances of a brisk productive revival. And this is saying nothing of the busy times incident to garnering and moving what promises to be one of the heaviest crops with which the country has ever been blessed. If economic experts are to be believed, the creation of a new record in high wage for day labor is not only pending but pressingly near at hand.—N. Y. Sun.

Foreign Trade

The American is getting to work to grasp foreign trade if it is possible. One of the signs of it is the popular impatience with the shipping law passed by congress which will apparently drive American steamships off the Pacific ocean. Another sign is the sending of letters by the National Marine League, having a headquarters in New York city, to leading firms in that city asking them to become founder members of the League, for the purpose of arousing the entire country to its maritime needs. The letter says:

"Every commercial and financial interest has so direct a personal concern in the rehabilitation of our merchant marine that the acceptance of this invitation should have its place as an item of business expense. Over 90 per cent of our ocean transportation is controlled by foreigners and our foreign commerce is dependent upon and subservient to their convenience and interest.

"The average citizen does not realize the above nor the fact that the expansion of foreign trade means the bringing of new money into the country, making possible the increase of domestic business, with greater opportunities of employment for himself.

"With our form of government it is what the average citizen demands that is accomplished. It is the purpose of the league to arouse the entire country to our maritime needs and to the important economic truth of the necessity of an American merchant marine and its intimate connection with the propserity of the individual. It is for such a campaign that the funds of the league will be used."—Watertown Standard.

THE BAD CITY

Who among the city's ministers will dare henceforth to proclaim from the chimney-pots the wickedness of Fulton; to say to the world that this is the worst place in the State of New York? Surely not as long as John W. Stevenson has the power to wield the pen, or to collect a crowd of auditors. In clarion tones and with a megaphone as long as the circulation figures of a Syracuse newspaper, the effervescent Mr. Stevenson has hurled back the imputation into the teeth of a man who dared to tell his reverend colleagues that Fulton is a bad—very bad place in which to live and raise a family, in the way the family should go.

Now what the public wants to know is where to find the awful wickedness—the sinfulness that is worse than other places that display the white-Hemmed garment, for surely the Rev. Mr. Buck must know whereof he speaks. Since the strains of Mr. Stevenson's voice have died away in the megaphone The Evening Times has made a few investigations, the result being that out of one dozen eggs bought at a store no less than two of them bore evidence of that maturity that knows no respecter of persons or place.

Score one for the minister. Upon making the rounds of the restaurants and eating houses of the city numerous additional points were scored for the man who says Fulton is wickeder than Bowens Corners. The investigation of the eating places developed a condition that must have incited the minister to the riotous way of expressing himself, as it soon became apparent to the investigator that unless the city's Sealer of Weights and Measures takes strenuous measures to compel the proprietors of the places to increase the size of the cuts of pie they serve to their trade the city's reputation must suffer. It is not so much a case of the cuts of pie being too small as it is that they are not uniform. It is apparent that Mr. Stevenson has overlooked one or two points of the city's wickedness. The Evening Times and the Rev. Mr. Buck have not.

KICKING NEW YORK AROUND

Ex-Senator Brackett's proposal to abolish the state census is sound and sensible. It is a measure of economy and good administration. It is, therefore, a pity that it is tied up with an attempt to limit New York city's legislative representation, by constitutional provisions, to not more than half the membership of the Senate and not more than half the membership of the Assembly. That is unfair and improper to the highest degree.

Far more equitable is a proposal submitted by ex-Justice O'Brien that legislators be selected strictly on a basis of voting population. The total vote cast in the 23d Assembly District of New York County last fall was 23,903; the total vote in Schuyler County was 3,256. Each political unit, on those votes recorded, was represented by one Assemblyman. One voter in Schuyler County was as good as seven voters on Washington Heights. That is distinctly not democracy, even though the system which permits it has the form and organization of democracy.

So long as such conditions exist, so long will the taxpayers of New York city be victimized as they are victimized at present. It may be that they will have to submit for a while longer to the present discriminations against them, but it is absurd for Senator Brackett or any other member of the Constitutional Convention to dream that they will give their votes to a new constitution containing even greater discriminations against them.—N. Y. Tribune.

STEEL CORPORATION TO HAVE NEW PLANT

As an outcome of the unusal situation in the market for zinc and sulphurci acid incidental to the European war, the United States Steel Corporation has made arrangements to build a new plant in the Pittsburgh district.

In the last few months there has been a tremendous advance in the prices of spelter and zinc beacuse of the great demand growing out of the orders received from European countries. Spelter yesterday was quoted around twenty cents a pound, as compared with about five cents a pound at the beginning of the war.

Because of the advance in the price of zinc, which is required in the manufacture of galvanized products, the market for the latter has been demoralized to a large extent, and it was reported in the financial districts yesterday that some manufacturers of galvanized products were considering the closing of their plants. Prices of galvanized manufacturers have advanced almost as sharply as the price of zinc.

A large part of the Steel Corporation's business calls for galvanized products. Much of the barbed wire bought for foreign account is galvanized, and some of the large orders for this wire were placed with the American Steel and Wire Company, a subsidiary of the Steel Corporation.

A. W. WILTSIE, HONEST

Yesterday's Evening Times contained on its first page the rather unusual feature of a public official asking for approbation or disapproval of the plan to widen East First street, between Rochester and Broadway. While unusual who can say that Mr. Wiltsie erred in his judgment, by asking the taxpayers of the city to voice their opinion of the wisdom of at this time entering into an arrangement that will if carried to a conclusion involve the city in an expense that cannot be measured by as many as four figures.

Admitting that East First street within the territory prescribed for widening is too narrow in some respects, it is apparent to a majority of the people that now is a most inopportune time to take up a burden such as would be imposed upon the taxpayers who must bear the expense of adding three feet only to the width of the street, which is really not too narrow to accommodate for several years the natural increase of traffic. Then there is the element of shade trees. While of course progress demands that many of the beauties of Nature must be sacrificed in the name of business, it is a little too soon for us to become alarmed lest East First street appear too narrow to accommodate the present amount of traffic and the natural increase to come in the next few years. Without a doubt all streets should be broad enough to lend to their artistic appearance and to make them safe beyond all doubt, but a rapid pace has been set in spending money upon street improvements and in the meantime nothing practical has been done to provide sewers for those taxpayers who are unfortunately for themselves and their interests compelled to live in streets that are not known as the everyday arteries of traffic.

Mr. Wiltsie is to be commended for his honesty of purpose and every taxpayer should at once send his or her protest to the expenditure of a large sum of money for a proposition that does not now loom up as one of the city's leading demands.

The Board of Public Works will meet Monday night to vote upon the widening of East First street between Rochester and Broadway. Quick action is needed, therefore, get busy—the Board needs your opinion as a guidance.

W. C. T. U.

Edited by Women of Fulton Union

The 200 acre farm set apart at Knoxville, Iowa, for the treatment of the finished product of the saloons is reported by the board of control to be worth, with the buildings, $165,635.85. During the biennial period of 1913-14 there were 585 patients committed to the hospital for inebriates, costing the taxpayers $102,765.94 for maintenance alone.

* * *

Mrs. Nellie G. Burger, president of the Missouri W.C.T.U., who attended the recent session of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs at St. Joseph, writes that the federation endorsed statewide and nationwide prohibition and woman suffrage, and prolonged applause greeted both resolutions. The Missouri W. C. T. U. and the Missouri Suffrage Association have jointly launched the campaign for suffrage in 1916 and plans for active work are well under way.

* * *

Truly the temperance forces believe in the conservation of youth these days as a most valuable asset in the campaign for National Prohibition. This is evidenced by the Prohibition Leagues now being organized throughout the State of Oklahoma by the State Prohibition Association. Students of the Muskogee high school to the number of 254 joined such a league recently and similar societies have been organized in Oklahoma City and Tulsa. The league is educational in its aim and both boys and girls are eligible to membership. A traveling secretary has been elected in Oklahoma and the work will doubtless spread to other states.

* * *

An engineer gave his little girl a small red flag to play with, and explained that on the road the red flag signifies danger. "Would you stop your train if you saw a red flag on the track?" she asked. "Yes," he said, "or there might be an accident." After her papa had left, the little girl thought of what she might do to help, and at last she thought of the red flag, and what her papa had told her it stands for. Going to the sideboard, she firmly fastened the flag to the decanter, and then went to bed satisfied. The father came home, went to the sideboard for the usual nightcap, but saw the flag and understood and heeded the warning.—Selected.

* * *

Governor Hatfield of West Virginia in discussing the condition of his state under the new prohibition law says that the working men appear on Monday morning following a payday with clear heads where before if they went to work at all on Monday morning, a great many of them went in a semi-stupid condition which was the result of Saturday's dissipation. Practically all this has been eliminated There is no question but what the economic value of the laboring man has increased and that the overdraft, that was so vexatious to both the employer and the employe at the end of the month, has practically disappeared. All of these results for the men who toil are in favor of the families who are dependent upon them. Mortalities from accidents, as well as violations of the law and commitments to insane asylums, will be materially reduced, which will lessen court procedure, and lessen the number of inmates in our prisons. This will work to the relief of our tax-payers and will guarantee a higher standard of citizenship from every point of view.

CORRECT SPELLING NOT TOO COMMON

Correct spelling and good English are not always the accomplishments of a college student or even of a college graduate, claims a writer in "The Boston Globe." The Havard authorities think that they ought to be, for the examination officials and teachers are much distressed over the fact that the boys whose writings are submitted are often ignorant of the fundamental principles of spelling and grammar.

Dean Briggs, himself one of the finest writers at the university, says, in writing of the matter: "We all live in glass houses. Until the written and spoken English of college officials throughout the country is better than it is now the English used by many worthy boys in an examination will never be 'correct, coherent and idiomatic,' in any strict sense of these words. We all live in glass houses; yet we must accept the duty and take the risk of throwing stones."

Evidently Professor Briggs is not one who will enforce the new rules any man with a good head whose failings in English are native. In excuse without a wide leniency in favor of for faulty spelling he writes:

"Spelling is an accomplishment the lack of which is still—or still should be—a disgrace; but many good and great men have lacked it; and since the spelling book has ceased to be in daily and universal use at school the proportion of intellectual persons who, cannot spell appears to have increased.

"One of the world's greatest scholars in his own department habitually in college spelled 'speech' with an 'a,' and wrote themes about 'Thackery' and 'Scot.' One of the best loved professors in America spelled 'usually and similar words with one 'l', and 'niche,' 'nitch.' Another college professor, who more than justified his academic training, wrote 'purgerer, for 'perjurer' in his junior year.

"We must face the fact that bad spellers may be good writers. In a certain college course in English composition the man who was recognized as the ablest writer of the class was quite capable of writing 'Satin' for 'Satan' and of spelling other words to match. In the grammar school his writing might have been marked zero; in college it was justly marked 'A.'

Long ago some university professor said to be President Eliot, produced a test sentence that would serve as an examination in spelling for old Noah Webster himself: "It is amusing to view the unparalleled embarrassment of a harassed pedler or saddler, sitting on a cemetery wall viewing the symmetry of a peeled potato, pomegranate or persimmon."

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

UPTODATE LAUNDERING
Gloss and Domestic Finish
Our Laundry is equipped with modern machinery.
F. J. TAYLOR
Second St. Phone 289

THEY LACE IN FRONT
To know them is to love them.
GOSSARD CORSETS
Sold and fitted at
DIX MILLINERY STORE

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4044
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Can you tell me the proper way to tin a new soldering iron and other general information in connection with the work of soldering?

File the iron perfectly smooth and heat it just enough to melt solder easily. Then dip it into a strong solution of salammoniac for an instant. Finally rub it into a stick of solder and then distribute the solder adhering to the iron by rubbing with a piece of cotton waste. When this is done the iron is ready for service and will not require retinning unless it is burned.

Can you give me an idea of the chemical equation which takes place when exploding a proper mixture of gasoline and air? In what way do the end products differ from those of a mixture of kerosene with air and water?

If the gasoline in an explosion in an internal combustion engine is burned completely the resulting gases would be water and carbon dioxide. However, this condition rarely exists, as there are always some unburned gases in the exhaust of an engine. The end products from a gasoline engine do not differ from those of a kerosene engine when complete combustion takes place.

My car begins to lag when about half way up a hill. Does the slanting position of the car interfere with a proper supply of gasoline to the carburetor?

It is not likely that your trouble is due to the position of the tank, but it is probably caused by dirt in the feed pipe. The dirt does not prevent the flow entirely, but reduces it so that not enough gasoline is supplied to the float chamber to satisfy the extra demand put upon the car when it is climbing a hill. Disconnect the feed pipe at the carburetor and note whether the flow is free; if not, remove the pipe and clean it with a wire. If the trouble still persists adjust the carburetor to give a richer mixture. The gasoline flow, due to the low position of the tank, should not be affected except on a steep hill. If you feel, however, that the flow is not sufficient you might install a tank holding about a pint directly in front and slightly above the carburetor. This tank is merely connected in the line, has no valves and is only a reservoir, but with sufficient capacity to carry the car over the longest hills, even though the supply of fuel were cut off.

Can you give me some information as to automobile valve timing?

The timing of a motor depends on whether the greatest torque or twisting effort is wanted at low or high speeds and whether it is desirable to have a silent motor. For instance, if a motor with a particularly good torque at low speed is wanted, then the exhaust opening should be delayed more than usual so that the expansive force of the gas will be exerted to the utmost. On the other hand, if the motor is to develop a maximum torque at a high speed it is better to open the exhaust valve earlier so as to give the gas plenty of time to flow out. The reduction in back pressure due to this more than compensates for the small amount of expansive energy that is thus thrown away.

Exhaust closure should occur at dead center or slightly after. On a slow speed motor it would be all right to close the exhaust valve right on dead center, but if this were done on a motor that had a maximum speed of say 2,000 revolutions or more the scavenging of the cylinder would not be as complete as if the closing were delayed a few degrees. The reason for this is simple. When the gas is flowing out through the exhaust valve at the high speed that is obtained when the motor is running at this rate it has a perceptible amount of momentum, although its actual mass is very small. Therefore the tendency is for the column of gas to keep on flowing when the piston reaches upper dead center. This action naturally helps to suck out a little gas after the piston has ceased to force it out.

The opening of the inlet valve should take place shortly after the exhaust valve closes, its exact point of opening depending on whether the designer considers it best to begin to fill the cylinder with a rush. In the former case the valve is made to open at about top dead center, and in the latter case the opening is delayed possibly as much as twenty degrees. If the opening is delayed a partial vacuum is formed in the cylinder, due to the fact that the piston moves out and expands the gas below atmosphere. Then when the inlet valve is finally opened the charge rushes in to fill this vacuum. This action is believed to give better carburetion by a great many designers. The closing of the intake valve, just as in the case of the exhaust, depends on the speed of the motor. If the momentum of the column of inrushing gas is to be considered then the opening is delayed so that the gas, instead of instantly stopping its flow when the piston reaches bottom center, keeps on flowing, due to its inertia, and in this way crowds in a bigger charge. If a good power output at high speed is to be obtained then the closure of the intake must be delayed a few degrees.

UNDERTAKERS

YOUNG & HILL. Open day and night at 117 Oneida. Phone 2172.

Here are a few simple things so badly needed that the Scientific American calls upon inventors to get busy and invent them:

A ticket holder for holding the price and lot tickets to a coat or other garment, which ticket can be easily applied and removed and another inserted, all without mutilation or other injury to the garment.

The lower berth in a sleeping car is stuffy with the windows closed, and if you open the window the cold air is directly on you. It is thought that the riding public would appreciate some deflector or diffusing construction which could be applied to the open window over the usual short hinged screen and permit the entry of fresh air, at the same time preventing it from blowing directly on the passenger in the berth.

Some means for effectively preventing the mirror effect in show windows, the effect we all notice in passing such a window in which our image is reflected and the contents of the window are shut out of view. Naturally, the shopkeeper who works for a display in his window resents it not being seen.

President Wilson, who is an ardent golfer and also dependent on his eyeglasses, is reported as saying that he cannot play the game in the rain because of the accumulation of moisture on his glasses, which leads to the suggestion that specially devised glasses or some treatment of the ordinary lens may solve the problem.

Mexican Military Coin.

Every Mexican commandant drives dull care away by manufacturing his own currency, thus enabling his army to live honestly and to pay as it goes. To be sure, arguments sometimes have to be used to circulate a new brand of paper and ink, but an argument a la Mauser is indeed unanswerable. A recent happy thought in high financial circles is to issue so called money about the size of a subway ticket, but which has a time limit. This has the effect of keeping the peons hustling to get rid of it before its value disappears, which is a day or two before the time at which it would naturally wear out. — Engineering and Mining Journal.

Celluloid Watch Crystals.

At the outbreak of the war American watchmakers were much concerned regarding the watch crystal situation, the German source of supply being shut off and previous attempts to make them in this country having failed. Watch crystals of glass are now being made here successfully, and an American inventor has helped the matter along by devising a celluloid watch crystal, which has the beveled edge and general appearance of a glass crystal and possesses the additional advantage of being unbreakable.—Every Week.

The Warring Nations.

There are now eleven nations at war, with the prospect of two or three more being added. Ten languages are involved—English, French, Russian, Italian, German, Hungarian, Turkish, Japanese, Polish and Walloon—to say nothing of several sublanguages.—New York-American.

Strawberry Byproducts.

Each year thousands of bushels of strawberries go to waste because of low prices or some adverse condition. The department of agriculture has therefore prepared bulletins on the manufacture of berry byproducts, which should prove a help in saving this waste.

The Wire a Big Gun Takes.

Experts announce that around the vital tubes of the newest naval gun, such as England's largest warship, the Queen Elizabeth, is equipped with, are wound no less than 192 miles of flattened steel wire.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Babies In Hot Weather.

A baby must be kept as cool as possible in summer, because overheating is a direct cause of summer diarrhea. Even breast fed babies find it hard to resist the weakening effects of excessive heat. Records show that thousands of babies, most of whom are bottle fed, die every year in July and August, because of the direct or indirect effects of the heat. Next in importance to right food in summer are measures for keeping the baby cool and comfortable; frequent baths, light clothing and the selection of the coolest available place for him to play and sleep.

The essentials in the summer care of babies are:

Proper food, given only at regular intervals.

A clean body.

Fresh air day and night.

Very little clothing.

Cool places to play and sleep in.

Do not give the baby medicine of any sort unless it is ordered by the doctor.

Do not fail to give the baby a drink of cool water several times a day in hot weather. Boil the water first, then cool it and offer it to the baby in a cup, glass or nursing bottle. Babies and young children sometimes suffer cruelly for lack of drinking water.

INVITE THE TOURIST

There is no more attractive ground in the eastern states than the Adirondack Mountains, the great uplands of northern New York, sprinkled with a thousand pretty lakes, most of them connected by cool, sparkling streams. Better still, from the standpoint of the motorist, long stretches of good roads are being built into the wilderness from the principal directions, so that now the tourist running east or west across New York State between Albany and Buffalo, north or south between New York and Montreal, or diagonally across the northern section of the state between upper Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence river, has a choice of ways into a region that should—and shortly will—rank with the White Mountains as a popular motoring rendezvous.

* * *

Motorists interested in touring through northern New York will find the principal routes into and through the Adirondacks, and back into any of the main lines, in Volume 1 of the Automobile Blue Books, covering New York State and Canada, with connections into the adjoining states. Supplementary information, including specific data on current road conditions, can be had at any one of the New York State Motor Federation touring bureaus, or from the headquarters of that Federation, at Utica, N.Y.

* * *

From Hudson River points, western Connecticut and the Berkshires, the principal gateways to the Adirondacks are Albany, Troy, Schenectady, the routes through each of these cities converging at Saratoga Springs, and dividing again into a choice of two popular ways to Lake George, the "Horicon" of Cooper's famous story, "Last of the Mohicans," one via Corinth and Luzerne and the other through Glens Falls. From Lake George north, the main Adirondack route turns north and northwest through Warrensburg and past Schroon Lake to Elizabethtown, with intermediate branch roads to Blue Mountain Lake and Long Lake; though it is perfectly feasible to go up along part of Lake George to Ticonderoga, Crown Point, Port Henry and Westport, especially for variety in making ound trips. Elizabethtown is the principal gateway to the Lake Placid-Saranac Lake-Paul Smith's district, often considred the heart of the Adirondacks.

* * *

Additional lines come into that section also from Keaseville, Plattsburg, Malone and Potsdam, making short and easy connections from Canada, the St. Lawrence River and Thousand Island points. As yet there is no good road into the mountains east from Watertown, but from Utica and Rome there has been opened up within the past year an all-macadam route through Remsen and Forestport past White Lake and Otter Lake to McKeever, Old Forge and the Fulton Chain of Lakes, providing an excellent highway to the Adirondack League Club Preserve, and a fair road as far east as Eagle Bay and Inlet, or north by a branch road from near Eagle Bay to Big Moose. While it is not yet possible to use this route as a short-cut from Utica or west to Saranac Lake and Lake Placid, it provides one of the most inviting short runs in the State, and is a specially popular side-trip from the main route east and west through the Mohawk Valley.

* * *

A tour may be planned into the Adirondacks one way, and usually out by quite another route, adding a pleasing variety to the round trip. At times, too, it is worth while to leave the machine at some convenient place and go by boat along or across some of the inland lakes; or even make a pedestrian trip over one or more of the many trials. Excellent hotel and garage accommodations will be found throughout that region.

$1500 AWARDED BOY FOR LOSS OF MOTHER

"One thousand five hundred dollars is not an excessive award to a sixteen-year-old boy for the loss of his mother," the Supreme Court of New Jersey decided yesterday in an appeal of the case of Lorenzo A. Adams against the West Jersey & Seashore Railroad.

The boy's mother was killed by a train.

You can get Black's baked products at the right hour for meals. They are at your grocer's, fresh every afternoon. adv.

WILL DESTROY FIGHT FILMS

New York.—Following his decision that the Ritchie-Welsh championship contest, which took place in London, was a pugilistic encounter, Judge Hough, in an order filed in the Federal District Court, ordered the condemnation and destruction of the 3542 feet of moving picture film, the importation of which was held bp by the customs authorities.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at St. Louis.
New York at Pittsburgh.
Brooklyn at Chicago.
Philadelphia at Cincinnati.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 7; New York, 5.
St. Louis, 3; Boston, 2.
Other games postponed; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	28	21	.571
Philadelphia	27	22	.551
St. Louis	30	26	.536
Pittsburgh	24	25	.490
Boston	24	26	.480
Brooklyn	24	27	.471
New York	21	25	.457
Cincinnati	20	26	.435

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Boston.
Chicago at Philadelphia.
Cleveland at New York.
Detroit at Washington.

Results Yesterday

Chicago, 11; Philadelphia, 4.
Detroit, 5; Washingtong, 3.
Boston, 3; St. Louis, 1.
Cleveland at New York; advanced.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	34	20	.630
Boston	28	18	.609
Detroit	34	22	.607
New York	26	23	.531
Washington	23	24	.489
Cleveland	20	29	.408
ClevelandSHRDLUU	NUNUNUNU
Philadelphia	19	33	..365
St. Louis	19	34	.358

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Brooklyn.
Chicago at Baltimore.
Pittsburgh at Newark.
Kansas City at Buffalo.

Results Yesterday

Baltimore, 17; Kansas City, 10.
St. Louis, 12; Newark, 2.
Chicago, 8; Buffalo,p 0.
Pittsburgh, 9; Brooklyn, 4.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	34	22	.607
St. Louis	29	21	.586
Pittsburgh	28	23	.549
Chicago	30	26	.536
Brooklyn	28	26	.519
Newark	26	27	.491
Baltimore	20	32	.385
Buffalo	20	38	.345

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Troy at Syracuse.
Albany at Utica.
Elmira at Wilkesbarre.
Binghamton at Scranton.

Results Yesterday

Syracuse, 5; Troy, 1; 1st game.
Troy, 4; Syracuse, 1; 2d game.
Elmira, 4; Wilkesbarre, 0.
Utica, 4; Albany, 3.
Scranton, 7; Binghamton, 6.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Elmira	24	15	.615
Utica	22	14	.611
Binghamton	19	17	.528
Troy	18	17	514
Scranton	18	18	.500
Wilkesbarre	17	21	.447
Albany	15	22	.405
Syracuse	14	23	.378
Syracuse	13	22	.371

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Buffalo at Toronto.
Rochester at Montreal.
Newark at Richmond.
Jersey City at Providence.

Results Yesterday

Providence, 5; Jersey City, 0.
Montreal, 4; Rochester, 1.
Toronto, 4; Buffalo, 2.
Newark, 4; Richmond, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Providence	25	17	.595
Buffalo	22	16	.579
Rochester	23	20	.535
Montreal	23	22	.511
Richmond	22	22	.500
Toronto	21	24	.467
Newark	19	26	.463
Jersey City	16	28	.364

Billiard Room

The Coolest and the Best Equipped.

The only Billiard Table in the City

G. J. POWELL, Mgr.

PHONE 560 QUIRK THEATRE BLDG.

SUSPICION JUSTIFIED.

It Was Not a Mouse the Master Heard In the Kitchen.

The late Rev. Dr. Wightman, sitting one night later than usual engrossed in the profundities of a great tome, imagined he heard a sound in the kitchen inconsistent with the cautiousness of a mouse; so, taking his candle, he proceeded to investigate the cause. His foot being heard in the passage, the servant began with much noise to rake out the fire as if preparing for bed.

"Ye're up late tonight, Mary."

"I'm jist rakin' the fire, sir, and gaun to bed."

"That's right, Mary. I like timely hours."

On his way back to the study he passed the coal cellar door and, turning the key, took it with him. The next morning at an early hour there was a rap at his bedroom door and a request for the key to get some coal.

"Ye're up too soon, Mary. Go back to your bed."

Half an hour later there was another knock and a similar request, in order to prepare for breakfast. "I don't want breakfast so soon, Mary. Go back to your bed."

In another half hour there was another knock, with an entreaty for the key, as it was washing day.

This was enough. He rose and handed out the key, saying, "Go and let the man out." As the preacher shrewdly suspected, Mary's sweetheart had been imprisoned all night in the coal cellar. —London Mail.

The Way to Win Her

To win a maid who has not reached
The knowing age of twenty,
Just make her verses to her charms
And rub it in quite plenty.
Make her lots of little things,
And don't omit the "honey."
But after she has reached that age,
You've got to make her money!
—Judge.

The Movie Craze.

"So you've just come from church. How long was the sermon?"

"I should say about six reels."—Wisconsin State Journal.

What Is It?

If a poem's a poem,
And rhythm is rima,
And both of them fill you with bliss;
If prose is just prose,
And a plot means a tale,
Can any one tell "what is this?"
—Pittsburgh Press.

His Standard.

City Nephew—So you didn't like the milkmaid chorus in that musical comedy I took you to?

Uncle Eben—No. According to my country ideas, George, the milkmaid ought at least to wear more clothes than the cow.—Puck.

The Fool of Fools.

Some persons marry on railroad trains,
And some atop a skyscraping peak,
But most foolish and brave are those Who marry on seven dollars a week.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Way of the Cartoonist.

A correspondent notes our inquiry as to why a newspaper artist couldn't make a box without printing "soap" on it. He adds a few inquiries of his own, to wit: "Why can't a cartoonist draw a barber without a comb stuck in his hair?" And "Do all drunks hold themselves up by means of lamp posts?" Also, "Why does a cartoonist always depict himself as wearing a flowing black windsor tie?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Education Handicapped.

"How's your son getting on in college?"

"Not at all well. Every time there are two men on bases and it's his turn to bat they bench him and give a pinch hitter a chance."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

	R.	H.	E.
At Louisville—
Cleveland	2	10	1
Louisville	5	7	0
At Kansas City—	9	13	0
Kansas City	2	5	2

St. Paul-Milwaukee; rain.
Columbus at Indianapolis—no game

D/34

On These Warm Days

TRY SOME OF OUR FAMOUS ICE CREAMS

French Chocolate, French Maple Walnut
French Cherry French Vanilla

40c the Quart

Delivered to you promptly at any hour of the day or night.
TELEPHONE 3128

ROBERTS & WOOD

Pulpit and Pew

Zion Episcopal Church

Rev. Minot J. Peters, Rector

Sunday, June 20, third Sunday after Trinity. Services as follows:
Holy Communion......... 7:30 a.m.
Sunday school............ 9:30 a.m.
Matins and sermon........10:45 a.m.
Evensong and sermon..... 7.30 a.m.

Christian Science

35 E. First Street.

Christian Science services held on Sunday at 10:45 a.m. and at 8 p.m. Wednesday, in the VanWagenen block. Mrs. H. A. Allen, first reader; Mrs. Noah Merriam, second reader. You will be welcome and interested to attend one or both services.

The subject for next Sunday is: "Is the Universe. Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" Golden Text: Psalms 21; 13. Responsive reading: Psalms 104: 1-3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 13, 14, 23, 24, 31.

Presbyterian Church

Charles S. Robertson, Pastor

Morning prayer at 10, led by Mr. William Hunter.

The annual Children's Day exercises by the Sunday school at 10:30, when a special program will be given. There will also be baptism of children.

As usual, there will be no session of the school following the children's exercises.

At five o'clock vespers, the pastor will preach on the theme, "The King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

State St. M. E. Church

Rev. H. D. Holmes, Pastor

Tomorrow morning will be observed by the Home Department of the Sunday school, and the pastor will preach at 10.30, taking for his theme, "The Worker and His Work."

No evening services will be held. but in the interim the Sunday school will meet at 12 noon, and the Junior League at 3.30 p.m. The congregation will attend the unions services in the evening at the Baptist church where the Rev. M. G. Buck. will preach the annual baccalaureate sermon.

First Baptist Church

Milton George Buck, Minister

The annual baccalaureate sermon will be preached in this church tomorrow evening before the graduating class of the high school by the pastor, subject "Wisdom."

The services for Sunday are as follows:

Morning worship, 10.30, subject of sermon, "As His Custom Was."

Bible school 12 m.

There will be no Christian Endeavor at night.

Evening worship at 7.30.

There is no place on earth where people can get the things that are most necessary for the building of a character that is above reproach like the church. The Master said, "Forget not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is." So if you want influenee and live a life that is helpful to the utmost attend church, assist in the service and live according to the teachings of the Bible. The Bible is taught in the simplest manner possible at the Baptist church, the "Church of Cordial Welcome." Strangers welcomed. People without a church home made welcome. All come and enjoy yourselves.

Free Methodist Church

Rev. C. C. Watson, Pastor.

Children's Day will be observed tomorrow at this church, at 10.30 a.m., when the pastor will make an address at the close of the preaching services.

In the evening Mr. Watson will take for his subject, "Life of the Soul."

First Congregational Church

Charles Olmstead, Pastor.

At the morning service next Sunday the sermon theme will be, "The Place of Self-Conceit." The Christian Endeavor meeting will be at 6 p.m. to enable the members to attend the union services with sermon to the graduating class of the high school.

Circle No. 3 was entertained yesterday at the home of Mrs. Harry Alexander.

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Tallman and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Randall and son Herman were guests yesterday of Mrs. Bradley at the Bradley camp, Phoenix, in celebration of the latter's birthday. An appetizing luncheon was served on the lawn and altogether a happy time was enjoyed.

* * *

Herman S. Randall spent yesterday at the reception and recital given by Professor Eltinge, in Syracuse.

* * *

Miss Nancy Cook is remaining in the city to supervise the building of tables to be used in increasing the efficiency and facilities of the arts department of the public schools.

* * *

Mrs. Fred Smith and son Homer returned to their home in this city Thursday night. Homer was recently operated upon in New York. He will remain in Fulton for the summer months.

* * *

Mrs. George Stevenson of Syracuse is in the city visiting relatives.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Garrett entertained a party of friends with a delightful auto trip Friday evening.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Olmstead attended the post-commencement luncheon of the Syracuse Smith Club, held at the Onondaga Golf clubhouse on rFiday.

* * *

Ward Southard, who has been seriously ill with blood poisoning, is recovering.

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

HOW A CHECK SAVED OVERPAYMENT

Because he paid by check, a man was saved from paying a bill the second time. Upon producing the endorsed check as a voucher, no further questions were asked.

Your checking account is invited.

REGENTS' STANDING
of
FULTON STUDENTS

TRAINING CLASS CERTIFICATES GIVEN

The following members of the Fulton Teachers' Training Class successfully completed the State examinations this week and by so doing are entitled to State Training Class certificates. Their standings were as follows:

Margaret Barnes—History, 75; English, 75; arithmetic, 97; school law, 76; geography, 80; physiology, 80; nature study, 80.

Helen Clark—History, 80; English, 75; school law, 79; geography, 79; physiology, 84; nature study, 80; psychology, 78; drawing, 77.

Margaret Frawley—English, 82; school law, 87; geography, 82; physiology, 90; nature study, 90.

Eva Rath—English, 83; school law, 92; geography, 90; physiology, 82; nature study, 90.

Ina Stuart—English, 80; school law 76; geography, 92; physiology, 86; nature study, 90; spelling, 72.

Frieda Taft—History, 84; English, 81; school law, 99; geography, 91; physiology, 90; nature study, 92; drawing, 75.

Nina Youmans—History, 90; English, 90; school law, 97; geography, 81; physiology, 90; nature study, 91.

A training class certificate held by a teacher who has taught under it successfully for a period of two years may be renewed for five years without examination.

The Fulton training class is under the instruction of Miss Frances W. Ash and the result of her work is shown by the excellent standings of the graduates.

Indications point to a very strong class when school opens in September.

HIGH SCHOOL

* * *

COM. ENGLISH

Lena Campbell, 76; Leland Carner, 86; Ethel Hewitt, 60; Earl Hopkins, 82; Beatrice Huggins, 60; Harold Pierce, 78; Mae Whitcomb, 82; Muriel Winters, 65.

MECH. DRAWING

Ruth Beels, 90; Fred Eames, 82; Mildred Hart, 77; Fred Johnson, 81; William Miller, 88; Leroy Prevost, 66; Glen Rumsey, 90; Joseph Waldhorn, 82; Leroy Wise, 80.

VIRGIL

E. Austin, 60; M. Clark, 84; F. Follan, 81; M. Gorman, 60; R. King, 68; W. Russell, 65; L. Simons, 65.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR

Evadue Austin, 68; Esther Aylesworth, 82; Marion Brown, 85; Mildred Brown, 88; Charlotte Burnette, 86; Mary Carroll, 84; William Davis, 77; Leonora Eames, 89; Florence Follan, 88; Matthew Frawley, 78; Maizie Gorman, 75; Earl Hopkins, 82; Laura McKenna, 73; Elizabeth Jerett, 82; Fred Johnston, 73; Fred King, 92; Emma Lelande, 78; Genievieve McCormick, 73; Florence Moody, 92; Carolene Pearl, 76; Wilbur Parsons, 92; Harold Pierce, 71; Grace Pitcher, 75; Markey Pullen, 61; Bernard Reswick, 66; Herman Robillard, 82; Elizabeth Royer, 99; Wallace Russell, 80; Kathleen Scanlan, 85; Andrew Sharpe, 89; Marian Shattuck, 75; Lillian Simons, 94; Winifred Stanton, 61; Clara Sylvester, 81; Harold Thompson, 90; Rose Walsh, 78; Herbert Webb, 72; Muriel Winters, 84.

ENGLISH IV.

Earl D. Hopkins, 78; James T. Fairgrieve, 78; Florence Follan, 80; Matthew Frawley, 80; Eliza Hubbard, 77; Rose M. King, 78; Emma Lelande, 80; Fred'k B. Martin, 60; Eryma E. Paige, 76; Lola B. Palmer, 83; Markey Pullen, 60; Bernard S. Reswick, 65; Leland Root, 78; Wallace W. Russell, 61; Fred M. Rust, 62; Lillian Simons, 85; Harold Schulz, 60; Edward K. Sullivan, 65; Katherine Sullivan, 75; Harold Thompson, 80; Lillian Waldhorn, 67; Nicholas L. Wallace, 80; Mary G. Weston, 60.

ENGLISH II.

Agnes Atwood, 64; Zetta Balcocl, 66; Frank Balser, 86; Claude Barser, 70; Marion Barless, 66; Edward Barry 65; Bertha M. Beebe, 67; Clifford Bishop, 73; Margaret Bradley, 71; Natalie Butts, 87; Margaret Byrne, 96; Charles Collins, 93; Catherine Chaysman, 67; Aven Chesbro, 78; Mary Church, 70; Gladys Churchill, 61; Hilda Clark, 79; William Davis, 81; Hadwin Fitch, 76; Alice M. Ford, 73; Mildred Ford, 84; N. B. Frawley, 70; Medora Halstead, 65; Alvin Harris, 66; Cora H. Holly, 75; Henry M. Holly, 79; D. Conrad Hunter, 70; Jos. B. Keenan, 70; Susan Kezar, 66; Elmer LePointe, 63; Ruth Loveland, 75; Lucy McCaffrey, 79; Francis McKenna, 73; K. Mangeot, 66; Fr'cis McKin- 75; J. King Moss, 61; Donald F. O'Brien, 73; Mildred Paige, 60; William Perkins, 70; Maurice Powers, 79; Modena Putnam, 63; Ruth M. Quirk, 87; Emma A. Randall, 67; Reta F. Reynolds, 87; Leah E. Rhodes, 71; Ross Rowlee, 67; H. Glen Rumsey, 85; Ralph W. Seymour, 69; Rachel Tucker, 77; W. Leroy Wise, 79; Sheldon Wood, 71.

MRS. HOWE ENTERTAINED MITE BOX GATHERING

Mrs. J. Harry Howe entertained yesterday afternoon about sixty-five members and friends of the W. H. M. soceity, who held their annual meeting and regular june picnic. June being the mite box month the ladies carrried to the meeting sums aggregating more than $25. The musical features of the afternoon were in charge of Mrs. L. Fowler Joy whose performances were greatly appreciated. "The Red Man as Teacher and Hearer," was the leading topic of discussion. Mrs. Barrett read an article entitled "The First Mite Box Opening." Mrs. J. Harry Howe and Miss Elizabeth Howe gave delightful selections on the piano and violin. Refreshments were served on the lawn and six new members were added to the membership roll.

Hobson Lectures Here Tonight

Richmond Pearson Hobson came to town today and will tonight lecture upon the necessity of attaching an amendment to the constitution that will prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

If Commander Hobson needed further introduction to the people of Fulton than the fact that he is one of the foremost national leaders in the crusade to eliminate the traffic in intoxicants, his attempted bottling up of Cervera's fleet in Santiago harbor by blowing up an old ship, should be sufficient. While that historic event dates back about seventeen years it nevertheless remains quite vivid in the minds of millions of Americans.

Those of the Fulton pastors who succeeded in securing Commander Hobson as the city's star attraction tonight, in the First M. E. church at 8 o'clock, feel that they have accomplished something worth while, and that a crowded church auditorium will in a small measure testify to the people's admiration for the ex-navy man and Congressman from Alabama, whose heart and soul are apparently wrapped up in the temperance cause.

LIQUOR ADS. BARRED BILL POSTER TESTIFIES

Chicago, June 18.—Donald Ross, president of a New York city concern, a member of the Bill Posters' Association, testified in the Government's dissolution suit today that a large portion of his company's business would be discontinued because the association had voted to prohibit several classes of advertising, including intoxicating liquors and some medical advertisements.

A New York distilling concern had offered him a contract to begin January 1, 1916, which would net his company $35,000 a year, Mr. Ross testified, but he had been forced to decline by the ruling of the association.

He testified that there were as many posters in the United States acting independently as there are members of the association, alleged to be a trust.

THE QUIRK TODAY

Theatregoers of only a few years back will remember with pleasure that famous play, "The Span of Life," wherein the three athletes form a human bridge across a chasm and a woman and a child cross in safety; that is the five-reel feature at The Quirk today with Lionel Barrymore in the lead. It is augmented by a Pathe Weekly, No. 46, and "His Friend the Captain. Tomorrow (Sunday) "A Daughter of the People," a five-part drama and other interesting photoplays will be shown, making a very strong program.

SUMMER CLEARANCE SALE

of New and Slightly Used

PIANOS and PLAYER-PIANOS

at about 1-2 Regular Prices

Included are Two Crane Factory Pianos at $97.50 cash, including Free Stool, Spread and Moving.

SEVERAL GOOD PIANOS—during this Sale from $150 to $350.
SOLD ON TERMS TO SUIT YOU

BOGUE'S 61 East First Street FULTON, N. Y.

THIRD DEGREE ASSAULT CASE

Grows Out of Dispute Between a Saloon Patron and a Dispenser of Liquors

John Holtz, of Lyons st., in the employ of Simon LaVelle of East Broadway, was feloniously assaulted last night at 6.30 o'clock as he was on his way home, by Steve Malick, a young Polak, who lives in South 1st st. It is alleged that Malick hit Holtz with brass knuckles, and afterwards threw them away.

Although Malick had not been tried at noon today, owing to the absence of Judge Wilson, it is probable that Malick will either be held for the grand jury or that the case will be compromised. H. L. Gilman, representing Holtz, and James R. Somers, who apepared for Malick, held a conference at the City Hall, and Mr. Somers stated that a comprise might be effected.

From the statement made by Holtz it appears that he was on duty yesterday afternoon when Malick accompanied by seven other young men entered the place and made purchases. Malick paid for some drinks and demanded, according to Holtz, that six drinks be given him for twenty-five cents, which with the other two drinks would total thirty-five cents. Malick claims he was accompanied by only five men and that Holtz was shortchanging him on every drink, giving him only ten cents change from a fifty-cent piece. Mallick, after an altercation with Holtz, left the saloon with the bartender and walked up 1st st. arguing the while that Holtz had not treated him fairly. Finally Malick demanded the change he claims was due him, whereupon Malick claims Holtz hit him twice with his fists. Malick then ran into his home, and reappared with a set of brass knuckles on his hand. He hit Holtz and knocked the man out. Holtz was severelly cut about the lip, and his eye was blackened. Dr. Fox was obliged to take several stitches in the wound.

The assault was witnessed by several people, among them George Newsbaum, a truckman. Malick took to his heels, followed by Newsbaum with his team. While passing the house of Mrs. Curtis Draper at the corner of 3d and State sts., Malick dropped the knuckles in the road and continued his flight. Newsbaum caught him near Mt. Adnah cemetery and throwing the man bodily into his truck, drove him to the police station. Mrs. Draper noticed Malick drop the knuckles and her son picked them up and afterwards delivered them to Chief Dyer.

Malick is charged with assault in the third degree, and his case can be disposed of here. It is probable that some action will be taken today. Malick claims that a roomer in his house gave him the knuckles to keep, and when Holtz struck him that he retaliated. Mallick has been employed on the Walter Bradley contract but was discharged yesterday. He is unmarried.

Residents of upper 1st st. are loud in their praises of the work done by George Newsbaum in arresting Malick, and a petition may be drawn up asking the appointment of Newsbaum as a special officer.

Dental Specialists

DR. F. H. CONKLIN
Prophylactic and Crown and Bridge Work

DR. H. W. WHITNEY
Gold Inlays, Somnoforme (sleep-paper) for painless extraction of teeth.

15 Years Experience

OFFICE HOURS: 8 A. M. to 5 P. M.
OPEN EVENINGS

Over
PATTERSON'S Dept. Store
113 Oneida Street

WANTED!

For the Geisler Farms, BLACK FOX BREEDING STOCK, write H. C. GEISLER, Fulton, N.Y.

STRAWBERRIES

HOME - GROWN

DOLBEAR'S Grocery
51 W. FIRST STREET

Graduation and Wedding Presents

AT VERY LOW PRICES—FOR JUNE

Watches—Elgin, Waltham, Rockford, Hamilton, Howard and others. Wrist Watches, Rings, Diamonds, La-Vallieres, Cut Glass, Silverware.

J. F. BROWN

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

C&B LINE

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"
BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo - - 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland - - 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland - - 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo - - 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 32-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

Lost—Pocketbook, containing change and Elk's pin. Finder can keep change if pin is returned to Times office. 155

For Sale—Grocery store doing good business; will bear investigation. Good reason for selling. Inquire C, Times office. 159c

Competent Cook—Must furnish references. Apply in person to Supt. of Hospital. 155

Furnished Rooms for housekeeping, or by day or week. 205 Cayuga st. 161c

For Sale—Five White Leghorn hens, good layers; cheap if taken at once. Phone 1511. 157c

Tenement House to Rent—Pine st.; $10 month. Inquire H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf

Teamster Wanted—Sober and honest. S. Ehrman, R. D. 8, Fulton. 155

Work Wanted—A few ironings to do. Address K., Times office. 156c

Furnished Rooms for light housekeeping. Inquire 512 S. 1st st. 156c

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

Cahill's Perfection Bread is the

BEST BREAD MADE

TRY A LOAF—Sold only at

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Steer this way for the Insurance that spells peace of mind—our Automobile Accident and Liability Insurance.

The accident that generally occurs is the unavoidable one—but that does not stop the "hold up" suit that costs money to defend against—BUT our insurance protects you against property and personal damages and the company fights the case.

See us today for rates.

DAVID & MASON AGENCY
35 N. FIRST STREET

THREE BROTHERS IN THE TOILS

Accused of Taking Away Chickens From Their Accustomed Haunts

The absence of a jitney bus between thisc ity and Lysander is one of the reasons the Guersney brothers of that village are now languishing in the city jail awaiting trial on a charge of chicken stealing, to the extent of grand larceny. The three men were arrested yesterday morning by Chief Dyer and Detectives Brannigan and Gordon, as they were resting their tired feet along the Bowen's Corners road just outside of the city limits. The men had removed their shoes and were taken by surprise when the policemen drove up in an automobile and put them under arrest. One of the brothers refused to accompany the police unless they showed a warrant but after some persuasion he came along.

The arrest was the culmination of a long series of chicken thefts which have been reported in Lysander. At least one hundred chickens have been stolen in the past few months and many of the fowls are valuable breeding birds. Ten poultry owners have suffered losses of from ten to twenty-five fowls in one night and although careful watch was kept none of the male residents of the village could find a clue to the marauders.

It remained for one of the women residents of Lysander to put the pollice on the trial. Chief Dyer had been informed a short time ago of the many thefts, and yesterday morning a telephone message from a Lysander woman informed him that three men had passed her house with bags and suit cases. She suspected they were chicken thieves and told the chief they were headed for Fulton.

The three officers left this city in an automobile and came upon the Guernsey brothers just outside the city limits. An investigation of their lluggage reveailed twenty-one chickens, dressed and ready for the market. The men wereb rought to this city and locked up. When the report of the arrest reached Lysander, Aaron DeGraf, a farmer, heard the news and decided to investigate his own hen roost. Twenty-one of his blooded Plymouth Rocks had departed leaving no address, and DeGraf immediately came to this city and identified the chickens found on the thieves as his property.

The Guernsey brothers were taken to South Granby later in the afternoon and arraigned before Justice of the Peace Cole. The justice did not take action, being in doubt as to the procedure, and the men were brought back t othis city.

Chief Dyer and District Attorney Culkin of Oswego went to the Guernsey house yesterday afternoon to investigate the place and if possible determine upon what scale the men were operating. Chief Dyer found the feathers of the stolen chickens buried in the cellar and when confronted with this evidence, two of the men confessed. One stoutly maintains his innocence of any wrongdoing.

ADLE MONUMENT TO BE UNVEILED SUNDAY

At 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Riverside Camp, Woodmen of the World, will unveil a monument to the memory of Floyd Adle. The deceased was a prominent member of the local lodge, and was killed in this city last December while testing a fire-alarm service.

Members of the uniform rank of the lodge from this city and Syracuse, will conduct the services. Members of the Fulton fire department will also attend the services.

HARRISON COLE

Harrison Cole of Granby died at his home last night after a long illness. He was 74 years old. For many years he conducted a blacksmith shop in the town of Granby.

He is survived by his widow; two daughters, Mrs. J. Bush and Mrs. H. Fuller of Wilson, and one son.

A prayer service will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Mr. Cole's home. The funeral will be held Tuesday and burial will be made at Wilson, Niagara county.

STAG DAYS ARE CLUB FEATURES

Field Day Yesterday Produced Record Crowd of Recent Times at the Island

Members and guests of the Pathfinder Boat Club to the number of eighty-five, enjoyed the best field day of the 1915 season at the club south of the city yesterday. The ideal weather had the effect of bringing out many members of the club who ordinarily do not find the time to attend the field days and almost everyone who was present during the afternoon remained in the evening to enjoy the supper and dancing.

The feature event of the afternoon was a baseball game between two picked teams, captained by Dr. Kellar and Morris Conley. Dr. Kellar and "Pete" Webb did the twirling for the Kellar team and Flanders caught. H. Scudder pitched for the Conley aggregation and Charles O'Brien was on the receiving end. The game was a walk-over for the Conleyites, the final score being 19-9. Five of the Kellar team's runs were scored in the ninth inning by a great batting rally, which took place when Scudder eased up temporarily, and for a time the Kellar team had visions of a Garrison finish.

Scudder's work with the willow was oen of the big features. The twirler had his eye on the pellet and pounded out two three-baggers and two singles. Morris Conley did fine work in the field, his double play unassisted in the fifth inning being the field-features. Roberts, on first base for the Conleyites, showed rare form and handled everything that came his way.

The supper tables were placed on the veranda of the club, and the large crowd necessitated an extra corps of waiters. Everyone was well taken care of, however, and the meal was highly complimented.

The Victrola worked overtime during the evening hours and the younger people, in particular, enjoyed the modern dances until nearly midnight.

The house committee was greatly pleased to see the large number of club members on hand, and additional features will be arranged hereafter at all similar events.

Wednesday next the club will inaugurate a series of Stag Days, which will continue during the summer months. As the name implies, on these days the club grounds will be restricted to the use of the male members of the club, and old clothes and negligee attire will be the order of the day, in fact, the members of the club will enjoy boating, bathing, bathing, fishing, baseball, quoits and other out of door sports, and evening dress will be dispensed with at the usual supper. This feature is meeting with universal approval, and the committee believes many business men will take advantage of this opportunity to enjoy the cool breezes of the island and at the same time, get some good exercise as well as free their minds of business cares. A baseball game will be the principal event on the program Wednesday.

Eyeball Pierced by Sickle's Point

That the ordinary, everyday garden sickle has its attendant dangerrs, especially when wielded by a small boy, became impressive last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sant, of Oak st., when the little daughter of the household was made to suffer agony as the result of receiving the pointed end of a sickle in one of her eyeballs.

Harrold Sant, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sant, was engaged in cutting weeds about 6 o'clock in the evening in the backyard of the Oak st. home, where Mildred, aged 6, was playing nearby. In some accountable manner Harold swung the sickle around and the sharp point pierced Mildred's eyeball, not even touching the eyelids. Dr. Joy was called at once, and he in turn called Dr. Lake. In the meantiem the little sufferer had been removed to the hospital, where the two physicians at once performed an operation, removing what was left of the pierced eyeball. An immediate operation was made necessary to save the vision of the remaining eye.

At press hour little Mildred Sant is resting as well as can be expected, and the physicians who performed the operation are very hopeful of their case.

FERROLA WOMAN MAY NOT DIE

Public Sentiment Against Electrocuting Her; Life Sentence to Be Asked For

Albany, June 19.—Will Madelene Ferrola, sentenced to die in the electric chair during the week beginning August 2, be executed or will Governor Whitman commute the sentence into life imprisonment? This question is being asked in many quarters and the impression appears to prevail that the unfortunate woman, who stabbed to death her unfaithful lover, will not yield up her life to the State.

Since the law making the method of execution electrocution went into effect, but two women have been placed in the electric chair. These women were Martha Place, who was the first of her sex to thus die, and Mary Farmer. The former was shocked to death at Sing Sing, the latter at Auburn prison. Mrs. Place met her fate on March 20, 1889; Mrs. Farmer was electrocuted March 29, 1909. It is an interesting fact that the second woman victim of the chair followed the first by a period of ten years almost to a day. If Madeline Ferrola is sent to her death by the State, the third electrocution of a woman will have taken place six years later.

The records of the State prison department show that one hundred and ninety-six persons have paid the price of murder with their lives in this State by electrocution. The first to die was William Kemmler who was electrocuted at Auburn prison August 6, 1890.

The crime for which Madelene Ferrola has been condemned to death has been widely exploited in the press. She plunged a knife into the heart of Carmello Canestrara because he refused to marry her after having promised and betrayed her. The murder was committed on a railroad bridge in the Bronx.

There has always been a certain amount of public sentiment against the electrocution of a woman and the protest which was raised editorially and otherwise with reference to the cases of the Place and Farmer woman is now being repeated in connection with Madeline Ferrola.

It is understood that one of the first matters to be brought to the attention of Governor Whitman when he again takes up his duties on Monday,, will be a petition urging him to commute the sentence of the Ferrola woman from death to life imprisonment.

State Superintendent of Prisons John D. Riley is hopeful that Madelene Ferrola will be spared the electric chair. When asked concerning the possible intervention of the governor, he declined to express an opinion. He said it was possible that the executive might do so, but did not know. He hoped so.

"There seems to be a decided opposition on the part of the against the electrocution of women," continued Superintendent Riley. "The law does not recognize sex, which is proper, yet the noteriety surrounding the electrocution of a woman brings this department into the lime-light of criticism, it also tends, I think, to make more unpopular the capital punishment statute in this State."

The fact that Thomas Mott Osborne, warden of Sing Sing prison is opposed to capital punishment and that prison will naturally be the scene of Madelene Ferrola's passing, may have the effect of changing the fate of the unfortunate woman. Warden Osborne alluded to the Ferrola woman when arguing against capital punishment before the committee on legislatice powers of the Constitutional Convention.

Fulton Keynotes

Fred J. Taylor has returned from a business trip to New York.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Giles Piper have left for Montana where they will visit their son, Fay Piper.

* * *

Mrs. James Bush and her sister, Mrs. Fuller, of Buffalo, are in town, having been called here by the death of their father, W. H. Cole.

A business firm is often judged by the appearance of its office stationery. The Evening Times job department prints that class of work attractively. Adv.

PURE ICE CREAM

"The Only Kind You Ought to Buy or Eat"

WE MAKE AND DELIVER IT

Only Pure Flavors, Fresh Fruits and Heaviest of Cream used. Most Delicious Fountain Drinks

FRESH FRUITS AND HIGH-GRADE CONFECTIONERY

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

WEATHER FORECAST

Showers and thunder storms tonight and cooler. Sunday cloudy and cooler with north to northwest winds.

TO REBUILD RUINED TOWNS.

Frank Koester Will Help to Replan Devastated European Municipalities.

Already projects are on foot to replan some of the destroyed Belgian towns as well as some of the towns on the Russian frontier. Frank Koester of New York is making arrangements with foreign city planning experts to co-operate in this work.

Mr. Koester has had a long foreign and American experience in city planning. A German by birth, he has been one of the pioneers in America of a comparatively new art which originated in Europe and in which Germany has made great strides. He delivered addresses at the congress for city planners at Dusseldorf in Germany in 1912 and at the international conference of city planning and city maintenance at Ghent, Belgium, in 1913. He was awarded a gold medal at the world exhibition in Paris in 1900 for architectural and engineering plans. He is the author of several works, among them "Modern City Planning and Maintenance," "Hydroelectric Developments and Engineering," "Electricity For the Farm and Home" and "The Price of Inefficiency."

Photo by American Press Association.

FRANK KOESTER.

The owners of the Wilhelmina cargo received more than double value from England for holding her up, so it must be profitable sometimes to have trouble in the war zone.

The lamb lies down with the lion when China reaches a handshake with Japan, but it must end like the ride of the Lady with the Tiger—the lamb inside.

How quickly the eyes of the world turned from The Hague peace palace to the White House, Washington, in the Lusitania crisis.

The weather now and then plays pranks on the straw hat and no straw hat and overcoat and no overcoat cranks.

In America's war Villa seems to have been shot twice to the once the German crown prince was killed over there.

Of course the spring "cleanup" industry begins at home and stops short of nosing about neighboring back yards.

China and Japan ought to be on the preferred list for the Nobel peace prize and a Carnegie medal.

Have You Seen

THE LATEST STYLES of SOLID SILVERWARE

G. B. FARLEY

21 First Street

Can show you a full line. Just the kind for

WEDDING GIFTS

LEGAL NOTICES

STATE OF NEW YORK—Supreme Court, Oswego County.

Nora Kane vs! Nancy C. Heatherington, individually, and Nancy C. Heatherington as Executrix of the Last Will and Testament of Leroy S. Sweet, deceased, Henry Heatherington, Nancy Sweet, Eugene A. Sweet, Ida E. Sweet, his wife, Charles Hair, William Sweet, Martha Lowe, Jennie Lowe, Henry Sweet and all unknown persons having an interest as heir at law or otherwise, under the Last Will and Testament or the estate of said Leroy S. Sweet, or to the estate or under the Last Will and Testament of Henry Sweet, if deceased, his widow, heirs at law, next of kin, devises, grantees and assignees, if any, all of whom and all of whose names are unknown to the plaintiff.

To the above named Defendants:

You Are Hereby Summoned, to answer the complaint in this action and to serve a copy of your answer upon the plaintiff's attorney within twenty days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service; and, in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Trial to be held at the County of Oswego.

Dated this 21st day of May, 1915.

LOUIS C. ROWE,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P. O. Address,
1 and 2 Grant Block,
Oswego, N. Y.

To William Sweet, Henry Sweet and to any unknown persons having an interest in the property or estates of either Leroy S. Sweet, deeeased, or Henry Sweet, if deceased, as above specified.

The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of Honorable Irving G. Hubbs, Justice of the Supreme Court, dated the 26th day of May, 1915, and filed with the Complaint in the office of the Clerk of the County of Oswego, at Oswego, N. Y.

Dated, Oswego, N. Y., May 28, 1915.

LOUIS C. ROWE,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Office and P. O. Address,
1 and 2 Grant Block,
Oswego, N. Y.

5-29-6t

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.
Nights; Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

SATURDAY

The Great Five-Reel Feature
Featuring Lionel Barrymore
"THE SPAN OF LIFE"
See the Wonderful Human Bridge
PATHE WEEKLY No. 46
and
HIS FRIEND THE CAPTAIN

SUNDAY

Featuring
"A DAUGHTER OF THE PEOPLE"
in 5 parts
and others.

MONDAY

"SATAN" A drama of Humanity Masterpiece
and Others.

D/34

The Fulton Evening Times

IS A PART OF THE BUSINESS LIFE OF FULTON

¶ Because it is identical with every interest in this city. The Fulton Evening Times is a public institution purely. Its interests are mutual with those of every Man, Woman and Child of this city. Its success spells for the success of every Fulton Merchant. The town having successful Merchants is a successful town. A home Daily helps to make the home Merchant a successful man. One dollar spent in a paper published out-of-town deprives a Fulton workman of a dollar's worth of support.

IF YOU DEPRIVE

A Fulton Workman of His Wages it's Your Loss as well as the Workman's

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

THE LIMELIGHT

Admiral A. G. Winterhalter, Head of Asiatic Fleet.

Admiral Albert Gustavus Winterhalter, who was recently appointed to command the Asiatic fleet of the United States navy, will succeed Admiral Walter C. Cowles, who is to retire from active service under the age limit on July 11. Until recently a captain serving as aid for material, Mr. Winterhalter has just been promoted to the rank of rear admiral and will become a full admiral on assuming command of the fleet at Hongkong. This is under the new law, which gave the navy three admirals, one each for the Atlantic, Pacific and Asiatic fleets.

The position of commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet is considered a very important one on account of American interests in the Philippines and the orient. The largest vessels in this fleet are the Saratoga, which was formerly the cruiser New York; the Cincinnati, Galveston and Wilmington. There are also a division of destroyers, one of submarines and a gunboat division.

A native of Michigan and in his fifty-ninth year, Admiral Winterhalter entered the Naval academy in 1873, reaching the grade of captain in 1909. His service has comprised duty on every type of craft in the navy, from the sailing frigate to the modern battleship. At one time he served in the naval observatory, where he specialized in astronomical work. Later he was directed to inspect the observatories and scientific institutions of Europe to gain information to be used in building the new naval observatory, which was in contemplation at that time. The result of these investigations was embodied in a volume which is today a valued work of reference in all observatories in the world.

Admiral Winterhalter is said to be the ablest linguist in the navy, speaking eleven languages.

The President of Portugal.

The republic of Portugal, keeping time to the general state of affairs in Europe, is having troubles of its own. Recent revolutionary outbreaks which resulted in the wounding of the president of the new Portuguese cabinet and the killing of a senator were quickly quelled, but since the proclamation of the republic five years ago there have been many clashes between the adherents of President de Arriaga and the royalists.

MANUEL DE ARRIAGA.

President Manuel de Arriaga, first president of the new republic, has had a difficult task to perform. The republic was proclaimed Oct. 5, 1910, and Theophile Braga was made provisional president after the overthrow of the monarchy. In May, 1911, the people elected members of the constituent assembly, and that body on Aug. 24 of that year elected President de Arriaga as chief executive of the nation. The term of office is for four years, and reelection is prohibited. His term of office will expire at the end of next August. President de Arriaga is now seventy-four years old, but does not look his age. He is a descendant of an old and noble family and was born on the island of Fayal, in the Azores. He declares that he was born a republican, and he has been one in politics throughout his career. For years he was a professor at Coimbra university and also at the Lyceum of Lisbon.

March and in Action.

While the rifle of the infantrymen of the world's armies has steadily lessened in weight during the last fifty years, and while constant attempts have been made in other ways to lighten the soldier's burden on march, it is nevertheless a fact that the uniformed fighter of today carries very little if any less than he did a generation or two ago. His gun and bayonet and some other details of equipment that had an exact counterpart in the old armies may be lighter, but modern military necessities have added to his carrying requirements.

He must now face this marching load: Magazine rifle, bayonet, scabbard, rifle cartridge belt and fasteners, rifle cartridge belt suspenders, first aid packet, canteen, canteen strap, set of blankets, roll straps, haversack, meat can (used as a frying pan), cup, knife, fork, spoon, one shelter tent (half), five shelter tent pins, one poncho (rubber blanket), one pair shoes, one housewife (needle and thread), one overcoat, one intrenching tool.

These marching loads have varied from 40 to 100 pounds in the past and weigh about the same now.

Of course, in going into action much of this load is discarded, some of it never to be possessed by the owner again, even though he escapes the battle peril. In the old days knapsacks were always cast off by seasoned troops, who grew calloused as to the hoarding up of little trinkets and mementos that so appeal to the amateur soldier.

After a battle these discarded knapsacks might be recovered, but it was not likely. At any rate, while another knapsack might be issued, it would not be the one possessed by the soldier before the battle.

Whenever a new levy of troops was mustered in and arrived in a camp where veterans were, stationed the newcomers were greeted with mock praise for their spick and span soldierly appearance, with special emphasis on "How nice those knapsacks look!" This time honored receptacle of everything a soldier desired or hoped to keep ever near him is no longer reckoned in the latter day, universal fighting equipment. While troops on going into battle discard everything not absolutely necessary to them for the fight and are thus lightened up some, they have to take on some weight in the place of that relinquished in the shape of an extra number of cartridges.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Singular Gender.

"Some days ago," relates the wife of a well known attorney, "I accompanied my husband on a business trip to Cleveland. As we ate our luncheon I chanced to overhear several traveling men jesting with the colored waiter.

"'George,' (traveling men always say George to a colored waiter)—'this bill of fare has an item, chicken giblets with biscuit. We would like to have some of that, but we want to know whether there is more than one biscuit.'

"George examined the menu card, scratched his poll, and finally answered:

"'No, suh—yo' don' git only one. De wo'd "biscuit" is singular gender, as de good book teaches. So yo' all don't get but one.'"—Columbus Dispatch.

The London Bobby's Helmet.

The policeman's dignity is largely centered in his helmet. The late Sir John Astley testifies to this in his autobiography. Speaking from the experience of his youth, he says: "If you get into a row with the police don't attempt to hit a policeman, or you will get the worst of it, but knock his helmet off. He will instinctively stoop down to pick it up, for a policeman without a helmet is impossible. Meanwhile you run away." It is perhaps advisable to add that Sir John was the champion sprinter of the army, as well as being a first class boxer.—London Standard.

By Inference.

Pater and his small boy were passing St. Paul's churchyard when the father pointed out some of the larger monuments about.

The boy asked why they were erected. His father explained that they were in memory of good men and women. Soon the boy noticed some stones which are laid flat. He pointed to these and asked:

"Do they put those that way to keep the bad ones down?"—New York Post.

Confirming a Wife's Right.

"At least he was original in his proposal."

"Did he claim that you were the only girl he ever loved?"

"No. He asked me if I'd accept the right nightly to demand of him where he had been till this hour."—Detroit Free Press.

Start of His Finish.

"Well, old man, how's tricks?"

"Miss Wallaby accepted me last night."

"I suppose you are around today accepting congratulations."

"No; I'm around today trying to borrow $200 to buy the ring."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Easily Explained.

"I ran across your old friend Smith the other day."

"How did that happen?"

"He wouldn't get out of the way when I blew my horn."—Baltimore American.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

The Golden Touch.

Do you remember old King Midas, who was given the golden touch? And do you remember how he hurried into the garden and touched all the flowers, turning them to pure gold? And how happy he was till he tried to swallow a potato and it turned into a hot lump of gold in his throat? And until he kissed his little daughter and turned her into a golden image? Well, wasn't the golden touch hateful to him then? He cried and moaned till the fairy stranger told him how he might rid himself of it. I guess you remember how he plunged in the stream at the bottom of the garden as the fairy had told him to; how he filled his vase with its pure water and sprinkled it over his little daughter Marigold, so that she turned to warm flesh and blood again. Then you remember how he ran into the garden and sprinkled the rest upon the flowers, so that they turned from gold to their natural colors again.

But I don't believe anybody ever told you that he didn't have enough water for all of them, and in the corner of the garden he had to leave a whole cluster of them gold. And from that day to this that particular flower has always been golden. You can see it now, gleaming in the lanes and fields, and when you see the goldenrod just remember that it is King Midas' flower and that it has been gold ever since he touched it, years and thousands of years ago.

Soap Bubble Mixture.

A very great improvement over the ordinary soap and water suds for blowing bubbles is obtained by adding gum arabic and glycerin to the mixture. By so doing bubbles of greater beauty and durability are obtained, and they can also be blown to a much larger size. The glycerin increases the brilliancy of the bubbles as well as assisting in dislodging them from the pipe or tube, and the gum arabic gives them elasticity. In making this solution proceed as follows:

Into a pint of warm water shave finely a piece of strong brown laundry soap about an inch square. When this has thoroughly dissolved add a tablespoonful of gum arabic and stir until melted. Then put in a tablespoonful of glycerin and lastly a quart of cold water. Hot water is necessary to dissolve the various ingredients, but unless cold water is added the bubbles expand too rapidly in the blowing and thus break. Shake the completed solution well, strain through a fine cloth and it is ready for use, though suds that stand for a day or two are usually better than those freshly made.

A Wise Emperor.

It is related of a Chinese emperor that on being told that his enemies had revolted in one of his distant provinces he said to his officers, "Come; follow me, and we will quickly destroy them."

He marched forward, and when they saw him and his great army the rebels submitted and laid down their arms.

His army expected him to have all the rebels put to death, but instead he treated the captives with the greatest kindness and humanity and in many cases set them free. Great indignation with his conduct was felt in court circles, and at last his chief officer approached him and said:

"Sire, is this the way your majesty fulfills your promise? Your royal word was given that you would destroy all your enemies, and instead you have pardoned them and even set some free."

"But I have kept my word," said the emperor. "I promised to destroy my enemies. Do you not see that these men are no longer my enemies? I have made them my friends."

The One Day Hike.

There is no troop or patrol of scouts which cannot get somewhere worth hiking to, wherever it may be located. If you don't know where to go the interest is all the more. Make a hike of exploration. For the one day trip you need not give much attention to outfitting and such matters as occupy so much space in the manuals and handbooks. The most important thing of all is a comfortable pair of shoes, no matter how old, and enough clothes to keep you warm. Also the first day out in the season don't try for any records. A gait of about two and a half or three miles an hour will be plenty and take you anywhere you want to go. Sore feet and aching muscles tend to discourage novitiate scouts.

Hidden Sewing Articles.

You will need less eggs the more you beat the cake.

Charles plays pool as well as billiards.

You look chic, Otto, notwithstanding your negligee shirt.

You must look sharp in shooting game.

Say "ta-ta," Percy, and I'll know you'll mean thank you.

Answer.—Needles, spool, cotton, pin, tape.

Riddle and Answer.

Why is a woman deformed when she is mending her stockings? Because her hands are where her feet should be.

I Love Little Robin.

I love little Robin,
His breast is so red;
He sings me a song
When I wake in my bed.

He sings me a song
When it's time for goodnight,
And that's when I hurry
My candle to light.
—Philadelphia Record.

BRYAN'S GREAT AMBITION WAS TO BE APOSTLE OF WORLD PEACE

He Was Working With Hope to Destroy War Forever When Greatest War Broke Out.

Knowledge of International Law Makes Robert Lansing Right Hand Man to Mr. Wilson.

NOT since that June day twenty-three years ago when James G. Blaine retired precipitately from the office of secretary of state in the cabinet of Benjamin Harrison has Washington been treated to such a sensation as was caused by the resignation of Secretary Bryan.

The Bryan resignation was regarded as much more sensational than that of the "Plumed Knight" of the Republican party. Mr. Blaine retired because of his desire to wrest from President Harrison the Republican nomination for the presidency. That was a mere political quarrel, while the differences between President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were based on a belief on Mr. Bryan's part that the second note to be sent to Germany in connection with the Lusitania might lead to serious friction with that country.

Gives His Reason.

This was made evident by Mr. Bryan in his letter of resignation. In its second paragraph he said:

"Obedient to your sense of duty and actuated by the highest motives, you have prepared for transmission to the German government a note in which I cannot join without violating what I deem to be an obligation to my country, and the issue involved is of such moment that to remain a member of the cabinet would be as unfair to you as it would be to the cause which is nearest my heart, namely, the prevention of war.

"I therefore respectfully tender my resignation, to take effect when the note is sent, unless you prefer an earlier hour."

An interesting fact which was at once recalled was that when Mr. Blaine retired from the Harrison cabinet he was succeeded by General John W. Foster of Indiana, who is the father-in-law of Robert Lansing, the counselor of the state department, whom President Wilson designated as acting secretary of state. Mr. Lansing is credited with having supported Mr. Wilson's policy in dealing with Germany. He attended the session of the cabinet when Mr. Bryan made a speech giving reasons why a radical attitude should not be adopted toward the German government. He, in place of Mr. Bryan, signed the note to Germany.

At his residence immediately after his decision had become known, Secretary Bryan said there was no political significance to his resignation and no break in his relations with the Wilson administration or the Democratic party.

Both Act Rightly.

In telling his interviewers that his retirement from the cabinet did not mean a political break of any sort, Mr. Bryan said slowly and thoughtfully:

"No man with the president's convictions could have done other than he has done, nor could I have done otherwise. A man can only do what he believes to be right."

One of the questions asked of Mr. Bryan brought from him the most important statement he made. He had at first declined to say, in answer to an inquiry, whether any other cabinet officer would resign.

"That is an improper question to ask me," Mr. Bryan answered. But he added a little later:

"You see, I am the head of the state department and as such would have to sign the note to Germany, so that no other member of the cabinet is placed in exactly the same position. The difference between the president and myself on the question of these notes did not spring up suddenly. They have existed since the Falaba case. We have had many talks about the questions involved, and the difference in our line of talk has gradually grown wider. Finally we agreed to disagree. I do not care to state on which particular day we came to that decision.

"I want to emphasize," went on Mr. Bryan, "that our relations are still extremely cordial. We believe alike on political questions. We both regret sincerely and deeply that this break should have come, but no way to avoid it could have been found. The president could not have done otherwise, believing as he did, and I could not have taken any other course."

Was Taught by Father.

Mr. Bryan then told that he had dined with Mr. Roberts, the only surviving classmate of his father, Judge Silas Bryan of Salem, Ill. Mr. Bryan said:

"We talked of my father. I want to say that my father instilled into me when I was a boy always to do what I believed to be right. I have thought over that a great deal tonight. He left me a heritage which was priceless and which was far better than any fortune he could have given. I have done what I believe to be right in this case."

To a question Mr. Bryan replied that he had had many letters indorsing the stand for peace that he had taken in connection with the German crisis.

It is well known that Mr. Bryan, having failed in his long fight for the presidency, hoped to make an enduring name for himself as secretary of state. In the years that had elapsed since he was colonel of the Third Nebraska he had become an ardent pacifist, and he dreamed of going into history with a title greater than that of any other statesman who ever lived, for such, surely, would have been the meed of the man who abolished war.

To Be Apostle of Peace.

As the apostle of peace he showed a new side of his character to the country. He effaced himself in Wilson's interest. He became a loyal subordinate, accepting a minor place cheerfully and laboring with might and main to make the administration a success. So he worked busily, building for himself his niche in the temple of fame as the destroyer of war. And meanwhile the greatest war in history broke out.

Unperturbed by the sudden prominence that had come to him, Mr. Lansing went with Mrs. Lansing to a vaudeville theater. He wore the same gray suit in which he had been dressed during the day at the state department and altogether showed a desire to be as inconspicuous as possible. Few persons recognized him.

Mr. Lansing became counselor of the state department April 1, 1914, following the retirement of Dr. John Bassett Moore, who had resigned several weeks before because, as it was understood, of his disagreement with Mr. Bryan's Mexican policy.

He was born at Watertown, N. Y., Oct. 17, 1864. He entered Amherst college in 1882 and graduated with the class of 1886. Studying law for three years at Watertown, he began practice there with a cousin, forming the firm of Lansing & Lansing in 1889, and continuing as a member of the firm until 1907. In January, 1890, he married Miss Eleanor Foster, the only daughter of General Foster, who when secretary of state in 1892 appointed him an associate counsel for the United States in the Bering sea arbitration.

Aided In Arbitrations.

He was counsel for the United States before the Bering sea claims commission in 1896 and 1897 and later in 1903 was associated with Elihu Root, then secretary of war, as counsel before the Alaskan boundary commission in London. For several years he was counsel in the north Atlantic fisheries cases and in arbitration cases at The Hague.

As a state department official Mr. Lansing has developed a direct, decisive manner of dealing with public questions. Secretary Bryan's absences from Washington gave him opportunities to show his ability as acting secretary. His first duties were connected with the shaping of diplomatic policies arising from the revolution in Mexico.

With the outbreak of the war in Europe the position which Mr. Lansing had taken became one of high importance in the conduct of foreign policies. With his aid a complete reorganization of the state department was promptly undertaken for the consideration of the problems that arose from the peculiar conditions of the greatest war in history.

By training and experience he had come to be known as one of the best authorities on international law in the country. Calm, unassuming and tireless, he has been the right hand of the president in all the situations which have arisen since the outbreak of the war.

In the earlier stages of the war the preparation of American notes was confided to Mr. Lansing, and the president's part in them was simply one of revision and general direction. Lately, the president has written his own notes, but they have been referred for technical corrections to Mr. Lansing rather than to Mr. Bryan. President Wilson has looked to him officially and privately for help continually. Night and day he has been at the president's call over the telephone to render advice and take direction of the innumerable details of problems arising almost every hour.

The extent of this is well illustrated by an observation of Mr. Lansing's old negro butler.

Old Butler's Yarn.

A newspaper man, calling at Lansing's home one night recently and being told by the butler that the counselor was dining out, inquired for the telephone number of the man who was entertaining Lansing.

"'Deed, sah," replied the old servitor, "Mistah Lansing done tole me not to tell any one that, cep'n it war de president ob de United States or Mistah Bryan what wants ter know."

"Does Mr. Bryan call up the counselor much at night?" was asked.

"Naw, suh," answered the butler; "but de president, he jest pesters Mistah Lansing ter death."

The office of counselor of the state department was expressly created for the late Henry M. Hoyt, in the regime of Philander C. Knox, secretary of state. It was a sort of glorified solicitor's office, with an increase in dignity and salary. Under John Bassett Moore it increased in prestige, but it has remained for Robert Lansing to make of it pretty much the whole state department.

All Look to Lansing.

There is a diplomatic bureau in the state department, where hired specialists formerly used to draft all state papers, each man being assigned to the work of a special country or section of the world, the purpose being to maintain a continuity of policy. Nowadays practically all the work is done in Mr. Lansing's office, and the diplomatic bureau looks to him for instruction.

Temperamentally Mr. Lansing is splendidly equipped for his work. He is thoroughly human in thought and action. He is kindly and sympathetic. His gray eyes twinkle, and his face lights into a warm smile on the slightest provocation. He likes to be of service and is of service and goes about the job so simply and earnestly as to win confidence without seeming to try to do so.

The following are the chief officials of the department of state, in addition to Mr. Lansing: Solicitor, Cone Johnson; assistant secretary, John E. Osborne; second assistant secretary, Alvey A. Adee; third assistant secretary, William Phillips; director of the consular service, Wilbur J. Carr; chief clerk, Ben G. Davis.

Photos by American Press Association.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND MR. BRYAN TAKING STROLL TOGETHER—ROBERT LANSING.

GERMANY FACING LACK OF CLOTHING

Shortage of Wool Presents Serious Problem.

MANY MILLS CLOSE DOWN.

Shut Off From All the World's Markets, Kaiser's War Chiefs Feel Anxiety Lest They May Not Be Able to Provide Sufficient New Winter Uniforms For Their Armies.

The problem of insuring a future supply of uniforms for her great armies of fighters, while at the same time guaranteeing sufficient clothing for the old men and the women and children, is causing official Germany more real anxiety than the troublesome question of securing food supplies for all her people.

Experts in the wool and cotton trade declare that since Germany has been cut off from the wool and cotton markets of the world by reason of the allies' blockade she faces the grave danger of inability to clothe her soldiers properly many months longer and may have great difficulty in prosecuting another winter campaign if the war lasts until the snow flies again.

Germany obtained the wool she used in her manufactures mainly from Australia and New Zealand through the London markets and from South America, chiefly the Argentine Republic and Montevideo. The London market is now denied her of course, and she is cut off also from South American ports. Some of her stocks came from Russia, but they consisted of "carpet wool," and the war stopped business in that direction. She obtained comparatively small quantities of carpet wool from Turkey, but Turkey is in the war and the Turks need all their own wool.

Has Only Home Supply.

Germany had 16,000,000 sheep of her own in 1900, according to the reports, but this figure was reduced to 5,000,000 in 1907. It is assumed that the total has been still further reduced since then. It is admitted that the war has made it necessary to slaughter many sheep for food purposes, and that has decreased the amount of home wool.

When the Germans invaded Belgium they seized all the wool in sight and shipped back some 30,000,000 pounds to the fatherland, leaving the Belgians no wool at all. They also confiscated a large amount in their invasion of northern France.

It is estimated that thirty pounds of raw cotton and wool are used for the manufacture of a soldier's uniform, overcoat and other clothing. Assuming that Germany had 5,000,000 sheep in 1914 it is figured that she would not have supplied sufficient material to enter into the uniforms of more than 1,000,000. When the stocks seized in Belgium and northern France are exhausted (if they have not been exhausted already) she will have to fall back on her home supply.

Germany, it is said, uses more rags and clips in the making of her clothing than any other country. For the same reason that wool is denied her by her old customers she is unable to obtain the materials that enter into the manufacture of shoddy goods and is utilizing more than ever before the "rags" of her own people. It is said that 75 per cent more clips (tailors' cuttings from new cloth) were exported to Germany from the United States before the war than to any other country.

Woolen Mills Suspend.

Already a number of Germany's biggest woollen mills, notably the Luckenwalder company plant at Berlin, have been obliged to suspend.

Germany's stocks of cotton also are low, and she has been unable to replenish them to any large degree. It is known that representatives of German firms have disposed of large stocks of cotton purchased in the southern states before the war, which could not be shipped to the fatherland.

"The problem of getting enough wool and cotton for her purposes is a very serious one for Germany," a New York expert declared the other day. "It seems to be a question of a supply of clothes rather than of food. She can probably raise sufficient food for her soldiers and the people at home, but how to get sufficient wool and cotton to make the clothing needed for her millions is the empire's great problem."

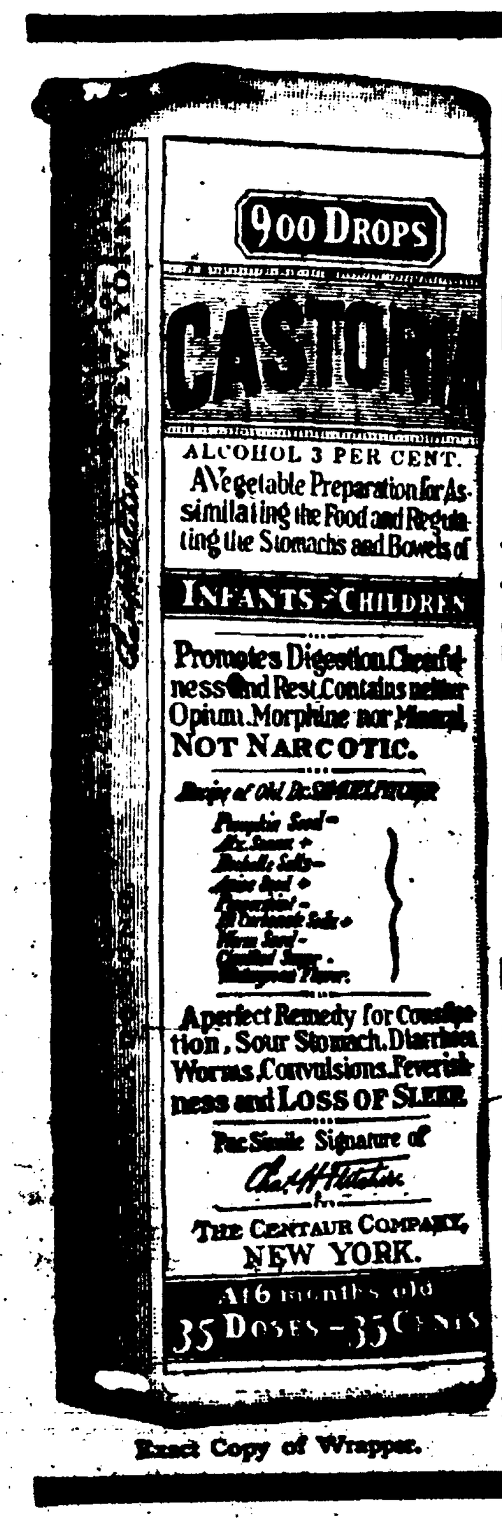
One of the principal exporters said that of the 271,000 bales of wool exported from Argentina alone in 1914 82,000 bales went to Hamburg, Bremen and Trieste. He added that the allies are now using "carpet wools" in the making of uniforms, and he believes the Germans will do the same.

LIONESS LOOSE IN TOWN.

But All Julia Did Was to Eat One Dog and Scare Another Dead.

When Julia, a circus lioness, escaped from her cage in Mount Vernon, N. Y., she scared the town badly, but only chewed up a pup, fell over an Airedale, which dropped dead from fright, and chased a cat up a tree.

The lioness ran into an apartment house, followed at a discreet distance by seven policemen, two detectives, the volunteer fire department and fourteen trainers, armed with shotguns and forks. Julia climbed a porch column to the second floor porch and there she was driven into a box.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

THE CLEANUP MOVEMENT.

More Popular This Year Than Ever and Many Municipalities Take Part.

There is evidence that the "cleanup" movement is even more popular this year than last. There are echoes all over the country of people cleaning their homes generally, including the cellars, attics and stables, in which disinfectants are freely used. They are using paint upon everything that needs it and are raking up leaves and burning them and all other burnable trash. They are making their front yards groan under flower beds, and their back yards sprout with vegetables, the seeds in many cases given free. They are planting and trimming shrubs, hedges, trees and vines, are cleaning up and beautifying vacant lots by removing the unsightly weeds, tin cans and other rubbish. They are attempting to abolish all places that might breed flies and mosquitoes. Streets and alleys are being made to shine; trash receptacles are being installed upon the streets and citizens urged to pick up paper and refuse and deposit therein. Vacant lot gardening contests are being held. Prizes are being offered to boys and girls for the best kept gardens and lawns, and there are many "city beautiful" campaigns in active operation.

CLEANUP HELPED BY CHILDREN.

Here is a list of some of the cities and towns regarding which reports of such movements have reached the American City, promoted by commercial or civic organizations:

Alton, Ill.; Altoona, Pa.; Atlanta, Ga.; Beaumont, Tex.; Beverly, Mass.; Bloomington, Ill.; Bloomington, Ind.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Charleston, S. C.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Chetopa, Kan.; Cincinnati, O.; Columbia, Tenn.; Denver, Colo.; Findlay, O.; Fremont, Neb.; Glens Falls, N. Y.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Lincoln, Ill.; Lincoln, Neb.; Lynn, Mass.; Malvern, Ia.; Marion, O.; Mohawk, N. Y.; Montevallo, Ala.; Newark, O.; Ottumwa, Ia.; Pawtucket, R. I.; Peru, Ind.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pueblo, Colo.; Quincy, Ill.; Racine, Wis.; Reading, Pa.; Rochester, N. Y.; Rome, N. Y.; St. Joseph, Mo.; St. Paul, Minn.; South Bend, Ind.; Springfield, O.; Tama, Ia.; Taunton, Mass.; Wadsworth, O.; Waterloo, Ia., and Youngstown, O.

Meat prices rise and meat prices fall without creating a ripple of sensation. [illegible] have learned to limit the meat ration and even cut it out at will.

BUYS GOOD FARM ON SIX YEARS' TOIL

Young Iowan Sets Example of Great Success on Land.

HE STARTED EMPTY HANDED.

Banker Tells of Youth, German by Descent, Who In Few Seasons Saved $8,000, Bought 320 Acres For $28,000 and Had Fine Supply of Stock and Machinery.

Charles Shade, president of the First National bank of Rock Rapids, Ia., tells the story of the remarkable success of a young farmer of his vicinity who started in empty handed and in six years was able to buy a $28,000 farm. When the purchase was made he paid down $8,000, gained in the six year period, and had free and clear $6,700 worth of stock and machinery.

The young man is a German by descent, born and reared in our own country. His people are hard working farmers, so that he had the proper training. His name is John Busch.

After reaching his majority he began farming on his own account in 1908, renting eighty acres for one-third of the small grain and $4 an acre. His father gave him two horses, and he used his father's machinery. The bank loaned him $600 to buy hogs and cattle.

In 1909 he rented a half section (320 acres) of land and purchased machinery of his own and more horses. The seasons of 1909 and 1910 were good, and he added more stock, horses and machinery.

In 1911 the bank loaned him an additional $500, making his total indebtedness $1,100. The season's crop was large and the price good. He sold sufficient grain to pay up all the money borrowed and to liquidate other small debts made in buying machinery, cattle, horses and hogs, so that in the spring of 1912 he had all of his debts paid.

Out of the crop of 1913 after paying current expenses and without selling the cattle and hogs he had about $2,000 in money which he banked.

During the crop season of 1914 he planted 200 acres of corn. This averaged about sixty bushels an acre and was worth better than 50 cents a bushel. By the 1st of December, 1914, out of the proceeds of this crop and the sale of cattle and hogs, after paying current expenses, Busch banked $5,000, making in all $7,000.

He purchased a 160 acre farm in November, 1914, and promised to pay for it $28,000, $8,000 cash down and long time on the balance at 5 per cent. The land was deeded to him, and he gave a mortgage back for $20,000. The bank loaned him $1,000 for sixty days, assisting him to make up the $8,000. In January he disposed of hogs sufficient to pay back the $1,000.

Curious Bullets.

Rarities in warfare are bullets made of precious stones, but during the fighting on the Kashmir frontier, when the British troops defeated the rebellious Hunzas, the natives used bullets of pure garnets enclosed in lead. Many of the troops preserved them as curiosities.—London Mail.

That load becomes light which is cheerfully borne.—Ovid.

SEASON TICKET SALE FOR REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA

In arranging for a Redpath Chautauqua here this summer the local committee secured seven hundred and fifty $2.50 season tickets, which will be sold for $2.00 each.

When these tickets are gone no season tickets can be had for less than $2.50. Also the price of season tickets will not be reduced from the first day to the close of the Chautauqua.

The single admissions to the various sessions of this Chautauqua will aggregate over $6.00, so it will pay you to buy a season ticket even after the program is half completed. Season tickets are not transferable, except within the owner's family.

Children's tickets, costing $1.00 each, admit children aged from 6 to 14 years, inclusive. Admission to the special children's work is free.

For admission fees to the respective entertainments see the souvenir program, copies of which are now available.

Fulton, N. Y. --- July 27th to August 12th

SUFFRAGISTS MADE GAINS

Seven States Decided Last Year to Submit Amendment to Voters

New York.—Woman suffrage came up for discussion in twenty-two State Legislatures during the last year. Now that the majority of the Legislatures have adjourned, figures compiled yesterday show that suffrage and other questions affecting women were before the lawmakers of twenty-seven States.

The Legislature of seven States adopted resolutions whereby a consitutional amendment giving women equal suffrage rights with men will be submitted to the people at the November elections either this or next year. They are Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania in 1915, and Iowa, South Dakota and West Virginia in 1916.

Tennessee adopted a similar resolution, but it must be passed also by the succeeding Legislature before it can be submitted to the voters. So did Arkansas, but the resolution was ineffective because of a provision of the State constitution which forbids more than three constitutional amendments to be submitted at one election, and three already had been filed with the Secretary of State.

California adopted a resolution declaring that woman suffrage in that State had been an unqualified success. Alabama will consider the question at an adjourned session to begin July 7.

Defeat in Eleven States

In eleven States woman suffrage measures met defeat. They were Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Indiana, Michigan, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Texas and Vermont. Three votes defeated the measure in Indiana and Texas.

There was a bitter contest in Montana, where undaunted by the defeat of their cause at the general election last year, the suffrage adherents renewed the fight. In Delaware a proposed constitutional amendment was defeated decisively in both houses, and in Florida in the lower house. In New Mexico and North Carolina the amendments died in committee.

In Michigan a proposed amendment to the constitution giving women the right to vote for Presidential electors and all officers of educational nature was not reported out of the State committee. The General Assembly of Connecticut declined to send the measure to the next Assembly for ratification. The Assembly of Wisconsin on April 20, by a majority of eight votes, killed a bill for State wide referendum, but on Wednesday the Senate revived the question by ordering a similar measure engrossed by a vote of 16 to 13.

New Mexico passed a law providing for the appointment of women on the government boards of State institutions in the discretion of the Governor. North Carolina made women eligible to become notaries and gave them the right of petition in certain instances. Women may become notaries by a law passed also in Tennessee and serve in that State on school boards.

Pensions for mothers came up for consideration in eighteen States. In eight — Kansas, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Wyoming—legislation for this purpose was enacted for the first time. In Texas and West Virginia similar measures failed. In the others the laws were amended or amplified.

State Aid for Mothers

The new Kansas statute fixes the maximum grant to needy mothers at $25 a month, to be paid at the discretion of county commissioners. The New Hampshire law limits payment to $10 a month for a dependent mother having one child under sixteen years and $5 for each additional child. The Legislature appropriated $16,000 for the first two years.

The New York statute applies to widows with a child or children under sixteen who will be allowed the amount it would cost the State to support them.

California, Colorado, Connecticut, North Carolina, Nevada and West Virginia acted on divorce laws. California amplified hers so that judges areg ranted power to call in the District Attorney if fraud or collusion is suspected. Connecticut added incurable insanity to the list of grounds for divorce. Nevada returned to her law the six months' residence clause.

Legislation to promote healthy marriages and check the social evil was enacted in Vermont.

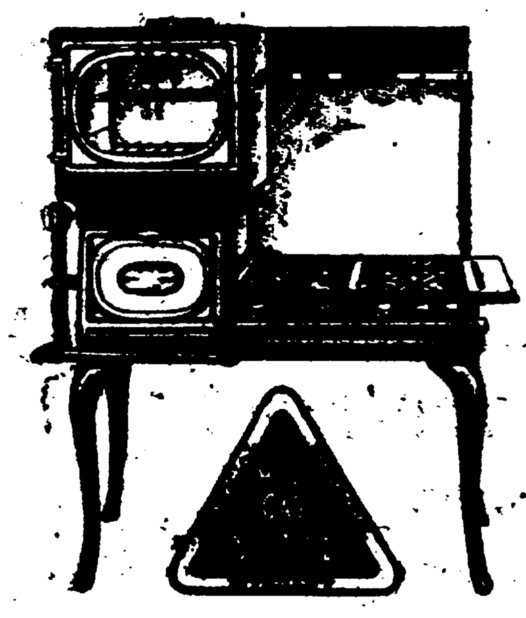
Labor laws for women were enacted in Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts and Wyoming.

New Mexico passed an act increasing the property rights of the wife and Wyoming in this particular placed wife and husband on an equal footing. New Jersey authorized the appointment of women policemen. Oregon forbade discrimination between male and female public school teachers in the payment of salaries.

"Almost Dinner Time"

"So busy I didn't notice how late it was getting."

"Never mind"---When Dad comes home it will be ready just the same.



You couldn't do it with a Coal Range—But with a "Moss Special Gas Range" and "Moss Service" you have everything under "Perfect Control" and are sure of your results.

THE GAS CO.

PHONE 198

THOMAS H. MARVIN

HEADQUARTERS FOR

BUILDERS' SUPPLIES

Some of our specialties are:

Lehigh Portland Cement.

Peerless Wall plaster

Robinson Sewer Pipe

Onondaga Vitrified Brick

Fire Brick, Fire Clay, etc.

Land Plaster Hydrated Lime

Yard:

Corner First and Broadway

WAR WAGED AT HARD TIMES

Country-Wide Celebration for Week in November to Electrify Prosperity

Rochester, June 19.—According to information just received, Rochester is represented on committees which are to direct nation-wide "Electrical Prosperity Week," from November 29th to December 4th. Robert M. Searle, vice-president of the Rochester Railway and Light Company, and C. Wheeler, president of the Wheeler-Green Electric Company, have been named as members of the New York state committee.

During the week it is planned to wage war on "hard-times prophets" and to stimulate belief in prosperity. The electrical men who are planning the effort, representing, it is said, more than $3,000,000,000 worth of investments in electrical business, plan to make the message of the week, "Electrify Prosperity," reach every town and hamlet in the whole country, as well as the large cities.

This they propose to do by publishing the message from thousands of billboards, on millions of posters, stamps and circulars; in the newspapers and magazines; in pamphlets and hourse organs; on electric signs and railroad stations. Across the contienent, probably along the route of the proposed Lincoln Highway, they propose to blaze a great illuminated belt.

Efforts will be made to have electrical shows, motor parades and other ceremonies in all the large cities, and to have the streets, public and private buildings embellished with special illuminations. Officials of the Panama Exposition have set aside the week, which is the last of the great fair, for special electrical efforts.

The Society for Electrical Development, composed of representatives from more than 1400 electric light and power corporation manufacturers and jobbers of electrical machinery, is backing the campaign.

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 19.—As the weeks creep on, the fact becomes more and more apparent that there has never been a more delliberate body charged with the duty of transacting important duties of the State than the present Constitutional convention. From the first it was quite well understood that rapidity of action or an effort to conclude its business would not be manifested by the delegates, yet few would have predicted that for nearly two months the sessions would continue to be but scarce more than an hour in duration.

When the Contitutional convention convened on April 26, it was the general belief that by the middle of June some of the proposed amendments would have been disposed of, yet it is now beyond that date and not one of the propositions, nearly seven hundred in number, hafe been voted upon, nor has there been a debate.

There remains practically two more working weeks in the present month, then an adjournment will be taken over July 4, so that there will be three weeks in that month, four in the succeeding one and two in September only, within which the delegates will have opportunity to complete their task of passing upon what is and what is not proper to be submitted to the people at the general election this fall for their final action with regard to alterations to the State Constitution.

All manner of proposed amendments have been offered and in many cases the propositions overlap in their provisions. This means that each of the separate committees must first weed out the superfluous proposed amendments and then vote out of their jurisdiction or retain as undesirable, the propostions which in the judgment of the committeemen, are not worth the attention of the delegates sitting as a committe of the whole.

To decide which of the many committees is the most important would be a difficult task. The larger as well as the smaller proposals each have ardent advocates who regard their especial propositions as paramount in effect. Thus the judiciary committee is no more an adjunct in the general task of satisfying the public than the committee on canals or that on education, although the judicial branch of the State government cannot be denied any of its possibilities of far reaching effect.

Before the committee on Industrial Relations there are a number of propositions which seek to give the legislature future authority to deal with industrial questions. The minimum wage question has been discussed before this committee and met with strenuous objection from business men of large enterprise who held that to compel an employer to pay a certain wage scale would be an injustice. Organized labor, on the other hand demands an added opportunity to advance itself. Its call has been [illegible] edb roadcast and there are [illegible] the delegates to the convention who are of the opinion that what is asked should be given, or at least advocated by them and handed on to the people for their action.

The Committee on Suffrage has grappled with proposed changes to the election law, numerous and drastic. The short ballot, the restoration of the State convention, the question as to whether it should advocate equal suffrage and other propositions have been aired at public hearings and in executive session.

Such deliberations takes time and a far longer time, it appears, than was at first contemplated.

ELECTRIC FANS IN TRENCHES.

German Officers' Quarters Underground Had "All Modern Improvements."

The officers' quarters of German trenches captured near La Quinque Rue in France were wonderful concrete constructions fitted with electric lights and electric fans and drained by electric power. The electricity was supplied from a plant at the coal mines of La Basse.

The French who captured these trenches benefited by all these modern improvements for several hours until the Germans cut the wires.

AMERICAN WOMAN HONORED.

Roumania Decorates Mrs. Jackson For Red Cross Work.

The Roumanian government has decorated Mrs. John B. Jackson, wife of the former United States minister to Roumania, for her aid in Red Cross work during the last Balkan war.

Mr. Jackson, whose home is in Trenton, N. J., is in Germany as a special investigator of German prison camps for Ambassador Gerard.

"NO WAR WHILE I AM SECRETARY," MR. BRYAN DECLARED IN 1913.

In a speech on May 12, 1913, to visiting British, Canadian and Australian delegates on the treaty of Ghent celebration Mr. Bryan told the diners that there would be no war while he was secretary of state and that he would never have accepted the portfolio of the premiership if he had thought for one moment that there would be war during his incumbency of the office.

In his speech Mr. Bryan said: "I made up my mind before I accepted the offer of the secretaryship of state that I would not take the office if I thought there was to be a war during my tenure.

"When I say this I am confident that I shall have no cause to change my view, for we know no cause today that cannot be settled better by reason than by war.

"I believe there will be no war while I am secretary of state, and I believe there will be no war so long as I live. I hope we have seen the last great war."

Breaking Into Society.

"I'm green in society. Would it be all right to shake hands with yonder distinguished looking individual?"

"I'm green myself. But I'd advise you to go a trifle slow."

"Pshaw! No man can make a serious mistake by being a trifle friendly."

"Yes, he can, too. That may be the butler."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

ITHACA MAKES MARKET SUCCESS

Provides a Bee Line From Producer to Consumer and Kitchen

Ithaca, June 19.—The third anniversary of the Ithaca City Market was observed by a rally yesterday, when producers were invited to bring their farm produce.

From June 19 throughout the summer and fall, the Ithaca Market will be a busy place on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings, as fresh fruits, vegetables, poultry and other farm products will be there for sale in increasing amounts as the season advances. On Apple Day, October 20, 1914, over 500 bushels of fruit, grown within driving distance of Ithaca, were sold before 9 o'clock in the morning.

Through the Ithaca City Market, a head of lettuce, or any other farm product, can pass directly from producer to consumer instead of taking a long trip from farm to kitchen with stopover privileges with buyer, jobber, city commission merchant, refrigeration plant, local wholesaler and local retailer. Thus the city market offers financial returns to both producer and consumer.

There is a heavy demand for meats, fruits, vegetables, choice baked and canned goods, eggs, and dairy products so long as the market prices are kept below retail.

The producers who come to the Ithaca City Market and receive cash and fairer prices for their goods, are anxious to rent stalls or permanent places of doing business. There are only a few covered stalls left for the season. These stands or standing room can be arranged for with the market superintendent.

One farmer reported at the end of the first summer that he had sold $650 worth of goods, too ripe or too small in quantity to be shipped or sold to middlemen. Another farmer sold $50 to $100 worth per day through last summer.

The poorer grades of food sell to the people who cannot buy the best, and thus prrices vary according to grade and quantity. The farmer does not have to "take it out in trade," but receives cash for his wares.

The Ithaca City Market offers to the producer and consumer "a bee line" for the flow of foods from farm to kitchen.

GENEVA TO VOTE ON COMMISSION FORM

Geneva, June 18.—By a resolution of the Common Council tonight this city will vote upon the proposition of a commission form of government on September 1st. A petition requesting that form of government, signed by 279 qualified voters of the city, was presented. It was also voted to empower the mayor to enter into a contract with the Central New York Gas and Electric Company fo ra special lighting district in Main street from the south line of William st. to Mile Point, the cost to be $1800, 60 per cent to be paid by the property owners and 40 per cent by the city at large.

Black's Cookies tickle the palates of old and young, because they are right. adv.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 156 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | MONDAY, JUNE 21, 1915 | Price One Cent

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SECURES OIL STATION FOR CITY

French Make Gains Along 6-Mile Front

By Harolld Ashton.

Northern France, June 20.—The battle in Northern France has now reached such intensity as to make it rank as one of the great struggles of the war. Along the front of about six miles the Germans have been forced to concentrate eleven divisions.

In the fighting on both sides there are a quarter of a million men engaged. English and French losses are heavy, but the results already obtained and the promise of those which lie within their grasp more than justify the terriffic effort made.

Since this battle started the French have taken more booty than fell to them as a result of the victory of the Marne. They made over 10,000 prisoners since the offensive started, and inflicted extremely heavy losses in killed and wounded.

The flower of General Foch's army is still pursuing its deliberate thrust for Vimy and Lens. Hand to hand fighting marks every hour of the day and night. Souchez and the immediate neighborhood bear the brunt of battle. The cemetery was captured by the French after a bloody struggle of two hours duration.

"The place looks today," says an eyewitness, "as if it had been the center of a dreadful earthquate shock. The Germans had dug trenches through it and held on grimly until the very last moment when the terrible and persistent fire of the French guns drove them out, smashing up the graveyard trenches into one grim jumble of dead and dying.

"The picture is too horrible for description. All this was cleared away as quickly as could be by the French, who made heaps of wreckage and set them alight.

The lower slopes of the oft-contested hill of East Lorette has been the scene of renewed conflict. More trenches have been wrested from the enemy and a number of prisoners and stores taken. Again and again the Germans attempted to retake the positions here but failed. In many places they have been forced to abandon some of their forward trenches and fall back to consolidate their perpetually harassed line.

"They now are strongly planted among the woods, which fringe the ridge of little hills, and form a natural protection. Southwest of Vimy a supply of reinforcements for the German line here clearly shows how vitally important they consider this position. They have been fighting with almost superhuman bravery, and concede only by inches. Every inch yielded means abundant bloodshed, and the slopes at the littile hills are piled with their dead.

The furious fighting for the key to the road to Lens and Lille now has lasted, with a few interruptions, nearly six weeks. It is a dogged struggle from trench to trench, fortress to fortress, house to house, hole to hole. Of the villages through which the fighting rages nothing remains save jumbled heaps of bricks and mortar, as though the whole place had been turned upside down.

Under cuporl of steel, beneath the arched cellar windows, in block-houses of sandbags and armor plate machine guns have been placed in quantities. The whole district with them. Fighting in such positions is naturally confused. Showers of hand grenades fall, followed by short, furiously determined, rushes of the infantry where rapid bayonet work finally clears the captured positions.

GERMANS HEMMING IN THE GALICIAN CAPITAL

Paris, June 21.—The Russians are making a desperate stand northwest of Grodek, but despite their efforts the Austro-German advance on Lemberg continues and it now seems likely that the Gallician capital will fall before the date set by General von Mackensen, July 1.

Emperor William has established headquarters at Pless, in southeastern Silesia, and assumed command of the Galician campaign.

After stubborn fighting, which continued nearly all day, the Russians have been driven back along a front of twenty-four miles from north of Janow, which is eleven miles northwest of Lemberg, nearly to Rawa Ruska, thirty-two miles from the capital. Line upon line of trenches were captured along the whole front. These positions were taken by storm and the Russian front has been forced back to Zolkiew.

Berlin reports tonight also that further south, between the mouth of the Stry and the Dniester marches, the Russians have been compelled to evacuate the south bank of the Dniester.

The great question now is can the Grand Duke Nichols, commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, check the Austro-German advance before Lemberg falls. Some military observers here believe he cannot, although it is recalled that in a somewhat similar situation last fall he did stop the Germans' drive when they were almost at the gates of Warsaw.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 7

Because the Up-building of Fulton Depends Upon the Merchants Who Depend Upon Fulton for Support

Even before this highly specialized age, when we are all becoming more and more inter-dependent, the development of a town depended upon the merchants more than anyone else. The first cities were built by their burghers, shop-keepers, merchants. The newest boom city in the newest of recently developed communities is depending principally upon its merchants for its upbuilding. Fulton is, in this respect, like every other city on the globe. Its merchants are its bulwarks and its main stays. The Chamber of Commerce is working to make a bigger and better Fulton. Among its strongest allies are the live merchants. Every civic, every commercial movement in the past was supported by merchants and every one in the future will be supported by merchants. They are mighty allies in the fight for development. More power to them! Support them and they will have more power.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

BERLIN SAYS BRITISH ARE GETTING WEAKER

Berlin (by Wireless).—The correspondent of the Associated Press in the Dardanelles has transmitted the folllowing in an undated despatch:—

"British losses at Avi Burnu thus far are estimated at from 10,000 to 15,000. The turkish losses are somewhat lower, although the Turks now are constantly on the offensive and they make bayonet attacks almost every night.

"Field Marshal Liman von Sanders, the German commander,, is highly optimistic regarding the outcome of the operations. He declared to the Associated Preess correspondent that not only are the British unable to makep rogress but they are losing ground daily.

"With the British fleet unabel to assist in the land operations because of the submarine menace, the British hold on Avi Burnu apparently is not as secure as it was."

"LARGER LIFE" URGED UPON THE GRADUATES

Most of the members of the graduating class of Fulton High school attended the baccalaureate sermon given last night by the Rev. M. G. Buck at the First Baptist church. The graduates occupied seats in the center section of the church directly under the pulpit and on the platform were seated several members of the Fulton clergy. A quartet comprising Messrs. Goodjon, Schaffer and Dr. Conklin of this city, and J. Castor of Syracuse, rendered selections during the service.

In his sermon, Mr. Buck urged that the young people who are about to graduate lead the "Larger Life." He welcomed the class to his church, and expressed regret that this was the last they are to meet as high school pupils. He said many of the people today lead narrow cramped lives, and [illegible] that the graduates live bro[illegible]ll as religious lives. He [illegible] the atheistic assertion [illegible]ians lead narrow lives, and said that Christ forbids His followers nothing that is good for them. He spoke of the wisdom that comes from experiences in life and wished the young people every success in their careers in the world.

Oneof the largest congregations in the history of the church attended the services, and the Sunday school room as well as the church was filled to capacity.

Rev. J. W. Barrett of the First M. E. church was in charge of the Scripture reading and Rev. Charles Olmstead of the Congregational church led in prayer.

EASTERN STAR WOMEN GUESTS AT HANNIBAL

The local chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star enterained at Hannibal on Friday evening. The occasion was in honor of a visit of the grand officers of the district to the Hannibal lodge.

A banquet was served at 6 o'clock. Thirty members of the local chapter were present.

West Side Gets First Whack at Industry

Through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, the Peoples Oil & Fuel Co. of Oswego is about to establish a tank station on the site of the old Bartholomew Fruit Co. plant, near the D. L. & W. station on the west side. They have two 20,000 gallon tanks under construction as well as the necessary tank wagons. Their architect is at present betting out plans and specifications for the building which is to be about forty-five feet long, thirty feet wide and two stories high. As soon as the specifications are complete they will be forwarded to contractors in Fulton and the successful bidder will be able to start work in the very near future.

This is the first new plant to be brought to Fulton as a result of the activity of the Chamber of Commerce. The Division of Industries through its subcommittee on New Industries has been hunting up new prospects for the last three months. Two others are under consideration now, and it is barely possible that one of them may be located here before long. The Chamber has subscribed for Luce's Bulletin which supplies information about factories looking for new sites. In the past three months, more than fifty prospects have been written to, and other inquiries have come unsolicited. The Industries Division has been doing the quiet effective work that will count in the end. It takes time to produce results. They cannot be secured in a few weeks. This plant is the first. In spite of the general industrial condition the Division expects to secure others before long.

The Peoples Oil & Fuel Co. is well known in Fulton as this company has been supplying the trade in Fulton [illegible] since it started in business ten years ago last May. The company started in Oswego on a small scale but since then has established branches in Lacona, Watertown, Clayton and Malone. They have taken on a coal and wood business as a side-line, and with this side-line have been able to compete successfully with their big competitor the Standard Oil.

The Peoples Oil & Fuel Co. handle burning oils, gasoline, lubricating oil, cup grease, transmission oil, etc. They market only products made from the best grade of Pennsylvania crude oil, which is acknowledged to be one of the best grades in the county.

In a letter received by the Chamber of Commerce on Saturday thy says: "It is our intention and has been our policy to patronize home industry in every way possible. Everything we buy, we buy at home. Any profits we make stay in the community. We are not interested in any of the large mail order houses and for this reason we do not compete with the people with whom we do business.

"Our motto is 'People's Service Pleases,' and for this reason we hope that Fulton people will say, 'It's better to say People's because People's is better.'"

ANTI-GERMAN RIOTING IN MOSCOW APPALLING

Petrograde, June 21.—Moscow suffered damage to the amount of $20,000,000 during the recent anti-German demonstrations, in which nearly five hundred stores and factories and more than two hundred lodgings were wrecked.

The infuriated mobs turned the city into disorder, according to eyewitnesses. From music stores pianos and other musical instruments were hurled into the streets until the piles of wreckage made progress throughthese thoroughfares impossible. The rioters, heated with liquor which they found in the demol ished wine stores, became reckless in their pillaging, setting fire to and destroying many stores and apartments, the owners of which were Russians. Of the total number of buildings destroyed only 113 belong to Austro-Germans subjects.

The demonstrations, beginning early on June 9, lasted more than twenty-four hours. Buildings burned and crumbled to ashes, and the fire department, although active throughout the disturbances, found it impossible to cope with the flames, so extensive were the conflagrations.

The Moscow Council at a meeting held on June 10 took measures to quell the disorders and prevent a repetition of the rioting. The number of fatalities is not known.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 64 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM ..., Proprietor and Editor
W. B. ..., Reporter and Assistant Editor
W. H. ..., Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Monday, June 21, 1915

45—PHONE NEWS ITEMS—45

Opinions

Honest Advertising in Missouri

Missouri's "honest advertising" law went into effect yesterday. It is a decided step in the direction of better protection for the purchaser against the deceptions of the dishonest vender. It makes liable to fine and imprisonment the seller or wouldbe seller of merchandise, securities or service who tries to promote a sale through advertisements which contain "any assertion, reprresentation or statement of fact which is untrue, deceptive or misleading."

The morality of the old doctrine of caveat emptor is broadly challenged by the law, so far as the dishonest seller himself is concerned. He is warned that he will commit a misdemeanor if he indulges in the printed misrepresentations on which so much easy and profitable selling has been based.

It is regrettable, however, that the Missouri Legislature did not go further and put upon the advertising medium used by the dishonest vender a larger measure of responsibility for supressing advertising frauds. The law contains a proviso that nothing in it shall apply to any proprietor or publisher of any newspaper or magazine "who publishes or circulates any such advertisement without knowledge of the unlawful nature of the advertisement." This exemption seems to let out those complacent publishers who apply the doctrine of caveat emptor to their readers, and who refuse to scrutinize the advertising which they accept. They cannot have knowledge of the unlawful nature of advertising matter if they take pains to avoid inquiring into its dubious quality.—N.Y. Tribune.

VIEWS OF STATE EDITORS

Assemblyman Adler's proposition for a state budget system failed of action at the last session of the legislature, but the subject of some comprehensive system of handling the financial problems of the State is a live question before the constitution convention and was uppermost at two hearings recently conducted jointly by the committees on state finances and on governor and other state officers. —Rochester Post-Express.

* * *

Since the leaders of the Democratic party are so confident that prosperity has returned and that the American people areb etter off than they were under Republican rule, how would it do for them to announce that in the next campaign they desire the support of only those who have experienced better business conditions under this administration than they have under Republican administrations.—Niagara Falls Gazette.

* * *

If it is proper for the Democratic press and members of the Democratic administration to shout themselves hoarse in laudation of the alleged achievements of the Democratic party, why is it improper for Republicans to show the failures of that party and the misleading nature of its political propaganda?—Gloversville Leader-Republican.

* * *

Democratic newspapers are insisting that Republicans shall not discuss politics while controversies with foreign countries are pending, but they lose no opportunity to give widest publicity to every political speech made by members of the President's cabinet. By what right do Democrats claim the exclusive privilege to talk politics?—Tarrytown News.

* * *

It is reported that when Congress meets again the Democrats in the Senate will make a strong effort to secure a cloture rule in the Senate. It is not likely to succeed. The members of that body have always enjoyed unlimited debate. The custom has been abused, and it has often served a good purpose in the defeat of vicious measures. At the last session of Congress it defeated an outrageously porky river and harbor bill and defeated President Wilson's Ship Purchase bill, both commendable accomplishments.—Penn Yan Express.

* * *

The Democrat and Chronicle has in the past given at length its reasons for urging the appointment of Elihu Root to succeed Mr. Bryan. The suggestion has been made in other quarters that either William H. Taft, Philander C. Knox, or Senator Henry Cabot Lodge would be able to bring wisdom, ability, and knowledge of statescraft to the President's council table. The only question is, will the President have the courage to break the shackles of party in this important matter,—Rochester Democrat & Chronicle.

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Ure of Hastings spent several days of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ure and family in Cayuga st.

* * *

D. A. Northrup spent a recent day in Syracuse.

* * *

Miss Flora Owen, who has been visiting Mrs. E. M. Baldwin, of Volney, for the past two weeks, has returned.

* * *

William Gorham, formerly of this city, but now of Ilion, spent Sunday here.

* * *

Kelsey Pitcher, who has been suffering with a sprained ankle, is now able to about.

* * *

James Lusk of Albany was in the city last week on account of the illness and death of his mother, Mrs. Harriet Lusk.

* * *

William Gorham was in Syracuse recently on business.

* * *

Horace Burdick has gone to Ilion where he has secured a position with the Remington Arms Company.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

GIVE THE PEOPLE A REST

One of the strongest arguments presented in favor of widening First st. between Rochester and Broadway, is that if the work is not done in conjunction with the laying of the brick pavement there will result a bad stretch of roadway when eventually it is deemed advisable to carry out the project of widening the street. Admitting the logic of the argument, is it good business policy to spend upon the particular section of East First st. as much as $8000 or $10,000 when by the testimony of hundreds of taxpayers it is impossible for property owners to get for themselves and their families the right kind of protection from disease because of the absence of sewers in so very many of the city's streets? It is hard to reconcile the change of sentiment that has taken place in the Board of Public Works since the mid-winter meetings were held. Then it was the sense of the Board that all superfluous work upon streets should stop during 1915; that instead of spending the small amount of available money for the improvement of roadways there should begin a concerted movement to give those taxpayers who have for years been crying for sewers a measure of proper consideration. This sentiment in the Board of Public Works met with the sympathy of a long-suffering lot of taxpayers, who said amen to the idea. Must it be that their hopes are to be blasted for another year, provided that at tonight's meeting of the Board and Paving Board the vote will result in the authorization of the widening project?

No one can dispute the fact that East First between Rochester st. and Broadway is dangerously narrow, but the street has not grown narrower during the last ten years, nor will it grow narrower within the next ten years. While it is unwise as a rule to follow the precept that "what was good enough for father, is good enough for son," at the present time, with the city's finances in anything but a satisfactory condition, and with the need of a new high school actually staring the taxpayers in the face, and with the hundred and one spots where the spending of money might result in giving the people the right kind of protection from contagion, there can be but one, and only one sensible and logical argument to use—have First st. paved according to the specifications, but for the sake of all that is sensible give the people a rest from assuming an added burden for the widening of the street, which is in reality not too narrow to accommodate the traffic of a town as large again as Fulton, N.Y.

IMPROVING STATE LANDS

Lockmaster Carlin's efforts to secure the prize offered by the State for the best kept lands bordering the barge canal should meet with the co-operation of the citizenship of this city, for while Mr. Carlin has a measure of self-interest in his work, the result of the labor expended in making beauty spots of what might be otherwise barren places is bound to redound to the credit of the entire city. "It suits us, it will suit you" can only be made a reality by heaps upon heaps of the work carried on by Mr. Carlin. Fulton, the city of diversified opportunities, holds acreas of undeveloped opportunities for beautifying; its many wide streets, splendid wide lawns and rolling land offer to the lovers of landscape gardening unexcelled chances of development, that should in time make the city famous for flower gardens, and veritable bowers of beauty.

When it shall become compulsory for a municipality to keep free from debris beautiful river banks such as this city is favored with then shall the emulation of Mr. Carlin's work result in something more tangible as an advertising medium than dozens of electric signs announcing to the stranger that he is in Fulton, N. Y. The beautifying of the state lands bordering upon the barge canal is a splendid forward step.

GREAT BEAR OFFICERS HELD AN OUTING

Officers and district managers of the Great Bear Springs Company held an outing Saturday at the farm south of this city.

Thosep resent were F. A. Emerick, president; Stanley P. Emerick, vice-president; directors R. A. Downey and F. B. Shepherd, of Oswego; A. G. Gilbert, of Fulton; J. H. Brandt, of Philadelphia, and W. T. Easterbrook of Washington; district managers F. L. Rose, Ambrien; William Riekenberger, William Barr, L. M. Alexander and others, representing Brooklyn, Washington, Philadelphia, Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, Albany, Buffalo and other points. Many of these men, while they have been in charge of the sale of Great Bear spring water for many years, have never before seen the source of the supply.

BATHED IN THE NUDE

Bathing in the nude, a crowd of boys who are no longer of tender years, attracted the attention of pedestrians on Broadway bridge late Sunday evening. Swimming trunks and tights are comparatively easy to obtain and they give indication of an intent to comply with the demands of society. A city ordinance penalizes offenders.

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black [illegible]

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardose Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardose

Albany, June 21.—Possibly the only amendment to the State Constitution which has been proposed which seeks to benefit a specified group of people, has been presented by Delegate Francis A. Winslow of Westchester County. Mr. Winslow has taken his stand behind the paid firemen and hope to have the convention approve of his scheme, which is to provide in the Constitution that there shall be a State-wide observance of the platoon system for paid fire fighters.

The amendment would alter Section One, article twelve, by providing that the hours of labor of any city employe shall not exceed more than twelve hours in any twenty-four, except in cases of emergency.

The proposition has been before the committee on cities of the convention, there having been a hearing upon it. This committee is expected to report it favorably, although the city of New York is opposed to the text of the amendment because of the added expense it would cause.

For many years the Firemen's Mutual Benefit Association has been working to secure a uniform two-platoon system law, but other than to have succeeded in having legislation affecting certain cities passed and signed, its efforts have failed. This organization now has a membership of five thousand and is steadily growing.

That the Winslow project is a popular one is evinced by the advocacy of it which numerous municipalities throughout the State have announced. The paid firemen of course, heartily favor it ardently.

Delegate Winslow believes that the people of the State will ratify his proposed amendment if it is accepted by the convention delegates. "It will mean that the beds of firemen in fire houses will be removed," said he in discussing it. "When paid firemen are on duty they need no longer pass the night at the headquaters of their company, but at their homes where normal men should sleep.

"The two platoon system makes for efficiency. In the city of Yonkers it has been tried for the past two years and the fire loss per capita has been reduced one-half as the result. The efficiency of the men has been increased one hundred per cent also.

"This same condition is true of any municipality. The firemen spend twenty-one hours each day in the fire house, being allowed one hour for each of three meals. They sleep in the house and arc separated from their families for ten days at a time. In some sections of New York city a fireman gets to his home only upon the day he is allowed to take off. In that he does not live the life of a normal man, it cannot be expected that he will do the work of one."

The Winslow proposal meet with tthe favor of many of the delegates and it is predicted that if it is favorably reported by the committee on cities that it will be adopted by the convention without much opposition It may be, however, that the delegates from New York city may not be as enthusiastic for the proposal as they might have been had not officials of the metropolis opposed it at the hearing.

The Winslow proposition does not affect members of the police force being applicable solely to the paid members of the fire departments of cities.

SENATORS TO CONDUCT PROBE INTO FINANCES

Albany, June 21.—The Brown committee, which is to investigate New York city finances, it was learned today, will organize for that work next week. Senator Brown is here to confer with Speaker Sweet relative to the personnel of the committee.

The Senate members of the committee, it can be stated with authority will be Elon R. Brown, of Watertown George Cromwell, of Richmond, and C. W. Wicks, of Oneida county, Republicans, and Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Thomas Cullen, of Brooklyn, Democrats.

The long delay in the selection of the committee, caused many persons to infer that the plan to investigate had been abandoned, but it is said now Senator Brown is determined to [illegible]

Have You Seen
THE LATEST STYLES
of
SOLID SILVERWARE
G. B. FARLEY
21 First Street
Can show you a full line. Just the kind for WEDDING GIFTS

Dental Specialists
DR. F. H. CONKLIN
Prophylactic and Crown and Bridge Work
DR. H. W. WHITNEY
Gold Inlays, Somnoforme (sleep-paper) for painless extraction of teeth.
15 Years Experience
OFFICE HOURS: 8 A. M. to 5 P. M.
OPEN EVENINGS
Over
PATTERSON'S Dept. Store
113 Oneida Street

Onyx
Billiard Room
The Coolest and the Best Equipped.
The only Billiard Table in the City
G. J. POWELL, Mgr.
PHONE 560 QUIRK THEATRE BLDG.

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

BOYS THREW BRICK AND BOTTLE AT GOVERNOR

Boston, June 21.—A bottle and a brick were hurled from the roof of a house at Governor Walsh and Mayor Curely as they were being driven through the streets of Charlestown durin gthe Bunker Hill celebration. The missiles missed the carriage by a few feet. Two youths were found in the house and arrested. They told the police they did it "as a lark."

LEGAL NOTICES

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF OSWEGO.—Edna I. Sharp, Plaintiff, against Lewlla Newton, J. Clifton Larkin, Bridget Gibbons, Henderson & Thompson Company, Defendants.

Pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale made in the above entitled action, at a Special Term of the Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the City of Syracuse, New York, on the 22d day of May, 1915, and duly entered in the Oswego County Clerk's Office, on the 24th day of May, 1915, I, the undersigned, the referee, duly appointed in and by said judgment for that purpose, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, the 10th day of July, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the City Hall, No. 67 East First Street, South, in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego, New York, the real estate directel by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: ALL THAT TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, situate in the City of Fulton, New York, known and describel as three rods off from the East end of Lot No. 1 of Block No. 512 of the original Village of Fulton.

Dated May 24, 1915.

H. L. GILMAN,
Referee.

FRED'K G. SPENCER,
Attorney for Plaintiff,
[illegible]

PURE ICE CREAM
"The Only Kind You Ought to Buy or Eat"
WE MAKE AND DELIVER IT
Only Pure Flavors, Fresh Fruits and Heaviest of Cream used. Most Delicious Fountain Drinks
FRESH FRUITS AND HIGH-GRADE CONFECTIONERY
PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

HOW A CHECK SAVED OVERPAYMENT
Because he paid by check, a man was saved from paying a bill the second time. Upon producing the endorsed check as a voucher, no further questions were asked.
Your checking account is invited.

A Cooling Breeze in Your Kitchen!

A turn of the switch will bring you Cool Comfort on the Hottest Day positively and without effort on your part. Come in and look over our Hot Weather Helps

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY

Phone 144

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

Cahill's Perfection Bread

is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

APPLICANTS MADE RUNS ON SLIPPERY PAVEMENTS

Thirty-three candidates appeared before John A. Hamlin, examiner, in Oswego Saturday, to undergo examinations as chauffeurs.

The first test was the driving and it was made under most unpleasant conditions, rain falling heavily between 9 and 10 o'clock when Mr. Hamlin put the men through their paces at the wheel. The slippery pavements gave the candidates a chance to show their skill at the brakes and levers.

Following the outdoor test a written examination was held in which all the candidates took part, as follows:

Oswego City—Joseph G. Allen, James Hoey, George F. Penfield, Fred L. Snyder, A. E. Himes, Joseph A. Cole, Raymond Ottman, James A. Kenney, Charles H. Glynn, George Medler, James H. Lafave, George F. Otis, Harold Donahue.

Fulton—F. W. Stewart, W. F. Woodward, Eugene Ingraham.

Mexico—Don A. Culkins, Fred De Lapp, Louis D. Moulton, Harry Fish.

Pulaski—S. J. Cross, Roy C. Flagg, O. B. Olmstead, Claude L. Bonney, Irving Walker, Walter Farnham.

New Haven—Carlton Leavitt, Byron L. Miller (Demster).

Redfield—W. J. Aloan, Floyd Commins.

Osceola—J. A. Thurston, Charles E. Aloan.

Sterling—Charles McIntyre.

The papers submitted will be examined at the bureau in Albany and the candidates will be notified if they have passed. Several of those examined are the owners of cars. Mr. Hamlin said that the candidates did very well.

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents

POST-GRADUTE DANCE BEGINS AT LATE HOUR

The committee in charge of the post-graduation dance of the Junior class of Fulton High school will meet today to make the final arrangements for the affair. The dance is slated to begin at 11 o'clock and will continue until twenty dances have been finished, or until about 3 o'clock. The music will be furnished by a special orchestra, and owing to the late hour of starting, only light refreshments will be served.

Invitations for 250 have been issued and as this will be the last dance of the season a record attendance is expected. The dance will be held in Davis' hall, and the hall will be decorated for the occasion with the class colors. Harold O'Brien is chairman of the committee in charge of the affair.

POLICEMEN PLAY BALL TOMORROW AFTERNOON

The Fulton police baseball team, recently organized, will make its bow to the public tomorrow afternoon at Athletic Park when the officers meet the Fulton All-Stars, an aggregation composed largely of Alumni of Fulton High school. It is rumored that John Painter, who pitches for the Fulton Red Men will be in the box for the bluecoats, and the All-Stars have not, as yet, announced their battery. It is expected that the game will attract many spectators to the park, not only as a baseball offering, but, knowing the capabilities of several members of the police aggregation, many expect to see some good vaudeville. The game will start at 3.30 o'clock. Prepare for a late supper.

THE QUIRK TODAY

Listen! Have you ever heard of Satan? Sure you have. "Satan" has been made the hero of a sensational $200,000 Photodrama. Something so entirely different from anything ever produced that it fills your theatre with an atmosphere that grips and holds your audience spellbound by its fascination and sublimeness, it throbs, delights and finally sends them away with a feeling that they have passed through an experience so wonderful, as to be an everlasting teaching.

Strange statement that, but true. The success of "Satan" is written in many figures on the bank books of the leading European and American theatres. Its long run at the magnificent Crystal Palace, London, is the record for that house. "Satan" is now playing to record breaking audiences at the Palace theatre, Buffalo, New York.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

An Effective Cough Treatment

One-fourth to one teaspoonful of Dr. King's New Discovery, taken as needed, will soothe and check Coughs, colds and the more dangerous bronchial and Lung Ailments. You can't afford to take the risk of serious illness, when so cheap and simple a remely as Dr. King's New Discovery is obtainable. Go to your Druggist today, get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, start the treatment at once. You will be grateful for the relief and...

REGENTS' STANDING of FULTON STUDENTS

HIGH SCHOOL

FRENCH III

Margaret Kimber Clark, 91; Alfred E. Fivaz, 91; Florence Fallon, 80; Ethel M. Hewett, 63; Lena Kaplan, 74; Clara Sylvester, 72.

FRENCH II

Lester F. Gillespie, 71; Mildred A. Hart, 63; Lucy L. McCaffrey, 70; Eryma E. Paige, 73; Lola B. Palmer, 77; Wilber Fay Parsons, 75; Bernard S. Reswick, 67; Herman Robillard, 66; Elizabeth S. Royce, 83; Eleanor T. Rugg, 80; Fred M. Rust, 82; Lilian Waldhorn, 77; Liela J. Wilcox, 70; Muriel A. Winters, 67; Edna May Wolcott, 76.

GERMAN II

Esther Aylesworth, 83; Phoebe Austin, 75; H. Claude Barker, 62; Mary V. Carroll, 88; Raymond Eames, 61; Lenora Eames, 92; Matthew Frawley, 76; Reine Gilbert, 66; Marjory Haskins 82; Nelson Hopkins 68; J. Charlton Hunter, 84; Stella Johnson, 80; Fred Johnson, 74; Frederic King, 91; Rose M. King, 77; Lucille Lomasney, 61; Laura McKenna, 68; Florence Moody, 65; Harriet Nichols, 64; Frances O. Hare, 61; Lola Palmer, 78; John M. Reynolds, 63; Lillian Simons, 83; Louise Taggart, 74; Nicholas Wallace, 70; Rose Walsh, 66.

GERMAN III

Leland Carner, 65; Lenora Eames, 77; Eliza Hubbard, 81; Frederic King, 82; Harold J. Martin, 70; Isabel Merriam, 60; Eva Rath, 64; Herman Robillard, 68; Wallace Russell, 64; Lillian Simons, 77; Jessie Wilcox, 68.

PAVING BOARD DECIDES ISSUE

Final Vote Upon Widening Project to Be Taken Tonight at City Hall

Tonight the Fulton Paving Board will meet to decide the question of the width of 1st st. between Rochester st. and Broadway. It is understood at present that Commissioners Stevenson and Garrett are in favor of making the street three feet wider when it is paved, while Commissioners Mason and Gage object to the added expense of the improvement. The stand of Commissioner Wiltsie will decide the question in all probability, and he announced last week that he would be governed by the opinion of the majority of taxpayers.

According to President Stevenson of the Board of Public Works, the Paving Bard has virtually no authority whatsoever when it comes to a question of the width of the street, as that question lies within the province of the Board of Public Works to decide. The Board of Public Works has already recommended that the street shall be three feet wider.

The plans and specifications drawn up by the State Department of Highways provides for a paved street the same width as the present thoroughfare and any additional paving will have to be contracted for by a supplemental agreement with the paving contractor. The total cost, according to the State estimate, will approximate $12,000, while the expense of making the street wider will cost an additional $5,000 or more.

BAD AUTO CRASH NARROWLY AVERTED

Yesterday afternoon as H. C. Gardner's automobile being driven on the River Road was about to make the turn leading into the yard of Fred Dessum a large automobile came suddenly from the rear and, without slacking speed or heeding the signal given by the driver of the Gardner car, whirled by just grazing the Gardner car which by quick action on the part of the driver had been brought to a standstill.

The other car, which contained two men was without control and ran into the Dessum yard completely crushing two small shade trees and making a complete circuit of the yard and back into the ditch at the roadside, where, of its own accord, it stopped with three punctured tires, a bent axle and other minor damage.

When the runaway car was finally approached by the astonished spectators it was found the driver had fainted, evidently frorm sheer fright. Restoratives were applied and shortly after the two men were brought to the city in the Gardner car.

GAS STRUCK IN COAL FIELD OF MARYLAND

Cumberland, Md., June 21.—At a depth of 600 feet gas has was discovered in the test oil well being sunk near Lonaconing. The fact that the flow continues is taken as an indication that it is permanent and not a pocket. This is the first discovery in thisc oal field.

For Tired Feet—Feather-weight Arch Supports, at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair Shop, 110 Cayuga St.

INCREASED PAY IS HELD BACK

Letter Carriers Will Not For Some Time Get Increased Salaries

Letter carriers entitled by mandatory law to raises in salaries will not receive their increases due at the beginning of the fiscal year by reason of the failure of the Sixty-third Congress to pass the Postoffice Appropriation Bill. The men in the local post office service who have been figuring on getting higher pay and have planned already how to spend it are taking the matter philosophically, because they are satisfied that whatever amount is withheld from them will come to them in a lump sum after Congress shall have an opportunity to pass a deficiency bill. Thrifty ones argue that it's just like putting money in the bank.

The Washington postal authorities have notified postmasters to make no further recommendations for increases in salaries on account of a lack of funds, and the men who had been looking forward to increases will have to plan to get along on their present incomes and trust to further congressional action for settlement of Uncle Sam's obligations to them.

Under an act of Congress approved March 2, 1907, the salaries of letter carries were standardized. The act provides that carriers' salaries shall be increased from $800 to $900 after the first year, from $900 to $100 after the second year, and from $1000 to $1100 after the third year. Increases from $1100 to $1200 after the fourth year depend upon recommendations of the men and appropriations made by Congress to cover the increases. Some years 50 per cent and other years 75 per cent of the men on the lists entitled to increases have been provided for by the appropriations.

When the Post Office Appropriation Bill failed of passage at the last session Congress adopted a resolution introduced by Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, continuing the 1914-1915 appropriations.

JUDGE FINED MALICK $50 AND ALL COSTS

Steve Malick, the Polak who assaulted John Holtz, a bartender, in South 1st st. early Friday evening, was fined $50 in City Court Saturday afternoon by Judge Wilson. Malick and Holtz disagreed about the cost of drinks, which Holtz sold Malick. The Pole claims he was short-changed, where as Holtz says Malick wanted a cut-rate. They argued the question on the way home and when Holtz would not give Malick money the Pole ran into his house and returning with a set of brass knuckles, laid Holtz low. Several stitches were required to close the cut in Holtz's lip and his jaw was badly bruised.

George Newsbaum caught Malick atfer a long chase and he was brought to the police station. The charge was assault in the third degree and Malick decided to plead guilty. When the fine was imposed he spoke a few words to a countryman who was in the court room and that worthy promptly produced the $50.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Philadelphia at Pittsburgh.
Only one game scheduled.

Results Yesterday

Cincinnati, 2; Philadelphia, 1.
Chicago, 6; Brooklyn, 1.
St. Louis, 8; Boston, 2.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	30	21	.588
St. Louis	32	26	.552
Philadelphia	28	23	.549
iPttsburgh	25	25	.500
Boston	24	28	.462
Brooklyn	24	29	.453
New York	21	26	.447
Cincinnati	21	27	.438

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Washington.
New York at Philadelphia.
Only two games scheduled.

Results Yesterday

Chicago, 7; Cleveland, 1; 1st game.
Chicago, 3; Cleveland 0; 2d game.
St. Louis, 1; Detroit, 0.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	37	20	.649
Boston	28	18	.609
Detroit	34	24	.586
New York	27	24	.529
Washington	24	24	.500
Cleveland	21	32	.396
St. Louis	20	34	.370
Philadelphia	19	34	.358

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Brooklyn.
Chicago at Baltimore.
Kansas City at Buffalo.
Pittsburgh at Newark.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 2; Newark, 0; 1st game.
Newarrk, 3; Pittsburgh, 0; 2d game.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	36	22	.621
St. Louis	31	21	.596
Pittsburgh	29	25	.537
Chicago	30	27	.526
Newark	28	28	.500
Brooklyn	28	28	.500
Baltimore	20	33	.377
Buffalo	21	39	.350

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Albany at Utica.
Elmira at Wilkesbarre.
Binghamton at Scranton.

Results Yesterday

Troy, 4; Syracuse, 3; 1st game.
Syracuse, 7; Troy, 4; 2d game.
Utica, 4; Albany, 0; 1st game.
Utica, 2; Albany, 0; 2d game.
Wilkesbarre, 8; Elmira, 6.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	24	14	.632
Elmira	24	17	.585
Binghamton	20	17	.541
Troy	20	18	.526
Scranton	18	19	.486
Wilkesbarre	19	21	.475
Albany	15	24	.385
Syracuse	15	25	.375

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Montreal at Toronto.
Buffalo at Rochester.
Richmond at Providence.
Newarrk at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Newark, 6; Jersey City, 3; 1st game.
Newark, 5; Jersey City, 1; 2d game.
Montreal, 5; Rochester, 2.
Providence-Richmond; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Providence	27	17	.614
Buffalo	23	17	.575
Montreal	25	22	.532
Rochester	23	22	.511
Richmond	23	22	.511
Toronto	22	25	.468
Newark	20	23	.465
Jersey City	16	31	.340

SCHOOL MONEY AT HAND

County Treasurer Kandt received on Saturday from the State a check for $35,168, the balance of the school fund, appropriated for Oswego county.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day.
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4646
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

SODA AND MINERAL WATERS
Made in Fulton. Best Extracts. Purity Guaranteed.
Delivery to any part of town.
A. J. THOMPSON
Phone 1542 112 Pratt St.

TIRE VULCANIZING
by Standard Steam Process
All Work Guaranteed.
B. L. COLE
Phone 2307 22 S. 1st St.

UNDERTAKERS
YOUNG & HILL. Open day and night at 117 Oneida. Phone 2172.

SOME COUNTRY KIDDIES SHOW CIVIC SPIRIT

A letter recently received from R. F. D. 3 by The Evening Times shows our rural neighbors are developing the spirit of Big Brotherhood. It is not necessary to do big deeds to show the co-operative helpfulness of all persons, one toward another, in groups or as individuals, that should exist in every Christian kind of place.

The letter, with its few words makes one think. It is as follows:

Dear Editor:—

There is so much said about the betterment of Fulton, but in order to make a better Fulton one must make the country around the city better too.

As a beginning six little children from this section, from twelve years old down to seven years, have worked earnestly and burnt many hundreds of worm nests from the trees. They have also cut down a lot of wild cherry brush which is the breeding place of the tent caterpillars.

Hoping this will be of interest to you, I remain,

Very truly yours,
Mrs. William Hartman,
R. D. 3, Fulton.

The Evening Times is reasonably sure that the entire city of Fulton salutes the kiddies for their efforts and gladly puts them in the circle of workers for a Bigger, Better Fulton.

EASTERN END GETS NEW NATIONAL BANK

Report comes from Pulaski that sufficient amount of stock has been subscribed in the village to warrant making application for a charter for what may be known as the People's National bank. The institution is to be capitalized at $50,000.

D/34

When You Can Get a Guaranteed
BICYCLE
FOR $25.00 AND UP
Why go further than
BOGUES, 81 First Street
The Bicycle Garage

WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudy and warmer tonight. Tuesday, showers with east to southeast winds, becoming warmer Tuesday.

EX-FULTON MAN TELLS OF NEW YORK'S VISIT

Reports from the exposition, particularly when New York State was the official guest are not without interest. A letter from W. J. Pentlow to Horace Gilbert describes the visit of the Governor of this State. It is as follows:

Dear Friends:

We have been having some real summer weather for a few days. Yesterday morning at five-thirty the Whitman train pulled into this city and at eighty-thirty I brought up at the depot and found a long train of Pullman compartment and dining cars, and all lettered New York Central. It looked good to see them. I soon ran onto Thad. Sweet, and he went with me to George Glynn's car.

At ten a.m. the party was escorted to the grounds by a company of U. S. cavalry and infantry. After lunch with the exposition officials I took Mr. Glynn and wife, Speaker Sweet and wife and the wife of the Lieut-Governor and with Gertie we took them through our building and a portion of the grounds. The New York state Society was holding a picnic in the Zapper grove and the Governor gave them a short talk. It was a very enjoyable day. I also met a woman whom I knew well over fifty years ago who then lived at Hull's Corners. She married Edward Fish of Phoenix and is now living in San Diego and came to the grounds to meet the Sweets. The governors of several states have visited us, but the one yesterday was the swellest affair of them all. With the Governor was about twenty-five of his military staff all dressed in pure white from shoes to caps and created quite a sensation. The train is costing the State of New York $1200 per day. Tomorrow sixty-one of the most beautiful women in the United States will be on the grounds for two days. They have been selected by judges from all the States in the union and yesterday in Los Angeles a committee selected the most beautiful of the sixty-one—a girl from Washington, D.C. They will arrive tomorrow morning and will be met by sixty-one bachelors who will act as escort for each girl and San Diego ladies will distribute bouquets of American Beauty roses to each. So the next two days will be hummers. There are several more governors due here up to September. Roosevelt and party have reservations at the Grant hotel for the latter part of the month or July I should say. We are looking forward to strenuous days now for the next three months at least. The Fourth of July is to be celebrated in grand style here on the Exposition grounds. I don't know if I can hold up to the end or not but will do the best possible.

Yours,
W. J. Pentelow.

HAMMOCKS
Sturdy—Comfortable
Just the thing for your Porch or lawn.
Priced from $1.25 to $8.00
A. M. DRUSE & CO.
1 South First St.

THE DOOR'S WIDE OPEN AND NOBODY ON THE GATE.

—Donahey in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fulton Keynotes

Mrs. Allen Dashman of Lysander visited friends here Sunday.

* * *

Fred Perry of 3d and West Broadway is suffering with an attack of appendicitis.

* * *

Mrs. J. Merton Watson of Academy st. will entertain the Thursday Euchre club at her home Thursday afternoon.

* * *

Mrs. W. A. Rogers of Hannibal st. has been the guest of Hannibal friends.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Peck of West 1st st. ae rejoicing over the birth of a son. Mrs. Peck was formerly Miss Blanche Hillick.

* * *

Miss Eva Blake of Walradt st. has just closed a very successful year as teacher at South Granby and has been re-engaged for another year.

* * *

Charles Perry was the over-Sunday guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Perry, Worth st.

* * *

Mrs. George Dingle has been the guest of friends in Baldwinsville.

* * *

Mrs. E. H. Taft and children of South 3d st. are visiting relatives at Corning.

* * *

Mrs. H. D. Sylvester and daughter Belle, of Hartford, Conn., arrived this morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Merriam of Oneida st. The visitors will remain in Fulton during the next two months.

* * *

Fred W. Stewart and William F. Woodward of the city took the examination test for chauffeur's license at Oswego on Saturday.

* * *

Miss Isabelle Diamond is home from Bryn Mawr college to spend her vacation with her mother at the home of J. W. Stevenson, West 1st st.

* * *

James Lusk of Albany has been in the city having been called here by the death of his mother, Mrs. Harriet Lusk.

* * *

Frank Snow of this city has been the guest of Central Square friends of a few days.

* * *

Mrs. Fred Lamphere, who has been at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rogers, has sufficiently recovered from injuries received in a runaway accident so as to return to her home in Ira.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henderson, who have been the guests of the former's father, Oren Henderson, leave for their home in Minneapolis, Minn., tomorrow.

* * *

The home paper, which by the way is your paper, invites you to contribute your news items. Phone 45.

* * *

Mr. Oren Henderson accompanied by Mrs. May Willard and Miss Revels motored yesterday to Chenango county to the home of the Kellogg's, where Mrs. Willard will remain for a week's visit.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Chesbro, of State st., are enterataining Mr. and Mrs. Glen Chesbro of Syracuse.

* * *

Rev. H. D. Holmes and family were recent guests of Hannibal friends.

* * *

Harold W. Hill of Utica st. and Emmaline Loveland, also of this city, procured a marriage license at the officeof the City Clerk this morning.

* * *

Miss Clara Hubbard of Hastings, is the week-end guest of Miss Frances Lewis of Worth st. Both young women will graduate from Oswego Normal school tomorrow morning. Miss Lewis will teach in Henderson, and Miss Hubbard has taken a position in Mexico.

* * *

Rev. C. S. Robertson, his son Harold Robertson, Leon Scudder, Patrolman Fox and Captain Norton motored to Fair Haven Saturday afternoon, but got a poor break in luck at the angling sport. The Robertson team brought home a fair sized catch but the rest of the party had poor luck owing to the off-shore wind.

* * *

Mrs. John Painter of the West Side has returned home from a visit at the home of her father in Ballston Springs. Miss Laura Painter of Ballston Springs is visiting her parents here.

* * *

Game Warden Travers arrested a foreigner at the upper falls this morning as the man was pulling a carp from the water. The man is one of the many foreigners who is being supported by the charities department and it is not that he will be prosecuted.

PULLEN AND MARTIN ARE RE-INSTATED

The Board of Education held a special meeting Saturday night to consider the status of the high school students who were last week expelled for misbehavior. The following resolution was adopted by the Board:

Resolved, that Markey Pullen and Frederick Martin be re-instated at the next regular meeting of the board and that high school diplomas be issued to them at that time.

LONG DAY TODAY

Today, June 21, the longest day in the year.

Joys are supposed to shorten a day, and woes lengthen, but duration of daylight really is the measure of the day.

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY
"SATAN"
The Drama of Humanity
A powerful 5 act drama showing the relations of the spiritual to the material man, and the thrilling experiences of the world's historic characters. 2 others-2.

TUESDAY
HIGH SCHOOL CLASS PLAY
No Pictures

WEDNESDAY
The Great Extravanza
"THE WIZARD OF OZ"

MIKE'S BIKE BUMPED THE CAR

He Was One of Many Men Who Imbibed Too Freely ---Sunday Selling

If intoxicated men are evidence that industrial conditions in a city are flurishing this city should be a lively industrial center, for Saturday night the number of drunken men on the streets was greater than for some months past, in fact more cases of intoxication were noticed Saturday than the entire week preceding. Four arrests were made and $20 in fines was collected this morning when three of the four men were arraigned before Judge Wilson. Two paid fines of $5 each and another was fined $10. One man has not yet been arraigned.

Mike Smith, a farmer of Bowen's Corners, was riding down the hill at the west end of the lower bridge Saturday night when he lost control of his bicycle and crashed into a Ford car owned by the Wilson and Scott taxi company. Mike landed hard and did no apparent damage to the Ford although his bicycle was badly smashed. When a policeman arrived Mike was becoming violent and perceiving the fragrant odor of hops on Mike the copper took him to jail. Mike was very much intoxicated, and still felt the effects this morning. His case was postponed until tomorrow.

Several cases of drunkeness were noticed on the streets of the city and investigation disclosed that one cafe in the center of the down-town district had a well-filled back room. It is probable that a crusade against the Sunday selling will be started by the District Attorney at once.

One man, very drunk, stationed himself in front of the police station last evening on the curb. Suddenly losing his balance, he keeled over into the roadway and sprawled out on the brick pavement narrowly escaping injury from a passing automobile.

CITY SEALER FINDS DISHONEST VENDERS

City Sealer Harry M. O'Brien has started a crusade against the country strawberry raisers who are shipping boxes of berries only partly filled. The City Sealer stated this morning that he had examined several boxes of berries and had found the berries on the top of the box large and ripe, but lower in the box the berries were green and several of the boxes were only loosely filled with the berries. One berry vender was ordered to fill his boxes and another man was compelled to dump out some bad fruit he was tryin gto dispose of. The City Sealer will prosecute any vender who attempts to sell berries if the box is only partly filled.

One of the restaurant owners of the city is awaiting the visit of the City Sealer who notified him this afternoon that one of the restaurant's patrons compalined about the size of pie cuts. When questioned over the telephone, the restaurateur said there were six cuts in every pie, whereas the complaining patron said he received a piece so small that eight cuts must have been made. The City Sealer told the man the cuts must be more uniform hereafter.

MRS. LEVINA H. SPERRY

Mrs. Levina H. Sperry, aged 75, died yesateday at her home, 318 Cayuga st. after a long illness. Mrs. Sperry was one of the oldest woman residents of this city, and although born in Volney had lived here all her life.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Eliza D. Skell, of Mount Pleasant; one daughter, Mrs. W. T. Brown, of Indianapolis, Ind.; and three brothers, J. C. Osborne, of Constantia, Anson J. Osborne, of Albany, and Almon Osborne of Mount Pleasant.

Rev. H. D. Holmes will officiate at the funeral, which will be held from her late home tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. Burial will be made in Mt. Adnah cemetery.

FORMER M. E. PASTOR DEAD AT POTSDAM

The Rev. C. C. Townsend, a former pastor of the First M. E. Church of this city, died yesterday at 1 a. m., in Potsdam, where he was engaged to preach the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the State Normal school.

Mr. Townsend's illness began a few hours before his death and was induced by an attack of acute indigestion. Funeral services will be held in the Potsdam M. E. church tomorrow afternoon.

CHANGED HOURS OF SERVICE AT ST. MARY'S

Father John Lindsman of the Church of the Immaculate Conception announced yesterday that work on the parochial school will be resumed at once. The school contractor hopes to have the school finished by fall, and the greater part of the work to be done consists in putting in the interior furnishings and roofing.

In his sermon at the 10.30 mass, Father Lindsman for the first time in several months talked of the war in Europe and of the effect the war has had on religion. He cited Pope Benedict as the greatest living factor for peace and told of several incidents where the war has had the effect of turning many people toward religious lives. He blamed the mode of life of the present day as one of the great causes of the war. He did not attempt to place the blame for the war, and expressed a hope that the conflict would terminate speedily.

The regular high mass at 10.30 o'clock will be discontinued during the summer months and the early mass will be the principal service, followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The Sunday school children will be given a two months' vacation and there will be no catechism classes either on Saturday or Sunday.

GUERNSEY BROTHERS ARE SHERIFF'S BUCK BOARDERS

The three Guernsey brothers, charged with the larceny of twenty-one chickens from the farm of Aaron De Graf at Lysander, were taken to the Oswego county jail Saturday afternoon. The arrest of the men followed and investigation by Chief Dyer and Detectives Brannigan and Gordon after information hed been given the police department by a woman in Lysander who noticed the three men bound for Fulton with bags and valises.

Two of the men confessed their guilt after they were confronted with the feathers of the chickens, which had been found in the Guernsey cellar, but one of the brothers still refuses to talk. He fought against arrest and it was only after a hard struggle that the police were able to bring him to jail.

PAIGE WON HONORS IN YESTERDAY'S GAME

The Clippers of Oswego won a hard game from the Red Men yesterday afternoon at the Fair grounds, the final score standing 12-11. Painter and Fayette were in the points for the Red Men, while Higgins and Foster were the battery men for the Clippers.

The feature of the game was the all-round playing of Arthur Paige of the Red Men. Out of five times at bat, Paige got two doubles and one triple. His catch of Higgins' foul fly in the fifth inning was the fielding feature. Paige had to run through the crowd and finally caught the ball on the edge of the hardware building.

Both pichers were hit freely, but the Clippers managed to make their bingles count when hits meant runs. Fulton showed lack of practice but in the return game the locals expect to trim the Oswegonians.

MUSICAL TREAT FOR BROADWAY RESIDENTS

Residents in the neighborhood of the home of W. C. Calkins, at 5th and Broadway, enjoyed a rare musical treat last night. Many were the classical selections played upon the 'cello, the concert harp, the flute and the piano. There were solos and duets and instrumental music by the talent who embraced Miss Halstead, pianist of Syracuse University; Miss Phoenix, 'cello, of Syracuse; Herman Randall, harpist, of this city. David Carroll, a pupil of Prof. Frye, of Syracuse University, and Mr. Barnes, whose reputation as a performer on the flute is quite extended.

Miss Phoenix is enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Calkins for a short time, and Miss Halstead is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Stevens, at 409 E. Broadway.

FOUR LOCAL UNIONS HELD OUTINGS YESTERDAY

The Bartenders, Painters, Paperhangers and Carpenters' Locals of this city nejoyed a picnic at Reynolds' woods, north of the city yesterday. Good things to eat were dispensed in an open-handed manners. Pigs' knuckles and cabbage was the chef d' ouvre of the day. In the afternoon the Carpenters beat the Bartenders in a baseball game, the final score standing 21-4. Aside from a few broken fingers the game resulted in no casualties of any kind. The party returned to this city early in the evening.

Only Two Days Before Graduation and you haven't selected that present yet.
Come in and look over our collections--let us help you decide.
Wm. C. Morgan
Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf

For Sale—Grocery store doing good business; will bear investigation. Good reason for selling. Inquire C, Times office. 159c

Furnished Rooms for housekeeping, or by day or week. 205 Cayuga st. 161c

For Sale—Five White Leghorn hens, good layers; cheap if taken at once. Phone 1511. 157c

Tenement House to Rent—Pine st.; $10 month. Inquire H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf

Work Wanted.—A few ironings to do. Address K., Times office. 156c

Furnished Rooms for light housekeeping. Inquire 512 S. 1st st. 156c

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

SUSPICION JUSTIFIED.

It Was Not a Mouse the Master Heard in the Kitchen.

The late Rev. Dr. Wightman, sitting one night later than usual engrossed in the profundities of a great tome, imagined he heard a sound in the kitchen inconsistent with the cautiousness of a mouse; so, taking his candle, he proceeded to investigate the cause. His foot being heard in the passage, the servant began with much noise to rake out the fire as if preparing for bed.

"Ye're up late tonight, Mary."

"I'm jist rakin' the fire, sir, and gaun to bed."

"That's right, Mary. I like timely hours."

On his way back to the study he passed the coal cellar door and, turning the key, took it with him. The next morning at an early hour there was a rap at his bedroom door and a request for the key to get some coal.

"Ye're up too soon, Mary. Go back to your bed."

Half an hour later there was another knock and a similar request, in order to prepare for breakfast. "I don't want breakfast so soon, Mary. Go back to your bed."

In another half hour there was another knock, with an entreaty for the key, as it was washing day.

This was enough. He rose and handed out the key, saying. "Go and let the man out." As the preacher shrewdly suspected, Mary's sweetheart had been imprisoned all night in the coal cellar. —London Mail.

The Movie Craze.

"So you've just come from church. How long was the sermon?"

"I should say about six—[illegible]consin State Journal.

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 157 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | TUESDAY, JUNE 22, 1915 | Price One Cent

Commissioner Wiltsie and Paving Commissioners Gage and Mason Overruled in Their Ojections to Widening of Street, Mr. Stevenson Carrying Every Point

TIME SPENT IN VERBAL COMBATS, UNPRODUCTIVE YET QUITE EXCITING

The second episode of the First st. paving fight was the feature of a lively evening at City Hall last night when the Fulton Paving Board (if there be such a thing) met for the second time in a week, ostensibly to decide upon the width of the street and various other little incidentals. The meeting resolved itself into a war of words, personalities, and political strategy, with Commissioner John W. Stevenson arrayed against Messrs. Wiltsie, Gage and Mason. After a battle that had the many spectators on the qui vive every minute, General Stevenson with his army of one, marked off the field with victory perched on his brow.

The meeting was an epoch-maker. Citizens scented trouble and were present in large numbers, so that the meeting room was filled to capacity. When everyone was seated, President Stvenson announced that the meeting was convened as a meeting of the Board of Public Works and asked if anyone had any protest to make against the paving of First st. City Attorney Fanning, at that point, announced that the time for protest had passed, as protests should have been entered when the Board first announced it would pave the street. A motion to adjourn as a Board of Public Works was in order and President Stevenson asked Commissioner Wiltsie if he would make it. The Commissioner answered that he would not move the board adjourn.

"You don't want to be a rubber stamp, then?" said Mr. Stevenson to Mr. Wiltsie.

"I dont want to be your rubber stamp," answered Mr. Wiltsie.

"I wouldn't want you," said Mr. Stevenson, "the ink wouldn't stick to you."

After the spectators had recovered from this pleasant exchange of sentiments, Commissioner Garret moved that the meeting adjourn, President Stevenson seconded it, and the motion passed.

Immediately when the Paving Board convened, Mr. Wiltsie introduced a motion that the board rescind its action in approving the widening of the street, but President Stevenson refused to entertain the resolution claiming that it was improper and not within the jurisdiction of the board.

"The width of this street, the paving and everything connected with it, was decided upon unanimously at a meeting held in April," said Mr. Stevenson. "You voted for that, Mr. Wiltsie, and you remember it."

Mr. Wiltsie replied that he did vote to have the street wider, but he voted because Mr. Stevenson said that everyone on the street except one man wanted it wider, and this was not the truth.

After examining the charter closely, the city attorney said the paving board had no control over the width of the street or the kind of paving that was to be laid, as this was all settled by the Board of Public Works before the paving board was formed.

Commissioner Garrett then introduced a resolution moving that the Paving Board adjourn. This motion was defeated by a vote of three to two, Commissioners Gage, Mason and Wiltsie voting against it.

"Very well," said Mr. Stevenson, "we'll sit here till tomorrow morning—this is a comfortable chair."

Suddenly, after some heated arguments, Mr. Stevenson said, "Mr. Fanning, the President of the Board of Public Works can call a meeting any time he wants to, can't he?"

When the City Attorney told him he could, Mr. Stevenson immediately called a meeting of the Board of Public Works. Commissioner Wiltsie, under the impression that the Board could not meet without him present, left the room, and many were the goodbyes called after him by President Stevenson.

Commissioner Garrett introduced a resolution that the street should be widened to 37 feet, and the motion was passed. The old resolution, upon which all three commissioners voted to widen the street four feet has lost and was not in evidence last night, although President Stevenson got Mr. Wiltsie to publicly acknowledge that he had known of such a resolution and had voted for it, although Mr. Wiltsie qualified his reply always by adding, "You told me that everyone but one man was in favor of widening the street."

After Mr. Stevenson told Commssioners Gage and Mason that they were "dead ones" on the Board of Public Works, they took their hats and walked out, following the exchange of several bitter remarks.

"It's a funny thing," said Mr. Stevenson, "You hear all these people going around yelling, Boost Fulton!—but when they have to put their hands in their pockets, they squawk like turkeys with their heads off."

Commissioner Gage warned Mr. Stevenson that he was not long for city politics, and for some few moments, the gentlemen argued about their respective ages and the number of hairs on each one's head, all of which was highly amusing to the spectators.

Mayor Fox had evidently been tipped off in regard to the warmth of the meeting, for he appeared shortly after Commissioners Gage and Mason had decamped. He attempted to smooth things over but his efforts were in the main, without much effect. A messenger was dispatched after the three retiring commissioners and they finally returned.

The Mayor asked if arbitration could not settle the difficulty. President Stevenson called upon some taxpayers present to express their views about widening the street, after Commissioner Wiltsie

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 8

Because If You Support Local Merchants It Will Tend to Bring More Trade into Fulton

The extension of Fulton's trade area is a question that is of interest to every man, woman and child in this city. There is no reason in the world why Fulton should not indisputably be the trade center of northern New York Even a child can see the advantages that would accrue to all. Your support of Fulton merchants can be your individual contribution to this great work. The stronger our merchants are, the farther they can reach out their arms for trade. The greater their trade, the stronger magnet it is to pull people and money into Fulton. Buy in Fulton and you strengtren our merchants and increase their trade. Buy in Fulton and you help to extend Fulton's trade area. Buy in Fulton and you profit the whole city—and yourself.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

PAVING BOARD'S POWER RENDERED NIL BY CITY ATTORNEY'S DECISION

newspaper appeal for guidance, 42 of them opposing the enlarging of the street, while 15 wer in favor of it.

Representing the majority of the 315 members of the Elks, Myron Stranahan, a trustee, said the sentiment of most of the members of the order favored widening the street. James Bogue, a property holder along the street, favored the improvement. Oliver Nelson, a taxpayer, said the street should be wider but three feet was not enough—the street should conform with the curb lines of the lower part of the street and should be widened on both sides.

President Stevenson said the petition circulated by Almon Bristol against enlarging the street was signed by property holders representing only 1149 feet out of a total of 3800. George E. Mason admitted that but disclosed the fact that the state lands were represented in the total, for which no one could sign.

The total cost to the city, instead of being $10,000 as at first supposed, will be according to total $3655.93, according to the figures submitted by the city engineer.

Here Mr. Stevenson accused Messrs. Gage and Mason of opposing the plan to make the street wider, because they wished to keep the street a residential section, and did not want heavy traffic rumbling over the bricks. The pulp wood teams are objected to, according to Mr. Stevenson, and they are now obliged to make a heavy haul up the steep hill on West First st.

Commissioner Mason denied this in emphatic terms, and said Mr. Stevenson knew this was not true. Nothing personal entered into their objections, Messrs. Gage and Mason stated, and they were simply representing the majority of property holders along the street.

"When you had a public office, Mr. Gage" said Mr. Stevenson, "you sometimes did things you thought right, but that were objected to, didn't you?"

"I never held a public office," replied Mr. Gage.

"Well, I'll put it this way then," said Mr. Stevenson, "when a man was president of the village whom you controlled. I have lived here a few y ears and I know a few things. The people will be glad this street is wider when the work is done, and I'll bet that you, Mr. Gage, will say it is a good job. I can see things before they are done and I know this improvement is for the good of the city."

"Come on, we'll go, Gage," said Mr. Mason. "We can't see very far." And Commissioners Gage and Mason left the meeting for good.

After some further discussion, Commissioner Wiltsie discovered the Board of Public Works was still in session and accused President Stevenson and Mayor Fox of trapping him in the meeting to acknowledge the existence of the lost resolution.

A. T. Jennings appeared before the Board to ask for a sidewalk over 45 feet of property along Park st., the owner of which refused to lay a walk. Mr. Jennings and two of his neighbors will stand for the city's share of the walk, and the property owner will be ordered to build a walk.

The meeting adjourned at 10.30, and the date of the next meeting has not been decided upon.

Summed up, absolutely nothing was done, the street will be widened four feet instead of three, and it is probable that the lost resolution read four feet. It was shown that Commissioners Gage and Mason had no powers under the charter to vote on the width of the street. The next step will be the letting of the contract.

MRS. ELIZABETH FERGUSON SUSTAINED INJURIES

One of the city's oldest life-long residents, who is greatly respected by a lare circle of friends and acquaintances, Mrs. Elizabeth Ferguson, sustained a broken shoulder blade yesterday morning by falling at her home, 826 Emery st. Mrs. Ferguson is in her ninety-second year, and owing to her advanced age she has been somewhat feeble for the last two months. It is believed that her enfeebled condition is responsible for the unfortunate fall. Dr. Cusack was called to the home and reduced the fracture. Mrs. F. E. Clark, her daughter, is caring for her mother, Mrs. Ferguson.

WEATHER FORECAST

Partly clear tonight and Wednesday. Light moderate west winds and fair tonight and Wednesday.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street
Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening
Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Tuesday, June 22, 1915

45-PHONE NEWS ITEMS-45

Opinions

War Favorable to Free-Traders

The war in Europe has vetoed the low Tariff law. It has erected a barrier as effective as Protection. It has likewise flooded the country with war orders, putting many mills on full time. The result is a remakable proof of the value of Protection as a stimulator of prosperity. Business was stagnant while the Underwood Tariff operated under normal conditions. The moment these conditions were changed and the war became a substitute for Protection the return to prosperity began. The movement has been hastened by orders for war material, of course, but this has not been the decisive factor.

Mr. Wilson may see, therefore, a prosperity induced by the nullification of his economic measures; a prosperity brought about in spite of his policies, not on account of them. Nevertheless he is certain to profit from the conditions. Voters do not ask whys and wherefores. They are satisfied when they are prosperous and dissatisfied when they are not prosperous. The war has introduced into the political situation a new factor favorable to the Democrats.

It is imperative, therefore, that the Republican party enter the campaign next summer united. It has a hard fight ahead of it in any event. It cannot afford to make mistakes and it cannot afford to be reactionary. It must be aggressive. as it was in Lincoln's day. It must wage a campaign of education. Otherwise the electorate may be deluded into believing that prosperity occasioned by temporary conditions is permanent. Our great industries must not be dependent on the policies of other nations, but on the economic program adhered to by the United States.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Sterling Exchange

The recent phenomenal drop in sterling exchange should be regarded simply as an annoyance. It means that Great Britain, whose credit, with the exception, perhaps, of our own, is the best in the world, is finding it physically difficult to pass us the money to pay for tremendous wartime purchases. The deposit of gold in Ottawa is running low and the activity of German submarines discourages direct payment.

The tendency in some quarters to rejoice because the dollars now worth $1.02 in English gold is therefore quite as unreasonable as the more rarely expressed fear that John Bull has arrived at the end of his financial tether.

But what is he to do about it? German submarines are likely to continue and even to increase their interference. And he must continue and even increase his purchases of supplies from Uncle Sam. The obvious remedy is to create a large credit here. But this raises the question of collateral. There is reason to believe that Americans do not care for British war bonds. American securities they would be glad to take. But foreign holders of these show no general inclination to part with them.

There is talk in London of a "mobilization" of English-held Americans as the basis of a credit on this side. There is also talk of shipments of gold heref rom South Africa, outside the beat of the German submarine. Some effective remedy will be decided upon soon, no doubt, to the greater comfort of both creditor and debtor.—N. Y. Tribune.

OUR OWN WORK

During the past few weeks attention has been focused through various reasons upon the schools of our city. The high school site, the conduct of certain pupils, regents' examinations and finally commencement itself has directed thought upon that important institution, our public schools.

However much a community may discuss its school prroblems it cannot be over done. To satisfy vital needs of any locality is within the keeping of its schools. Schools give up to the people just what the people want; that and nothing more.

That each and every person connected with the school system of this city is an efficiency person is not to be doubted. The long list of 100 per cent attained by students from the lower grades on up into the high school department attest the work of true masters. Superintendent Fairgrieve, a gentleman and a student who lives in his work is deserving of rich praise for his sincerity of purpose and the high rank of local scholarship.

However, the question which is perplexing the country in general also faces Fulton. It is this: "Do our public schools give to us that which is of greatest service educationally?" What per cent. of our graduates are efficienly prepared for the work they are best fitted to do, and do they as individuals know what work is theirs? Also, how many in the 7th and 8th grades have dropped from school work because they saw nothing definite, practical, ahead of them?

Perhaps no one person in Fulton could clearly answer such questions, and, indeed the combined voices of a people should answer such questions.

To solve this problem is as mighty a task as any our forefathers battled with—different yet fully as great—and as in solving it posterity shall receive as rich a legacy as was the New Freedom which was wafted us from the wings of the Mayflower.

PROGRESS

Rome, that seemed so secure on the Seven Hills, fell to the Goth, for Rome lacked men—real men, the best timber with which to construct a city.

The wealth the society, the progress, the future position of your city, your home-town, depends on how you treat your laboring people and with what respect and consideration labor treats capital. Labor and capital are the elements that make your city.

During the past one hundred years the world has actually added more wealth to its credit than during all previous years since history began. This is not a figure of speech—this is a financial fact—a progress almost inconceivable.

The problem of the present is not one of production—it is a question of moral and ethical rights between capital and labor.

Inasmuch as we are all either capitalists or laborers, this is of unusual and of personal interest. The progress of the past should now be made to administer to the many of the present, and not just the few.

Years ago, all men were largely independent of each other. Every man was his own wheelwright, his own blacksmith, his own shoemaker—every woman was a woolen mill—a sister of the ox.

Today, humans are more interdependent—more closely related —more affected by the conditions of your city; for, after all, a city is but a community of individual interests.

The city that forges ahead, and that stays ahead, must offer to its laboring class every available advantage—low rents, cheap homes, permanent positions, pure food at right prices—necessities at reasonable cost, good schools, and good moral examples. The cottage-home, the contented citizen, the workingman and the working-woman are just as essential as your banks, your stores, your schools or your churches—just as important as your wealthy element.

It is to the individual interest of the merchant the banker, the business man, to see that capital and labor are at peace in your city. —Silent Partner.

LIGHTS ON VEHICLES AFTER JULY FIRST

Beginning July 1 all wheeled vehicles, not propelled by hand or designed and used for the transportation of hay and straw, must display a light, visible from front and rear, from one hour after sunset until one before sunrise, under the provision of the new law which goes into effect at that time. Violation of the law will constitute a misdemeanor and will be punishable with a fine of not more than $10 for each offense. The law is designed for the protection of both team and auto traffic. Autos are required to carry head and tail lights but in the past teams have not, the result being a liability of auto to run into teams before they were aware of their presence. There were also instances of teams running each other down and lack of lights on wagons also worked to the disadvantage of pedestrians. The exception in the case of vehicles used for transporting hay and straw was made because of the liability of fire when lights are used about these two inflammable commodities.

It is a mistaken notion, that The Evening Times job printing department is too busy to handle all classes of work. Just jot down the address, 66 E. 1st st., or telephone 45 for a representative.—Advt.

M'ANENY TO HEAD STATE TICKET

Democrats Talking of at Least Four Other Possibilities for 1916

Albany, June 22.—Democratic politicians are beginning to size up the men of their party in this state who woulld make good candidates for Governor in 1916. There is no dearth of aspirants, but with the state Democacy still torn asunder as the result of the three-cornered split of last fall the men who run the machine find it somewhat difficult to pick out any man of any size who would head the state ticket with any prospect of success next year.

The same is true with respect to the nomination for United States Senator. There is little sentiment anywhere for James A. O'Gorman, whose term expires Mar. 4, 1917. The complaint against senator O'Gorman is that he has forgotten the Democratic machine that helped to make him, and this is one form of ingratitude seldom forgiven at all, in politics.

One who is talked of not only for the nomination for Governor but for United States Senator as well is William Church Osborne, chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

There are two things about Chairman Osborn, apart from his abillity, which commend him to the machine men. One is his reputation for "respectability" and the other is his wealth. An able Democrat, who has a voice in the inside councils of the state machine, in discussing the Democratic state chairman, said last night:

"Yes, Osborn is a formidable candidate for the Governorship. He is respectable and wealthy. If he financed the campaign—and he could do it—we might make him candidate for United States Senator, and no doubt he would like it. The only kick I have against him is that he has a natural hostility and antipathy to a practical politician. That gets him nowhere. Don't think I'm knocking him; I'm not. I'm just giving you plain talk."

Another o fthe respectables in the race is Charles E. Treman, of Ithaca. He is regarded by his Democratic associates as of the highbrow type; being a trustee of Cornell University. To offset this—for it is a bit of a handicap with some politicians—he is a practical politician, having worked with David B. Hill and served as Superintendent of Public Works under Governor Dix, He is popular upstate.

Of all the candidates, Ex-Governor Glynn of Albany, and George A. McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen of New York city, are the most popular with the real leaders of the party.

Mr. McAneny has the advantage over the Albany man of never having been an unsuccessful candidate for the office—a handicap seldom overcome in politics. Ex-Governor Glynn, on the other hand, is readier as a speaker and a more seasoned campaigner.

The friends of the New York man point out that Glynn would not be the ideal man to attack Governor Whitman on his financial policy—for Democratic leaders, with many Republican chieftains, believe Whitman will be a candidate to succeed himself, despite his Presidential aspirations—for the very reason that in one of his public messages while Governor, shortly after he succeeded Sulzer, he said that a direct tax would be necessary in 1915.

Governor Whitman's friends would sooner have McAneny or Glynn running against him than any other man in the field.

There is no doubt that President McAneny would make a better vote getter in New York city, for it is there that the direct tax will be felt the hardest, as $14,000,000 of the $19,000,000 will come out of the pockets of the taxpayers of New York city. The pinch will be felt next April, when the tax will be collected and when there will be real active talk of Gubernatorial candidates.

MONTCLAIR BARS WEEDS

Montclair, N. J., June 22.—Weeds are going to be a costly feature of suburban life hereafter in Montclair. The authorities have issued warning that all persons who permit weeds or grass to grow along their sidewalks or gutters to a height in excess of twelve inches will be subjected to a fine of $5.

Whereever the owners neglect to cut down the weeds, the town will do it and assess the expense on the property, besides imposing the fine.

The Scrap Book

Quick Wit Won.

George Grossmith was once singing the lord chancellor's song in "Iolanthe," which has for its refrain, "Said I to myself, said I," when something caught fire at the back of the stage. Grossmith himself wasn't aware of the occurrence, but he suddenly saw the audience jump from their seats and turn their backs on him.

At the same moment the stage manager shouted from the wings to Grossmith: "Don't stop singing! Go on, go on!"

Grossmith immediately grasped the situation and sang fortissimo some words that came to him on the spur of the moment:

I assure my friends who are ready to choke
That the fire they fear is nothing but smoke;
It is only a sort of Gilbertian joke,
Says I to myself, says I.

This gag, which at any other time would have been extremely reprehensible in a Gilbertian opera, calmed the panic, and the audience resumed their seats.—Every Week.

The Favored.

Life gave him hours of labor long
With guerdons frail and few,
And Fate no gift of precious song
For cheer the gray years through,
But God, who knew how soon the charm
Of such gifts may depart,
Gave him the greatest gift of all—
A happy heart.

He found much bitter in the cup
That he was forced to drain.
When morning's sun rose brightly up
It often set with rain.
When Fortune seemed to wander near
She came but to depart,
For he had what she could not give—
A happy heart.

—Arthur Wallace Peach.

A Lovely Sunday.

My man," said the traveler in his best manner, "is this a railroad station or a perpetually endowed waiting room?"

"It's a railroad station, sir," answered the polite station agent.

"Well, then, do the trains run on tracks or speculation?" he demanded.

"On tracks, sir," replied the polite station agent.

"Well, then, how is it that I've been waiting here ever since 2 o'clock for that 2:13 train, and it's now 5:15 and no train yet? Take a look at this time table and at this watch, please, and tell me why."

The polite station agent looked as requested and then said softly, "Because that's a weekday time table, sir."

It was a lovely Sunday.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Salutary Lesson.

"Now, remember your salutes," said the English corporal when posting the Irish recruit on sentry. "If you see a lieutenant—he wears one star on his shoulder—slope arms; if a captain—two stars—slope arms; if you see a major—a crown—present arms; if the colonel—stars and crown—present and turn out the guard."

Pat pondered his orders carefully, but presently he was awakened from his reverie by the approach of the general.

That worthy son of Mars surveyed the cross swords on the gallant officer's shoulders and as he was not included in the corporal's category simply nodded cheerfully.

"Well, my man," said the genial general, "and who are you supposed to be?"

"I'm supposed to be a bit of a sentry," said Patrick. "And who are you?"

"Oh, I'm supposed to be a bit of a general," said the latter.

"A gineral, is it?" cried the startled Pat. "Then ye'll want something big. The corp'ral tould me about the others, but nothing about yourself at all, at all. But hold hard a minute, and I'll give ye the bayonet exercise, if that'll do."

Squared Himself.

Fighting Lord Charlie Beresford and Sir Redvers Buller both deservedly earned a high reputation for bulldog tenacity of purpose.

During a Nile campaign Lord Charles and Sir Redvers, descending some "bad water" in a river steamer, got into a discussion as to the proper channel to be taken. Each obstinately defended his own course, but in the end Buller got his own way, with the result that the steamer ran through safely.

"You see, I was right!" cried the general. "Mine was the proper channel."

"That was mine, too," coolly replied Lord Charles. "I only recommended the other because I knew you would go against whatever I said!"

Demonstrated.

The very young minister, on trial for his first charge, was well satisfied with his sample sermon. Fully expecting a compliment, he asked one of the elders for a criticism. The old gentleman replied that "they wis gey fine words, but a bit heady for common foulk." The young man disagreed volubly, whereupon the elder proceeded to justify his opinion.

"Ye told us at the laist to 'draw an inference,' ye ken. See at this noo. Aw, Sandy!" beckoning to an old fellow member over the way. "Sandy, div ye think ye could draw an inference the day?"

Sandy gnawed his finger a full minute in silence. Then:

"Aweel," he submitted cautiously, "I amna sae strang as I wis syne, but if it wisna the Sawbath I hae a pair o' steers out yan that can fair draw the weight o' the meetin' house!"

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4946
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

SODA AND MINERAL WATERS
Made in Fulton. Best Extracts. Purity Guaranteed.
Delivery to any part of town.
A. J. THOMPSON
Phone 1542 112 Pratt St.

TIRE VULCANIZING
by Standard Steam Process
All Work Guaranteed.
B. L. COLE
Phone 2307 22 S. 1st St.

FOLEY'S RESTAURANT
"The Place to Eat."
Dinner 25c Supper Special 15c
Breakfast to order.
Sunday
Chicken Dinner a Specialty 35c

CULTURE.

The secret of culture is to learn that a few great points steadily reappear alike in the poverty of the obscurest farm and in the miscellany of metropolitan life and that these few alone are to be regarded—the escape from all false ties, courage to be what we are and love of what is simple and beautiful. Independence and cheerful relation, these are the essentials—these and the wish to serve, to add somewhat to the well being of men.—Emerson.

The Lady Who Danced the Minuet.

The minuet was ever the aristocrat of dances. Before the lady of the eighteenth century elected to step the dainty measure she had many points to master, for to dance the minuet was to court criticism. The plunge taken, she wore a lappet on her shoulder to tell the company she proposed to make or mar her ballroom reputation. Another point of etiquette lay in the gloves. A soiled pair was good enough for the country dance, but an absolutely new pair had to adorn the fair hands which graced the minuet. And so the lady of the eighteenth century on dancing bent set out with two pairs in her satchel.—London Mail.

Pretty Good Amendment.

A certain famous statesman is a continual prey to the "autograph fiend," and, like most famous people, he is not fond of giving away his signature to collectors.

On one occasion, however, when asked to write in a friend's album, he consented to do so. He noticed that someone before him had written in the book the words: "Do right, and fear no man."

Without a moment's hesitation the statesman wrote underneath it: "Don't write, and fear no woman!"

Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Can you give some good and simple ways of lining up a transmission?

One good way of lining up the transmission is to take a scriber or stiff wire with a point on one end and clamp the other end to the main gearset shaft. Bring the point of the scriber to the rear face of the flywheel and then adjust the gearcase until the point barely touches the flywheel in every position of rotation. Then place the point of the scriber in contact with the cone face of the flywheel and adjust the case so that the point just touches at every point. This determines circularity. When this is done, test the rear face of the flywheel again and so on, until the alignment is perfect. While doing this, do not lose sight of the necessity for also keeping the shifting mechanism in line.

Will you please give your opinion as to the adviseability of braking my car by closing the throttle?

Using the motor as an auxiliary by closing the throttle is a very good scheme, as it saves wear and, in some cases, heating of the brake shoes. Some people object to the use of the motor in this way because it imposes a small strain on the driving mechanism, but this is negligible. A more powerful braking effect can be obtained by switching off the ignition and this is probably more popular than merely closing the throttle.

What are the advantages and disadvantages of the low tension and the high tension magnetos in regard to both starting and service on car?

The average high tension magneto will give a spark of higher heat value than the low tension—that is, one using an outside coil. Both types show up equally well in starting and in service.

The rear wheels on my car when jacked up can be lifted .25 inch. Should this play be there; if not, how can it be eliminated?

No play should exist, either perpendicular or sideways. All lost motion in a car is defective and should be remedied. In your case the thing to do is to install a new bearing in place of the old one, which is probably so worn as to cause the trouble, or if an adjustable bearing have it set up.

Please tell me how rusty rims can be cleaned, and have you a simple recipe for the prevention of rust to apply to the rims?

Scrape the rims with a sharp tool. Then pound with a hammer until all the rust has been battered off. Sandpaper vigorously, and finally apply a heavy coat of paint. Do not replace your tires until you are certain that the paint is dry, or you will have great cause to complain later.

My car vibrates greatly at speeds above twenty miles per hour. Is there any way of reducing it?

This is largely a question of bringing the reciprocating parts to the same weight. Remove the pistons and the connecting rods, weigh all the pistons with the wristpins and remove metal from the heavier ones until they are all the same weight.

How may one tell when the storage battery is worn out?

A battery may be said to be worn out through service when the active material of the plates has fallen to the sediment trap at the bottom of the jars. A battery in such a condition will not take a charge and cannot possibly give service. A battery may be worn out prematurely by improper care and undercharging, causing the plates to lose the active material, to buckle, etc.

What are the advantages and disadvantages of the two, three and five bearing crank shafts? Is a two bearing crank shaft sufficiently strong to take care of the strain it is subjected to for any length of time?

The five bearing crank shaft is not necessarily better in every respect than either the three or two bearing shaft in a four cylinder motor, although it will be less liable to whip, due to its rigid mounting. You will find that the four cylinder, five bearing motor usually, if not always, has its cylinders cast separately, thus making a comparatively long shaft and motor. With a long shaft the points of support must naturally be many to obtain rigidity and it would not do for a very long motor to have a two bearing shaft, although some have three large supports. The motor design then plays a big part in the number of bearings to support the crank shaft. The small block motor with a two bearing crank shaft shows good results and the block and pair cast motors with three bearing shafts are also showing up well. Taking the small block motor, any increase in the number of bearings adds to the frictional loss and to the cost and detracts from its simplicity. The bearings usually used in this type are made long to give good service. However, in two motors exactly the same in every respect but crank shaft support and one with two and the other with five bearings, the latter will in most cases show longer life than the former.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Be it shown to all the world
That the stars and stripes, unfurled,
Stainless float above a land;
Pure in heart and strong of hand;
Patient, firm in self control,
Seeking not a selfish goal,
But with power to strike a blow
In defense against a foe!

Right is right and law is law,
Sacred both in peace and war;
And, though nations join in strife,
Yet the sanctity of life
'Neath the banners not unrolled
In the conflict men must hold
As protected by the seal
Of the universal weal!

O, my country, strongly wait
Ere the mighty guns of hate
You unlimber; dare to pause,
In the greatness of your cause!
But with no uncertain word
Make your holy purpose heard,
To defend by drastic deed
Human rights and thy own seed!
—Boston Herald.

KAISER HAS ROCKET TO TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS.

New German Device Proves Useful In Getting Pictures of Battlefields.

A skyrocket that steals glory from the aeroplane by making photographs of a battlefield from great heights is a recent German invention. The rocket carries a camera, a device to expose the plate, and apparatus that brings the whole device safely back to earth.

Like the skyrocket used for peaceful celebration, the war flyer has a long tail with vanes at the end to keep it from whirling. Within the head is the camera, which takes a photograph seven inches square, a small gyroscope, an electric battery, and a parachute to provide for slow descent. The shaft is twenty feet long, and the whole device weighs fifty pounds. A firing stand, with sights, completes the apparatus.

The rocket is first aimed in the proper direction. An electric current is then sent to the gyroscope, which assists the vanes in keeping the rocket from whirling. Another current ignites the charge of powder, and the rocket ascends almost vertically.

At the moment of the greatest elevation, which occurs about eight seconds after firing, the exposure is made by an electro pneumatic device. The parachute, which is packed between the camera and the head, then opens and the apparatus descends within a very short distance of the place from which it was discharged.

The rocket can be used in places to which it would be impossible for an aeroplane to fly.

EDEN MUSEE TO VANISH.

Noted Old Waxworks Show Known to Every Visitor to New York.

Another landmark of old New York is about to pass away.

The Eden Musee, in Twenty-third street, where every visitor on his first trip to New York used to be taken to see the wax figures of famous people like generals and admirals, and the "Chamber of Horrors" (oo-oo-oo!), where they shivered as they gazed upon the torture apparatus of the Inquisition, and the gigantic gorilla carrying off into the jungle the frail young girl and the hanged man with the genu-wine rope around his neck, has passed into the hands of bankruptcy receivers after an existence of thirty-two years.

The first moving pictures were shown there in 1896, when the "Passion Play" was presented by the film. The first Hungarian band the town ever heard played there as far back as 1885, being brought direct from Budapest. Now, it is said, the movies and the cabarets have killed it.

WILL HONOR "OLD MAMMY."

Southerners Plan Monument to Memory of Nurse of Slavery Days.

Southerners are going to erect a monument to the old southern "Mammy," the tender old negress who in the childhood days of natives of the south stood next to mothers in their estimation. It will be the first of its kind in the world.

Members of the Old Guard of Atlanta, the organization which visited the north upon the famous peace mission directly after the civil war, have decided that such a monument should be erected in Piedmont park, Atlanta.

Movements are on foot for the erection of other such monuments in Dixie.

GARDEN SYRINGES FOR WAR.

Will Squirt Sodium Into Air to Break Up Effect of Gas Bombs.

Scientists aiding the war bureaus of the allies have discovered, it is believed, a means whereby the poisonous gas filled bombs of the Germans can be rendered ineffective.

Representatives of the British war office are now purchasing hundreds of ordinary garden syringes, such as are used for watering flowers. With these it is planned to squirt hyposulphide of sodium into the air as the poisonous gases reach the lines.

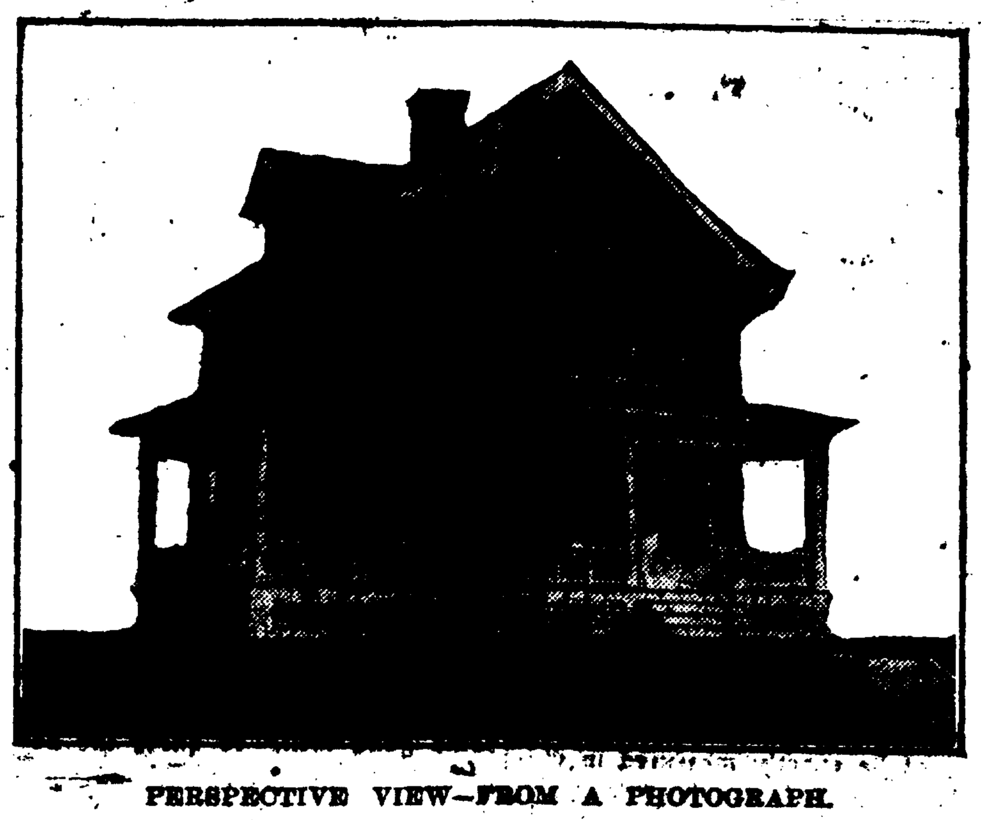
FILES DIVORCE SUIT NO. 8.

Ottawa Woman Asks Once More to Be Freed From Husband.

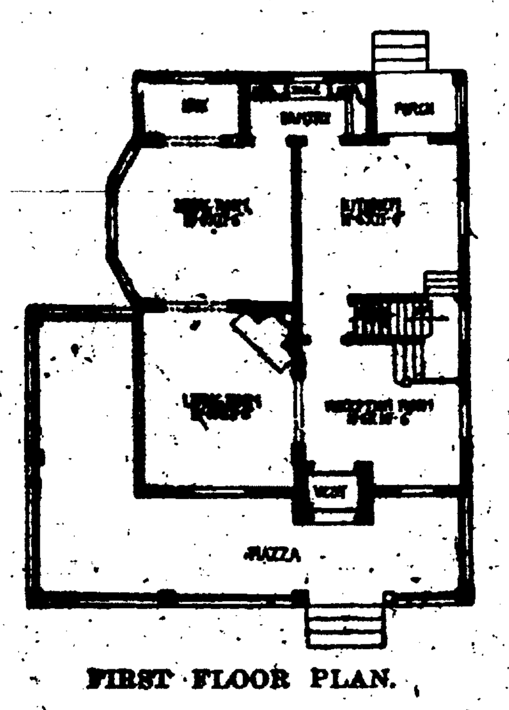
Mrs. Mary Knecht of Ottawa, Canada, has just started her eighth suit for divorce against her husband. The first suit was filed in 1895.

The couple have been divorced twice. Several suits were dismissed and their troubles patched up.

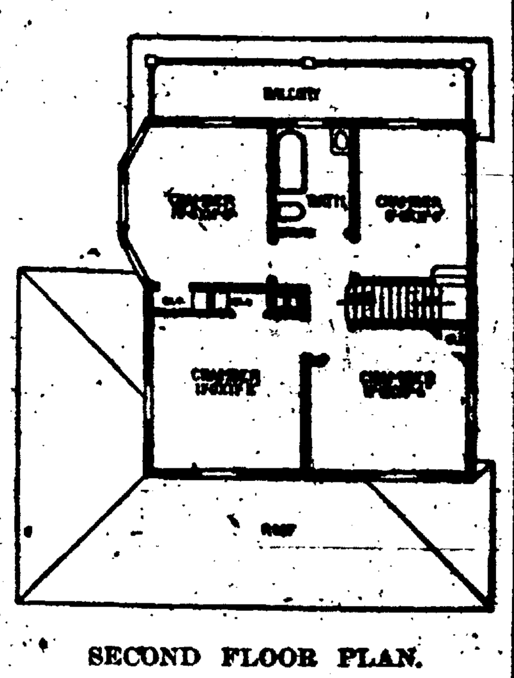
Design 627, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.



PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The wide sweeping porch is ideal for a lake dwelling. Size, 24 feet by 28 feet. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,600.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains 310 designs costing from $1,000 to $6,000; also a book of interiors, $1 per copy.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Brooklyn at Boston.
Philadelphia at New York.
Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.

Results Yesterday

Pittsburgh, 4; Philadelphia, 3.
Only one game scheduled.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	30	21	.588
St. Louis	32	26	.552
Philadelphia	28	24	.538
Pittsburgh	26	25	.510
Boston	24	28	.462
Brooklyn	24	29	.453
New York	21	26	.447
Cincinnati	21	27	.438

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Washington.
New York at Philadelphia.
Chicago at Cleveland.
St. Louis at Detroit.

Results Yesterday

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	37	20	.649
Boston	29	19	.604
Detroit	34	24	.586
New York	27	26	.509
Washington	25	25	.500
Cleveland	21	32	.396
Philadelphia	21	34	.382
St. Louis	22	34	.370

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Brooklyn.
Chicago at Baltimore.
Pittsburgh at Newark.
Kansas City at Buffalo.

Results Yesterday

St. Louis, 8; Brooklyn, 2.
Newark, 3; Pittsburgh, 2.
Baltimore, 7; Chicago, 2.
Kansas City, 9; Buffalo, 5.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	27	22	.627
St. Louis	32	21	.604
Pittsburgh	29	26	.527
Chicago	30	28	.517
Newark	29	28	.509
Brooklyn	28	29	.491
Baltimore	21	33	[illegible]
Buffalo	21	40	.344

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Montreal at Toronto.
Richmond at Providence.
Buffalo at Rochester.
Newark at Jersey City.

Results Yesterday

Buffalo, 2; Rochester, 1.
Toronto, 2; Montreal, 0.
Newark, 5; Jersey City, 3.
Richmond, 17; Providence, 3.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Providence	27	18	.600
Buffalo	24	17	.585
Montreal	26	22	.542
Rochester	23	23	.500
Richmond	23	23	.500
Toronto	23	25	.479
Newark	21	23	.477
Jersey City	16	32	.333

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Albany at Syracuse.
Troy at Utica.
Binghamton at Wilkesbarre.
Elmira at Scranton.

Results Yesterday

Utica, 8; Albany, 1.
Binghamton, 8; Scranton, 4; 1st.
Binghamton, 7; Scranton, 4; 2d.
Elmira, 8; Wilkesbarre, 7.
Troy-Syracuse; postponed.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	25	14	.641
Elmira	25	17	.595
Binghamton	22	17	.564
Troy	20	18	.526
Wilkesbarre	19	22	.463
Scranton	18	21	.462
Syracuse	15	25	.375
Albany	15	25	.375

EDISON SEARCHLIGHT 3,000,000 CANDLE POWER

A 3,000,000-candle-power searchlight, small and fed by storage batteries, said to be the most powerful portable searchlight in the world, is the latest invention of Thomas A. Edison. It was operated for the first time last night at the inventor's home in Llewellyn Park, N.J.

Many residents, surprised by the bright light, telephoned the police to investigate. It is especially designed for use in mine rescue work, at fires, on ships and aeroplanes.

You can get Black's baked products at the right hour for meals. They are at your grocer's, fresh every afternoon. adv.

So I have to go on another trip,
When I'd rather stay home this season!
I said I'd a crack in my poor old back,
But they wouldn't take that for a reason.
So, with honorable escort and flags afloat
I'm to answer their western call;
A man of my age on a pilgrimage
From Independence Hall!

Of course they will give me an honored place,
And the people will throng around me,
But mine are the ways of the ancient days,
Where the things of the past surround me.
In the midst of their modern pomp and display
I may not look fine at all,
But I know I'm great in mine own estate
At Independence Hall!

Suppose the folk of that great far land
Age hasn't had time to mellow,
Look with surprise in their western eyes
And call me a "queer old fellow?"
I'll wish myself back in my good, old home,
Where the ghosts and the memories call;
Where I hold my state with the good and great
In Independence Hall!
—Bell Rumford.

ELECTRICITY LOCATES BULLETS IN WOUNDS.

American Hospitals Adopt Extraction Device Used in War.

American hospital surgeons are applying a new and practical use of electricity learned from the field hospitals in France. In the war zone many thousands of cases of bullet and shell wounds are treated daily. The old and tortuous manner of searching for the bullet has been discarded in favor of the electrical locator, which quickly and definitely discovers the metal without adding pain to the wounded. Already numerous American hospitals have installed the device, a development of the Hughes induction balance.

The instrument consists of two sets of wire coils, one of which rests on the operating table and the other in the surgeon's hand. A telephone receiver is placed over the surgeon's head like a telephone girl's helmet and connected to the movable coil. The coils are so wound that they balance and are inactive when not in service.

When the wounded soldier is brought in the surgeon moves the hand set of coils over the body. The instant the coil passes over the metal the electric balance is disturbed and the telephone receiver emits a long series of clickings. The intensity of the noise in the surgeon's ear indicates the size and nearness of the bullet. The sound grows louder or more feeble as the coil is moved nearer or farther away. It will be loudest when directly over the metal.

"AMERICANIZATION DAY" NOW

Special Welcome to New Citizens to Be Given July 4.

Twenty-three cities so far have joined the movement to make July 4 an "Americanization day." The idea was started by Frederic C. Howe, commissioner of immigration at Ellis island, who urges that the national holidays be made a day of special welcome to newly naturalized citizens and resident aliens.

In New York city the new stadium of the City college has been secured for the Americanization day celebration. No other city has so many "new Americans."

Jersey City, Syracuse, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Rochester, Hoboken, Paterson, Wilkesbarre, Nanticoke, Carbondale, Trenton, South Bethlehem, Norristown, Pittstown, Buffalo, Albany, Schenectady and Columbus are other cities joining.

SAN MARINO MAY JOIN WAR.

Tiny Republic Size of Back Garden Ready to Aid Italy.

The little republic of San Marino, twenty-two square miles in area, although entirely surrounded by Italian territory, forms an absolutely independent state. A serious discussion is now going on in this republic as to whether it shall remain neutral.

The question is more important than appears at first sight. San Marino, standing on a high mountain a few miles from Rimini, dominates the Adriatic. If it continues neutral, Austrian aeroplanes could, in time of need, take refuge there, repair, take on new supplies and return home. This would not be possible if San Marino joined with Italy in the war.

"CHINA INVITED INSULT."

President Yuan Shih Kai Blames Nation's Weakness For Humiliation.

In his proclamation as to the treaties and notes just signed between China and Japan, Yuan Shih Kai, the Chinese president, said:

"Our rights and privileges in Manchuria have suffered enormously. We are ashamed and humiliated, but our own weakness invited insult. Let all the people unite and work harmoniously for the supreme object of saving the country."

Has Seven Sons at Front.

Mrs. Margaret Nabney of 42 Central street, Belfast, Ireland, has seven sons serving in the British army. Two sons are in the First battalion of the Royal Irish rifles, two in the Second and two in the Eighth battalion of that regiment. One is in the Royal field artillery.

A Black Finish For Iron.

It is frequently found desirable to give a black finish to the metal parts of harness and equipment. This is especially the case where armies wish to be as invisible as possible. A recipe which produces a solid black patina upon iron is given in a late number of La Nature, giving a handsome appearance and also preventing oxidation. The pieces of metal are plunged into a bath, almost boiling, made by mixing ten liters of water with sixty-five grams of a liquid composed of the following constituents: Strong phosphoric acid, fifty-seven cubic centimeters; water, fifty-seven cubic centimeters; pulverized zinc, eighteen grams. The objects to be blackened must remain in the bath for at least half an hour or more and sometimes for as much as three hours to produce a durable coat.

The Southern Ocean.

According to a note in the Geographical Journal, this name has been recommended by the British admiralty and formally adopted by the commonwealth of Australia and the union of South Africa to designate the whole oceanic zone encircling the globe south of Australia, Africa and South America. This name is, of course, not new, but it is not to be found in Lippincott's Gazetteer and has been used in a merely tentative way by many geographers. As the admiralty mentions the antarctic continent as the southern boundary of this body of water no room is left on the map for an Antarctic ocean.

Mucilage Stops Gasoline Leak.

A leak started in the ground joint connection between the gasoline supply pipe and the carburetor on my automobile, writes a correspondent of Popular Mechanics. It was in a place where it could not be reground easily, although I tried to stop it in this manner. Soap and other lubricants were used to no avail. The thought came to me that some liquid which gasoline would not cut might do, and I used a small portion of old mucilage which had become thick, applying it to the connection and letting it stand to harden, then screwing the joint together. This stopped the leak.

Handy Saw Horse Attachment.

When it is necessary to saw a few short pieces the ordinary saw horse is an unhandy place to hold the wood. The attachment shown in the illustration will hold a stick regardless of its length, says Popular Mechanics.

The attachment consists of four pieces of board, two of which are joined together in the same manner as the crossed pieces for the saw horse ends, but in such a position that they will hang over the center crossbar and make the depth of the yoke the same as that of the saw horse. The end of one piece bears against a board that is fastened to the front pieces of the saw horse.

HORSE HOLDS ANY LENGTH OF WOOD.

Another piece, hinged to the lower end of the opposite center yoke piece, is provided with notches or a rack made of nails to engage the upper edge of the board, as shown. The manner of using the device is obvious.

Casehardening Process.

Yellow prussiate of potash, by weight, seven parts; bichromate of potash, one part; common salt, eight parts; pulverize the crystals and mix thoroughly. Heat the piece to be hardened to a dark red and dip into the preparation or sprinkle it on the piece. Return to the fire and let it soak, then repeat several times according to the depth of hardened surface wanted. Finally plunge into water or oil. This may be used on tool steel, soft steel or iron.

New Process Cheapens Radium.

Radium bromide valued at $11,000 recently turned over to the National Radium institute for the treatment of cancer cases is the first radium extracted by the new process developed by the experts of the bureau of mines. The work of extracting the metal was done in the laboratory of the bureau at Denver from Colorado ores. The cost was only $40,000 a gram (15.43 grains), while the commercial price of radium is about $120,000 a gram.

For Drilling Hard Steel.

A mixture which will permit hard steel or iron to be drilled with ordinary drills is made by using one part spirits of camphor and four parts turpentine. Mix well and apply cold, letting it remain a few minutes before applying the drill. Run the drill slowly with fine feed.

Tool Making Hint.

The end of a bar of steel that has been broken off should never be used for the working or cutting end of a die or punch. The fibers in the end of such a bar have been so severely strained in breaking that the steel is unsuitable for performing the work done by a punch or die.

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN

New Summer Arrivals

We Plucked These Flowers in New York—The Conservatory of Fashion

SUMMER DRESSES

Hundreds of beautiful dresses for your selection including linen, voile, crepe, net, taffeta and crepe de chine. Every new and desirable fabric and model is included in this assortment, at from

$3.98 to $19.50

WASH WAISTS

Made in ratine, pique, poplin, gabardine and Palm Beach in very effective models.

98c to $5.00

MANY NEW MODELS IN WAISTS

Striped and embroidered voile, silk and lingerie at $1.00 each. Tub silk and crepe de chine in solid colors and candy stripes, at $1.98, in all sizes up to No. 46.

NOW ON DISPLAY AND AWAIT YOUR CAREFUL INSPECTION

M. J. McDONALD & CO.

ONEIDA ST. FULTON

PURE ICE CREAM

"The Only Kind You Ought to Buy or Eat"

WE MAKE AND DELIVER IT

Only Pure Flavors, Fresh Fruits and Heaviest of Cream used. Most Delicious Fountain Drinks

FRESH FRUITS AND HIGH-GRADE CONFECTIONERY

PHONE 80 THE ONYX Quirk Theatre Blk.

OLEO FRAUDS COST COUNTRY $27,000,000

Two hundred million pounds of collored oleomargarine have been sold to American housewives as pure creamery butter since 1902, according to figures given out by the Treasury Department.

On this immense quantity of oleo the government has been defrauded of the tax of 10 cents a pound imposed on colored oleomargarine. On 185,000,000 pounds the manufacturers paid the uncolored oleo tax of one-quarter of a cent, but on the other 15,000,000 pounds no tax at all was paid. Mixed with a small percentage of real butter itwas sold as the pure creamery product. In both cases, however, the retailers are believed to have dealt in it as genuine butter.

According to estimates submitted to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo by Internal Revenue Commissioner Osborn, the government has lost at least $27,000,000 in stamp and special taxes through the frauds since 1902. There has already been recovered by Commissioner Osborn, according to his report, $851,000, with a prospect of further large collections. Forty-two violators have been convicted since January 1, 1915, twenty-nine of whom have been sentenced to terms in prison ranging from thirty days to three and one-half years.

100% Efficiency

The Result of Using

Miscellaneous Want Column

in

The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge 10 Cents

DE WOLF HOPPER GOES INTO MOVIES

New York.—De Wolf Hopper is the first of the big American stars to be secured for the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination, which is to present $2 motion pictures, in a chain of theatres through this country and Europe.

H. E. Aitken, head of the new organization, has completed a deal with Mr. Hopper whereby that famous comedian devotes his exclusive services for one year to a series of spectacular productions, which will be handled in person by D. W. Griffith. This control carries with it an option for a further call on Hopper's services.

Hopper will receive a salary of $125,000 a year. The first speitacle in whch he will appear will be a screen version of the opera "Don Quixote," with Hopper in the title role. One of the foremost composers in the country will synchronize the score to suit the adventures of the redoubtable knight of Cervantes's fancy together with his inimitable aid, Sancho Panza.

Mr. Hopper, when seen recently, confirmed the report of his engagement.

ARMED WITH PADDLE SHE BREAKS THE STRIKE

Martin's Ferry, Ohio, June 22.—A woman, one barrel stave and a few swats of determination are the latest formula for strike breaking in this place. Three local plants employing 2000 men had been idle for 3 weeks until Mrs. Frank Marelli decided on forceful mediation.

The men struck to enforce their demands for permission to form a branch of the Millmen's Union. Pickets were stationed around the three factories, and several fights resulted.

Mrs. Marelli grew tired of supporting the family while her husband struck, picked up a barrel stave and marched down to the tent where the pickets had established headquarters. She found her husband there, used the barrel stave on him and then on the other strikers.

The pickets fled. Then several hundred men entered the plants and put them in operation.

On the opinion of Commissioner Carr the up-State Public Service Commission has decided that the charge of 50 cents a month for extension telephones is not an unjust or unreasonable one. The decision is on the complaint of Milford D. Whedon of Granville, New York, against the New York and Vermont Home Telephone Company. The New York Telephone Company, was allowed to intervene as a party in interest and its studies and the investigations of the commission have taken much time. The commission previously decided that a telephone subscriber has not the right to install his own extension telephone set as the telephone company is responsible for the standard and efficiency of service which might be interfered with by equipment over which it had not control. The decision says:

"The accommodation afforded by an extension phone," the opinion says, "cannot be exactly measured in dollars and cents. It enables a person to telephone from that portion of his residence where the extension phone may be installed without going to the main station in the residence; it is available in many emergencies where time is of great importance; it enables two people in the residence to make use of the telephone atp ractically one and the same time which would be impossible without the use of an extension phone and this extension service provides facilities which would be difficult if not impossible to obtain in any other way. An extension phone in Granville enables the subscriber to communicate with people all over the country. It is entirely different from the situation which might be presented if the Granville station had no connection with the outside world and the service was confined exclusively to the village of Granville. Taking all these things into consideration, it would seem as though the service rendered by the telephone company and which is complained of in the present case is well worth the moderate charge of 50 cents per month."

U. S. ASKED TO PROBE RECRUITING FOR ALLIES

New York.—The Federal authorities have been requested by German sympathizers to investigate the report from San Francisco that wholesale recruiting for the allies is now going on in this country. The trip east of a British lieutenant and twenty-six men is cited as proof of an organized effort to get men from the United States.

When inquiries were made in New York yesterday it was learned several score of Englishmen who on Wednesday will sail for Liverpool on the White Star liner Arabic intend to join regiments on their arrival. An official of the line denied any knowledge of their being recruited here for that purpose. He said they will depart from New York as individuals.

According to the neutrality laws any one can go from America to the belligerent countries, where, if he desires, he can join the army.

CHURCH RITES DENIED WOMEN IN GAUZE

Rome, June 21. — Monsignor Gavotti, Archbishop of Genoa, has issued a pastoral letter to the clergy and laity of the diocese deploring what he calls the indecent garments worn by some of the highest ladies and by some working women, which, he says, is the gravest possible offense. He writes:

"What is worse is that these costumes are worn even when taking communion. I deem it a positive duty of bishops and priests to react stronly against the up-to-date summer fashions.

"I personally already have publicly rebuked women and will continue to do so, even more severely in the future; I also will refuse to administer communion and will not allow to act as godmothers women scandalously dressed."

DIST. ATTY. PERKINS TO RUN AT PRIMARIES

New York.—District Attorney Perkins will be a candidate for his present job at the Republican September primaries, with the backing of Governor Whitman, it was indicated yesterday.

Frank Moss Probably will be one of his chief opponents, with the support of party foes of the Governor.

SPEAKER SWEET RETURNS

Phoenix, June 22.—Speaker and Mrs T. C. Sweet have returned from the Panama-Pacific Exposition. They left the Whitman party at Syracuse and express themselves as glad to get back upon New York soil.

MATERIAL HERE

Officers Expect to Secure a Number of Young Men for the Service

Following the preliminary announcement that a recruiting station is to be opened in the city for the U. S. Marine Corps, came a representative of the Eastern Recruiting Division, Sergeant G. B. McGee, who is stationed in Syracuse. The Sergeant was in the city last Friday, and he writes The Evening Times that he was well pleased with his first visit to Fulton, believing that when the recruiting office is opened in the new post office here "we will sure land some good men," to quote the Sergeant.

All over the country Uncle Samuel has for some time employed his force of recruiting officers in gathering up the unemployed young men, and the present condition of the local labor market has a lot to do with the decision of the Syracuse recruiting office to establish in Fulton a branch with possibly Sergeant McGee in charge.

Service in the Corps

The Marines form the military branch of the United States Navy, and serve both at sea and on land. They are trained, clothed and equipped very much as soldiers of the land forces.

In preparation for their duties as landing parties from ships of the Navy, for expeditionary duty as defenders of naval advance bases, they are further trained in the use of about everything pertaining to searchlights, wireless telegraphy, the planting of mines on land and in the sea, etc. In their service on battleships and first class cruisers, the Marines form a part of the ship's complement for battle, manning the six-inch, five-inch, three-inch and six pounder guns of the intermediate and secondary batteries. The Marines are soon trained and fully equipped for instant service as landing parties.

The Sergeant's Experience

Sergeant McGee is enthusiastic regarding the life of the United States Marine. During his various enlistments he has been in nearly every section of the globe, taking part in the Boxer uprising in China and the more recent campaign at Vera Cruz. He expects to serve in the corps until he reaches the age of retirement, 45, which will make twenty-five years of continuous service. In speaking of what the service has to offer the young man of good habits, Sergeant McGee said that if those fellows who are not favored with steady employment at good wages, and who suffer consequently in their personal appearance and comfort could only get a taste of the life in Uncle Samuel's different branches of service they would no longer remain the parasites upon the community and their frienls that they are too often desribed as being.

Term of Enlistment

Marines are required to enlist for four years. During the period of their service they are assigned to duty on board ships of the navy, at barracks in navy yards and naval stations at home and abroad, as the interests of the service require. The regular pay of Marines varies from $15 to $69 a month, according to rank and length of service. A man starts in as a private at $15 a month and climbs according to his merits and individual efforts. At the end of four years his pay is increased to $18 a month and to $21 a month at the end of eight years, continuous service. Should he qualify with the service rifle his pay will be increased $2 a month for marksman, $3 for sharpshooter and $5 a month for expert rifleman. If he qualifies with the great guns aboard ship his pay is increased from $2 to $10 a month, according to the qualification that he attains and the class of gun at which he is stationed.

DANGEROUS BATHING PLACE FOR THE BOYS

Boys who bathe at the electric light plant in VanBuren st. take chances of being badly scalded, according to Chief Dyer, who warned the youthful swimmers at the light plant yesterday. The steam pipe through which the boilers are blown off, projects into the swimming pool land if the boilers are blown off without warning, a serious accident may result.

Black's Cookies tickle the palates of old and young, because they are right.—adv.

Commodore A. J. Oliver has issued a call to the members of the Fulton Yacht Club, to assemble at the northern approach to Lock No. 3, next Sunday at 9 a.m., for the purpose of cruising through canal and river to Oswego, where the yacht club of that city will entertain the Fulton seamen.

Owners of power boats who may make the trip are directed by the Commodore to carry the club burgee and the American yacht ensign.

Commodore Oliver has been and still is doing a lot of hard work to establish here in Fulton a yacht club for pure sport's sake. During the 1914 season he brought about a series of races for The Times' cup that did a lot toward stimulating motor boat racing on the surface of Oswego river. The same official of the club hopes this year to secure the attention of motorboat owners in another series of races, with The Evening Times' silver cup as an incentive for bringing out the best in watercraft.

The Evening Times' cup remains in the jewelry store of W. C. Morgan, as no one apparently qualified in 1914 for its ownership. In so far as awarding the cup to the winner of the last series of races nothing could be done as a dispute arose over the right to award the cup to its claimant.

BOYS BEFORE CHIEF FOR THROWING STONES

Two women appeared before Chief Dyer this morning, both residents of the West Side, to complain about each other's sons. One woman was unable to speak English, and Frank Massaro interpreted for her. The American woman claimed her boy was severely beaten by the Italian lad, and her son showed scars on his body to prove her statement. The Italian mother claims the American boy is a stone thrower, and that he deserved the licking he got.

The Chief advised them to look after the off-spring more closely, and the indignant women departed.

INSPECTOR A. W. BROWN INSPECTING GARAGES

Ansel W. Brown, State Inspector of Automobiles, stopped in this city yesterday and today on a tour of inspection of garages. It is the official's duty to learn whether garage proprietors are complying with the terms of the law concerning the application of license tags, etc.

POWER CO. WANTS TO USE STATE LANDS

Public Service Commissioner Carr gave a hearing today, in Albany, to the petition of the Oswego River Power and Transmission Co. for permission to use canal lands in this city for the erection and maintenance of electric transmission wires.

CHARLOTTE UNDERWOOD

News was received here this morning of the sudden death of Mrs. Charlotte Underwood, in Meredith, N. H.

Arthur Underwood, a son, who lives at 220½ Oneida st., and is employed at the plant of the Victorira Paper Co., left yesterday for Meredith to attend his mother's funeral.

NORMAL SCHOOL SENIORS HELD ANNUAL BANQUET

Oswego, June 22.—The graduating class of the Oswego State Normal and Training School held a banquet at the Hotel Pontiac last night. Including the graduates, 150 persons present. The members of the school faculty were guests. Dr. William A. Maddox, superintendent of the training department, acted as toastmaster.

Commencement exercises were held at Normal Hall at 10 o'clock this morning. The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. Dr. Kerr MacMillen, president of Wells College, Aurora. The diplomas were conferred by Dr. James G. Riggs, principal. The exercises concluded wth the dedication of a sun dial which has been erected on the campus.

Good news to intending purchasers of oil stoves, at People's Hardware Co., Inc., the Red Front Store.—adv.

HAMMOCKS

Sturdy—Comfortable

Just the thing for your Porch or lawn.

Priced from $1.25 to $8.00

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

1 South First St.

ARE ACCUSED

Summons Served on Three Proprietors Accused of Violating Excise Laws

B. J. O'Grady, proprietor of the Hotel Fulton; L. J. McQuade, prourietor of the Clark House, and J. P. DeLaney, proprietor of the Oswego Falls hotel, have been summoned to appear before Judge Coville in Oswego to answer charges of violations of the State Excise Law. The summons were served yesterday by Chief Dyer, who received them from Sheriff Buck. The summons are returnable Friday, July 9.

The prosecutions are the result of an investigation conducted by District Attorney Culkin and his aids, in thisc ity during the past two weeks. Flagrant violations of the Sunday selling law were discovered in all three Hotels, it is stated, and two places, the sale of liquor was carried on without ony attempt at concealment, and without the customary sandwich in evidence, by which the hotels evade the law.

There have been several complaints recently of the number of drunken men on the streets Sunday, and all of these cases are not Saturday night "hang-overs." The District Attorney will beu rged by many prominent people of this city to sift the Sunday selling violations thoroughly and mete out a severe punishment to the offenders. It is reported that several cafes in thec ity are selling on Sunday but thus far they have escaped the investigators.

WILL ARREST VIOLATORS OF EXCISE LAWS

Following an investigation of alleged violations of the excise laws at the lake resorts in Oswego Town, warrants were issued yesterday by County Judge Coville. District Attorney Culkin said that arrests would be made this afternoon, the warrants having been given to Sheriff Buck and Under Sheriff Schulz at noon.

The county authorities have several clues to the identity of the assailants of Morris Pierce and his housekeeper, at Fruit Valley, three weeks ago and an arrest may be made shortly.

Samuel Gokey of Fruit Valley and John Galvin of Beach Oswego were arrested yesterday for violating the excise law. They were arraigned before Judge Coville this afternoon in county court, and admitted to $1000 bail each.

S. Ehrman, living on R. F. D. 8, telephoned The Evening Times office to discontinue a Miscellaneous Want ad. He secured what he wanted after one insertion.—Adv.

Special Sale

HATS that were $2.50, $3.00, $4.00, this week at .. $1.00

See Window Display

DIX—Milliner

SOUTH SECOND STREET

A New Assortment of

WEDDING GIFTS

principally CUT GLASS and SILVERWARE just received.

AT VERY SPECIAL PRICES.

Wm. C. Morgan

Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

When You Can Get a Guaranteed
BICYCLE
FOR $25.00 AND UP
Why go further than
BOGUE'S, 61 First Street
The Bicycle Garage

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of all kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122.

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

For Sale—Three large mirrors, sectional bookcases, one screen, and 2 small tables, chairs and 12½ yards linoleum. Call 9 S. 2d, or phone 2315. 157

To Rent—Desirable rooms to rent in the Rosenbloom block. Gas, water, electricity. Inquire of Glenn A. Ryther, DeBarber Block. 159

For Sale—Grocery store doing good business; will bear investigation. Good reason for selling. Inquire C, Times office. 159c

Furnished Rooms for housekeeping, or by day or week. 205 Cayuga st. 161c

For Sale—Five White Leghorn hens, good layers; cheap if taken at once. Phone 1511. 157c

Tenement House to Rent—Pine st.; $10 month. Inquire H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

KATZ & CO. INCORPORATED

Hereafter the firm of M. Katz & Co. of this city will operate under a charter issued by the Secretary of State. The capital stock of the corporation is given as $100,000, and the directors are David M. Katz, Max Katz and L. W. Emerick.

Onyx Billiard Room
The Coolest and the Best Equipped.
The only Billiard Table in the City
G. J. POWELL, Mgr.
PHONE 560 QUIRK THEATRE BLDG.

REV. BASSETT GAVE TALK

New Religions Was the Topic Discussed; Positiveism Cited

At a regular meeting of the Borrowed Time club held yesterday the Rev. W. G. Bassett spoke on religions, in part, as follows:

"One of the noted divines of Europe has said nothing is easier than to create a religion. M. Comte, an able French student, sat down in his study and produced Positiveism, which some one described as Catholicism minus Christianity. It stimulated conversation in higher thinking circles for years and Frederic Harrison was explaining to Prof. Huxley that this ingenious invention should be taken seriously. An extremely clever woman disappeared into Asia and came back with another religion which distinctly added to the innocent gaiety of the English nation. In these days one never knows when a new religion may not be brought out and advertised. It is an age of invention. Wonders follow wonders so rapidly that we are dazed and prepared to accept anything. Men who once scouted the miracles of Christ and doubted the Bible because they held that modern science utterly disproved their possibility, now stand aghast at the terrific battles in the air and the deadly destruction wrought beneath the waters of the great deep. Now they no longer dispute the miracles as facts, but declare them insignificant to those of the present day and that Christ possessed the knowledge which others had never discovered. Strange inconsistences thus to fly from one dilemma to the other. Various interesting socieites meet in secret conclave and are understood to be working at something. The world is all curiosity and when the novelty is brought forward it receives a good national welcome. These are but efforts to stimulate the palate of society, which no one resents unless it threatens to be paraded too long and become a bore. Thinkers with a work to accomplish in life cannot stop to analyze them or expose their fallacies. To put their acts in comparison with Christianity is an impossibility. It would be an insult to Jesus Christ.

Not so the great relions of the East. They command wonder and respect. They are not the fleeting fancy of fashion; they are part with antiquity; they are not the pastime of a coterie; they have shaped the destiny of innumerable millions." the speaker gave some further extracts from Ian Maclaren:

Jesus' idea lifts Christianity above plain of arid discussion and places it in the region of poetry, where the emotions have full play and faith is vision; theology becomes the explanation of the fellowship between the soul and Jesus. Regeneration is the entrance into His life. Justification the partaking of His cross. Sanctification the transformation unto His character. Death, the coming of the Lord. Heaven, His unveiled face.

"We ought to discover the real the ancient passion for Jesus. It is the distinctiveness of our religion, it is the guarantee of its triumph. Faith may languish, creeds may be changed, church may be dissolved, society may be shattered, but one cannot imagine the time when Jesus will not be the fair image of perfection or the circumstances whereon He will not be loved. He can never be superceded; He can never be exceded. Religion will come and go, but Jesus will remain the standard of the conscience and the participation of the heart whom all men seek; in whom all men will meet.

Community Notes

Good catches were made by a party of fishermen who returned yesterday from Brewerton. Each one of the fishermen made several fine catches. F. McNamara, Lee Frawley, H. Dodge, Edward Edley and J. Breer comprised the Brewerton tourists.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sharpe, of St. Johns, N. B., are visiting at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe, in Highland st. The Sharpes are spending some of their time with their sisters, Mrs. George Pelton and Mrs. L. Laveck.

* * *

J. William Branche is entertaining his brother, Archie, of Rosieve, N.Y.

* * *

Were it possible to hold in this city a competition exhibition of roses grown in the many rose beds of the people, it would be a difficult matter for anyone to outdistance the display of beauties to be seen in the A. G. Gilbert garden at 3d and Rochester sts. Mr. Gilbert's display of blooms merits the attention of rose culturists anywhere.

* * *

Mildred Sant, whose eyeball was gouged from its socket by a sickle wielded by her young brother, has recovered from the effects of the operation as to be able to leave the hospital, which occurred today.

* * *

Among those from this city who will attend the Albany convention of the Ladies of the G. A. R., are Mrs. Ada Parker and Mrs. Cora Hammond, who left today for the capital.

* * *

An enjoyable time is anticipated by the members of the cast of "The Fortune Hunter," who will have an outing tomorrow at South Bay on the shore of Oneida lake.

* * *

Edward Joslin attended the graduation of his daughter, Pauline, at the convent academy of the Holy Name, at Rome, on Monday, June 21st.

* * *

The Public Safety Division of the Chamber of Commerce will meet at the Chamber rooms at o'clock this afternoon.

* * *

The Columbia Circle will hold no meeting this week on account of the G. A. R. convention at Albany.

* * *

Mrs. M. Lewis of West 4th st. is visiting friends in Syracuse.

* * *

Miss Frances Conners is home from her school work and will spend the summer at her home in Worth st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James Foster of Fay st. have been entertaining guests from out of town.

* * *

Hugh Jewitt is home from Wheeling, W. Va., where he is teacher of manual training in the high school there.

* * *

Clinton Gilbert of Philadelphia, son of Arthur G. Gilbert, is a guest at the Gilbert home in S. 4th st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Wells of Seneca st. with a party of friends have returned from an auto trip through Vermont and Massachusetts.

* * *

Mrs. C. D. Hannum of Hannibal st. has been visiting relatives at Hannibal.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Palmer of W. Broadway have been guests of friends at S. Granby.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Anderson entertained about twenty ladies of the Congregational church at her home in West 1st st., last Saturday afternoon.

* * *

Mrs. W. F. Hill, Mrs. Charles Hammond and Mrs. Edward Parker left for Albany this morning as delegates to the G. A. R. convention.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stevens of E. Broadway have as their guest Miss Halstead of Syracuse University.

Black's White Bread is sold by all grocers, because it is in demand by everybody. adv.

75c and $1.00
MUSLIN UNDERSKIRTS 50c
Trimmed with Fine Imported Embroidery made of Best Bleached Cotton
On Sale WEDNESDAY at 9 A. M.
All TAILOR-MADE SUITS are selling now at about 1-3 to 1-2 off our former selling prices. Let us show them to you.
WHY TRADE ELSEWHERE AND PAY MORE WHEN YOU CAN BUY IT FOR LESS AT
M. KATZ & CO.'S

CLASS NIGHT AT THE QUIRK

"Fortune Hunter" to Be Staged by a Cast Trained by Capable Talent

Tonight the stage and auditorium of the pretty Quirk theatre will be given over to the students of the high school who will participate in the annual class night exercises.

"The Fortune Hunter" will be produced under the direction of Mrs. Laura White Kesler by the following cast of characters:

Nathaniel Duncan, "Nat," the Fortune Hunter," Leland T. Carner
Henry Kellogg, a rising financier — Harold F. Caffrey
George Burnham, a promoter — Andrew M. Sharpe
Robbins, Kellogg's servant — Ramon F. Lewis
Tom, a newsboy...Bernard S. Reswick

Village Characters

Sam Graham, the druggist — Marshal G. Penfield
Mr. Lockwood, the banker — Earl D. Hopkins
Roland Barnett, the bank clerk — Harold Thompson
Tracey Tanner, the liveryman's son — Harold J. Scholz
Pete Willing, the sheriff — Harold N. Gillespie
Mr. Sperry, a drummer — Harry J. Lynch
"Watty," the tailor — Matthew Frawley
"Hi," an old inhabitant, Howard Shaff
Herman, the errand boy — Edward K. Sullivan
Betty Graham, the druggist's daughter, Florence L. Moody
Josephine Lockwood, the banker's daughter, Eryma E. Paige
Angie, the friend of "Josie," — Rose A. Walsh

Act I, Scene—Sittingroom of Henry Kellogg's bachelor apartment in New York. Time, 6:30 in the afternoon.

Act II, Scene—Samuel Graham's drug store in Radville, Pa. Time, a quarter to twelve, noon.

Act III, Scene—Same as Act II, six months later. Time, evening.

Act IV, Scene—House and grounds of Sam Graham's home. Time, nine o'clock same euening as in Act III.

Music Between the Acts

Act I—Cecile Waltz..Frank McKee.
Act II—Call Around Again, Victor Herbert.
Act III—College Songs.

Part I of the program embraces the following:

Selection, Il Trovatore, Verdi — Orchestra
March ....Orchestra
Class History.........Lola B. Palmer
History of the Historian — Amelia L. Rolfe
Class Poem......Florence L. Moody
Class Prophecy......Earl D. Hopkins
Prophecy on Prophet Lillian P. Simons
Class Will.........Matthew Frawley
Codicil to Will....Harold N. Gillespie

Class of 1915

The officers of the 1915 class are: President, Harold Thompson; Vice-President, Eryma E. Paige, Treasurer, Leland T. Carner, Class Mascot, Harriet Scholz.

Following is a list of the members of the class:

Evadne F. Austin, Margaret K. Clark, Esther M. Freeman, Eliza Hubbard, Rose M. King, Isabel Merriam, Florence L. Moody, Eryma E. Paige, Lola B. Palmer, Amelia L. Rolfe, Kathleen M. Scanlon, Lillian P. Simons, Rose A. Walsh, Jessie B. Wilcox, Muriel F. Wintrs, Harold F. Caffrey, Leland T. Carner, Matthew Frawley, Harold N. Gillespie, Earl D. Hopkins, Ramon F. Lewis, Harry J. Lynch, Marshal G. Penfield, Bernard S. Reswick, Leland Root, Albert L. Sanford, Harold Scholz, Howard Shaff, Andrew M. Sharp, Edward K. Sullipan, Harold Thompson.

Joseph Johnston,'16, is grand marshal; the class colors are scarlet and gray.

MARSHALL G. PENFIELD ENTERTAINED CLASSMATES

Thirty members of the graduating class of Fulton High school were the guests of Marshall G. Penfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Penfield, at Pathfinder Island yesterday. The party left this city at 3 o'clock in automobiles.

The principal event of the afternoon was a baseball game between two picked teams, captained by Harold Caffrey and Fred Martin. Scholz and Sanford were in the points for the Caffrey team, while Frawley and Carner composed the battery for the Martin aggregation. The final score was 15-9 (more or less), and the squad ledb y the redoubtable "Specs," carriel off first honors. Caffrey's home run w as the feature.

Early in the evenin, a dainty repast was served on the veranda of the club and dancing followed until a late hour. A Victrola dispensed the music.

Mr. and Mrs. Penfield chaperoned the party and the young people keenly enjoyed every minute of the day.

Fraternity Dinner at Citizens Club

The annual banquet of the Pi Kappa Epsillon fraternity of the Pathfinder Boat club was held last night at the Citizens' club and was attended by every member of the chapter. An elaborate menu was served under the direction of the steward of the club, as follows:

Tomato Bisque with Whipped Cream
Saltines
Radishes — Olives
Baked White Fish
Cheese Sauce — Buttered Fingers
Roast Leg of Lamb, Mint Sauce
Mashed Potatoes — Asparagus
Waldorf Salad
Ice Cream — Cake
Coffee

Following the banquet, Joseph E. McCaffrey as toastmaster called on several members of the fraternity for speeches. Charles G. Finche spoke on The Benefits of High School Clubs. Nicholas Wallace made an extemporaneous address, in the course of which he reviewed the work and social affairs of the fraternity. James Keeler spoke on "Men." John P. Lynch closed the evening with an address on "P. K. E."

The committee in charge comprised John P. Lynch, Harold O'Brien, J. T. Fairgrieve, J. Harold Scholz and James Keeler.

H. PUTNAM ALLEN & SON
Established in 1893 by Horatio A. Allen
Dealers in FINE GROCERIES — Telephone 32
53 S. First Street, Fulton, N. Y.
If you are a lover of GOOD COFFEE try our "EMPIRE BRAND"
It has no superior and few equals. In one-pound sealed pkgs.
Price 25c per Pound
"If our goods please you tell your friends, if not tell us."
CALL US ON PHONE 32

JOBBERS COMING NEXT TUESDAY

On Errand of Mercy to Those Who Barter and Trade With Them

On Tuesday, June 29th, about forty representatives of the various wholesaling and jobbing houses of Syracuse will participate in an acquaintance excursion held under the auspices of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce.

The party will leave Syracuse over the Empire United Railroads in a special car to Oswego at 9 a.m., stopping at Baldwinsville from 9.30 to 10.30, at Phoenix from 10.40 to 11.30, at Fulton from 12 o'clock to 3 p.m., at Minetto from 3.25 to 3.45, arriving at Oswego at 4 p.m.

Lunch has been arranged for the party and their guests at the Clark House, this city. Mayor Fox, the president and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of this city and various Fulton merchants are to be invited as guests of the Syracuse contingent.

Evening dinner has been arranged at the Pontiac, in Oswego, at 6.45 p.m., after which a smoker will be held in the main dining room of the hotel, to which all the various customers and friends in the towns visited, the mayor of Oswego and the president and secretary of the Oswego Chamber of Commerce, will be invited as guests of the Syracuse party.

The purpose of this excursion is to promote acquaintance and friendship between the Syracuse wholesalers and the various retailers in the districts visited.

The committee in charge of excursion consists of Salem Hyde of the firm of Neal & Hyde, C. S. Tracy of the firm of O. V. Tracy & Co., and H. D. Burhans of the firm of Burhans & Black.

GOVERNOR WHITMAN TO BE AT GLOVERSVILLE

Several Fulton residents are planning to be in Gloversville, Fulton county, July 3, 4 and 5 when Governor Charles S. Whitman and a battalion of National Guard will assist present and former residents of that glove center in celebrating the city's 25th anniversary and a safe and sane Fourth. A speech by the governor, parades, band concerts, military maneuvers, fireworks and a big union outdoor church service of all Protestants and Catholics in the city will be features.

G. L. Pratt sold a horse and set of harness by advertising in The Evening Times Miscellaneous Want column. He was deluged with replies in one instance and "kicked" because he did not happen to have more to offer for sale.—Adv.

Makes Up for Other Delays
A fragrant cup of coffee is more than half of a good breakfast.
Of course it will be natural for him to delay leaving for work in the morning or after lunch.
The Electric Coffee Pot will help make up for these delays.
WEDNESDAY SPECIAL OFFER
A $5.50 [illegible] for $3.50
THE ELECTRIC CO.

THE QUIRK
Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.
TODAY
HIGH SCHOOL CLASS PLAY
No Pictures
WEDNESDAY
The Great Extravanza
"THE WIZARD OF OZ"
in 5 parts and
Pathe Weekly
THURSDAY
7th Drama of "WHO PAYS" Series entitled
"BLUE BLOOD AND YELLOW"
2d Episode "Romance of Elaine" and Pathe Weekly.

D/34

GRATITUDE

The Fulton Evening Times expresses gratitude for the liberal support given its endeavors to launch in this city a daily newspaper. This expression of good will is extended to the people in every walk of life--- to those who were at first skeptical of the advisability of beginning the publication of this newspaper, and to those who believed that Fulton should have in addition to its weekly newspapers a daily that would place the town in the same category as other towns of the same size of Fulton.

NOT AN EXPERIMENT

The Fulton Evening Times is no longer in the experimental stage. Since December 17, 1914, it has issued more than 150 numbers, or approximately 375,000 copies, which represents in the neighborhood of 37,500 pounds of paper made at the big mill of the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Co. It will be seen by these figures and the fact that the payroll of Fulton Evening Times is expended with the merchants of the city, that here is an industry of no mean proportions---one that deserves the support of the people, and we are pleased to report, that this newspaper

IS GETTING SUPPORT

Because the citizenship of this city has the proper amount of civic pride to impel it to support a home institution. There are many reasons why our subscribers are numbered by the hundreds, chief of which is that The Evening Times is counted upon as the medium wherein local news is the leading feature, and wherein the people feel that they have a defender of their rights.

The Evening Times is Winning its Way, too Because it is

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

Dr. Edmonds' Patient

A Tale of a Haunted House.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

A severe thunderstorm was raging when the telephone bell tinkled softly.

Dr. Edmonds' man, Josiah, roused himself from slumber on the office sofa and reached apprehensively for the receiver.

"I don't like techin' telephones noways when de lightning's kyooting around," muttered Josiah. "Hello, dar!" he called timidly. "Ya-as, sah, dis am de doctor's—ya-as, sah. He'll come right away."

Josiah hung up the receiver and went up to the doctor's bedroom on the second floor. The doctor came out—a tall, lithe, red bearded man, rubbing his eyes sleepily.

"What is it, Josiah?" he yawned. "Mr. Dixon got another bad spell?"

Josiah's eyes rolled affrightedly.

"No, sah; it was a call from de Gedney place."

"Gedney place! You've made a mistake. It's been unoccupied for years."

"Dat's what he said. 'Tell de doctor he's needed at once at de Gedney place on de Hollow road.'"

"Humph!" muttered the physician. "Well, you better go out and harness Daisy and get out my raincoat."

It was a dreary ride to the Gedney place.

Josiah, huddled in one corner of the buggy, was shaking with fear of the approaching ordeal. Dr. Edmonds was puzzling over the strange summons. To his knowledge the Gedney place had been unoccupied for the past ten years. As a family the Gedneys had died out, all save one son, the black sheep of his generation. William Gedney was serving a life sentence in prison, convicted of killing a man in a quarrel. The plea was self defense, and Gedney had escaped with his life.

The village people had gossiped ever since the last funeral at the place ten years ago. It was said that the spirit of the murdered man, Tom Collins, haunted the rooms of the fine old mansion on the Hollow road. Lights had flickered there at midnight, and men straggling home between midnight and dawn had declared that a man's dim form restlessly paced the pine grove that was growing up around the neglected house. But little credence was given to such tales.

"Here we am, doctor," quavered Josiah. "I'll jest git out and open de gate."

The long unused gate creaked open, and the doctor turned into it, trusting more to Daisy's instinct than to anything he could see. Josiah did not return to the buggy. He tramped beside the doctor, muttering charms under his breath.

They were in the protection of the front porch now. Dr. Edmonds brought out his electric torch and found the doorbell. He pulled it vigorously, and a resonant peal rang through the house.

There was no answer.

Again and again the doctor rang, and at last he impatiently turned the doorknob. To his amazement it responded to his pressure.

The door was unlocked!

They entered complete darkness.

"Hello, there!" shouted the doctor, standing at the foot of the great staircase that wound up into darkness. "Anybody here?"

In the silence that followed they distinctly heard the distant striking of the town clock in the valley below.

It struck the hour of midnight, and on the heels of the last stroke there came a sound in the Gedney house.

It was a cry, a moaning cry, that sent a shudder through the doctor's strong frame.

Josiah almost sank to the floor.

"De ghos'!" he gibbered.

Dr. Edmonds recovered his nerve, poked Josiah in the ribs with the automatic pistol he always carried at night and brought the darky to his senses.

"Some one is upstairs," he said sternly. "Some one who is hurt and needs me. Understand! Take my bag and follow me. If you try to run away, remember, I'm a dead shot!"

Josiah mutely fell into step behind the doctor as they mounted the stairs. He would have been more terrified than ever if he had remotely guessed why the doctor had handed him the medicine case. It was that both his own hands might be free to grapple with any danger that menaced them in the deserted house.

The cry had come down from the upper regions of the house. They searched the second floor and found it untenanted save by spiders and scuttling mice. Here, as in the lower rooms, the furniture was covered with dust.

Now the moaning cry was repeated. It came from the third story under the mansard roof.

They reached the narrow upper hall, went down its carpeted length to the southwest chamber. The door was ajar. The doctor pushed it open and raked it with the light of his torch.

The light revealed several startling facts.

There was a narrow cot on the carpeted floor, a pine bureau littered with bottles and dishes and crusts of bread, and besides one or two rocking chairs there was a pile of books from the library downstairs and a man's blackened pipe on the deal table.

Like lightning the doctor's keen eye searched the room and then went back to the space in front of the cot. A man's body lay there inert.

"Hold this torch," commanded the doctor, and, bending down, he lifted the man's emaciated form to the cot. The ragged coat fell back, revealing a glimpse of a broadly striped garment underneath.

It did not need this betraying glimpse of the convict stripes for the physician to recognize in the man William Gedney!

The room revealed that it had long been the habitation of some recluse. Who was it? Hardly Gedney, for he was still in prison.

The doctor made a brief examination and found that the man had been stabbed in the right shoulder. An ugly wound, but not necessarily dangerous.

Josiah, relieved at this practical laying of the Gedney ghost, waited upon his master with unusual intelligence. He heated water on the oil stove, found a lamp and lighted it and held it, together with the torch, while the doctor skillfully washed and dressed the wound. When it was bound and a pillow placed under the injured man's back the doctor administered a strong stimulant and presently William Gedney opened his wild, dark eyes and searched the physician's countenance.

"Edmonds!" he gasped. "You? How did you come here?"

"A telephone message," said the doctor quickly. "And you, William, you have escaped?"

Gedney nodded wearily. "Sit down, and I will tell you all," he said.

His story was brief and to the point. He declared that he had been innocent of the crime charged against him. Although there had been a fight and a shot had been fired, he swore that he had not held the weapon. His companions had scattered, leaving him with the body of Tom Collins—to be the scapegoat.

Circumstantial evidence was against him, and to save his client Gedney's lawyer had pleaded self defense; hence the life sentence.

"I've always intended to escape," muttered Gedney, "and at last came the opportunity. I grasped it. My first thought was to come home here. I arrived this evening at dusk. The place was home to me, although there remained none of my dear ones to welcome me, the black sheep of the family. Doctor, I may have been wild and foolish, but my hands are innocent of blood.

"I came afoot—I had traveled by night—and at last I reached here, gained an entrance through the pantry window and went up to my mother's room. I—I was going to pray there and ask their forgiveness—you understand," he ended brokenly.

"I had reached the upper hall when I met a man; it was Tom Collins' brother! He was carrying a candle, and he looked old and ragged and unkempt. When he saw me he gave chase, screaming madly that he would kill me. I was unarmed, and I was weak from lack of food. He pursued me up the attic stairs to this room, and there he stabbed me, leaving me for dead on the floor. It was a welcome sound indeed to hear your ring at the door! I suppose I must go back to prison, but I think I have solved the mystery. Jim Collins killed his brother. That is why he has hidden away here, a prey to his own guilty conscience. He must have lived a hermit life for several years. A fellow prisoner told me that Jim had disappeared from his usual haunts. I hope—I pray that he has left a confession of some kind that will clear my name!"

Leaving Josiah in care of the sick man, Dr. Edmonds went back to his horse and drove rapidly in the direction of the railroad station. He suspected that the fleeing Collins had in a moment of contrition telephoned from some pay station to the doctor's house so that Gedney's wound might be attended to.

Dr. Edmonds found a strange situation at the little railroad station.

A strange man had found shelter there during the thunderstorm. He was a ragged looking tramp. He had entered the wire cage where the public telephone was placed and had used the telephone. As he finished speaking there came a crackling hiss, and a bolt of lightning ruined the instrument and sent the man senseless to the floor.

The station agent had vainly tried to reach Dr. Edmonds, and his appearance now was taken as a matter of fact.

There was little he could do for Jim Collins save to take his dying statement and confession that he was his brother's murderer. He had heard that the Gedney place was deserted, and he resolved to conceal himself there with his gnawing remorse. By night he stole out and bought food and tobacco, tramping many miles to the next village.

When the sun rose over the rain swept mountains Jim Collins breathed his last.

Dr. Edmonds went back to the man in the Gedney house with freedom in his hands.

William Gedney, exonerated of the charge, took possession of his property and in the course of time married. Children play around the pleasant lawns, for the pine grove has been cut down, and sunshine enters every nook and cranny of the old house and grounds.

But nothing can give back to William Gedney the lost years spent behind prison bars.

Sympathy

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

When the Spanish-American war broke out Ralph and Edgar Townsend, brothers, enlisted in the same regiment of sharpshooters and were assigned to the same company. One day they were out on the picket line sniping for the Spaniards. Their position was behind a stone wall, its continuity broken here and there. Ralph was on one side of a gap, while Edgar was on the other side, the opening between them being eight or ten yards.

Edgar concluded to make a dash to join his brother. He had passed safely over all but a couple of yards of the distance when Ralph saw a Spanish sharpshooter taking aim at his brother. Ralph had just emptied his piece or he would have shot the Spaniard. As it was, he sprang between him and Edgar and received a shot which, grazing the spine, paralyzed his lower limbs. He was discharged from the service and sent home, where he submitted to an operation that partly restored his locomotive powers, but he was in a measure crippled for life.

As soon as the war was over Edgar Townsend rejoined his brother, resolving to devote the rest of his life to him. Ralph was twenty years old, Edgar twenty-two. Ralph would not admit that he was crippled and was very sensitive at the mention of his being so. As for Edgar making any change whatever in his life's plans on his account he would not hear of it, nor did Ralph seem to realize that he had sacrificed himself for his brother. He considered what he had done simply in the line of his duty as a soldier. Edgar, on the contrary, was impressed with the idea that his brother had taken a burden which he should have borne himself.

Nevertheless as soon as Edgar saw that Ralph was averse to such an interpretation of the status between them, he refrained from any mention of it, and wherever it was possible to conceal any sacrifice he made for his brother he did so. He soon came to studying Ralph's wishes, and wherever they conflicted with his own, made pretense that what Ralph wanted was distasteful to him.

Then came Edith Payne into the lives of the brothers. She was sympathetic with Ralph, but her heart went out to Edgar. The one she loved as one who needed her, the other she loved as one she needed. Edgar, noticing that his brother was daily growing more dependent on her, refrained from paying her any marked attention.

As time went on Edgar perceived that Edith was growing to be a necessity to Ralph. Moreover, he noticed that while Edith was devoted to Ralph, there were indications that her heart was setting toward himself. One day when he and Edith were speaking of Ralph Edgar said to her.

"I feel it my duty to say to you, Edith, that I have seen what perhaps has passed unnoticed by you. Ralph loves you."

The girl paled, and she had cause to pale. She loved Edgar and she knew that while his brother held this view, Edgar was lost to her. He would never stand between his brother and her.

"I hope," she said presently, "that you are mistaken."

"And I hope," said Edgar, "if you think you cannot respond, that you are mistaken. Our attentions to those dependent upon us often draw us to them with far greater force than we realize."

Edith sighed. She knew that the man she loved was endeavoring to persuade her to give herself to the man she only pitied. But she said nothing more. She knew what Edgar would have her do. She did not know his feelings toward her, but she surmised that he had no desire to possess her himself. Even if he had he would give her up to his brother.

Soon after this brief dialogue Edgar went away for a time, leaving Edith and Ralph together. Before his departure he said to Edith, "I hope when I return to find that you have decided to make Ralph happy."

It was thus that Edith was led to bear a part of the burden of the man she loved by giving herself to the man she did not love. She considered what he had said to her a command, and she would not disobey. When Edgar returned she told him that she and Ralph were engaged.

She looked Edgar in the eye when she made the announcement, hoping to see him wince. If it was a shock to him he concealed it so well that she was deceived. From that time she gave herself up more and more to Ralph's companionship, and when the wedding day came went with him to the altar a martyr.

Then Edgar, feeling that his brother no longer needed him as before, spent much of his time away from him. Some said he did not dare trust himself near his brother's wife.

As the years sped on Ralph Townsend grew more and more helpless, his wife more and more devoted to him. Ten years after his marriage he died. Those who knew of the sacrifice that had been made supposed that Edith and Edgar would quickly come together. They have been disappointed. Four years after Edith became a widow she and Edgar had not married. It is said that she illustrates Edgar's words to her years before, "Our attentions to those dependent upon us often draw us to them with far greater force than we realize."

Edgar is still a bachelor.

For the Children

A Sweet Little Girl at the Flower Show.

Photo by American Press Association.

Not long ago there was held at one of the big New York hotels a flower show that was attended by many society folks. Among the visitors was Miss Ruth Atkins, a sweet little miss, whose portrait is shown herewith. Ruth was greatly pleased at the beautiful display of flowers, and many of the people at the show thought Ruth was the most charming rosebud of all the gorgeous display. As she was going about with her mamma the camera man came along, and he was so struck with Ruth that he snapped her picture then and there. If by chance Ruth should see her picture in the paper she would be a surprised little girl.

Kick and Run.

This is a boy scout game and is played in a clearing or open field with a regular association football or basketball. One scout takes his position in the clearing, and the rest seek cover as near as possible. With a scoutmaster acting as umpire, the ball is rolled into the open space and the scout inside immediately kicks it out and rushes out to tag any other scout he can find and catch, but directly the ball is kicked back into the clearing he must return and kick it out. The umpire watches the ball and as soon as it comes to a standstill inside the clearing blows his whistle to indicate the fact. While the one scout is returning to kick it out the others may change their positions or seek fresh hiding places.

The scouts who are caught remove their scarves or wind a white handkerchief around one arm and then help their captor to catch other scouts. They must not kick the ball, but must return to the clearing each time the whistle is blown. The winner is the scout who is caught last. In an open field the "clearing" is indicated by a white mark on the grass or by corner posts and scouts have to elude capture more by dodging than by seeking cover.

As a variation successive patrols may "hold" the clearing and endeavor to capture the rest of the troop in the shortest posible time. The patrol leader only is allowed to kick the ball out of the clearing. The winning patrol is that which takes the shortest time. In this variation the scouts who are caught do not take any further part in the game.—Scouting.

Wall Scaling For Scouts.

The exciting and trying sport of wall scaling is being taken up by many of the more aggressive troops of boy scouts. Wall scaling looks daring, appeals to the eye and gives opportunity for snappy contests. Teamwork counts and fumbles are glaring. Altogether, to the troop which has or can make the necessary equipment wall scaling is well worth the effort. There are few exercises so thrilling with so little of the element of danger of mishap. Many troops are practicing wall scaling at this time with a view to putting on exhibitions at various public gatherings, encampments and the like this summer.

Girlie's Troubles.

My name is little Albertine,
But mother calls me Tommy
Because my clothes are never clean,
My hands are always gummy.

She stops me racing through the house,
She says I make a racket;
Declares she'll dress me in a blouse
And put on pants and jacket.

Because I climb up fence and trees,
Make mud pies in the gutter,
Forget to say "Thank you" and "Please"
When I want bread and butter.

And after I am bathed at night,
She prays, "Lord keep her cleanly."
But daddy holds me close and tight
And whispers, "Daddy's Queenie."
—Philadelphia Record.

When the Charms Fail the Penalty Is Swift and Deadly.

Not long since, in an inland village in New Guinea, a certain mother-in-law fell ill. A puri-puri man was fetched to her aid from a neighboring village. Could the puri-puri man cure the mother-in-law? Oh, yes, the puri-puri man could surely cure the mother-in-law! The puri-puri man man must have, however, as a fee for the cure a dog and a pig. It was a bargain. The dog and the pig passed into the possession of the sorcerer, and he set confidently to work. It was testified in the course of the trial, which presently came on, that the sorcerer, who was by this time the deceased in the case, had "made a few passes" over the mother-in-law and returned to his village.

"Now, my good woman," said he, upon departing, "you will get well."

This was not so.

"I called you to attend my mother-in-law?" demanded the son-in-law, when next the sorcerer came.

It was admitted.

"I paid you a dog and a pig?"

"You did."

"My mother-in-law is dead."

"Hum." It is easy to imagine the consternation of the sorcerer.

"Very well, then," declared the son-in-law. "As I paid you a dog and a pig to cure my mother-in-law, and as you did not cure her, I am going to kill you."

Thereupon the son-in-law went off with two friends in search of weapons. Witnesses of what followed told the magistrate before whom the case was being tried that the sorcerer made no attempt to escape, that he calmly awaited the inevitable event. Presently the avengers returned. The son-in-law grievously speared the sorcerer, and the friends—lending countenance and aid—dispatched him with their stone clubs. Not one of these men, declares the magistrate, could be persuaded that they had done anything out of the way. Had the sorcerer not been paid a dog and a pig for his medicine? And had not his cure failed? And was he not a sorcerer, anyhow?—Harper's Magazine.

FIRES IN ICEHOUSES.

They Are Easily Started and Particularly Hard to Handle.

Icehouses, despite their damp contents and their simple structure, have a high place among special fire risks. No kind of building is such a paradox. Apparently an icehouse is as safe against fire as a pump log or a mud scow; yet give the flames but half a chance and nine times in ten they work a total loss.

Under ordinary conditions an icehouse fire starts easily. The walls rise without masonry direct from the ground; grass fires and brush fires creep into contact with the bare wood. Dry straw and hay lie all about. Damp sawdust within often takes fire of itself. Tramps, never over careful in their smoking, seek shelter in the buildings. The saw tooth roofs could not be better planned to catch sparks from passing trains.

And when the fire has started, it is uncommonly hard to master. In most cases it gets an overpowering headway before the fighters can assemble. Hydrants are often lacking. If the buildings are full of ice and the covering straw, the firemen can work only from the outside; if the buildings are empty the great spaces give the flames both draft and sweep. And the walls by their peculiar construction, double or triple with twelve or eighteen inch spaces within, packed with tan bark or other combustible filling, usually baffle all attempts at reaching and extinguishing the well fed fire within them.—Boston Herald.

The First Houseboats.

The first houseboats in this country were developed on the Mississippi river and were called "shanty boats." As the name implies, they are more or less of a shelter or shanty built on a small boxlike scow or float of logs, usually containing but one room, in which cooking, sleeping, living, trading and very often gambling were conducted. These shanty boats often started from St. Louis or points farther north and drifted with the current, assisted and steered with long sweeps all the way down the river to New Orleans. Here they were sold or deserted by their owners, it being practically impossible to get them back up the river against the current without towing, the cost of which was prohibitive.—H. W. Lowerree in Countryside Magazine.

Burned Out Fuse Plugs.

When a house fuse plug "blows" out and there is no other at hand take a bit of tin foil—the covering from a pack of tobacco or chewing gum will do—and fold it once, making the strip about one-half inch wide; then lay it over the contact points of the plug and screw the plug into the receptacle. This will make a connection and will not produce any more body than if the ordinary fuse wire were used.—Popular Mechanics.

Beautiful Defendant.

"I want you to make the outfit for my trial."

"Let me see," mused the experienced modiste. "You'll want a direct testimony suit, a cross examination gown and something dainty and clinging to faint in."—Kansas City Journal.

Oratory.

Oratory is the longest distance between two platitudes. Its success depends upon how much it impresses you when it is being delivered and how little it impresses you afterward.—Life.

Baptism of Fire Greeted Mr. Harry Mestayer's Entrance In Motion Picture Plays

[Harry Mestayer is one of the most prominent actors on the American stage. He has assumed leading roles in many important stage productions and comes from a line of theatrical people. He has written herewith his experiences as a leading man in the Selig Red Seal play, "The Millionaire Baby."]

By HARRY MESTAYER.

"Two years ago if anyone had approached me with a contract to appear in motion pictures I would have turned down the offer. And yet, like many other actors, I have seen the light. The change of heart was not compulsory, for I came to realize that in motion pictures of higher class the conscientious actor has as great an opportunity for artistic work as on the spoken stage. I considered at some length, too, before I affiliated permanently with any motion picture concern, and I chose the Selig Polyscope company because of the enviable reputation attained by the Selig spectacular productions and the artistic environments made possible by the careful supervision of Mr. William N. Selig.

"When I started to work in 'The Millionaire Baby' in the Chicago studios of the Selig Polyscope company I was also appearing in the lead in a dramatic production on the speaking stage at one of the leading theaters in that city. This placed me under quite a strain and all I did for several weeks was work and sleep—and very little of the latter. I was at the studio every morning at 8:30 and worked steadily until 5 or 5:30 in the afternoon. Then I rushed downtown and, after a rather hurried supper, sped to the theater in time to appear on the stage at 8:15.

"It was quite an experience to be working in two characters which were themselves so different and which were presented through such widely different mediums, and this novelty relieved the monotony of such a steady grind.

"I will try to tell you some of the interesting things which occurred during the filming of the big scenes for 'The Millionaire Baby.' The first one that comes to my mind, and one which I will remember for a long, long time, was a fire scene in which I was supposed to rescue another actor, who was playing the part of my employer, from a burning building. Our director tried using smokepots, but these did not give the realistic effect which he desired, so he determined that the shack which had been erected in the large yard of the studio would have to be burned and that the two of us who were to appear in the scene would have to undertake what is termed by the players 'a stunt.' In other words, we would have to run the risk of being injured for the sake of realism.

"The other player was placed in the shack and the fire started. The 'business' of my part called for my rushing into the building and carrying the other man out through the smoke and flames and 'off' the scene. Oil was sprinkled on various parts of the shack, but not around the door through which we were to exit while I was doing the 'rescue.' All appeared to be going nicely as I made my way past the camera and started to enter the shack. Suddenly, however, the flames leaped up, fanned by a breeze which suddenly swooped down on us, and the other player and myself found that we were within the four walls of a blazing furnace, the door having caught fire, too.

"Our first impulse, naturally, was to make our escape in the quickest manner possible, but both of us realized that if we did it would require the rebuilding of the shack and repeating of the many efforts we had in getting the scene to the point we had reached, so we determined to make an effort to carry out our parts in the gamest manner possible. We rushed through the flames to the door and then with my fellow player I staggered through the door and out in front of the camera, where we both fell exhausted. When I saw the picture I easily understood why the director told us we had done very well, for the way we both sank to the ground was realistic in every detail.

"This scene also called for a rain effect and the water pouring down upon us added to our discomfort. This is merely one incident of the dangers to which a picture player is exposed. I would not have gone through that much in ten years on the stage, but the fact that I now can have my own home and keep regular hours every day more than makes up for all.

"I presume most of my readers know that 'The Millionaire Baby' was adapted to the screen from the story by Anna Katherine Green, and I am sure that those who have read the works of this noted writer will agree with me when I say that her plots are more baffling than those created by any other writer of the present day. There were scenes in the production where the slightest show of any kind of emotion would have disclosed the denouement and ruined the entire effect of the picture, so you can imagine how I felt at first playing close up to the camera and having to hold every muscle of my face tense when I had been used to being far away from the audience, with the footlights between us, where facial expression is a secondary consideration.

"This is one of the causes for many failures of stage stars when they appear before the camera. They fail to realize that everything they do is recorded by the camera and that a slip which might go unnoticed on the stage will ruin a whole scene in a film drama and possibly spoil the entire production if it is not retaken. One of the most difficult scenes in 'The Millionaire Baby' was the one in which the child is stolen. The skill of handling this so as not to 'kill' the whole story depended more upon the men who retouched the film after the director had finished with it than upon the players, and I understand that these men worked till the wee small hours several nights in succession.

"Had the players who supported me in this production been other than they were I do not doubt but what my lot would have been anything but an enjoyable one, but as it was we were just like one big family from the very moment we began work. It was this perfect team work in the many trying scenes that gave the film the finished effect which I am sure will prove a delight to audiences wherever it is shown. I have nothing but praise for all the players and the director and, above all, for William N. Selig, the man who is behind the many splendid productions presented by his company, and whose orders to his directors are: 'Make a picture regardless of cost and make one that they will remember.'"

"I Have Saved Him!"

Its Use In Working Out Complex Mathematical Problems.

A logarithm is an exponent, and an exponent is a number showing how many times another number has been used in any multiplication. Ten times 10 equals 100. It was used twice, and its exponent is 2. Ten cubed equals 1,000, and its exponent is 3; while 10 to exponent 4 equals 10,000, and so on out toward infinity. But suppose that we wish to use 10, say 1¼ times or 1⅝ times instead of twice. Then the exponent must be computed, and exponents thus computed are always printed in tables.

Thus, as I am now writing, the paper, as always, by day and by night, is very near a precious book, a table of logarithms for all numbers from 1 to 108,000, computed out to seven decimal places. To give examples of their use, suppose that you wish to multiply 8 by 11. Look in the table and you will find the logarithm of 8 to be .9030900, and the logarithm of 11 to be 1.0413927. Add these and the sum will be 1.9444827. Look along the column and it will be seen that this is the logarithm of 88.

Easy. But suppose you wish to multiply two strings of figures of from 5 to a dozen. In the great standard mathematical sciences, such as astronomy, physics and chemistry, the multiplication and division of immense numbers are required. Thus, let us square the number 31558149—that is, multiply itself by itself, a tedious job. But this toil can be saved by the use of logarithms. Thus, the logarithm of 31558149 is 7.4991289, taken directly from the table. Then, to square any number multiply its logarithm by 2, and this logarithm multiplied by 2 equals 14.9982578. Now, by looking in the table, the number of which this is the logarithm is 995916962096951. Hours of work are performed in a few minutes.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

STONE MEASURE.

There Is No Regular Unit, and It Fairly Revels In Variety.

Owing to the variety of uses to which stone is put, there is no regular unit of measurement employed by the quarrymen, the stone being sold by the cubic yard, cubic foot, ton, cord, perch, rod, square foot, square yard, square, etc. Building and monumental stone, especially the dressed product, is usually sold by the cubic foot or the cubic yard, although this unit varies with the class of stone and with the locality; a large quantity of rough stone is sold by the perch, cord or ton.

Rubble and riprap, including stone for such heavy masonry as breakwater and jetty work, are generally sold by the cord or ton. Fluxing stone and stone for chemical use—as for alkali works, sugar factories, carbonic acid plants and paper mills—are sold by the long ton. Flagstone and curbstone are sold by the square yard or the square foot, the thickness being variable and dependent on the orders received. Granite paving blocks are sold invariably by number, but the blocks are not of uniform size, the value depending on the size of the block and the labor necessary to cut into the shape desired. Other paving material is sold by various units, such as ton or cubic yard.

Crushed stone is usually sold by the cubic yard or ton, the short ton being more generally used. The weight of a cubic yard of crushed stone varies from 2,300 to 3,000 pounds, the average weight being about 2,500 pounds. In certain localities crushed stone is sold by the "square" of 100 square feet by 1 foot, or 100 cubic feet. Crushed stone is also sold by the bushel, 21½ bushels representing a cubic yard, of about 2,700 pounds.—Geological Survey Bulletin.

The Senate Barber Shop.

Here's an odd thing about the United States senate barber shop: Although the number of senators has hardly increased at all, the number of shaves has increased at a surprising rate in recent years. The reason is simply that the senate is now inhabited largely by comparatively young men with smooth faces or wearing mustaches at most, and they are obliged to get shaved every little while, whereas the old style senator with a riot of whiskers never had occasion to visit a barber shop except every few months to get his hair trimmed.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Disgusted.

One day while her grandfather was paying a visit to Florence's home the little girl said to him:

"Gran'pa, your talk about 'perseverance winning' is all nonsense."

"Well, well, child!" cried the grandfather. "Why do you say that?"

"Why," said the little girl, "I've worked all the afternoon blowing soap bubbles and trying to pin them on mother's hat."—New York Times.

A Little Ambiguous.

Musician—You didn't get around to my recital last night. Friend—No. I had a splitting headache. However, everybody told me I should have gone, because you would have made me forget all other suffering.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Heard on the Train.

"What book is that you are reading, Jim?"

"'The Sorrows of Satan.'"

"Well, I'll say this for you, Jim; you always do take considerable interest in the troubles of your friends."—Boston Transcript.

Wise men say nothing in dangerous times.—Selden.

DAINTY AFTERNOON FROCK.

Embroidered White Net With Pretty Rosebuds of Silk.

PRETTY SUMMER CREATION.

Charming afternoon frock of embroidered white net, the edge forming pointed scallops. Heavier embroidery forms the hip yoke and trims the bodice, which is built with a square neck and long sleeves. Dainty rosebuds of pink silk add a bit of color.

TAKE CARE OF HAIR.

Be Careful Not to Tear Scalp or Split Hair, but Stimulate by Massage.

Few women take proper care of their hair. They believe that if they give it a brushing at night and wash it every two or three weeks they are doing all that is needed.

Under normal conditions the proper care of the hair is very simple. The objects to be kept in mind are to preserve its natural luster and texture by means of absolute cleanliness and to massage the scalp sufficiently to remove any dandruff that may adhere to it and thereby promote the active circulation of the blood. All this must be done without injury to the scalp or the hair by pulling, scratching or tearing. Cutting the hair frequently has a tendency, especially in youth, to thicken the individual hairs and promote their growth. Neither this nor any other known process, however, tends to increase the actual number of hairs. All claims to the contrary are the pretensions of charlatans.

Professional hairdressers do not advocate shampooing the hair oftener than once a month. A thorough brushing once or twice a week is regarded by them as sufficient for cleanliness and as much more beneficial to the hair and scalp.

Much contradictory advice has been given on the subject of brushing the hair, some persons saying that stiff brushes should be used and the scalp and hair brushed by means of them with a good deal of vigor, others recommending soft brushes and a very moderate amount of friction. These differences are probably due to different views of the objects to be attained by brushing. One object is to promote the health of the scalp and hence to give strength and vigor to the hair. For this purpose brushes with hard, stiff bristles may be used with considerable vigor provided the skin is not injured. The other object is to smooth the hair and free it from dust. For this purpose brushes may be soft and used with a very moderate pressure.

Care should be taken on the one hand not to scratch the scalp, tear the roots of the hair or cause it to split, and on the other not to neglect the stimulating effects of massaging the scalp and removing dandruff.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

Prominent New York women have subscribed $6,000 to provide medical treatment for drug users.

A Georgia woman has invented and patented a new kind of a hoe.

Bellevue hospital, in New York city, has a female ambulance doctor.

Female telephone operators in England are paid $5.50 a week during their training period and $6 when trained.

Miss Mabel Guppy, an English girl who has been teaching English in a Japanese school, has resigned her position to become a Buddhist nun.

Nearly all the girls in Lewis, Kan., have joined the Anti-Cigarette league formed in that town, and now none of the members will walk the streets with any man who smokes cigarettes.

D/34

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

By Frederic T. Cardoze

Albany, June 22.—On Thursday of the present week, Suffrage and proposed amendments to the Constitution aimed to alter the article governing the subject, will be discussed practically the entire day before the committee on Suffrage of the Constitutional convention.

Twenty separate propositions have been set down for hearings by this committee and it is doubtful if all of them will be taken up unless the members sit at night. Several of the proposed amendments are somewhat drastic and will cause lively argument.

What is generally regarded as one of the most important proposed amendments to the article of suffrage, is that by Delegate George Knox Bell of New York city which would require that all who are given the right of franchise shall be able to read and write English. Delegate William H. Young of Westchester county, also has a proposal of this nature which is to be given a hearing later. While similar in the main features the proposals of Delegates Bell and Young are different as a whole.

A division of opinion exists as to the wisdom of adpoting the proposal of Delegate Bell and opposition is looked for on Thursday when it is brought up before the committee on Suffrage. While literacy tests have been suggested as one of the most efficient methods of purifying the ballot, it is regarded in some quarters as being unwise to deprive a foreigner who may be unable to write and read English of his vote. There are hundreds of thousands of voters throughout the country, who can neither read or write and thousands upon thousonds in this State. If New York State should amend its Constitution to disfranchise those who have been naturalized yet who are unable to read or write English, other States are quite likely to follow suit, it is argued. The importance of the Bell proposition is obvious.

Another interesting proposal is that which has been presented by Delegate Richard H. Cullen, of Rochester, which provides for a separate election for judges. Mr. Cullen would have the legislature designate a time each when judicial officers shall be elected except in cases of temporary appointments to fill vacancies. The ballots are to be different from those used for other public officers and shall contain no party emblem or emblems.

The proposal by Delegate Mark Eisner of New York city, to the effect that providing equal suffrage is ratified by the people a citizen by marriage shall have been an inhabitant of the United States for five years before being permitted to vote, is the third of the subjects which is scheduled for discussion the day after tomorrow.

Interesting indeed are the provisions of the proposed amendmen to the Constitution offered by Delegate J. C. Leggett, of Cuba, N.Y., also set down for discussion by the Suffrage committee on Thursday. Mr. Leggett believes that before a citizen shall be allowed to vote he must prove himself to be possessed of several specified qualifications. At the time of offering his vote he shall have a family for whom he has provided during one year, or he shall not more than twelve months and not less than six months before offering his vote have paid a tax not less than two dollars, or during not less than six mobth of the year next preceding the offer of his vote he shall have been engaged in an employment or calling yielding him means of support. A new provision is made under this proposal prohibiting a person from voting who has been convicted of a felony or who has been convicted of a misdemeanor within three years from the time of offering his vote, or whose wife or minor children have been supported wholly or in part at public expense during the year immediately preceding the time of offering his vote.

FULL CREW BILL IS VETOED BY BRUMBAUGH

Harrisburg, Pa., June 21.—Governor Brumbaugh announced last night that he had vetoed the bill designed to repeal the full crew law of Pennsylvania. The bill was passed by the recent Legislature after an extensive publicity campaign in favor of its passage had been conducted.

CHINESE EDIBLE DOGS.

They Are Fed Mainly Upon Daintily Prepared Vegetable Food.

English bon vivants have tested the merits of the Chinese edible dog, and they pronounce it very good dog indeed.

The dog is destined from the beginning for the table. Like the edible rat of the same country, it is fed mainly upon vegetable food, which is often delicately prepared and specially devised, in order to give the dog's flesh a peculiar flavor and aroma. The result is something quite different from the flesh of the ordinary dog of the western world.

The genuine Chinese edible dog is known by its bluish black tongue, which is a peculiar mark of its variety. In infancy and early youth the dog's tongue is red, and upon reaching maturity and the edible age it suddenly becomes black, sometimes within two weeks.

Another peculiarity of this dog is its lack of the barking faculty. It is said that the dog can bark, and on occasions does so, but these occasions are rare.

Many experiments, most of them unwilling, were made with the flesh of dogs during the Paris siege. Newfoundlands and St. Bernards were preferred, under the mistaken impression that they would prove more eatable than other varieties. They proved to be detestable in all cases.—Every Week.

CORK TREES OF SPAIN.

How They Are Stripped of Their Bark at Ten Year Intervals.

An important industry in Spain is the cultivation of cork trees. This tree is an oak which grows best in the poorest soil. It cannot endure frost and must have sea air and also some altitude. It is found all along the coast of Spain, the northern coast of Africa and the northern shores of the Mediterranean.

There are two barks, the outer of which is stripped for use. The cork is valuable according as it is soft and velvety. When the sapling has reached the age of ten years it is stripped of its outer bark for two feet from the ground. The tree will then be about five inches in diameter and about six feet up to the branches. This stripping is worthless. The inner bark appears blood red, and if it is split or injured the tree dies.

When eight or ten years more have elapsed the outer bark has again grown, and then the tree is stripped four feet from the roots. This stripping is very coarse and is used to make floats for fish nets. Every ten years thereafter the bark is stripped, each year two feet higher up, until the tree is forty or fifty years old, when it is in its prime and may then be stripped every ten years from the ground to the branches. —Exchange.

Royal Kisses.

The kings and high officials of Europe when they meet always embrace and kiss each other, no matter what their relations have been in the past or may be in the immediate future. This is a kiss of respect. It may be given on the lips, the cheek, the brow or the beard and is nicely adjusted, according to the age and rank of the giver. From this close personal contact it passes through many forms—kissing the hand, parts of the clothing and even the ground trodden upon according to the idea of respect or fear inspiring the one who performs the act. The nations of the west have not adopted this ancient custom as a form of salutation, but have reserved it for the more tender relationships of life.—Christian Herald.

Dumas and His Porthos.

Dumas, like Balzac, was fond of his own creations. Among them all he loved Porthos best. The great, strong, vain hero was a child after his own heart. One afternoon, it is related, his son found Dumas careworn, wretched, overwhelmed. "What has happened to you? Are you ill?" asked Dumas fils. "No," replied Dumas pere. "Well, what is it then?" "I am miserable." "Why?" "This morning I killed Porthos—poor Porthos! Oh, what trouble I have had to make up my mind to do it! But there must be an end to all things. Yet when I saw him sink beneath the ruins, crying, 'It is too heavy, too heavy for me!' I swear to you that I cried!" And he wiped away a tear with the sleeve of his dressing gown.

An Old Indian Drum.

The Sioux Indians formerly had a conjurer's drum, which they called wakanchanchagha. It was used on religious and ceremonial occasions, had two heads frequently decorated with crude pictures of animals, and was beaten with great vigor for the purpose of appeasing the wrath of their offended deities or of contributing to the recovery of the sick.

Africa.

Africa is the most elevated of all the continents. It is the "continent of plateaus." The great tableland in the south has a mean altitude of over 3,500 feet. The wide tableland on the north has an average elevation of about 1,300 feet.

Impossible.

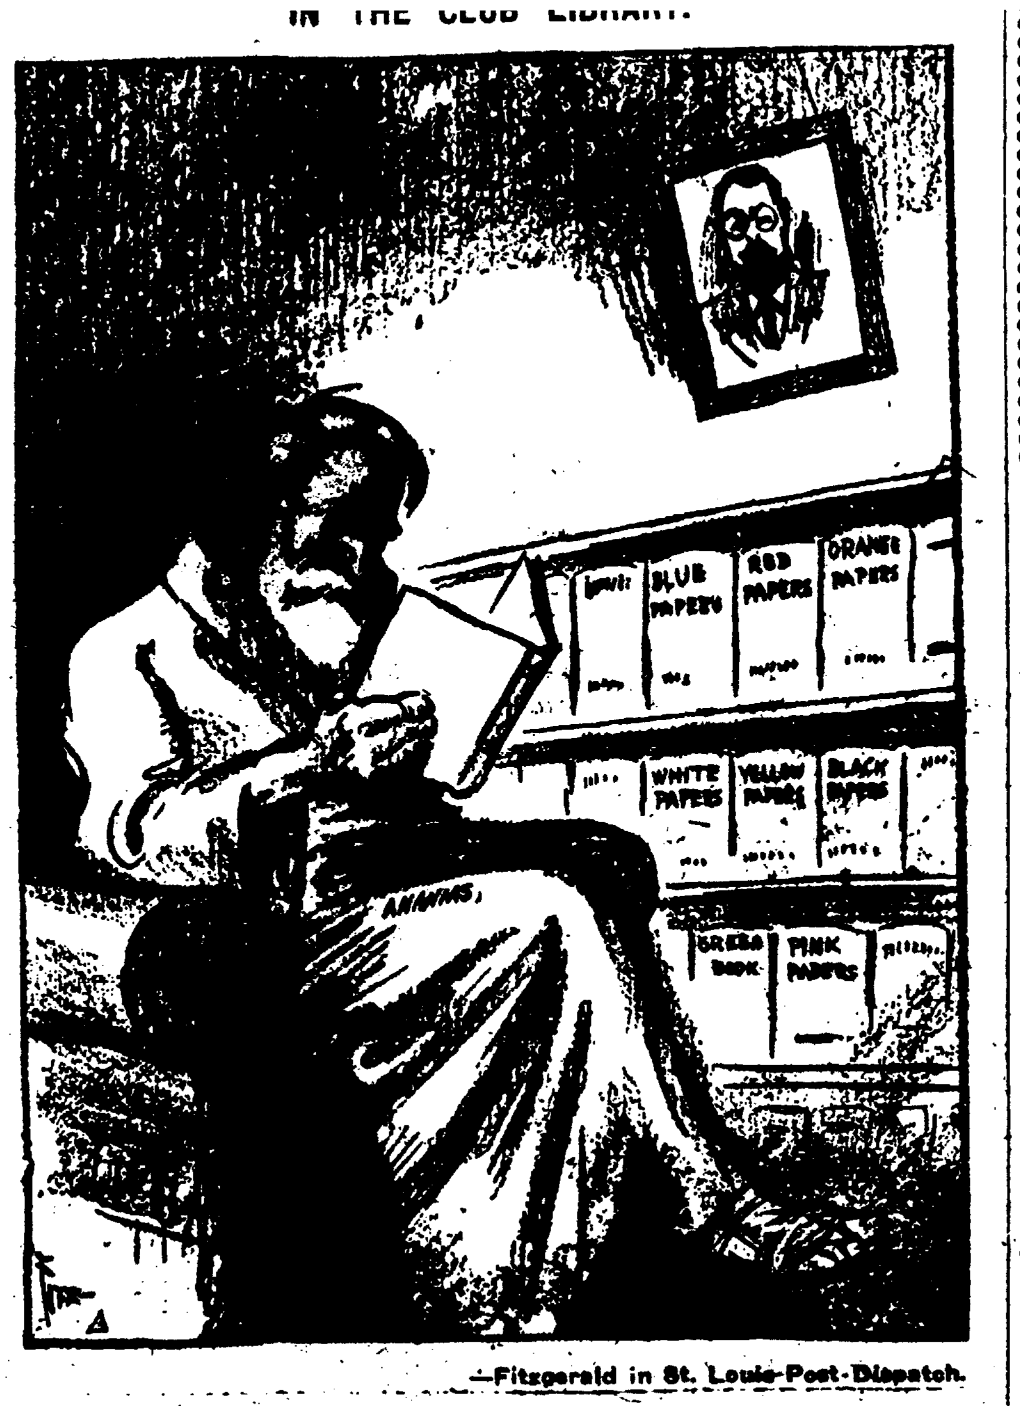
"Can't you play tennis without making all that noise?"

"Why, how can you expect us to play it without raising a racket?"—Baltimore American.

Excluded.

Ascum—Well, well! I congratulate you, old man. And how is the baby to be named? Popley—By my wife's people, it seems.—Exchange.

IN THE CLUB LIBRARY.



—Fitzgerald in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pope Says He Feared for His Security; His Guards Taken Away

Paris, June 22.—In a remarkable interview granted to Louis Latafie, correspondent of La Liberte, Pope Benedict, while maintaining the strictest neutrality, answers charges of atrocities against the Germans by pointing uot wrongs committed by the Allies, and even by his own Italy against the Holy See.

His Holiness went so far as to say he was unable to judge of the atrocities in Belgium because they were committed under Pope Pius X., and that he, Pope Benedict, had had neither the time nor the oportunity to order a full inquiry.

"Is it not known by all that many priests have been taken as hostages in Belgium and in France and shot?"

The Pope replied. "I have received from Austrian bishops the assurance that the Russian army has also taken hostages from among the Catholic priests, and that the Russians on one occasion pushed before them 1500 Jews, so that they could advance behind this living barrier thus exposed to the bullets of the enemy.

"The Bishop of Cremona has informed me that the Italians have already taken eighteen Austrian priests as hostages.

"There are so many excesses that I have issued an admonition in my encyclical, declaring: "It is permitted to no person, for whatever motive, to violate justice."

When asked "What about the destruction of Louvain?" the Pope answered:

"The Germans say their troops were shot. They also solemnly declare the French had an observation post on the Rheims Cathedral. The Vatican is not a court of justice."

"The Germans," said M. Latapie, "have committed other violations."

To this the Pope replied: "The Cardinal-Secretary of State has received the representatives of seven Belgian congregations. They have declared that they are not able to cite a single case in their congregations, protected especially by the Virgin or by some saint. We continue to be imperfectly informed upon this subject."

The Pope struck his breast and added: "But the hour has not yet come to disentagle the truth from all the contradictory assertions which surround it. The Vatican is not a court. We do not give judgment. The Judge is on high."

"At least one may protest against the arrest of a Prince of the Church," said Latapie.

"Now, I am going to surprise you," His Holiness remarked. "Cardinal Mercier never was arrested. He can move about freely in the diocese. I have received from General von Bissing, Governor of Belgium, a letter assuring me he will in future repress with the greatest energy all acts of violence against churches and ministers of God."

"Then," writes Latapie, "I searched my mind for some accusation to which it would be impossible to reply—some crime without a pretext—and I said:

"What about the Lusitania. It was not a question of belligerents there. It was neutrals, innocent people, who paid with their lives."

"I know no more frightful crime,' replied the Pope. 'What desolation to see our generation the prey to such horrors. I have a father's heart, and that heart is lacerated. But do you think the blockade which the empires, which condemns millions of human beings to famine, is inspired by humane sentiments?'

"The Pope said this in a voice thrilling with profound emotion. He carefully selected and drove home each word, but no doubt he saw my impression reflected in my face, and he suldenly broke in:

"I don't say that after the war I shall not proclaim a syllabus summarizing the doctrines of the church on these subjects and regulation for future rights and duties of belligerents. Then and there will be found, without doubt, normal condemnation of thec rimes committed during the war."

Why Milk Sours.

We are told by those who study the ways and ravages of the mischievous microbe that he is very fond of sugar and that he delights to gratify this liking by turning the supply in milk into an acid which sours the milk. These microbes are constantly in the air, alive though invisible, and ready to drop into the milk when they can. If it were possible to keep the milk from the air after the cow is milked it would not turn sour. Warm milk is particularly inviting to the microbe and favorable to his operations. He does not get along well under chilling conditions, and that is why the sweetness of milk can be preserved if it is kept cold. Boiling fresh milk changes the sugar in such a way that the microbe cannot feed upon it.—Baltimore American.

VALUE OF TOWN BEAUTY.

The architectural embellishment of a city is widely recognized as a task for artists, but the architecture of the city itself has too long been left to chance and the politician. We now are beginning to see that upon the fundamental rightness of this architecture depend not only the health and comfort of the public, but its pleasure in its surroundings and its municipal pride.—New York Times.

MODEL STREET SIGNS.

New Type a Great Help to the Public of New York City.

The problem of providing street signs of the best possible type for Manhattan is one to which Borough President Marks has addressed himself.

He insisted upon finding if possible a type of sign that would enable people to determine definitely and at a glance the name of the street on which they might be and also the name of the cross street toward which they might be looking; that these signs should be legible at a considerable distance and, furthermore, that they should be so placed in relation to street lights as to be readily visible at night as well as in the daytime.

As a result a type has been evolved which has met the exacting requirements laid down by President Marks. The new signs, like the old, are placed on lampposts at street intersections on diagonally opposite corners. They consist of a steel plate twenty-two inches long and seven and a half inches high, having at the center of the top a semicircular projection eleven and one-eighth inches wide at the base, with a radius of five and one-eighth inches. On the main body of the sign plate is indicated the name of the avenue or street; on the semicircular projection at the top is indicated the name of the cross street. The lettering is white and four inches high on a dark blue background enameled on the plate.

The sign plate is held in a bronze colored skeleton steel holder, into which it is inserted from the top. The plates are reversible and can be seen from either side, while the holder is so designed as to afford a rectangular framing for the name of the avenue or street and an oval framing for the name of the cross street. The holder or frame is made as flat as possible, all unnecessary ornamentation being omitted, not only in order to enhance the dignity and good appearance of the sign, but also in order to prevent as far as possible the face of the sign from being darkened by shadows such as are cast by the projecting ornamentation on signs of other types.

Now, for the first time in the history of New York city, through the use of this new type of street sign, which gives double information on a single sign, it is possible, either by day or by night, for people traveling along a New York street, particularly those people riding in trolley cars or other fast moving vehicles, quickly and positively to determine from a considerable distance exactly which street they are on and which cross street they are approaching.

GRATITUDE.

Gratitude is the fairest blossom that springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none so fragrant, while its opponent, ingratitude, is a deadly weed, not only poisonous in itself, but impregnating the very atmosphere in which it grows with fetid vapors.

Its Source.

Woodles—Did you ever know anybody with as much savoir faire as Mrs. Jones?

Toodles—Faith, I never did, and they say her husband made it all in pickles, too.—Harvard Lampoon.

Popular Mary.

Mary had a little trump
When playing whist, you know,
And if her partner played an ace
That trump was sure to go.
—Chicago News.

Faithful Conductor.

Conductor (examining transfer)—The feller that punched this transfer made a mistake and punched it a week ahead. You'll have to git off the car and wait seven days.—Pittsburgh Press.

Contrary.

Molly's against suffrage, cold,
And I am for it, hot;
The reason I am for it is No doubt because she's not.
—Houston Post.

MOTT FAVORS NAVAL MILITIA

Promises Help for Northern Division, Which Should Have a Ship

Congressional Mott was one of the speakers at a naval militia dinner given in Watertown Friday night. At the opening of his speech the Congressman congratulated the people of Watertown upon being able to claim Robert Lansing as a resident of Watertown.

Concerning the naval militia Congressman Mott said in part:

"I have more personal feeling for a men who enlists and conscientiously does his work in the naval militia than for the man who enters the service of his country in the regular way and takes pay for his work—for with him it is an occupation—a way to make a living while the service which the man in the militia must perform is essentially a labor of love.

"There may yet come a crisis when trained men are needed in a rush, and it will be of necessity to the naval militia that the officers of the navy will look. To my mind the self sacrifices that the officers and men of the naval militia are making and will make, have not been fully recognized by the heads of the service.

"The need of training, and training nnot by one half but complete training which wil enable a man to go on board any battleship of our fleet and perform his duties satisfactorily is a pressing one, and it can to my mind be only brought about by giving the militia of this state modern ships with which to work. I am proud of the naval militia of Watertown—it is the only division in my district, and there must be a reason. It can not be that Watertown men are more patriotic, but then it requires patriotism to llive in Watertown and train at Chaumont or Sackets Harbor. It is a peculiar coincidence, also that in Jefferson county and in use by your organization, is the only inland navy yard in the country that at Sackets Harbor."

20 REPORTED MISSING FROM INTERNED EITEL

Norfolk, June 21.—Sailors from the German auxiliary cruisers, EitelFriedrich and Kron Prinz Wilhelm, interned here, came ashore in civilian clothes yesterday and today.

Twenty men are reported missing from the ships, but officers decline to discuss the matter.

Loaf Bread in England.

It is perhaps worth recalling that the art of baking loaves of bread was introduced into Europe quite late in history. Flat cakes were baked even in the earliest times, but as late as the beginning of the nineteenth century loaf bread was comparatively unknown in many parts of the continent. In 1812, for instance, when an English captain ordered loaves to the value of $5 in Gothenburg the baker stipulated for payment in advance on the ground that he would never be able to sell them in the city if they were left on his hands.—London Spectator.

Canny Scot!

"I say, Sandy, mon," said Jock, handing back his friend's photograph, "when ye had those photos taken, why didna ye smile?"

"And those pictures costing me $2 a dozen!" replied Sandy. "Are ye crazy, mon?"—Woman's Home Companion.

Which?

Bacon—Ever notice how long a woman is in coming to the point? Egbert—Do you mean when she's telling a story or sharpening a lead pencil?—Yonkers Statesman.

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES
"A Herald of Progress"
Volume 1, No. 158 Established, Dec. 17, 1914. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, 1915 Price One Cent

INDUSTRIAL MAN'S LETTER TO FULTON

Valuable Suggestions Offered by A. E. Dodd of the National Society of Industrial Education; Offers Help for Fulton

The exhibition of industrial work given by Miss Cook and her pupils at the high school recently, and as reported in The Evening Times, did not receive appreciation alone of Fulton people as the following communications imply. The first is from Mr. G. C. Warner of New York who is a member of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education.

The communication reads as follows:

Editor of Fulton Times:

Regarding Vocational Education. I took from The Fulton Times a clipping about the Fulton school exhibition of industrial work and sent it to Mr. A. E. Dodd of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education, asking him for his suggestions. I enclose to you, herewith, four copies of his reply, which please use in any way which you think may be helpful.

Yours, very sincerely,
G. C. WARNER.

The following reply should be interesting to every person in Fulton as regards our educational problems. The Mr. Farnum referred to in the letter, attended the local exhibit and gave high praise to the work accomplished by saying the result obtained excelled that of any other school in the State outside of the city of New York.

The letter states:

My dear Mr. Warner:

I was very much interested in the clipping which reached me this morning, telling about the Fulton, N. Y., exhibition of industrial work. I am also much interested in the favorable comments which my friend, Mr. Farnum, makes in regard to the work, as he is not one who makes such statements without meaning them.

While I do not know about the industrial situation of Fulton, it occurs to me that an industrial stock-taking of that city, which could be made by its own local school board, in co-operation with commercial and industrial interests, might give the town a diagram of its industrial situation which will enable it to shape its industrial courses to be even more helpful than they are now, in preparing girls and boys who are to go to work in that community.

By that I mean, the obtaining of answers to some such questions as the following:

Whether there a content of technical knowledge or skill in any job that cannot be acquired through routine work and for which special instruction is needed.

If so, what is it?

Whether it can best be imparted by provisions inside the industry?

If not, whether it is worth while to provide for such instruction through outside agencies?

If this is true, whether such instruction should take the form of, (a) all day industrial school; (b) trade schools; (c) part-time industrial classes; (d) evening classes?

Whether there are any jobs for which it is not desirable either to direct the youth or to train him at public expense?

What numbers of new workers could be prepared for any job, if it has a teachable content, without overcrowding the market?

What kind of equipment as to age and physical and mental assets the worker should have for his job.

Does the industry select its workers for any job so as to secure those best adapted to it?

To what extent are the relations between any two jobs in the industry such that experience in the lower one is a preparation for the higher?

Where the lower is a preparation for the higher, how far does the industry recognize promotion?

What are the circumstances, if any, that offset this advantage in favor of promoted workers?

What improvements in efficiency could be made by changes in the present methods of selecting training and promoting workers?

Of course, it might not be necessary to obtain complete answers to all of the above questions but a study of this sort would undoubtedly give Fulton a knowledge about future possibilities for school work, which Richmond received last year and which Minneapolis is now hoping to secure through the Survey which Dr. Prosser is directing.

I have just returned this morning from a week of conferences and lectures in southern Kansas, where I discussed this sort of thing with over two thousand people; and unless I mistake the interest and eagerness, we will find during the next year, that whole section of the country eager at work on finding out how to shape the courses of study in the schools to best meet the community's needs.

If any of us can be of help at any time in connection with Fulton, I am sure you know that we would be delighted to help.

Very sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) ALVIN E. DODD,
Assistant Secretary.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 9
Because You See What You Are Buying

Seeing what you buy, feeling it in your hands, physically weighing it and summing up its good qualities and discovering its drawbacks, trying it on in some cases, these are all decidedly in the favor of the purchaser. "Buying a pig in poke" is an old, old proverb against buying what you do not see first. This is, of course, the strongest kind of an argument against making purchases by mail. However, honestly accurate the description, however plain the illustration there is nothing can equal the actual seeing and handling of the goods you are going to get in exchange for your hard earned money. Even with the most scrupulous reliability on the part of the seller, there is sure to be occasional disappointment, and selling what the buyer does not see places terrible temptation in the way of the seller. When you buy in Fulton you see what you buy—often you can have it in your own home and judge it free from all influences save your own best judgment, and if it does not suit you can return it.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

RUFUS EVERSON KING SPEAKS TO GRADUATES OF FULTON HIGH SCHOOL

The members of the class of 1915 of Fulton High school will bid farewell to their Alma Mater and take their first step into the world tonight at the Commencement exercises which will be held at the First Baptist church.

The principal address of the evening will be given by Rufus Everson King, well known as a most forceful and eloquent speaker. Mr. King's address is entitled, "Laurel Wreaths and Palm." He will no doubt prove a very interesting and entertaining orator.

The members of the graduating class will occupy seats on the platform and the high school orchestra will be seated in the alcove behind the platform. Mr. King, Superintendent Fairgrieve, A. T. Jennings, Mrs. F. E. Goodjon, Rev. H. D. Holmes and members of the Board of Education will occupy seats on the platform.

After a selection by the orchestra, Rev. Mr. Holmes will offer the invocation prayer. Miss Lillian P. Simons will deliver the salutatory address. Mr. King's speech will follow.

The prizes for prize speaking won by Miss Lillian P. Simons, Miss Jessie Wilcox, Harold Caffrey and Leland Carner will be presented. Mrs. F. E. Goodjon will present the prizes for proficiency in history work to the winning pupils of the Fourth st., Phillips st., State st. and Erie st. schools.

A. T. Jennings, in the absence of L. C. Foster, president of the Boarrd of Education, will present the pupils with their diplomas.

The valedictory address by Harold Thompson, the president and honor man of the class, will follow, and the benediction by Rev. Mr. Holmes will close the program.

WOOLEN MILL MAY NOT RESUME FULL TIME

In an interview this morning, John W. Stevenson of the American Woolen Company held but little hope for the resumption of work at the local plant on a full time basis. Two trips to New York city by the local representative have occasioned rumors that the plant is to open again on full time in July, and Mr. Stevenson denied this today.

When asked if the cutters refused to handle the local goods because the weavers were non-union, Mr. Stevenson declared there were other reasons more important.

"Business is absolutely at a standstill," said Mr. Stevenson. "Not only here, but everywhere. I just finished talking to a traveling man, and he tells me that he never say things as they are now, during the past twenty years. The shoe industry is worse off than we are.

"This mill isn't closed because the cutters refuse our goods; it's because nobody wants any goods. At a sale of a manufacturing concern in Syracuse last week, I saw suits selling at $10, worth $40, made from American woolens. People can't buy clothes, that is the reason we are doing nothing here."

POLICIES PAID HERE

Oswego life insurance policy holders, according to the "Insurance Press," or their heirs, collected in the last year a total of $73,500. Fulton beneficiaries were not far behind, as $64,500 was paid here, while in the village of Mexico $54,290 was paid policy holders.

SMOOTHNESS MARKED COURSE OF CLASS-NIGHT EXERCISES

John Barrymore's Play, "Fortune Hunter," Received Excellent Treatment at Hands of Male Members of Cast

The graduating class of Fulton High school held its class day exercises last night at the Quirk theatre before an audience that taxed the capacity of the play house. The entertainment was divided into two parts; the reading of the various class documents occupying the first part of the program and the second half being devoted to the presentation of the play, "The Fortune Hunter." From start to finish the members of the class that will graduate tonight showed the result of four years' careful training in the high school.

The first part of the program was opened with a selection by the high school orchestra under the direction of Mrs. Owens. The class history, by Lola Palmer; the history of the historian, by Amelia Rolfe; the class poem, by Florence Moody; the prophecy on the prophet of the class, by Lillian P. Simons, and the codicil to the class will, by Harold N. Gillespie, were not read last evening owing to the length of the program.

The class prophecy by Earl D. Hopkins was the first number. The future of each member of the class was foretold in Mr. Hopkin's reading, and the audienc had many a hearty laugh at the outlook for some of the pupils. Most of the prophesies were treated in a humorous way.

The class will, by Matthew Frawley, also occasioned much amusement and applause. Each members of the class was remembered in the testament and little Miss Harriet Scholz, the mascot of the class, carried the bequests to the members of the class. Miss Scholz had a very winning manner and showed no symptoms of stage fright in the course of her duties.

The first part ended with the class yell, composed by Leland Carner.

After a short intermission, the play, "The Fortune Hunter," was presented. In this vehicle, in which John Barrymore appeared so successfully for some time, the outstanding feature was the work of the male members of the cast. As Nat Duncan, the poor son of a wealthy father, left upon his own resources, and with a decided abhorrence to work, Leland Carner made the most favorable impression of his high school career. Mr. Carner's part called for pronounced ability, and in every scene, he showed himself proficient, self possessed and familiar with his lines. In fact, the work of all the members of the cast showed the effect of continued rehearsals, and the breaks that are usually so prominent in amateur theatricals were not in evidence.

Harold Caffrey, as Henry Kellogg, the young business man who frames the plan by which Duncan is to marry a small town heiress and thus acquire wealth, also made a very good impression. Harold Thompson as Roland Barnett, had a part that called for ability of a different order, and he aptly portrayed the small town suitor.

Harold N. Gillespie, as Pete Willing, the sheriff, who had a liking for strong drink, and a dread of his wife, brought down the house during his sermon to Duncan on the evils of marriage.

The work of Miss Florence L. Moody, as Betty the daughter of Sam Graham, the small town druggist, showed unusual dramatic power, in particular in Act 2, when she blames her father for her lack of fine clothes and other things the young ladies of the town were accustomed to. When she appears in Act 3, after six months at school, a great change has taken place. Miss Moody also appeared to advantage in the emotional scenes.

Miss Eryma Paige, who enacted the role of Josie Lockwood, the heiress, also carried herself well in a very difficult part. Her proposal to Nat was one of the most amusing scenes in the play and her acting showed real talent.

As Tracey Tanner, the fat boy, Harold Scholz, had the audience with him from the start. His love scene with Angie, played by Miss Rose Walsh, was the occasion for much applause.

All the members of the cast fulfilled the expectations of their many friends. As a high school production, "The Fortune Hunter," by the class of 1915 bids fair to eclipse the work of all previous years.

D/34

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 64 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Wednesday, June 23, 1915

45–PHONE NEWS ITEMS–45

School gardens at first blush seem like a harmless fad to keep school children out of mischief. Yet they should add greatly to the sum of useful knowledge and perhaps skill. At least they give an opportunity to a youngster so inclined to learn the secrets of [illegible] and production. The net results of school gardens in way of profit have only a local interest. If there should be loss instead of profit the balance sheet would be as satisfactory as that of any other branch of public education. The whole system is perhaps one of sowing blindly for an uncertain harvest, but now and then a farmer tries to use city bred muscle because country bred is not to be had. If he gets a graduate of the school garden he may at least expect a helper who knows that potatoes, onions and radishes grow at the foot of the stalk and not on top. He will also be broken in to weeding and will know that stones are not good fertilisers.

It would be poor judgment to bank heavily upon the efficiency of our organized militia or national guard for a big war emergency. At the same time it is unwise to the verge of foolishness to decry the service value of the guard and militia establishments. They represent military organization which has been put to the test and in several of the states a latent esprit du corps which only needs opportunity to vitalise the whole force. In the ranks and behind them as retired or discharged guardsmen are upward of 300,000 men who have been broken to military discipline and drilled in the A B C of soldiering—yes, even to the Fourth reader. Rifle practice, army maneuvers and state camps have given to these amateurs everything which war service can give except the match game with the enemy. Trust the first law of nature to help the novice through that ordeal.

The meat and wheat producing country of Argentina is reaping prosperity from the war in Europe and expects this prosperity to continue. The same process of reasoning makes the case of the United States a hopeful one. Surely it is nobler to feed the hungry belligerents than to make guns and ammunition to kill them. The United States is one of four great wheat producing countries of the world, Russia, Canada and Argentina being the other three. Russia will not count in 1915, and Canada's product will doubtless be absorbed by England if she can get it past the German submarines.

Book publishers wish to induce readers to buy books more liberally and propose a sort of propaganda to that end. One essential may be stated offhand—that is, to publish books worthy of permanent ownership. Books may be had at libraries to "skim through," and the meat of them is often spread broadcast in newspapers and reviews. To put from $1.50 to $5 in a book of ephemeral value is not to be thrifty. A book to be well worth that amount should have merit not alone for a day, but for a year, and even for a generation.

It has been suggested in Europe that war indemnities in future can best be collected by seizing government owned railways. This might be an improvement upon the old device of seizing the delinquent nation's custom houses as a business proposition, but would be likely to prove more aggravating to the conquered people.

The European allies seem to be finding out the truth of certain old war maxims. For instance, "overpreparedness is better than underpreparedness" and "overestimating the foe is better than underestimating."

The incoming and outgoing of aliens since the European war began is about even. With the exception of Russia the nations at war sent more emigrants over than they received back "reservists."

Anti-suffragists say that women have no warrior stuff in their makeup. But it required some sort of sand in Jane Addams to venture into Berlin on a peace mission.

This is sun spot year, and it's perfectly neutral to blame all untoward events which must be accounted for on the sun spots.

THE ROSY GLOW

Throughout the country this week hundreds of young men and women have stepped from the high school portals out into the big wide world. Few, indeed, it is probable have anything more definite ahead of them than a rosy glow on which their high hopes are founded. All too often the castles built above the graduation thesis tumble to the ground leaving a night of bewilderment, fear and disappointment among the ruins.

In a recent article in pamphlet form published by Alfred P. Fletcher, assistant superintendent of schools at Rochester an inspiration on this very point is given. The title of the article is "Co-operation between Employers and Schools," and was written with the idea of getting the employers of Rochester to join, which they did, in a plan whereby the hundreds of young persons who spend days in fruitless search for work may find a field in which they may use their educational training for a livelihood.

"It is commonplace to remark that searching for employment is an economic waste," says Mr. Fletcher in the booklet. "It is a most disheartening task, as well. One month in idleness or in walking the streets will undo the work of any two months in school.

"At present the laws of most of our states are so faulty that boys and girls under 16 years of age may drop out of school for the purpose of going to work and then remain in idleness for months Only a very few states require their youths to be either in school or at work."

A trades school recently advertised that boys and girls out of work could enter training until work was secured. Scores responded and many remained for the full year. Again employers issued cards stating the firm employed boys and girls under 18 years only on recommendation of the school superintendent. This also had the effect of keeping the pupils longer in school. However, the grave fact remaining is that yearly pupils at the beginning of high-school work are obliged to leave school to earn a living. When this is done all educational pursuits end as a rule, and unless the person is especially fitted for the work he is doing, he loses interest, lags behind his possibilities, becomes a misfit in the business world and in time joins the vast army of unemployed.

COURT OF CONSCIENCE

The manner in which a man uses his time is lightly considered by some. No man can waste time without harming himself, and indirectly harming others. We appoint commissions to care for the incompetent; we arrange laws to compel men in their moral course; we put the latitude and longitude lines on a man's legal route. Why not hold a man accountable for his part in life's work?

If drunkenness is a disgrace; if playing poker is a crime; if betting on the ponies is punishable—if these are the things that are answerable to the law, I ask you, What shall we do with the afternoon farmer, with the loafer, the lounger, the lotus-eating waiter on Providence?

Fortunately for us all, there are few men in the fiddle-faddle, dilly-dally club.

It's a sin to see honest men and virtuous girls working for small pay, while these shrimps swim in the stream of idleness and loll in the lap of luxury.

If you have a member of your family that won't work, that is a rusty, irresolute laggard, a drowsy, dreamy, dozy dub, do something, if you have to call an officer.

No man has a right to stand on the backs of those who are bent in hard work.

The man who refuses to do his part in this world of work is a criminal in the Court of Conscience.—Silent Partner.

Free Scholarships in Music.

The Ithaca Conservatory of Music, with the desire to stimulate the study of these arts, offers two scholarships to applicants from each congressional district of the State of New York, valued at $100 each and good for the term of seventeen weeks beginning with the opening of the school year, September 16th, 1915, in any of the following departments: Voice, violin, piano and elocution. These scholarships are awarded upon competition which is open to anyone desiring a musical or literary education. Anyone wishing to enter the competition or desiring information should write to George C. Williams, general manager of the Ithaca Conservatory of Music, Ithaca, N. Y., before September 1, 1915.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Post Office, June 23, 1915. Inquirers will please say advertised.

Men—William Gichins, James Mart, Geo. B. Oween.

Women—Esther E. Baker, Miss Beatrice Sample, Mrs. May Hanna, Mrs. Hattie Marshall, Mrs. H. McCaffrey.

Peter T. Conley, P.M.

If you can't get Hanford's Balsam write G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co., Syracuse, N. Y. Three sizes: 25c, 50c, $1.

Opinions

Siegel's Sentence

It is unfortunate that, with Henry Siegel in jail, the depositors whose money he mishandled lose practically all chance of recovering even a small part of their deposits. It is distinctly fortunate that this man, convicted of a crime, must pay the bitter penalty of ten months in a penitentiary instead of escaping imprisonment through an arrangement with his creditors—virtually buying himself off from jail.

Siegel was no innocent; he was no victim of misfortune. He followed the course of the crooked financier, who is a constant menace to all who have to trust their savings and their investments to others. He didn't "get away with it"; he couldn't beat the prosecutor's case against him. When Justice Clark stayed sentence with the understanding that the prisoner would make substantial restitution of the stolen money of his victims, there ensued proceedings which didn't indicate an overwhelming desire to give back as much as possible, but rather a purpose to buy his escape from jail as cheaply as maneuvring could do it.

If the convicted banker had succeeded, his success would have been encouragement of the get-rich-quick spirit which led him into crime. Potential crooks are only too likely to believe that money can help them out of any difficulty with the law. Siegel's term in jail will cost his dupes some money which they might otherwise have recovered. It may save the rest of the community from having more of his brand to deal with.—N.Y. Tribune.

The Mothers' Pension Acts

It is interesting to watch the development of the mothers' pension legislation. The Evening Post of New York says that at the beginning of 1913 but two states had such measures, but in 1913 and 1914 seventeen passed them, "and thus far in 1915 eight more have been added to the list making 27 in all. The amount of money to be paid has varied from $6.25 a month for a widow's child in California to $15 monthly for a widow with one child and $10 for each child where there is more than one in Illinois. But a large number of the 1913 laws limited payment to $10 a month for dependent mothers having one child and $5 for each additional child; and this limitation is increasingly followed, having been written this year into the laws of New Hampshire, Oklahoma, Wyoming and Tennessee."

A summary of the mothers' pension acts this year has been given by The New York Times, as follows:

"Pensions for mothers came up for consideration in eighteen States. In eight — Kansas, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Wyoming—legislation for this purpose was enacted for the first time. In Texas and West Virginia the measures were killed. In the rest the present laws were amended or amplified.

"The new Kansas statute fixes the maximum grant to needy mothers at $25 a month to be paid at the discretion of county commissions. The New Hampshire law limits payment to $10 a month for a dependent mother having one child under 16 years and $5 for each additional child. The Legislature appropriated $16,000 for the first two years of the law's operation.

"The New York statute applies to widows with a child or children under 16, who will be allowed approximately the same amount as it would cost the State to support them. The Montana law applies to mothers with children under 14 and whose husbands are confined to a State institution or are physically incompetent; the Nevada law to widows only. In Oklahoma both widows and mothers whose husbands are insane or prisoners are eligible to the benefits of the law, the compensation being $10 a month for one child under 14 and $5 a month for each additonal. The Wyoming law is similar. The law in Tennessee applies in counties of 50,000 population or more and having juvenile courts. The act was not made mandatory. Sixteen is the age limit and $10 and $5 the compensation. Washington passed a bill making her mothers' pension provisions somewhat less liberal."—Utica Dispatch.

The person who purchases the first White Mountain Refrigerator at People's Hardware Co., Inc., after reading this notice, will secure a genuine bargain at the Red Front Store.—adv.

Suppertime comes, you're not ready for it? Then order from the grocer Black's fresh-every-afternoon rolls and buns.—adv.

Expert Advice for the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

How will incorrect wiring affect a motor?

The effect of incorrect wiring on the motor depends on how the wires are misplaced. For instance, if the high tension cables were changed around so that no one of them went to the right plug it would be impossible to run the motor, although an occasional explosion might be obtained. If two or three of the high tension wires were interchanged, but one or more were left on the correct plugs, then the motor would run on the cylinders in which the latter were. Where a dual system is employed the wires of a battery system may sometimes be misplaced without interfering with the operation of the magneto and vice versa. As a rule, however, the changing of the wires will result in the whole ignition system becoming inoperative.

Does an engine deliver more or less power to wheels with a friction transmission and chain drive than through the ordinary bevel gears?

The efficiencies of the sliding gear-set with the shaft drive and the friction transmission with chain drive are approximately equal on the higher gear ratios, but when the friction wheel is brought near the center of the disk the slippage of the inside edge of the wheel, due to the small circle it is traveling on, causes a power loss that is greater than when the low gear of the sliding gear set is engaged.

Assuming that an automobile stands in a garage 80 per cent out of each twenty-four hours, what would be the saving in casing expense providing the car was put on jacks and kept off the tires during the time it was not in use?

The amount of money you might save by jacking up the wheels when the car is not in use is too small to be measured, providing there is no oil or water on the garage floor that might cause the rubber to deteriorate. The reduction in pressure and consequent lessened strain on the casings when this is done is almost infinitesimal, although it is popularly supposed that relieving the tires from the burden of supporting the car must necessarily relieve them from just that much strain and that therefore they will wear longer if the car is jacked up. The reduction in pressure when this is done is exactly inversely proportional to the increase in volume of the tube. When the tire is supporting the car weight it flattens slightly and one might say, imperceptibly, if the tires are pumped up as hard as they should be. The flattening of the tire causes a small decrease in the volume of the air in the tube and therefore when the tire is raised off the ground it regains its normal shape and normal volume. It is obvious that this small change in volume will not affect the pressure to any extent, since the decrease in pressure is inversely proportional to the increase in volume. And since the decrease in pressure is almost incommensurable the lessened strain and consequent saving in tire cost is incalculable.

Is there any good preparation for polishing the body of an automobile which will not harm the varnish or paint?

It is not advisable to use polish of any sort on the body. If the finish has become dull have the body revarnished. The only rejuvenator worthy of consideration is soap and water, and some body makers condemn the soap, advising the use of water only. However, there is little harm in using lukewarm water and soap, provided the soap is not too strong. In cleaning the body first wash the dust off with a hose and do not apply a sponge or cloth until the dust has been removed and the mud softened. Then sponge the body with soap and water and finally rinse with a hose until the soapy water has been entirely removed. Then wipe dry with chamois. If this advice is followed there will be no need of using any body polish, as the varnish will hold its luster almost indefinitely.

The brake on my car has been dragging for some time. Will this cause the tire to wear more rapidly?

Inasmuch as the dragging brake retards the free movement of the wheel, the tire is made to wear out more quickly than normally. Especially is this so when the brake is applied. The principal detriment, however, lies in the increased work imposed on the motor, which causes it to heat quickly.

Our car has a unit power plant using one grade of oil for crank case, multiple disk clutch and gear set. The oiling system is circulating splash with pump. Can we use graphite in our power plant? If so, how much graphite to the gallon of cylinder oil, and what make?

Use one teaspoonful of flake graphite to each quart of oil. Do not throw the graphite in loose, but mix it into a soft paste first and then add it to the oil. In buying the graphite be careful to obtain a good motor graphite as some graphites are not suited for motor lubrication. Some are too coarse, others to fine and some contain grit. Therefore, be certain you obtain a good motor graphite.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY. 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4[illegible]
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

SODA AND MINERAL WATERS
Made in Fulton. Best Extracts. Purity Guaranteed.
Delivery to any part of town.
A. J. THOMPSON
Phone 1543 112 Pratt St.

TIRE VULCANIZING
by Standard Steam Process
All Work Guaranteed.
B. L. COLE
Phone 2307 22 S. 1st St.

FOLEY'S RESTAURANT
"The Place to Eat."
Dinner 25c Supper Special 15c
Breakfast to order.
Sunday
Chicken Dinner a Specialty 35c

M. KATRIB

Cleaning, Pressing, Dyeing, Repairing. Ladies and Gents Tailor. All Work Guaranteed. Free Delivery

Phone 3353 21 1-2 So. Second st.

CALIFORNIA EXPOSITIONS
$89.00
Round Trip via
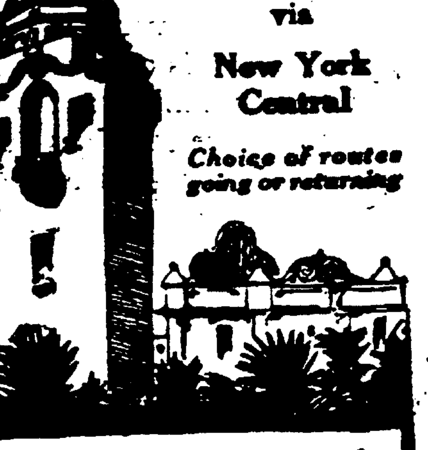
New York Central
Choice of routes going or returning



All your questions gladly answered. Call at any of our offices or address
General Agent, New York Central Lines, Syracuse, N. Y.
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

HANNIBAL NEWS

Mrs. Jacob Hann and daughter Helen are spending the week with Mrs. Hann's parents at Hermon.

Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Smith of Utica were guests of Mrs. Minnie Fullerton last week.

Frank Plantz, of Syracuse, brother of Mrs. Ward Adamy, will spend the vacation at O. J. Adamy's.

The many friends in this vicinity of Mr. and Mrs. John McRae are congratulating them on the birth of a son, Edgar, recently. Mrs. McRae will be remembered here as Miss Rena Gardenier.

Miss Marjorie Brackett of Fulton had the misfortune to have her leg broken below the knee by a kick from a horse. Marjorie has the sympathy of many friends in Hannibal, her former home.

The Welcome Bible class of Hannibal Center will picnic at Fair Haven Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Hopper attended the Children's Day exercises at Bowen's Corners Sunday night. The exercises were very interesting. Besides the recitations and singing by the children, a solo singer from Syracuse and orchestra from Fulton added much to the program.

Mrs. Alfred Strong is still confined to the bed from injuries received one week ago caused by a fall.

Leon Bell of Scranton, Pa., is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. George Crofoot.

Mrs. Oscar Clark has recovered from her recent operation at Lee Memorial hospital sufficiently to be taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. William Bidwell of Fulton and her friends hope she may soon return home.

Misses Anna and Hannah Perkins will entertain the Ladies' Aid Society of Hannibal Center at the home of R. P. Allen Friday, June 25. A cordial invitation to all.

The Hannibal Center band will give a concert on the church lawn on the evening of the 25th inst. The Terpening band of Ira will assist in the musical part of the entertainment. Ice cream and cake will be served.

The following program was given at Golden Sheaf Grange Saturday Duttry in charge. Singing by the grange. Welcome, Charles Skutt; Looking for Faults, Louise Hammond; My Shadow; Nellie Gifford; Her Awful Dream, Ella Wheeler; I Saw a Ship Sailing, Allen Perkins; Washing the Dishes, Laura Wheeler; I'm Glad to See You, Alice Maude Skutt; Betty's Garden, Vara Cowles; Boys Song, Walter Perkins; So Good, Mabel Duttig; I'm Going Back to Grandpa's, Leon Wheeler; Closing Song, Grange.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Barlow and family were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William and Mr. and Mrs. George Barlow Saturday anl Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Mead and mother of Wolcott were recent guests of friends in town.

Mrs. George Denning entertained the Social Ten Friday afternoon. The ladies report a very pleasant time.

Mrs. W. Fineran and children spent last week with relatives in Oswego.

The baccalaureate services at the M. E. church Sunday evening were largely attended. A splendid sermon was delivered by Rev. F. Dunning from the text, Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered the heart of man, what God hath prepared for them that love Him." The music by a chorus of twenty-five voices was fine.

Mrs. George Minor and Mrs. C. A. Cox and children were guests at O. J. Adamy's Monday.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Fred Manning Thursday afternoon. This is flower mission day and each member is requested to bring flowers.

Mrs. Harry Hewitt entertained her mother and sister from Geneva last week.

Mrs. Margaret Barnes has bought three lots No. 22, 23, 24, block 6, Lakeview Extension, Ontario Heights Mrs. Barnes plans to erect a handsome bungalow thereon in the near future.

Miss Ethel Byrne is assistant bookkeeper at the C. E. Tucker cheese factory.

A delegation from Hannibal Center attended the State Sunday school convention at Auburn, making the trip by auto.

Mrs. Alfred Shutts, who has been very ill is improving slowly.

Prof. Lockwood attended the banquet of the Board of trade at Sodus last week, and gave a talk on vocational studies in the high school.

The garage of H. A. Hewitt & Co. is finished and is one of the best equipped structures of its kind between Rochester and Oswego.

Mr. and Mrs. Ula Adams, Mr. and Mrs. James Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Echard and Misses Bertha Elizabeth and Catherine Echard all went to Long Branch by autos last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dodge and family went to Whitesboro on Sunday.

Misses Bertha Echard and niece, Catherine Echard called on Mrs. Byron Wells one day last week.

Mrs. Samuel rGaham of Battile Island called on Mrs. Fred Dodge on Tuesday.

On Monday morning our rural mail carrier, William Middleton, returned to his work. All are glad to see him.

Mrs. Bert Thornsbur and son Ernest of Hannibal are spending some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alanzo Burchin.

Miss Ruth Gardner spent Tuesday with Miss Lois Frost.

Mrs. Bert Thomsbur and Mrs. Blanche Gardner called on Mrs. Lottie Rickert on Wednesday.

The steamboat Francis went thru the barge canal here on Monday and returned on Tuesday. It is the first large steamboat to go thru here this year.

Miss Ethel Brown has returned home from Caughdenoy.

Misses Clara and Thelma Congdon spent Thursday with Edna Wells.

Miss Goldia Graham of Battle Island spent a few days the past week with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ula Adams, Mr. and Mrs. James Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Edward EEchard, Misses Bertha and Elizabeth Echard, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wells and daughter, Miss Goldia Graham, Mrs. Muriel Congdon and daughter Thelma, Mrs. Alice Adams all were in Fulton on Saturday evening.

Benjamin Congdon sold about twenty quarts of strawberries on Saturday, the first of this season.

D. E. Wells has purchased a horse.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham and daughter Goldia of Battle Island spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wells.

Howard Simons of the Kingdom was a caller at C. J. Echard's on Sunday.

Over nine hundred automobiles and motorcycles passed through this place on Sunday.

John Larock of Fulton spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Lewis Burchin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ula Adams called on his mother, Mrs. Alice Adams on Sunday.

Use Hanford's Balsam to heal old sores.

REDUCED FARES

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

Ontario Beach $1.90
(Charlotte)

Round trip. Every Sunday and holiday. June 27 to Sept. 6, inclusive. Good going and returning same day.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

An Effective Cough Treatment

One-fourth to one teaspoonful of Dr. King's New Discovery, taken as needed, will soothe and check Coughs, colds and the more dangerous bronchial and Lung Ailments. You can't afford to take the risk of serious illness, when so cheap and simple a remedy as Dr. King's New Discovery is obtainable. Go to your Druggist today, get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, start the treatment at once. You will be gratified for the relief and cure obtained.

Down In Maine

Where Days and Nights Are Cool

Maine is famous for its sea coast, its inland lakes and pine forests. Hotels aplenty to suit all, and sports—both land and water—to your heart's desire.

Through car service to Boston, the gateway to New England points.

Boston Excursions

At frequent intervals. Limit 15 days. One way fare plus $3.00 Round Trip.

For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, consult local ticket agents.

BERNHARDS BAY

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Caldwell were Sunday evening callers of Mr. and Mrs. William Wood.

Rev. G. M. Dunham of Camden was a guest of his nieces, Mrs. Jane Hall and Mrs. J. E. Peachin, last week

Mr. and Mrs. Will Crossman and daughter of Syracuse are here for a few weeks.

G. Griner and Bert Willard of Syracuse are here camping in the Willard grove for a few days.

Norman Tice from Syranuse is in his cottage for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Winn were recent callers of J. E. Peachin, also Mrs. Jane Hall.

Mrs. John Coady was in Cleveland on business Wednesday anl Friday of last week.

Mrs. William Slayter is slowly recovering.

Mrs. William Wood entertained her sister, Mrs. Clarence Row, last Tuesday.

Mrs. Harvey Myers closed a successful term of school a few days ago.

Mrs. William Wood was to Mrs. R. Woolridge, who is much worse at this writing.

A 7-passenger 6 cylinder Overland car was purchased by Crawford Getman last Tuesday.

Growers are beginning to ship strawberries from here.

Mrs. John Coady is having her cottage papered and painted.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Redpath Chautauqua

SEASON TICKETS

Local Chautauqua Boosters Have Secured a Limited Supply of Season Tickets, Which Will Be Sold, While They Last, at the Low Price of $2.00 Each. When This Supply Is Exhausted No Season Ticket Can Be Had For Less Than $2.50.

THE BEN GREET PLAYERS
In One of Shakespeare's Greatest Comedies.

QUINTANO'S GREAT BAND
An Italian Aggregation There With the Goods.

THE AIDA QUARTET
One of the Sweetest Things In Music.

WEATHERWAX QUARTET
Four Brothers In a Class All by Themselves.

GILES BINGHAM COMPANY
In an Evening of Wholesome Fun.

HON. FRANK J. CANNON
In a Great Address Against Mormonism.

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY
The Kids' Judge of Denver, Colo.

EDW. AMHERST OTT
Thinker, Orator, Writer, Philosopher.

Katharine Ridgeway The McGrath Bros. The Barnards
J. S. Knox Harry Barnhart Helen Todd Lucy Price
MORNING LECTURES SPECIAL CHILDREN'S WORK

The Cash Gate Admissions to the Six Days Will Aggregate Over $6.00.

$2.00 Buys a SEASON TICKET Admitting to All Programs

Get a Program Booklet and Study Out This Great Bargain

Fulton, N. Y., July 27 to Aug. 2

SOUTH GRANBY

Millard Sperlock is in Syracuse.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rune and son Brewster motored to Syracuse Thursday in their new auto.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Fisher were in Syracuse Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Blake in their auto.

Delbert Benjamin spent last week in Watertown, the guest of relatives.

Fenwick Edgarton and bride from Tully were the guests of his sister, Mrs. Fred Ware, a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Andrews and son, Orris, are visiting friends in Syracuse.

B. H. Pingree went to Syracuse by auto Thursday and met a cousin, Miss Lillian Wilson, who nas oeen matron in a school in Illinois. She was on her way to Maine, her home, which is in the same place where Mr. Pingree's people live. They motored to Oswego Friday and visited the fort, and then Mr. and Mrs. Pingree took her to Syracuse where she boarded a night train for Boston.

Harlow Stege is home on his vacation.

The social at the school house Friday night was a success financially. Fifteen gallons of ice cream were sold. They raised twenty dollars for the Little Utica church which was doing quite well. It was a nice night and a very social time. Some of the little folks spoke pieces and some sang songs. The tables were set in the school yard but those that wished sat in the school house and were served there. Mrs. Sadie Cook lost her gold watch but had the good luck to find it again.

Raymond Lange, Howard Welch, Helen Luke, Lela Andrews and Myrtis Cook were the scholars that took Regents' examinations at the school the past week, with Mrs. Pingree conducting the test.

Mrs. H. Austin spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Elma Cook. She is now at her other daughter's, Mrs. Andrews, staying while they are in Syracuse.

With a hard summer's work at hand, Hanford's Balsam should be in every stable. You will find frequent use for it.

Most Children Have Worms

And neither Parent or child know it yet it explains why your child is nervous, pale, feverish, backward. Often children have thousands of Worms. Think of how dangerous this is to your child. Don't take any risk. Get an original 25c. box of Kickapoo Worm Killer, a candy lozenge. Kickapoo Worm Killer will positively kill and remove worms. Relieves Constipation, regulates Stomach and Bowels. Your child will grow and learn so much better. Get a box today.

VOLNEY CENTER

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. A. Cook Wednesday, June 23, and will hold an ice cream social at the town hall Friday, July 2. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Foster Simpson returned from college at Troy last Sunday.

Fred Sikes, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Wise, Mrs. Charles Foster and Mr. Charles Goodfellow motored recently to Vernon where they attended a funeral of a relative.

Mrs. Frank Cramer motored to Oswego Beach Sunday with a party of young folks.

Mrs. Charles Davis was operated upon at the Lee Memorial hospital last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson of Syracuse were Sunday guests of their parents, Dr. and Mrs. Simpson.

Mrs. William Bateman is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Stanley Bateman.

Mr. and Mrs. James Vant spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. C. Baldwin.

For blood poisoning use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Steer this way for the Insurance that spells peace of mind—our Automobile Accident and Liability Insurance.

The accident that generally occurs is the unavoidable one—but that does not stop the "hold up" suit that costs money to defend against—BUT our insurance protects you against property and personal damages and the company fights the case.

See us today for rates.

DAVID & MASON AGENCY
55 N. FIRST STREET

MOTOR BOAT SUPPLIES

Everything that is needed to Equip a Boat

AT

J. B. BUELL'S, 17 N. Second Street

Agents for W. D. ANDREWS CO., Syracuse

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

"CITY OF ERIE" — 3 Magnificent Steamers — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Dec. 1st—CLEVELAND

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

SPECIAL SALE
of Waists and Dresses
at PATTERSON'S
FRIDAY and SATURDAY

Watch Papers for Description and Prices

Onyx Billiard Room

The Coolest and the Best Equipped.

The only Billiard Table in the City

G. J. POWELL, Mgr.

PHONE 560 QUIRK THEATRE BLDG.

Community Notes

Mrs. Charles David of Des Moines, formerly of this city, and Mrs. Hubbard of Oswego, are guests of Mrs. Bert Mason, East First st.

* * *

William Middleton, the R. F. D. carrier who lost one eye recently, has resumed his trips into the country.

* * *

Mrs. James Barry of Lyndonville is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Reagan.

* * *

The W. C. T. U. will meet Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Burt, 113 Waldrath st. at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Mrs. Gifford and daughter, Miss Ruthalleen, who is a junior at the Oswego Normal, attended the graduation exercises at that institution yesterday.

* * *

Miss Ada Thayer is the guest of friends at Skaneatales and Rochester.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson are in Syracuse for a short time.

* * *

Miss Vivian Caffrey left the city yesterday to attend the alumni meeting of the Academy of the Holy name, in Rome. She will remain there the balance of the week with friends.

* * *

Mrs. D. M. Sweeney returned today to Albany, after spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Mary McCarthey in West 2d st.

* * *

The Dexterville church will hold an ice cream social next Tuesday evening to which Fultonians are invited.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis are entertaining out of town relatives.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Clark of Worth st. have removed to Indiana to make their future home.

* * *

Mr. W. H. Patterson is in Albany on ab usiness trip.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Ives of Worth st. are spending the day with Syracuse relatives.

* * *

Mrs. Julius Prowda, of Utica st., during the past week had as guests her brother, Saul Lazarus, of Chicago, and Miss Estelle Simonds, also of Chicago.

* * *

Frank Oathout is in Utica attending the commencement exercises of the Utica School of Commerce.

Cahill's Perfection Bread
is the
BEST BREAD MADE
TRY A LOAF—Sold only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

100%
Efficiency
The Result of Using
Miscellaneous
Want Column
in
The Evening Times

PRICES:

1 Word 1 Time 1c
1 Word 3 Times 2c
1 Word 6 Times 3c

Minimum Charge
10 Cents

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair tonight and Thursday; warmer Thursday.

JUNIOR CLASS DANCE

After the graduation exercises at the First Baptist church tonight, the graduating class will be the guests of the junior class of the school at a reception and dance to be held at Davis hall. Invitations for 200 have been issued and it is probable that many visitors to this city will attend, in addition to the school pupils and the college students who are spending their vacations here. The dance will begin about 11 o'clock and will close when the program has been completed.

A special orchestra will furnish the music and refreshments will be served. The committee in charge is headed by Harold O'Brien.

HAMMOCKS

Sturdy—Comfortable

Just the thing for your Porch or lawn.

Priced from $1.25 to $8.00

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

1 South First St.

THOMAS H. MARVIN

HEADQUARTERS FOR

BUILDERS' SUPPLIES

Some of our specialties are:—

Lehigh Portland Cement.

Peerless Wall plaster

Robinson Sewer Pipe

Onondaga Vitrified Brick

Fire Brick, Fire Clay, etc.

Land Plaster Hydrated Lime

Yard:

Corner First and Broadway

WORTH $175

Horses Required to Carry Close to 300 Pounds; Six Months of Training

There is no greater enthusiast or closer studen t of horse breeding in the country than Mr. F. K. Sturgis, the vice Chairman of the Jockey Club, who hasc harge of that organization's Bureau of Breeding in New York State, and anything that he has to say in connection with the breeding industry is always interesting, and doubly so at this time, when the visible supply of cavalry remounts the world over is becoming smaller daily.

"Only those who have given the subject serious consideration," said Mr. Sturgis, in discussing the war and its problems, "realize the economic waste the struggle has created. The announcement that we have exported $59,000,000 worth of horses and mules since the war started will not mean much, except to the initiated, but it takes on tremendous importance when we learn that during the entire period of the Boer War, which lasted from October, 1899, to June, 1902, the British Government purchased all told 470,600 horses, of which we supplied 109,839 head. It appears from this that the United States has furnished for Great Britain, France, and Italy in the period of ten months past almost as many horses and mules as the British Government bought in all countries during the almost three years of hostilities in South Africa. When the hundreds of thousands of horses supplied by other countries are considered, and it is remembered that the average life of a horse in the actual war zone is but ten days, some idea of the necessity of stimulating the breeding interests is apparent.

Losses in Civil War

"Some faint idea of the rate at which the horse is being eliminated may be gathered by reference to statistics in connection with the Army of the Potomac during the Civil War," he continued. "The records show that there were 36 cavalry regiments, whose effective strength varied during the six months from May to October between 10,000 and 14,000 men. This body of cavalry required the following remounts: May, 5763; June 6327; July, 4716; August, 5499; September, 5829, and October, 7336, indicating a loss of 2½ horses per man, or a ratio of 5 horses per annum. The Secretary of War, in commenting on this showing, said: 'If a similar state of affairs existed throughout all our cavalry, its 233 regiments would require 435,000 horses annually.'

"In comparison with the world strife now prevailing," said Mr. Sturgis, "the Civil War seems trival, and the situation is one that should fill everyb reeder of horses with a sense of the duty he owes his country. The horse is a very necessary accessory of our everyday life, but in war he is as indispensable as ammunition or food. It matters not whether the war is of our making, or whether we benefit through the orders which come to us for horses from abroad—the opportunity is there. That there was a shortage of cavalry remounts in the United States as far back as 1911 was shown by the report of a special commission, which recommended the placing of 100 horses in various sections of the country. They favored a blending of the thoroughbred, standardbred, saddle, and Morgan types, with the first-named preponderating, and figured that with this number of horses the Government should be able to secure 2400 head annually. The plan was partilly adopted, but even had the full quota of stallions been placed, how small it is in comparison with the entire 4200 head of horses doing service in the Government studs of France, or the 4,400 that Austro-Hungary maintains.

Young Horses Wanted

"This Government allows $175 for the purchase of cavalry remounts at three years of age. It takes six months of preparation and fitting before the horse is ready for regular will have to carry upwards of 260 pounds withh is rider and equipment, the folly of using any animal under four years of age and other than good blood will be apparent. The breeders of the East say that they cannot produce the proper type of cavalry remount for $175, and maintain that they would have to sell at $300 per head in order to be compensated. The West and Southwest could do better, for their horses and cattle run out during the winter. Range horses, however, are necessarily soft, and have to be fitted, and that costs money. The breeders of the country are unit in the belief that the stndard value should be raised. Many persons use the argument that because the last census showed that we had 23,000,000 head of horses it is folly to talk of a shortage of this class of animal, but it should always be borne in mind that a very great majority of this 23,000,000 is made up of draught animals, and I venture the opinion that 2000 cavalry remounts of the proper type could not be secured in the State of New York if a man took thirty days in which to undertake the work."

FOR SALE
BABY CARRIAGE

Cost $60.00, used very little. Will sell for $20.00. Can be seen Thursday Evening from 6 to 8 o'clock at

414 ONEIDA STREET

CIRCLE NO. 2 TO GIVE CONCERT JUNE 30

Mrs. L. P. Smith and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon have arranged for the coming concert to be given under the auspices of Circle No. 2 of the First M. E. church a program of rare excellence. June 30, at 8 p.m., is the date set for this musical treat, the complete program for which follows:

Part One

Orchestra

Organ Prelude....Miss Blanche Hall

Song—"Ave Maria," from "Cavaliera Rusticana," with harp and pipe organ accompaniment; Miss Osia Rumsey and Miss Blanche Hall

Mrs. L. P. Smith.

Organ—Sonata No. 2...Mendelssohn

Miss Blanche Hall

Song—"Ritournelle" .....Chauminde

Miss Ruth Allen

Song—"A May Morning".....Denza

Miss Marion Lake

Duet—Harp and Flute

Miss Osia Rumsey and Byron Newton

Song—"Persian Serenade".....Train

Miss Gertrude Lake

Piano—Selected Miss Mabel Hubbard

Scotch Songs—"O ye Hills o' the Hielands," ....MacFarland

"Laddie" .... Thayer

Mrs. Georgietta Foster Shaver

Orchestra

PART TWO

Songs—(a) "An Open Secret" Woodman

(b) Sing, Smile and Slumber Gounod

with flute obligato by Byron J. Newton. Mrs. L. P. Smith

Song—"A Little Pink Rose" Carrie Jacobs Bond

Miss Ruth Allen

Songs—(a) "Come Down Laughing Water" ....Stross

(b) "At Dawning".. Cadman

Mrs. L. Fowler Joy

Songs—(a) "Yesterday"... Chadwick

(b) "Elysian" ....Speaks

(c) "Wind Song"....Rogers

Mrs. Shaver

Duet—French Horn and Flute

F. Jess Newton and Byron J. Newton

Duet—Selected

Mrs. Shaver and Miss Winifred Strong

Accompanist Mrs. J. H. Howe.

MRS ELLEN DRISCOLL

Syracuse, June 23.—Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen Driscoll, mother of former Congressman Michael E Driscoll and former State Fair Commissioner George W. Driscoll, were held yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at her home, No. 217 Emerson avenue, and at 8.30 o'clock at St. Patrick's church.

Among the relatives present, besides her sons, was Miss Mary Etta Driscoll, a daughter, who came from Denver and arrived but a few hours before the services. Miss Driscoll was delayed by heavy rains and washouts.

Rev. Francis J. Quinn celebrated mass at the church, with Rev. James P. Magee as deacon. The bearers were Philip Gooley, W. G. Callas, J. W. Linsky and Dennis Shea, all neighbors of Mrs. Driscoll.

LAPATINO QUITS JOB AS RECRUITING OFFICER

In response to the many objections raised in Oswego Deputy Sheriff Lapatino has ceased to operate as a recruiting officer for the Italian army. Hereafter all applicants who wish to make a trip back to Italy during the stirring times in Europe must address the Italian consul in Rochester.

AT ALBANY

Want Convention to Reorganize Laws Giving Farmers Full Rights

Albany, June 22.—Inclusion of a department of agriculture among the departments comprising the re-organized state government will be urged upon the Constitutional convention by the agricultural agencies of the State as a result of resolutions adopted by the Committee upon Agricultural Interests of the State, meeting in Albany. A memorial setting for the desires of the committee will be presented to President Elihu Root of the Convention by Commissioner of Agriculture Charles S. Wilson, W. H. Vary of the State Grange and Dr. Thomas F. Finegan of the Department of Education.

The memorial declares that agriculture is of paramount importance to the Nation and the State and should be encouraged in every way and that in view of the fact that the Constitutional Convention is discussing the broad questions of public policy and administration anl. is considering a reorganization of the business of the State, this is a proper time to take such steps as may be necessary to give agriculture its due recognition in the proposed constitution. The resolutions adopted by the Committee read:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this conference that the Constitutional Convention of the State of New York take such action as may be necessary to include in the new constitution, as one of its broad statements of public policy, that 'The conservation and development under proper restrictions of all the natural resources of the State including streams, lakes, water power, soils, the air, minerals, ores, forests, fish and wild game of the State are for the public welfare and that laws may be passed for the development, regulation, maintenance and control of any or all of these resources.

"Resolved, further, that in any reorganization of the public business of the State of New York which may be made effective, there shall be constituted a department of agriculture with equal rank with other State departments.

"Resolved, that there be included in the new constitution as one of its broad administrative policies that 'The legislature shall provide for a department of agriculture, the chief design and duties of which shall be to daminster the regulatory laws relating to agriculture and agricultural production, marketing and distribution, lands, forests, fish and game, and to instruct the people in regard to the meaning and application of such laws."

The Honorable Seth Low, of New York, a member of the Convention, appeared before the committee to urge consideration of a motion now before the convention which would eliminate from the new constitution article one of section thirteen of the present constitution, which provides that leases of agricultural lands shall be limited to twelve years. A motion was adopted for submission to the Convention expressing as the sense of the committee that the provision be retained in the new constitution.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of all kinds

Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER

Phone 122.

A New Assortment of
WEDDING GIFTS

principally CUT GLASS and SILVERWARE just received.

AT VERY SPECIAL PRICES.

Wm. C. Morgan

Jeweler & Optometrist

Fulton, N. Y.

PROGRESS MADE ON NEW POWER PLANT

The old power house of the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper company has been razed by the Walter Bradley Company and the machinery will be moved thsi week. A large force of men is now at work tearing down the old power plant and dynamite may be used when the foundations are reached.

The trestle from the end of the coffer dam to the foundation of the new mill has been completed and the tracks laid for the dirt trains. Most of the concrete foundation for the new mill on First st, has been completed.

Special Sale

HATS that were $2.50, $3.00, $4.00, this week at .. $1.00

See Window Display

DIX—Milliner

SOUTH SECOND STREET

Happy Hour

TODAY

EMILY STEVENS

in

"CORA"

Five Reels Superb Production.

"SHATTERED MEMORIES"

Big Civil War Drama, starring Robert Leonard and Ella Hall

Three Great Reels.

ADMISSION 10c.

Do Your SIDE CURTAINS and AUTO TOP Protect You?

IF NOT, SEE OR CALL 3246

FULTON AUTO TOP CO.

50 S. Second Street Fulton, N. Y.

THE QUIRK

Matinees 5c.
Nights: Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c
CONTINUOUS—2 to 10.30 P.M.

TODAY	THURSDAY
The Great Extravanza	7th Drama of "WHO PAYS" Series entitled
"THE WIZARD OF OZ"	"BLUE BLOOD AND YELLOW"
in 5 parts and	2d Episode "Romance of Elaine"
Pathe Weekly	and Pathe Weekly.

FRIDAY

The One You Have Been Waiting For

"EAGLE'S NEST"

Lubin 6-Part Masterpiece with EDWIN ARDEN, the Original

ALBANY LETTER DAY BY DAY

Cardoze Tells Times Readers the Doings of Officials and Lawmakers

Albany, June 23.—Prepared to go to the bottom of all of the State departments so that they might be the better equipped to pass upon the various proposed amendments to the Constitution, the delegates to the present convention are receiving from time to time information relative to the workings and appropriations needed of and for the various bureaus. At the present time there are before committees resolutions which have been introduced calling upon State heads of departments to furnish data concerning their respective departmepnts.

On April delegate Russell Wiggins of Middletown introduced a resolution calling upon the clerk of the Court of Appeals to furnish information concerning the number of criminal appeals presented to that court during the past five years, the number of cases on appeal filed under the provisions of subdivision one of Section 190 of the civil code for the same period and other statistics which would tend to show the volume of work criminal and civil before the highest court in the State.

Delegate Meyer Steinbrink of New York introduced a resolution on May fourth calling for information from the officer having custody of the records, names and ages of official referees acting in the first and second judicial departments, also the amount of their salaries and if there is any office and the number of actions or proceedings heard and disposed of by each of them. The resolution in addition provided for information as to whether such information applies to former justices of the Supreme Court or to former muncipal court judges. The names, ages and previous judicial services of thec ity court judges eligible to appointment as official referees.

The commissioners of highways has been asked as the result of a resolution of Delegate Herman J. Westwood of Fredonia, to furnish the Constitutional convention delegates with the amount of money actually obtained by each of the counties of the State from the first highway bond issue of fifty millions of dollars; the amount of money allotted to each county on mileage, area and population, from the second issue of highwaysb onds, similar in amount, and the amounts of excess or deficiencies in the allotment of the second bond issuef or highway purposes, compared with amounts received form the firts issue.

Delegate William McKinney of Northport has requested the State comptroller to furnish a statement of the amount of money appropriated or expended for all legislative purposes each year from 1901 to 1915.

Information is sought by Delegate Patrick W. Cullinan of Oswego as to the number of inmates of State charitable institutions and has introduced ar esolution asking that the State board of charities be required to furnish such statistics.

Another resolution by Delegate Cullinan has been adopted which calls upon the State engineer to furnish a statement showing where the surplus waters of the State were used for waterpower development purposes prior to the construction of the barge canal and also a statement showing the localities where the amount of water power development arising from the construction of the barge canal improvement was used and the revenue derived by the State for the use of such power.

The State superintendent of public worksi s asked in stil a third resolution by Delegate Cullinan, to furnish a list of users of the surplus waters of the canals or their feeders, for water power development.

There are other resolutions covering other departments still before the convention.

GOVERNORS WANT SAFE AND SANE FOURTH

A strong nation-wide appeal for a rational celebration of Independence Day will be made through proclamations to be issued by the Governors of each State calling upon the citizens to co-operate with public officials in enforcing the necessary regulations this timely action having been taken upon the request of Darwin P. Kingsley of New York, president of the Safety First Federation of America.

A plan has been recommended by the federation with the view of diminishing the usual heavy toll of lives, particularly of children, as well as to lesser injuries to persons and decreasing the destruction of property by fire. In his letter to the chief executives, President Kingsley calls particular attention to the recommendations of the Fire Prevention Committee, which it is urged should be adopted by public officials having under their jurisdiction the regulation of the use of fireworks and explosives.

This committee recommends that drasticaction be taken relative to the issuance of permits for the sale of fireworks or explosives and that for 10 days prior to July 4, the officials in every city should seize all fireworks which have been retained without a permit and destroy the same, such authority being now conferred upon the officials in New York city. Reference is made to the successful campaigns conducted in Newark, N. J., under the direction of Captain Charles A. Gasser, inspector of combustibles and fire risks, not a single person having been injured by fireworks in that city on July Fourth during the past three years. There have been fewer fires and accidents on Independence Day in Newark, than any other day in the year as a result of Captain Gasser's efforts.

MAIL CARRIERS MEET

The rural free delivery mail carriers of this county will hold a meeting in Williamstown on Saturday evening.

For foot-rot use Hanford's Balsam.

HIGH SCHOOL HONOR LIST

Four Students Attain 90 Per Cent. and Above Out of 50 in the List

The following is a list of the highest fifty in scholarship in the high school for the term ending June 23, 1915:

Margaret Byrne	93.25
Florence Follan	92.5
Doris Osborne	90.75
Fred King	90.6
Delilah Rounds	89.66
Esther Aylesworth	89.
Margaret Clark	89.
Elizabeth Royce	89.
Earl Hopkins	88.8
Doris Howard	88.8
Harold Thompson	88.5
Amelia Rolfe	88.25
Lillian Simons	88.25
Alfred Fivaz	88.2
Thelma Parker	88.2
William Lum	88.
Lenora Eames	87.8
Martha Hollenbeck	87.5
Hilda Clark	87.33
Minnie Ferguson	87.33
Mae Roach	87.33
Ethel Washburne	87.33
Wilber Parsons	87.2
Mae Whitcomb	87.2
Henry Holly	87.
Ruth Jennings	86.8
Florence Schnur	86.8
Helen Mullen	86.75
Alice Gorman	86.6
Minerva Murray	86.2
Ruth Beels	86.
Edith Brown	85.6
Hazel King	85.6
Mildred Brown	85.3
Robert Boland	85.2
John O'Brien	85.2
Lula Kio	85.16
Frank Baker	85.
Lena Campbell	85.
Florence Moody	85.
Ramon Lewis	85.
Ralph Seymour	84.4
Ross Rowlee	84.33
Ruth Loveland	84.25
Eva Carvey	84.
Harold Pierce	84.
Pearl Foster	83.8
Lena Kaplan	83.8
Junie Burton	83.75
Mildred Ford	83.4

CHAUTAUQUA TICKETS COMING NEXT WEEK

E. J. Penfield, chairman of the committee on the Chautauqua entertainment course, is in receipt of information, to the effect that a representative of the Redpath System will be in Fulton next week, to arrange for the distribution of season tickets.

With the opening of the Chautauqua season about one month ahead there is already exhibited more interest in the series of entertainments than it is reasonable to expect.

In the columns of The Evening Times there has appeared at different times the complete program of the course, which has aroused a lot of enthusiasm because of the high class character of the entertainers whose names appeared in the list.

NO SUNDAY PICNICS FOR THIS LABOR UNION

One of the strongest resolutions ever passed upon by the Carpenters' Local, is that against the holding of picnics on the first day of the week, Sunday. On this account those members of the Union who as individuals attended the Bartenders' picnic at Reynolds woods last Sunday repudiate the published information that the carpenters joined in that outing.

The Evening Times congratulates the labor unions whose respect for Sunday fails to tolerate picnics on that day.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

House to Rent—in 4th st., with all modern improvements. Also, one on 5th st. Rooms to rent in Waldhorn Block. S. Waldhorn, 18 1st st. tf.

Wanted—To buy farm of 5 to 25 acres, not over 5 miles out. Address with complete description and lowest cash price. Box 254, Geneva. 158c

To Rent—Desirable rooms to rent in the Rosenbloom block. Gas, water, electricity. Inquire of Glenn A. Ryther, DeBarber Block. 159

For Sale—Grocery store doing good business; will bear investigation. Good reason for selling. Inquire C, Times office. 159c

Furnished Rooms for housekeeping, or by day or week. 205 Cayuga st. 161c

Tenement House to Rent.—Pine st.; $10 month. Inquire H. L. Crandall. Phone 2520. tf

Work Wanted—by woman with little girl. Inquire 409 W. Second st. tf

We Want Your
ELECTRICAL WORK
ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.
D. B. KANE
Phone 1598 118 Oneida St

Your Shoes Do They Need Repairing?
This is the best and quickest shop.
Wilson & Dwyer
207 Cayuga St.

Dental Specialists
DR. F. H. CONKLIN
Prophylactic and Crown and Bridge Work
DR. H. W. WHITNEY
Gold Inlays, Somnoforme (sleep-paper) for painless extraction of teeth.
15 Years Experience
Office Hours: 8 A. M. to 5 P. M.
OPEN EVENINGS
Over PATTERSON'S Dept. Store
113 Oneida Street

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of [signature]

Paint and Not

Paint was so high the last few years the market was flooded with trash.

What is trash?

It looks like paint and pretends to be paint, but isn't worth painting. It costs a painter's day's-work to put-on a gallon of paint, good or bad; and a painter's day's-work is $3 or $4.

Add that to the price of a gallon. That is the cost of a gallon. Devoe is $5 or $6 a gallon; and trash a half-dollar less.

But Devoe is all paint and more too; you add oil to it; a gallon is 5 or 6 quarts of perfect paint for the painter's pot. But trash is three-quarters, two-thirds or half paint; you pay a half dollar less for nobody-knows-what-it-is.

10 gallons of Devoe is enough for the average job; it takes 15 or 20 gallons of trash. And the wear same way. Unfortunately, they look alike when first put-on.

DEVOE

L. P. Smith Co. sells it.

Wash Skirts Made to Order for $2.50 —Seventh Floor

Deys

New Summer Styles, Pictorial Review Patterns —Thorofare

SPECIAL! (Beginning Wednesday)

The Season's Much-Wanted Materials in An Extraordinary Offer of Hundreds of Yards

Desirable Wash Goods At Low Selling Prices

Cotton Goods of Very Desirable Kinds---Silk and Cotton Crepe de Chines, Embroidered Voiles & Organdies, Marquisettes & Crepe Voiles, Ginghams and Percales, Etc.

The very materials that are now in the height of fashion for the pretty summer dresses, and these will be welcomed for the biggest share of warm weather is yet to come. In this offer also are the sturdy tub materials for general service, all lovely and good, all of the thoroughly dependable kind, and all marked down to prices that mean a big saving and better wash goods for you. Here are some of the good things to be had:

11c a Yard
15c and 19c Wash Goods
—Lots including Voiles in neat figure effects; madras with stripes; Tissue Cloth in stripes and checks. Such desirable materials that make up best in afternoon and house dresses. At .... 11c yard

15c a Yard
25c Wash Goods
—Organdies in pretty summer effects; white ground with large floral designs; pink, blue, helio. Who will go without a new dress of organdie when good materials can be be bought for so little? At........ 15c yard

19c a Yard
29c Wash Goods
—Figured Marquisettes in white and colored grounds; light blue, pink and helio. Also Embroidered Crepe Voiles, white ground embroidered with combination colors, such as helio and green, brown and blue, pink and green, blue and green. The most wanted materials at a good saving. At .... 19c yard

39c a Yard
50c and 59c Wash Goods
—Silk and Cotton, Crepe de Chine, in plain colors of green, gray, tan, brown, helio. Also Embroidered Voiles with white grounds in green, yellow, blue, pink, helio. Materials worth 50c and 59c yard. At .... 39c yard

25c a Yard
Voile in Studded Effects
—New wide Studded Voiles in white and ivory, white and light blue, white and pink, white and black. Very pretty combinations; lovely, soft, summer materials. A splendid value. At .... 25c yard

Wash Goods Short Lenghts
BARGAINS
Ends of the season's best sellers—voiles, ginghams, percales; staple and fancy wash goods in lengths for most anything you want good tub materials for—all to go for a whole lot less than if bought from the full piece.

Have Your New Wash Skirt Made to Your Order for $2.50
Just now you save on the goods and on the making—a double saving that amounts to a great deal when you stop to figure it out yourself. Deys Custom Manufacturing Department will do the tailoring and furnish the findings. Satisfaction assured.

Silk Gloves
In the New Summer Styles
Special display of "Niagara Maid" silk gloves, showing the improved styles in fine, smooth, durable silks. Particular attention is directed to the finished workmanship put into "Niagara Maid" silk gloves which assures you of longer service. Properly designed, with full length and nature shape fingers; snug, comfortable fit, correct in style—at prices that you can afford to pay.

Complete Lots "Niagara Maid" Silk Gloves
Two-clasp silk gloves, choice of black or white. At.........50c pair
Two-clasp silk gloves, in black and white, self and contrast embroidery. at ....1.00 pair
12-button length silk gloves, in black and white. At.........75c pair
16-button length silk gloves, in black and white. At.....1.00 and 1.50 pair 16-button white embroidered silk gloves, at..........2.00 pair

Binner Corsets
Are Very Comfortable to Wear with the New Summer Dresses
Binner Corsets are made of soft, secure and flexible materials; they mould to the figure the first time you put one on. Special corsetiere is now here to give you personal attention.
You get comfort and style combined when you wear a Binner corset. They are made by experts from designs that harmonize with the natural figure. The Binner is the common sense corset for slight, medium, or stout women, at 5.00 and up. —Third Floor.

Right Now Is the Time to Buy Baggage
Sample Bags and Suit Cases Marked Down
Get the best for less money and apply the savings to reduce your vacation expenses. A little trip through the well equipped baggage department will tell you better than we can how much you can save. Standard sizes; wear resisting leathers; firmly sewed together; high grade locks and latches; with and without fittings. You can reduce your baggage expense a third or more.
Trunks, trunks, trunks—little and big; steamer; wardrobe; short or long trip trunks. Nothing missing to make Deys trunk-service complete. —Third Floor

Get an Ansco Camera at Deys to Take Along Vacation Time—1.50 up.

Dey Brothers & Co.
SYRACUSE

D/34

GRATITUDE

The Fulton Evening Times expresses gratitude for the liberal support given its endeavors to launch in this city a daily newspaper. This expression of good will is extended to the people in every walk of life --- to those who were at first skeptical of the advisability of beginning the publication of this newspaper, and to those who believed that Fulton should have in addition to its weekly newspapers a daily that would place the town in the same category as other towns of the same size of Fulton.

NOT AN EXPERIMENT

The Fulton Evening Times is no longer in the experimental stage. Since December 17, 1914, it has issued more than 150 numbers, or approximately 375,000 copies, which represents in the neighborhood of 37,500 pounds of paper made at the big mill of the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Co. It will be seen by these figures and the fact that the payroll of Fulton Evening Times is expended with the merchants of the city, that here is an industry of no mean proportions---one that deserves the support of the people, and we are pleased to report, that this newspaper

IS GETTING SUPPORT

Because the citizenship of this city has the proper amount of civic pride to impel it to support a home institution. There are many reasons why our subscribers are numbered by the hundreds, chief of which is that The Evening Times is counted upon as the medium wherein local news is the leading feature, and wherein the people feel that they have a defender of their rights.

The Evening Times is Winning its Way, too Because it is

"A HERALD OF PROGRESS"

BIG MEN CALL ON WORLD POWERS TO ESTABLISH LEAGUE OF PEACE

Mr. Taft Writes Special Article Showing How War Can Be Made Virtually Impossible.

Ex-President, Who Will Preside at Coming Conference, Sets Forth Planks of Platform.

On the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, a conference will be held in Independence hall, Philadelphia, to consider proposals for a league of peace and decide upon steps to be taken to obtain the support of public opinion and of governments. Ex-President Taft will preside and the speakers will be of international eminence. Four articles will be presented as a basis for a tentative platform.

The conference is called by a national provisional committee of 113 members, which includes the names of former President Taft, former Secretary of War Dickinson, former Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, Oscar S. Straus and Judge George Gray, members of The Hague court; Theodore Marburg, former minister to Belgium; President Lowell of Harvard, President Hibben of Princeton, Cardinal Gibbons, Senator Williams of Mississippi, William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette; Andrew D. White, former ambassador to Germany; President Wheeler of the University of California, President Alderman of the University of Virginia, John Mitchell and three eminent international lawyers, Professor Woolsey of Yale, Professor Wilson of Harvard and Professor Moore of Columbia.

Writing in the Independent on the proposed plan for the enforcement of perpetual peace, ex-President Taft says:

"To constitute an effective League of Peace we do not need all the nations. Such an agreement between eight or nine of the great powers of Europe, Asia and America would furnish a useful restraint upon possible wars.

Others Would Follow.

"The successful establishment of a league between the great powers would draw into it very quickly the less powerful nations.

"What should be the fundamental plan of the league?

"It seems to me that it ought to contain four provisions. In the first place, it ought to provide for the formation of a court, which would be given jurisdiction by the consent of all the members of the league to consider and decide justiciable questions between them or any of them which have not yielded to negotiation according to the principles of international law and equity and that the court should be vested with power upon the application of any member of the league to decide the issue as to whether the question arising is justiciable.

"Second.—A commission of conciliation for the consideration and recommendation of a solution of all nonjusticiable questions that may arise between the members of the league should be created, and this commission should have power to hear evidence, investigate the causes of differences and mediate between the parties and then make its recommendation for a settlement.

"Third.—Conferences should be held from time to time to agree upon principles of international law not already established as their necessity shall suggest themselves. When the conclusions of the commission shall have been submitted to the various parties to the league for a reasonable time, say a year, without calling forth objection it shall be deemed that they acquiesce in the principles thus declared.

"Fourth.—The members of the league shall agree that if any member of the league shall begin war against any other member of the league without first having submitted the question if found justiciable to the arbitral court provided in the fundamental compact, or without having submitted the question if found nonjusticiable to the commission of conciliation for its examination, consideration and recommendation, then the remaining members of the league agree to join in the forcible defense of the member thus prematurely attacked.

Principle In His Treaties.

"First.—The first feature involves the principle of the general arbitration treaties with England and France, to which England and France agreed, and which I submitted to the senate, and which the senate rejected or so mutilated as to destroy their vital principle. I think it is of the utmost importance that it should be embraced in any effective league of peace. The successful operation of the supreme court as a tribunal between independent states in deciding justiciable questions not in the control of congress, or under the legislative regulation of either state, furnishes a precedent and justification for this that I hope I have made clear. Moreover, the inveterate practice of arbitration which has now grown to be an established custom for the disposition of controversial questions between Canada and the United States is another confirmation of the practical character of such a court.

"Second.—We must recognize, however, that the questions within the jurisdiction of such a court would certainly not include all the questions that might lead to war, and therefore we should provide some other instrumentality for helping the solution of those questions which are nonjusticiable. This might be a commission of conciliation, a commission to investigate the facts, to consider the arguments on both sides, to mediate between the parties, to see if some compromise cannot be effected and finally to formulate and recommend a settlement. This may involve time, but the delay, instead of being an objection, is really one of the valuable incidents providing for the performance of such a function by a commission. We have an example of such a commission of conciliation in the controversy between the United States and Great Britain over the seal fisheries. The case on its merits as a judicial question was decided against the United States, but the world importance of not destroying the Pribilof seal herd by pelagic sealing was recognized, and a compromise was formulated by the arbitral tribunal, which was ultimately embodied in a treaty between England, Russia, Japan and the United States. Similar recommendations were made by the court of arbitration which considered the issues arising between the United States and Great Britain in respect to the Newfoundland fisheries.

Would Have Conferences.

"Third.—Periodical conferences should be held between the members of the league for the declaration of principles of international law. This is really a provision for something in the nature of legislative action by the nations concerned in respect to international law. The principles of international law are based upon custom between nations established by actual practice, by their recognition in treaties and by the consensus of great law writers. Undoubtedly the function of an arbitral court established as proposed in the first of the above suggestions would lead to a good deal of valuable judge made international law. But that would not cover the whole field, and something in the nature of legislation on the subject would be a valuable supplement to existing international law. It would be one of the very admirable results of such a league of peace that the scope of international law could be enlarged in this way. Justice Holmes, in the case of Missouri versus Illinois, points out that the supreme court in passing on questions between the states and in laying down the principles of international law that ought to govern in controversies between them should not and cannot make itself a legislature. But in a league of peace there is no limit to the power of international conferences of the members in such a quasi-legislative course except the limit of the wise and the practical.

Benefit to America.

"Fourth.—The fourth suggestion is one that brings in the idea of force. In the league proposed all members are to agree that if any one member violates its obligation and begins war against any other member without submitting its cause for war to the arbitral court, if it is a justiciable question, or to the commission of conciliation if it is otherwise, all the members of the league should unite to defend the member attacked against a war waged in breach of plighted faith. It is to be observed that this does not involve the members of the league in an obligation to enforce the judgment of the court or the recommendation of the commission of conciliation. It only furnishes the instrumentality of force to prevent attack without submission. It is believed it is more practical than to attempt to enforce judgments after the hearing.

"One reason is that the failure to submit to one of the two tribunals the threatening cause of war for the consideration of one or the other is a fact easily ascertained and concerning which there can be no dispute, and it is a palpable violation of the obligation of the member. It is wiser not to attempt too much. The required submission and the delay incident thereto will in most cases lead to acquiescence in the judgment of the court or in the recommendation of the commission of conciliation. The threat of force against plainly unjust war, for that is what is involved in the provision, will have a most salutary deterrent effect. I am aware that membership in this league would involve on the part of the United States an obligation to take part in European and Asiatic wars, it may be, and that in this respect it would be a departure from the traditional policy of the United States in avoiding entangling alliances with European or Asiatic countries. But I conceive that the interest of the United States in the close relations it has of a business and social character with the other countries of the world, much closer now than ever before, would justify it if such a league could be formed, in running the risk that there might be of such a war in making more probable the securing of the inestimable boon of peace of the world that now seems so far away."

GIRL IS HAILED AS NEW JOAN OF ARC

Young Italian Peasant Beauty Leads Bersaglieri.

KING VICTOR DECORATES HER

Maria Abbriani Guides Soldiers Up Mountain on Tyrolean Frontier and After Days of Heroism Shares in Bayonet Charge, Which Results in Austrians Being Driven Back.

Maria Abbriani, a dark eyed Italian beauty from a mountain village along the Tyrolean frontier, is the "Joan of Arc" of the Austro-Italian war.

King Victor Emmanuel has awarded her a decoration for her bravery in leading a bersaglieri company in a bayonet attack on the Trentino village of Nori under heavy artillery fire.

With the decoration went a personal telegram of congratulation from the king at his headquarters at the battle front.

The war office at Rome at the same time made public an official dispatch detailing the girl's heroic acts.

Maria lived with her father, an aged Italian, in the Trentino village under Austrian rule. With other Italian residents, she ran out, says the dispatch, to welcome the king's troops when they entered Nori from the south.

Austrians batteries opened fire on the Italians at the outskirts of the village. Maria hurried to the Italian commander, begged permission to be allowed to carry a gun and show the way to reach where the Austrians were hidden.

Her request was granted and one of the soldiers gave her a plumed bersaglieri hat.

For eight hours she was in the thick of the fighting, piloting Italian troops through the streets of the village and up the mountain paths to flank attacks upon the Austrian trenches.

In the final attack, she actually led a squad of bersaglieri in a bayonet charge that swept the Austrians out of the village.

A full bersaglieri uniform was given to the girl as a souvenir of the victory and her bravery.

GREATEST WHEAT CROP EVER

Federal Report Indicates That Yield May Reach Billion Bushels.

The greatest wheat crop the country ever has known is in prospect for the coming harvest. The federal crop reporting board forecasts the crop at 950,000,000 bushels, which would exceed last year's record crop by 59,000,000 bushels. With continued good weather the crop may reach a billion bushels.

The bulk is winter wheat, planted last fall on the greatest acreage ever sown.

Oats planted last spring, also on the greatest area ever sown to that crop, exceeding last year's area by almost 2,000,000 acres, is forecasted at 1,288,000,000 bushels, which is more than last year or in 1913, but 130,000,000 bushels less than the record in 1912.

The barley crop, from present indications, will be second in point of size, with 197,000,000 bushels, which would be 26,000,000 bushels less than the 1912 record crop, but more than grown last year or in 1913.

TWO CROSSES FOR CANADIAN

Warneford, Who Wrecked Zeppelin, Gets Honor Legion as Well as V. C.

The young Canadian aviator, Sub-Lieutenant R. K. J. Warneford, who destroyed a German Zeppelin in a thrilling duel in the air near Ghent, is the first man to receive the highest honors for heroism at the hands of both the British and French.

King George V. bestowed on him the Victoria cross. On the recommendation of General Joffre, President Poincare has conferred on him the cross of the Legion of Honor.

For Memorial to Miss Barton.

A movement has been started by the Legion of Loyal Women for a memorial to the late Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American National Red Cross, to be erected in Washington.

Thirty-Six for 25 Cents

Dr. King's New Life Pills are now supplied in well-corked glass bottles, containing 36 sugar coated white pills for 25c. One pill with a glass of water before retiring is an average dose. Easy and pleasant to take. Effective and positive in results. Cheap and economical to use. Get a bottle today, take a dose tonight—your Constipation will be relieved in the morning. 36 for 25c., at all Druggists.

It is a mistaken notion, that The Evening Times job printing department is too busy to handle all classes of work. Just jot down the address, 66 E. 1st st., or telephone 45 for a representative.—Advt.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhœa. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A Charming Little Miss Who Posed to Aid a Charity.

COSTUME OF COLONIAL DAYS

With a Bevy of Her Playmates Phyllis Byrne Helped Raise a Fund For Wounded French Soldiers—Puzzles and Games For Little People.

A beautiful entertainment was held in New York recently, in which children were conspicuous. It was the Lafayette fete and had for its object the raising of funds to help the wounded soldiers of France. The entertainment was mostly tableaux, and the girls and boys who took part were dressed in costumes of the colonial period of our history. In those days the dress of both men and women was much more elaborate than the styles that now prevail. Men wore their hair long, and, like the ladies, they powdered it on dress occasions. Very quaint and pretty the little folks looked in their old time dress. The girl here pictured is Miss Phyllis Bryne. Doesn't she look sweet as a lady of the olden time? There were many more similarly dressed, and after the tableaux they danced the minuet and the Virginia reel. The little dancers made a charming picture, had a good time and at the same time did something to relieve suffering.

Photo by American Press Association.

MISS PHYLLIS BYRNE.

Missing Word Game.

A game that affords much amusement is played with a letter that has been written beforehand, with blank spaces left where the adjectives belong. The writer does not let the players know what he has written, but asks each for an adjective, placing the adjective so given in the blank spaces in regular order. When the spaces have all been filled the letter is read to the company, and it is amusing.

The game may be varied by leaving a number of blank spaces, and instead of asking for adjectives to fill them the writer may ask for any part of speech that the players may choose to give him. As no one knows about what the letter is written, a very incongruous epistle will be the result.

Transmutations.

Example.—When the letter A is slightly covered it has been of use. (A veiled—availed).

1. When X is large it is a model.
2. When D has suffered pecuniary punishment it is explained.
3. When the letter I is rented it is a small island.
4. When D satisfied its hunger it became a time.
5. When X hammered it was explained.
6. When J went fishing it disagreed.
7. When M imitated a dog it went on board a boat.

Answers: 1, X ample—example; 2, D fined—defined; 3, I let—islet; 4, D ate—date; 5, X pounded—expounded; 6, J angled—jangled; 7, M barked—embarked.

Riddle.

Beheaded I'm a planet, curtailed an organ of the body. Leave off my last four letters and I am a pronoun; leave off the last two and I listen; behead that and I am an organ of the body: leave off the first two and last letters and I become something to study. My whole is pleasant to gather around. What is it?

Answer.—Hearth.

Charade.

My first is a dog
Of no special breed;
His name you oft see
In papers you read.

My second is seen
In a ragged old dress,
But when in a nice garment
It causes distress.

My two form one word—
In all rivers 'tis found,
And in other swift waters,
But ne'er on dry ground.

Answer.—Cur, rent—current.

Do you know the real clean kind of Boston Brown Bread? Get Black's baking and you shall have the answer. adv

WOMEN'S WHIMSIES.

Beaded, brocaded and plain velvet or satin bags are the mode, made in reticule shapes, quite large and finished with a long tassel at the bottom or with ribbon drawn tops.

One wrinkle is to wear Egyptian designed amulets done in rhinestones set in flat settings of antique gold or silver or even of jet or ivory, appended to long chains made of the same jewels.

These accompany trailing, scarflike evening gowns made of gorgeously colored chiffons, brocaded crapes or satins of a particularly soft quality.

For those who possess lace scarfs, no matter what the shape or length, quality or type, the season's latest adventure reveals a liking for these frivolous neck or shoulder fixings for wear with the new gowns for dance and evening wear.

Even the fluffs of tulle or maline which have been used all season in clouds of frothy white or in sunset tints of gorgeous colorings have their ends weighted by single metallic threaded tassels or, with silk made roses in bouquet forms, each one concealing a silk covered weight to keep it in position.

ALL BUSY AS BEES

Pretty Social Functions Cluster Round the Shining Needle.

CARD PLAYING IS PASSE.

Simple Dresses of the Tub Variety Set Off by Dainty Lace Trimmed Muslin Aprons Are Proper Attire to Wear For These Sewing Bees.

Hand needlework of all sorts is so much admired nowadays that it is not surprising that women who go to the country for the hot weather and their less fortunate sisters who are compelled to spend most of the heated term in the city always have handy some bit of fine sewing for the rainy days and the hours spent on the great hotel piazzas or the little stooplike porches of the city. And more than one hostess bored with the usual round of country or city life, with its interminable card playing, has made the needle an excuse for very pretty little social functions.

Of all these functions the preference is for the porch bee, for it gives one an opportunity to look at the good sky at least in the city and, in the country, also at the changing leafage and all the rest of the rare and radiant outdoors. Then, though it is very pleasant to sew in a cool living room, and even though you know something good to eat is coming after awhile, you know very well that it won't taste half so good as if you had it out where the air could blow on you.

Indeed, judging the whole thing by experience, a porch sewing spree is about the next best thing to a picnic, and where one is carried off well the little function certainly helps to while away the monotonous moments that are bound to come with a long stay away from the things to which one is used.

First, there are the invitations. And why not make them as prettily unique as possible? One little card which was used last summer read, "U R invited to a sewing bee." but the "bee" was the buzzy thing's picture, drawn from life, in yellow and brown. Then came the information that one corner of the hotel piazza would be used on a certain afternoon and that there would be a bite and a "stinging" good time.

All the lettering on the card, which had been prepared by hand, was in brown and yellow, the bee colors, with the exception of a delicious little red rocking chair drawn in one corner, and so deftly was the little affair done that it really had almost the effect of high art.

The written or printed invitation, though, is entirely a matter of preference, and, of course, when the function occurs at a private house all the arrangements can be made much more attractive than at a hotel, where etiquette would not permit the workers to appropriate more than a small corner of the veranda.

The home bee should include every device for prettiness and comfort. Several small tables should be placed along the veranda, these holding big crockery bowls or pitchers filled with the country flowers of the season. The chairs should be low sewing ones or small armless rocking chairs, and there should be several flat cushions for those who want them, and the hammock should be securely swung and heaped with more cushions for the lounging moment somebody is bound to want.

Then every pair of scissors in the house should be put into commission, and there should be a work basket, with all the other sewing utensils needed, for some fair worker is bound to come without her needle or thread or bodkin. If by chance, too, some very improvident guest appears without her work let the hostess bring out the table napkins or frilling of her own that need to be hemmed.

In fact, it is quite possible on occasions for the hostess to provide all the sewing, for this more constitutes the real bee, and it is no unusual thing when opening up a country house to invite one's friends in to help get the small furnishings ready.

In the old days bed comforters were made this way in a single afternoon, down even to the quilting, while patchwork quilts grew like magic. Some sewing of a simple order a hostess might now provide would be the tearing up and sewing together of the cotton strips out of which are made the rag rugs which are so much in vogue now. Better still would be the doing of some charity sewing.

The dresses worn by the hostess and guests would be more in keeping if they were of a simple sort, say smart little wash gowns, set off by dainty aprons of muslin or cambric trimmed at the pockets with knots of ribbon. A pretty little apron for sewing can be made of a gaudy bandana handkerchief. One corner of this is torn off and sewed at the bottom for the big pocket which is so convenient to hold the working tools needed.

When the time comes to eat (for the successful bee must include this creature comfort) a large tray bearing the refreshments required may be brought out of the house and set on a convenient table, but a table already set and comprising part of the porch furnishings would be much prettier.

A round table gives a prettier effect than a square one. Place this in a corner of the veranda, which can be shielded from the gaze of the possible passerby with the latticed screens used on almost all country piazzas. If the table is in a fine wood it will need no cover, but there must be an embroidered or lace edged centerpiece.

LET HIM SEE AMERICA FIRST.

—Chapin in St. Louis Republic.

Rose Color Silk Evening Wrap

Designed by Maison Maurice, New York.

THE handsome evening wrap here illustrated falls loose from the shoulders and is cut on circular lines. It is made of handsome rose color satin with a rich cream white lining, and may be conveniently slipped over any summer evening gown.

• • •

The feminine veil dies hard. After years of abuse by the critics of clothes and equally long years of criticism by the doctors it survives as profusely as ever. Veils were never more in evidence than they are today.

A mere man, glancing at a woman's face, exclaims: "Poor woman! What a disfigurement of the face!" Then he sees that the blotch is in the mesh of a veil.

Spots, vilified by the oculists as extremely dangerous to the eyes, are as plentiful as ever. What is her sight as compared with the spectacle she presents to other eyes? And dotted veils do somehow contrive to enhance complexion illusions.

But if she is willing to sacrifice her eyes she is not willing to sacrifice her nose, and it is just for this reason that she has begun wearing the harem veil.

She wants to see, and a little rose tint from the sun does not hurt the eye region of her face. But a red nose is hard to manage with the best of powdering; hence the veil that begins where it will guard the lower face, including the nose, and leave the eyes free.

It isn't coquetry, say the women who wear them. It is practical guardianship against the ravages of the sun.

• • •

The liking of some women for much color in the hat and little or none in the costume—for instance, the wearing of a black gown with a poppy hat—may not be discouraged, for it is well known that you can advantageously wear a color above the face that you may not becomingly wear beneath it.

For instance, a red hat may be becoming to a woman who could not by any law of fitness or becomingness wear a red gown.

The hair is the peacemaker in this case.

The intervening and softening line of hair separates the trying shade from the face, acting as a mediator and blender, whereas there is no such medium to intervene between the gown and the face.

ANNA MAY.

THE CANOE GIRL.

A Costume to Wear When One Is Bathing or Paddling.

A USEFUL GARMENT.

Blue serge, that ever useful material, was used in the building of the pretty garment shown in this illustration. For bathing it will be ideal, and for paddling in the treacherous canoe no garment could be better. The frock is cut blouse and skirt, but the two garments are attached at the waist line.

Neuralgia Pains Stopped

You don't need to suffer those agonizing nerve pains in the face, head, arm, shoulders, chest and back. Just apply a few drops of soothing Sloan's Liniment; lie quietly a few minutes. You will get such relief and comfort! Life and the world will look brighter. Get a bottle today. 3 ounces for 25c., at all Druggists. Penetrates without rubbing.

FEMININE CHATTER.

Uses For Stale Bread Which Are Somewhat Novel.

Bread that is not very stale can be used to advantage in bread tarts. Cut the bread a quarter of an inch thick and stamp it into circles with a biscuit cutter. Moisten these circles with milk, but do not use enough milk to make them lose their shape. Then spread over them some sort of jam or preserve and place two circles together like a sandwich. Put them in a frying pan with a little butter, and saute them on both sides to a delicate color. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve very hot.

A fruit charlotte is another excellent dessert in which to utilize stale bread. Cut the bread into slices about a quarter of an inch thick, then into strips two inches wide. Butter a mold, dip the slices of bread with melted butter and arrange them around the bottom and sides of the mold, slightly overlapping. Fill the center with apple sauce seasoned with butter and sugar and put a teaspoonful of apricot jam in the center of this. Cover the top of the mold with strips of the bread and bake in a hot oven for thirty minutes. The bread should be amber in color when done. Serve with a hard sauce. Any stewed fruit may be used in making this dessert.

A Cheese Pudding.—Alternate layers of slightly stale bread and grated cheese, moistened with a custard made of one pint of milk, two beaten eggs and half a teaspoonful of salt constitute an excellent luncheon dish. Arrange the bread and cheese in a baking dish, pour the liquid over them, dot the top layer of bread with small pieces of butter and bake for about twenty minutes. A quarter of a teaspoonful of saleratus—that is, bicarbonate of soda, which may be bought at any chemist's—is said to be a valuable addition to cheese pudding, as it aids in digesting the cheese by making easier the solution of the casein.

The canape is a luncheon dish made chiefly of leftover bread.

Cut bread into slices half an inch thick, stamp into circles with a biscuit cutter or trim into triangles or strips. Saute these in a little butter, sprinkle them with grated cheese, a little salt and a dash of cayenne. Spread them on a tin plate, and about fifteen minutes before serving set them in the oven to soften the cheese. Potted meat and sardines often are used to make the canape.

Bread pudding sounds exceedingly commonplace, but here is a recipe for a glorified bread pudding that is a veritable confection and is not very difficult to make.

Two cupfuls of milk, yolks of two eggs, one cupful of broken bread, white of one egg, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of vanilla and one saltspoonful of salt. Soak the bread in the milk until softened; then beat it until smooth and add the other ingredients except the white of egg.

Turn into a pudding dish, place in a pan of hot water, bake in a slow oven for fifteen to twenty minutes. Cover the top with a layer of jam and spread over that the whipped white of an egg. Dust with powdered sugar and set it in the oven for a moment to brown. Serve the pudding either hot or cold with cream.

Had New Yorkers anything to say about Huerta becoming their adopted fellow citizen?

In circus time even boy scouts cannot be expected to note the war dogs.

Lemburg in Hands of Teuton Allies; Disorderly Exit

Five Big Armies Cut Short Desperate Rear Guard Actions to Protect Flight of Czar's Men

Petrograd, June 23.—Lemburg has been at last returned into hands of the Austro-German forces. The rear guard of the Russian forces desperately defended the Goodek position, an when that fell the Galician capital had to fall.

The Russians sought in every way to delay the five armies of Mackensen, Linsingen, Woyrach, Boehm and Pflanzer from advancing.

Though field works, with all the usual artificial obstacles, were recently constructed, the west side of the Lemberg positions was not naturally a very strong one. Insofar as sentimental considerations play any part in the Russian plans, they were against subjecting the ancient and picturesque capital of the province to bombardment by German artillery.

It has been no secret here that comprehensive measure for the evacuation of Lemberg were inaugurated some weeks ago.

The precise position of the armies is not clear, owing to contradictory versions. One Berlin report places the scene of this battle west, another to east of Zolkiew. Both versions agree the Russians had to retire. Fighting is also going on west of Lemberg, and especially on the river line to the south.

Here, having been continually pounded by heavy artillery, the Russians would have had no opportunity of executing sweeping manoeuvres, answering the Austro-German aggressive with counter-attacks with bayonets and hand grenades.

At the same time the Grodek position is considered to have done its work. It held up the Austro-German advance several days, cost them enormous losses and compelled them temporarily to weaken their blow in the direction of Rawa Ruska and Russian frontier.

The transformation hich has taken place on this front in the past few weeks has been due, not merely to superiority of the German heavy artillery, but also to the tehir effectively outnumbering the Russians in the actual thetre of operations.

A semi-official estimate put the total numbers of Austro-German soldiers now operating against Russia at close to 4,000,000. Of these about 2,500,000 are concentrated on a front of 100 miles between the lower Tanew and Mikolaeff and between 400,000 and 450,000 on the Dniester.

The deficiencies from hich the Russian armies are suffering and which explain their recent reverses are in the procss of rmoval, but som time may yet elapse before they are in position to assume the aggressive on a comprehensive scale.

JUDGMENTS TOTALLING $203.40 SECURED

Several cases were disposed of in the City Court this morning, one inebriate getting a scathing lecture by City Judge Wilson. Fred H. Schneider was given judgment against the Fulton Play House Co., Inc., which controls the Happy Hour theatre. Mr. Schneider's action was to recover the amount due on some merchandise, and on two film service accounts. The defendant did not appear. The amount of the judgment was $124.96. A. T. Jennings appeared for the plaintiff.

Ernest J. Bailey obtained judgment against William A. Jetts, in the amount of $35.97. The case of Marie A. Bougie against Ray Brown was settled out of court.

James Kenyon sued A. D. Schoolcraft to recover the cost of one cocker spaniel, valued at $50. Mr. Schoolcraft entered a general denial. The case was postponed by mutual consent until July 9.

John and Ovid Perchway, comprising the Fulton Auto Top Co., obtained judgment against Elmer White to the extent of $42.47. H. L. Gilman represented the plaintiffs.

Finish the evening meal by eating Cookies made amidst sanitary surroundings. The Black bakings are as "good as mother's."—adv.

BULLET KILLS BAD FIVE-TON ELEPHANT

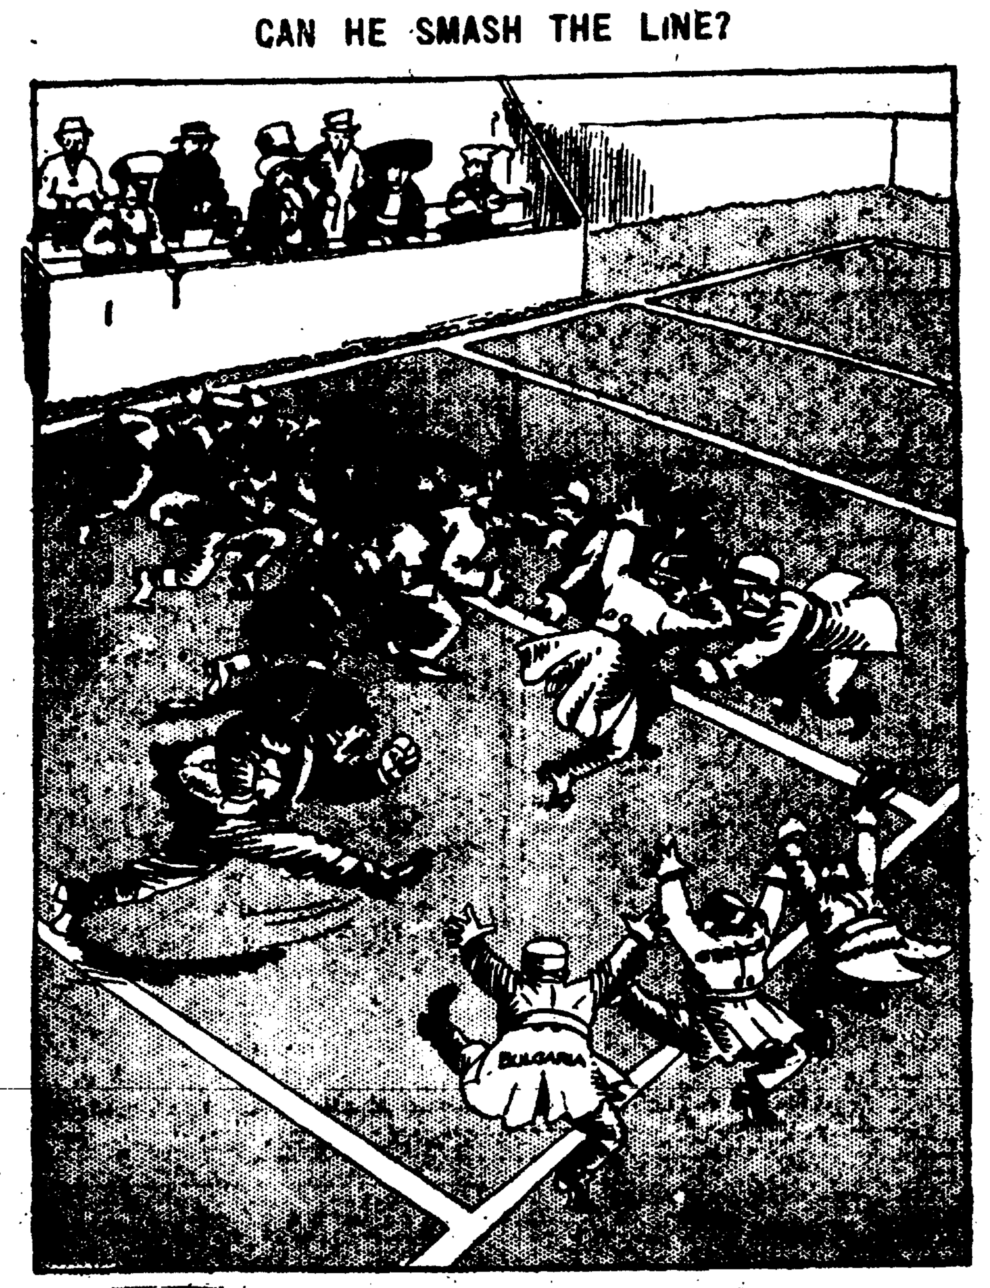
New York.—Gunda, five tone of bad bull elephant, was put to death at the Bronx Park zoo yesterday. Carl E. Akeley, big game expert, was executioner. He shot Gunda through the brain, with a bullet less than an inch long and weighing less than an ounce. Director Hornaday said it was the neatest piece of elephant killing on record.

Gunda's death was instant and painless. Mr. Akeley came into Gunda's concrete cell with a light sporting rifle. The great animal was securely chained. One shot, which entered Gunda's head at the only vulnerable point, midway between his eye and ear, sent him to the happy hunting ground without so much as a quiver of the trunk or a twitch of the tail.

THE QUIRK TODAY

Doubtless you have heard of the great Montgomery & Stone, who made such a big hit in all the large theatres in their splendid vehicle, "The Wizard of Oz," a wonderful musical extravaganze? All of this is to be seen in movies at The Quirk todaq. Don't miss the Tin Woodman and the Scare Crow." They are in it, also many other wonderful creations. Pathe also has one for your approval. Tomorrow the big day, with "Who Pays," Romance of Elaine and Pathe Weekly.

CAN HE SMASH THE LINE?



—Cash in Chicago Herald.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS STANDING OF TEAMS

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Brooklyn at Boston.
Philadelphia at New York.
Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.
St. Louis at Chicago.

Results Yesterday

Philadelphia, 1; New York, 1; called
Boston, 3; Brooklyn, 2.
Pittsburgh, 3; Cincinnati, 1.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	30	21	.588
St. Louis	32	26	.552
Philadelphia	28	24	.538
Pittsburgh	27	25	.519
Boston	25	28	.472
New York	21	26	.447
Brooklyn	24	30	.444
Cincinnati	21	28	.429

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Games Today

Boston at Washington.
New York at Philadelphia.
Chicago at Cleveland.
St. Louis at Detroit.

Results Yesterday

Chicago, 9; Cleveland, 6.
New York-Philadelphia; rain.
Washington, 7; Boston, 4.
St. Louis, 13; Detroit, 9.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Chicago	38	20	.655
Boston	29	20	.592
Detroit	34	25	.576
Washington	26	25	.510
New York	27	26	.509
St. Louis	23	34	.404
Cleveland	21	33	.389
Philadelphia	21	34	.382

STATE LEAGUE

Games Today

Albany at Syracuse; two games.
Troy at Utica.
Elmira at Scranton.
Binghamton at Wilkesbarre.

Results Yesterday

All games postponed; rain.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Utica	25	14	.641
Elmira	25	17	.595
Binghamton	22	17	.564
Troy	20	18	.526
Wilkesbarre	19	22	.463
Scranton	18	21	.462
Syracuse	15	25	.375
Albany	15	25	.375

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

At Indanapolis—	R.	H.	E.
Cleveland	4	7	0
Indianapolis	5	8	4
At Louisville—	R.	H.	E.
Columbus	0	5	3
Louisville	13	21	0
At Milwaukee—	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	0	3	1
Milwaukee	2	5	2
At Kansas City—	R.	H.	E.
St. Paul	4	11	1
Kansas City	5	10	2

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Games Today

Buffalo at Rochester.
Montreal at Toronto.
Richmond at Providence.

Results Yesterday

Buffalo-Rochester; rain
Jersey City-Newark; rain.
Montreal, 6; Toronto, 2.
Providence, 7; Richmond, 3; 1st.
Providence, 5; Richmond, 1; 2d.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Providence	29	18	.617
Buffalo	24	17	.585
Montreal	27	22	.501
Rochester	23	23	.500
Richmond	23	25	.479
Newark	21	23	.477
Toronto	23	26	.469
Jersey City	16	32	.333

For Tired Feet—Feather-weight Arch Supports, at Roy's Quick Shoe Repair Shop, 110 Cayuga St.—adv.

BUILDING OUR BIG CANAL

The Human Problem Overshadowed the Engineering Difficulties.

The general impression prevailed from the beginning that the building of the Panama canal comprised one of the world's greatest engineering feats, and the tremendous scope of the work as it developed during the construction period served to mold this impression into a fixed belief, yet Mr. Stevens, who for nearly two years had control on the isthmus not only of all construction, but of those various co-ordinate branches which were essential adjuncts to the building of the canal, expressed the opinion that the engineering features were the least difficult, describing them as "of magnitude and not of intricacy." On the other hand, his experience convinced him that the administrative problems were the greater, presenting as they did many unusual features involving an immense amount of detail and extending into every branch of business, with ramifications touching many phases of social and domestic economy.

In every undertaking of an engineering character there must necessarily be a greater or less amount of administrative detail resulting from problems of supply, labor, policy and considerations arising out of them. In the case of the Panama canal not only were these problems present, but as compared with those of engineering they made the latter appear relatively small.

The very magnitude of the work imposed difficulties which would have existed even had it been undertaken in any portion of the United States, but these difficulties were increased materially by reason of having to carry on the work in a tropical country sparsely populated, nonproductive, affording no skilled and very little efficient common labor, with customs and modes of living as different as the civilizations of North and Central America have been since the settlement of these portions of the western hemisphere, with a heavy rainfall during the greater portion of the year and with a reputation for unhealthfulness which placed Panama in the category of one of the worst pest holes of the earth.—General George W. Goethals in Scribner's.

Telegraphing With Cannons.

When the first vessel completed the passage of the then new Erie canal in 1825, there being no such thing as a telegraph in those days, the news was communicated to New York and to Buffalo by cannons placed within hearing of each other all the way along from Albany to each of the other cities. The signal was passed along in this way from Albany to New York city and back again to Albany in fifty-eight minutes. The experiment was a costly one, but was a success in every particular.

Horrible Death.

Death by prevention of sleep is, or at least used to be, a legal form of punishment in China.

Have You Seen

THE LATEST STYLES of SOLID SILVERWARE

G. B. FARLEY
21 First Street

Can show you a full line. Just the kind for

WEDDING GIFTS

FEDERAL LEAGUE

Games Today

St. Louis at Brooklyn.
Chicago at Baltimore.
Pittsburgh at Newark.
Kansas City at Buffalo.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Kansas City	37	22	.627
St. Louis	33	21	.611
Pittsburgh	31	28	.525
Chicago	29	27	.518
Newark	30	28	.517
Brooklyn	28	30	.483
Baltimore	21	34	.382
Buffalo	21	40	.344

For harness galls and sore shoulders use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh.

Pure Creamery Butter
From The Harbor Farms
Made for those who want the best.
LaPORTE'S GROCERY
Oneida Street Hello 75

BUSINESS CARDS.

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices—consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y.

HOW A CHECK SAVED OVERPAYMENT

Because he paid by check, a man was saved from paying a bill the second time. Upon producing the endorsed check as a voucher, no further questions were asked.

Your checking account is invited.

HERE IT IS

Just what you have been looking for. A Trailer that will attach in an instant to any make of Automobile.

Indispensable to the man who has anything to haul. Capacity 1200 to 4000 pounds. EASY RUNNING, ROLLER BALL and BOX BEARING. SOLID RUBBER TIRES.

We can give you any kind of trailer you require, either two or four wheels. Let us send you catalog, etc.

We have a SPLENDID PROPOSITION for a LIVE DEALER in this and other counties.

ARE YOU INTERESTED? BETTER HURRY, WRITE US TO-DAY

ERIE TRAILER MFG. CO.
ERIE, PA.

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 160 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | FRIDAY, JUNE 25, 1915 | Price One Cent

High School Students Decide to Repeat Their Play, "The Fortune Hunter," Tuesday Night

TEUTONIC ALLIES IN DRIVE HEADED FOR WARSAW, SAYS BERLIN

London, June 25.—With the fires set by the retreating Russians still burning, the Austro-Germans are now firmly established at Lemberg and are continuing the offensive.

The battle of the Dniester, south of the city, has been renewed with increased intensity following the capture of Lemberg. According to Berlin advices, General Linsingen has thrown his forces across the river, which foreshadowws another stinging Russian defeat. The Czar's army is stubbornly resisting the advance, but is slowly being puhed bark.

With Galicia all but cleared of Russians it is realized here that the weight of the Austro-German forces must soon be felt elswhere. A dispatch from Amersterdam states that preparations have been made for another attempt to capture Warsaw. According to the report, German troops from Galicia have already been transferred to the Bzura front, west of Warsaw.

A terrific drive in Poland, similar to that in Galicia, is believed to be the present plan of the Teutonic allies, with a determination to batter down the Russian opposition to the greatest extent possible before turning more attention to the western theatre.

There are rumors, however, in opposition to this theory, that the victorious troops at Lemberg are already journeying westward, and that Germany plans to start a fresh campaign along the Belgian coast.

Reports from Vienna state that the Russians have been routed all along the Dniester, and are in full retreat. The towns of Mikolalow and Zydaszow on the upper Dniester have been captured by the German and Austrian forces.

On the north bank of the Dniester, between the Vistula and the San, the Russians are also in retreat. North of the Vistula, their rear guards were driven beyond the Kamienka river.

The only point where the defeated Russians are making any worthy resistance, according to the Vienna reports, is east and north-east of Lemberg, where severe fighting is still in progress with the rearguards of the retreating army.

While Petrograd continues to depreciate the military importance of the latest achievement of the Teutonic allies, professing confidence that it will have no important bearing on the ultimate outcome of the war, Lemberg is celebrating the return of the Austrians and Vienna has not yet ceased her revelry.

A great demonstration took place today in Vienna in the presence of Emperor Franz Josef, in front of Schoenbrunn Palace, according to reports received here.

SIDNEY AND JOHN CLARK IN CUSTODY OF POLICE OF ONONDAGA COUNTY

Sidney and John Clark, who are well known to Chief Dyer and the city police department as well as the authorities in villages, towns and cities in surrounding counties, were run down yesterday at their home in Pennelville by a Fayetteville officer who wanted the brothers for committing a robbery at that place whereby they profited to the extend of nearly $300. The prisoners were taken to Fayetteville.

The reputation of the Smith brothers in this immediate vicinity has been won by their fondness for the occupants of chicken houses and roosts, but the latest interesting movement of the men was the "job" quite recently performed at the home of Henry Howard whose farm is at Mt. Pleasant. During the absence of the Howard family at church services persons at that time unknown entered the home, helping themselves to a good chicken dinner, a little cash and a pretty good clothing outfit.

A country-wide search was made to apprehend the thieves, but until yesterday the Smith brothers could not be found, they having successfully eluded the officials.

While it is said that Sidney and John Smith have served sentences in Auburn prison, Chief Dyer denies any knowledge of the brothers having served time in any State prison.

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 11

Because Your Money Is Made in Fulton and You Should Spend Your Money in Fulton

A man in a desert could make no money. He might live, but it would be no object to him to "get ahead in the world." Robinson Crusoe on his desert island spurned the gold he found in the wreck—it would have been foolish for him to grow more corn than he could use—he had no incentive to do more than provide for himself and his bodily wants. In the world today, however, we have every incentive to make money. It means more food, a better home, books, pleasures, clothes, travel. It means we will be respected and looked up to. It brings all those things to Fulton—you should spend it in Fulton. From the purely selfish reason of self interest, your money spent in this city will mean more general prosperity in the city, and we all of us share in the prosperity of our home community. Buy in Fulton with the money you make in Fulton.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

VAN WAGENEN STOCK SOLD

Van Wagenen Estate Relinquishes Controlling Interest in Big Business

The most important local business transaction in some time was completed yesterday when the final papers in the transfer of the controlling interest in the VanWagenen Corporation of this city to Rufus J. Huff were filed. Mr. Huff declined to name the consideration this morning but he has purchased more than half of the 400 shares of the corporation, the par value of which is $40,000. It is definitely known that the consideration was more than $20,000. Giles S. Piper handled the transfer for the VanWagenen estate.

Mr. Huff has been negotiating for the purchase of the controlling interest since April 28, and the deal was to have been closed some time ago, but owing to the illness of Robert L. McCully, the secretary of the corporation, it was postponed until yesterday. Mr. Huff will be actively identified with the business and will assume control tomorrow morning.

The company is engaged in the sale of automobiles, farm implements, seeds, paints and general hardware, as well as carriages and farm wagons. The company also operates a garage and repaired shop as well as several taxicabs.

Since the death of F. D. VanWagenen no president has been elected by the present directors. Mr. McCully and Frederick Hodges, the vice-president of the corporation have superintended the operration of the business. Mrs. Ray Briggs, the other member of the directorate, has also been actively identified with the business.

Mr. Huff, the purchaser, has always lived in this city, and resides at present at 319 Cayuga st. For many years he was an expert gun-maker with the Hunter Arms Company. He stated this morning that no changes in thep ersonel of the working force mere contemplated, and so far as he knew at present, there would be no change in the business line or policy of the company.

The VanWagenen Corporation is one of the oldest business firms in the city. Until the present transaction the controlling interest has always been vested in the VanWagenen family. The company was the pioneer in the sale of farm machinery and automobiles in this section of the state.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ASKS FOR LARGE HARBOR

The Fulton Chamber of Commerce has written a strong letter to Major Fradier, chief of the United States Engineering Corps at Buffalo, urging the enlargement of the Oswego harbor. The letter has been written in answer to a general request from the engineering department for sentiment regarding the proposed improvement. At a meeting recently held in Oswego, the Oswego Chamber of Commerce came out in favor of the improvement and plans for an organized campaign for the project were laid. Other towns along the Oswego canal have been asked to report favorably for the enlargement of the harbor.

The local Chamber of Commerce in its letter called attention to the number of imports received through the canal from Canada and the Great Lakes, especially pulp-wood which is used in large quantities by the paper mills here. The local body favors the enlargement of the harbor so that the pulp-wood shipments can be handled more speedily than at present.

WEATHER FORECAST

Party cloudy tonight and Saturrday; warmer Saturday; light variable winds.

WANTED

TWO BOYS

who have some "pep" and are willing to show something.

GOOD PAY

Apply

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

Circulation Dept.

CANAL CONFERENCE FAVORS COMPLETION OF STATE'S BIG DITCH

Wayne D. Heydecker, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce has just returned from New York where he attended a Canal Referendum Conference called by the New York State Waterways Association and other interested organizations. There were representatives present from: The New York Produce Exchange; the Merchants Association; the Maritime Association of the Board of New York; the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce; the Rochester Chamber of Commerce; Harlem Board of Commerce; the Utica Chamber of Commerce; Long Island Waterways Association of New York; the Board of Trade and Transportation; the Bronx Board of Trade; the Oswego Chamber of Commerce; the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce; Jamaica Bay Improvement Association; the Borough of Queens Chamber of Commerce; New York State Clothiers Association; New York's department of Docks and Ferries and the Chamber of Commerce of State of New York.

The purpose of the conference was to devise ways and means of laying before the people of the State this fall the facts that make necessary the additional use of $27,000,000 worth of bonds in order to complete the canal. It was pointed out and emphasized at the conference that the $101,000,000 authorized in 1904 and 1905 had been expended and that due to the increased cost of labor and materials the amount appropriated then had proven to be insufficient.

The State is in the position of a man who having a limited sum of money for building his house builds it without waste, but finds when he is through he lacks a roof. It is then best for him to borrow enough to put on the roof and make the house habitable. The conference felt that it was good business for the State to borrow enough money to complete the canal system and make the $101,000,00 which has already been invested in it useful instead of having that sum lie idle.

A state committee was formed for the purpose of undertaking an educational campaign among the voters of the state as to the pressing necessity for this additional bond issue.

The committee was given power to add to its numbers and solicit funds. It is very likely that within a short time the Chamber of Commerce throughout the state will receive the first broad-side from the state committee.

BARRYMORE'S CHARACTER TO BE AGAIN PORTRAYED BY CARNER NEXT WEEK

It was announced this morning that the Class of 1915 of Fulton High school will repeat the play, "The Fortune Hunter," which was given with such success on class night, at the Quirk Theatre Tuesday evening of next week. The class has been influenced in its decision by the many requests received from those who were unable to see the play last week owing to difficulty in procuring tickets.

At the performance next Tuesday popular prices will prevail and the cast and other features of the production will be the same as at the first performance. Having given the play once in public the members of the cast should surpass their previous efforts, and it is cetrain that many of those who attended the play on class night will see it again Tuesday. The play was perhaps the most successful ever produced by any graduating class of Fulton High school and with the advantage of two more rehearsals, which will be held Monday and Tuesday, great improvement should be shown.

The leading role, that of Nat Duncan, the young fortune hunter, will be played by Leland Carner, whose portrayal of the young New Yorker occasioned much favorable comment at the first performance. Miss Florence Moody will play opposite Mr. Carner, in the role of Betty Graham, and the cast will include such talented amateurs as Eryma Paige, Rose Walsh, Marshall Penfield, Harold Caffrey, Harold Gillespie, Matthew Frawley, Earl Hopkins, Andrew Sharp, Ramon Lewis, Bernard S. Reswick, Edward Sullivan, Howard Shaff, Harold Scholtz and Harry Lynch.

The high school orchestra will furnish the music and the proceeds of the affair will go into the class fund.

D/34

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 1, No. 159 | Established, Dec. 17, 1914. | THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1915 | Price One Cent

ACHIEVING MANHOOD SUBJECT OF DR. KING'S ADDRESS TO GRADS

The Speaker Deplored Taking Pupils From School at Early Age, Advising Parents to Deprive Themselves of Necessities to Keep Children in School; Contentment Advised

"The main road to success is the unpopular highway of hard work," said Rufus Everson King in his address at the Commencement exercises of Fulton High school last evening, and with one of the most masterly and forceful speeches ever delivered before a local audience, Mrs. King held the undivided attention of the large throng of friends and relatives of the graduating class which filled the First Baptist church.

Mr. King's reputation as an interesting and instructive speaker is a well deserved one, if the opinion of last night's audience is any criterion. The commencement address is a new feature in the local school and it proved a most entertaining one.

The title of Mr. King's address was "Laurel Wreath and Palm," and he spoke comprehensively of the various pathways to success and of the elements that work toward success.

Mr. King said in part:

"Success is the instinctive goal of virile manhood. How to achieve it is the subject of the evening. This subject is an old one—you have heard it recited again and again, and I feel that you know so much about it and I know so little that I really should ask your forgiveness for repeating it again. But it is a most important subject, and so far yet unlearned.

"It is said there are fifty-seven elements of success, and that each begins with the letter "P." Patience, Perseverance, and so forth—but the main road to success is the unpopular highway of hard work.

"Isn't it a peculiar fact that you never have heard of a case of notable success where success was merited? Wasn't it always pull, or family, or luck, or something like that? That is the sophistory of today—the talks of the streets.

"Yes, the world still will not believe that hard work is the fundamental element of success. The world says it's luck—pull or family—they say, 'He didn't deserve it—it just happende.' But it was none of these—it was hard work. Perseverance is futile, education is futuile—unless there is present the hard work.

"How appropriate to Fulton, or to any city in the United States, is the sayying of the philosopher who died 400 years ago. He said, 'There is a man in the next village who has amassed a fortune of 50 pounds—another who has sixty pounds—and it is hard to believe—but it is rumored that there is one man who has 70 pounds. One found his money, and another gathered his by the marrying and burying of many wives—but it is impossible for any man to collect that amount of money by work.'

"Each one of us has that golden dream of wealth—we all hope for the day when riches will be ours.

"Why work? Isn't something goinb to happen'? Many of us cherish this belief.

"Mr. Wanamaker says work is the highest element in success and luck is the lowest. You will find that hard work in most cases amounts simply to a refusal to work. There are young men in this city who will not work, they work harder trying to keep from working that if they were engaged in honest labor—they go along and drift further and further down stream. Work is the one thing they refuse to do.

Mr. King spoke of Thomas Edison's achievements, and of his long hours of work. Edison started life as a newsboy, and now they call him "The Wizard." He works sixteen hours a day.

"You have heard of the conversation Andrew Carnegie had with the thirty young millionaires. Isn't that a beautiful word—'Millionaire', Excuse me a moment while I am say it a over a few times to myself. Thirty young millionaires—people said there were all sorts of reasons for their wealth but none of them deserved it—they just happened to get it."

Then, citing the case of Charles M. Schwab as an example, Mr. King showed how it was work and hard work alone that brought Schwab from employment at 46c a day, to employment at $1 a day, and up the ladder until now, as one of the chiefs of the United States Steel Corporation, his fortune runs into millions.

"Don't waste your time looking for that job with lots of money and no work to do—those jobs are all taken.

"But the hard working man must have trained brains, and here we come to the subject of education. Many men belittle the advantages of a college education."

Here Mr. King told of the result of an exhaustive study of the achievements of college men as compared with those who did not go to college and showed that only one man out of every 250 college

(Continued on Page Four)

BUY IN FULTON

REASON NUMBER 10

Because You Want to See Fulton Grow

The growth of Fulton is of vital importance to everyone in Fulton. If you are a banker you want to see Fulton grow that her banking resources and her bank deposits may grow. If you are a manufacturer you want to see Fulton grow that her labor supply may be more abundant. If you are a merchant, you want to see Fulton grow, since every person added to our population means possible customer in your store. If you are a lawyer, a doctor, a clergyman you are surely interested in the widening of the field of your professional efforts. If you are one who works for another, in the store, the industrial plant, or the open air, the growth of Fulton means for your greater opportunity both for employment and advancement. Yes, we are—every single one of us—vitally interested in the growth of our city. "Buy in Fulton" stimulates growth. Each one of us can do our part.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

WILLIAM MILLER BELIEVED BY AUTHORITIES TO KNOW ABOUT THE BOLI MURDER

After several unsuccessful attempts to run down the slayers of the Boli brothers, who were murdered in their home at Ingalls Crossing in 1908, District Attorney Culkin of Oswego has found a clue which may lead to the arrest of the murderers. The incoherent and rambling talk of William Miller, an old farmer, aged 80 years, bedridden and parralytic, may furnish the police and the District Attorney with the information which many have sought for fruitlessly for the past seven years. Miller is at present confined to his bed at the home of Daniel York of Granby, where Miller's daughter, Mrs. Middleton, is employed as a housekeeper.

For the past few years Miller has talked continually of the Boli brothers and of their murder, and neighbors finally were convinced that he knew something about the crime. Chief Dyer heard rumors of the conversation of the old man and, after definitely ascertaining that Miller had lived near the scene of the crime at the time it was committed, he notified District Attorney Culkin of Oswego and together the men visited the old man yesterday.

Miller refused to talk to the officers regarding the affair or his acquaintance with the murdered men, and simply said, "I don't know anything," to all questions put to him by the investigators. Immediately Chief Dyer and District Attorney Culkin left the room, however, his daughter asked the old man, "Did you tell them anything, father?" and the old man replied emphatically, "No, I did not," according to Chief Dyer this morning. The Chief is inclined to believe that the old man knows a great deal about the murder, for his tone of voice in replying to his daughter's question indicated self-satisfaction.

It is reported that District Attorney Culkin suspects Miller of the actual crime, but it is unlikely that the man could be convicted even if he were arrested, which action, in view of his age and illness, and possessed a hoard of gold which they had concealed about their still retains a great deal of physical vigor in spite of the fact that he is 80 years old. He is a tall, stalwart man of splendid physique, but his frame has been wasted by illness until he is now nothing but a shadow of his former self.

Seven years ago Miller was living at Ingalls Crossing with his son-in-law, Frank Corby. The Boli brothers lived near the Corby home, and were very retiring, living the life of hermits and speaking to few people. It was rumored that they were immensely wealthy and possessed a hoard of gold hich they had concealed about their house. On the morning of October 10, 1908, a man named Morgan pushed open a door of the Boli home which was ajar and almost stumbled over the bodies of the two men, terribly mutilated and showing signs of attack by rats. The men had been dead some time and the probable time of their murder was Saturday night, October 8. Both men had been shot, but not fatally, and physicians decided that the axe had killed them. Their heads had been hacked with the axe, which belonged to them and which still lay on the floor. Sheriff Hilton immediately started an investigation which resulted in the arrest of a Mrs. Clemons, and two men named Alt and Beals. The trio were taken to Oswego and detained for some time but eventually proved their innocence to the satisfaction of the District Attorney. A reward of $500 was offered for the arrest of the slayers and for several months thereafter many suspects were arrested, but all proved to be innocent of the crime.

Miller, the aged suspect who is now under surveillance, was known to be in that vicinity at the time of the crime, and had a reputation for fearlessness and quarrelsomeness in that section. It is said he has been arrested before for minor offenses. He usually worked as a farm hand, but wandered about a great deal and never settled in any one spot for very long, living a sort of gypsy existence.

Even if Miller were to recover, which is not probable according to physicians who have examined him, from a legal standpoint it would be almost impossible to fasten the crime upon him, as his age and incompetence would work in his favor before a jury, and many are strong in the belief that he knows nothing about the crime, but having been near the scene and knowing the dead men, the terrible tragedy has worked upon his mind until he is unbalanced on the subject.

According to Chief Dyer, no action will be taken by the District Attorney at present. If Miller can be persuaded to talk when death draws nearer, the police hope to have him reveal the names of any persons, who, to his knowledge, may have been connected with the crime, but any immediate arrests have neither been planned nor are expected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION ACTIVE IN BEHALF OF CONVENTION

State and National Officers to Come---Monster Parade Planned to Be Participated in By Nearly 1000 Women, Thus Providing Entertainment on the National Holiday

The monster convention of the Young Peoples Branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union which will be held in this city on July 2-7 should leave no lack of activitites over the Fourth.

The convention will be the sixth annual gathering of the State organization, and will bring to this city many persons of prominence in temperance work, both in the state and nation. The sessions of the convention will be held in the First Methodist church. Good music and a mammoth parade are scheduled on the program. Mrs. William Sylvester, the active and energetic president of the local organization, with the two hundred members, are leaving nothing undone to give the delegates a royal reception. More than six hundred delegates will represent the various sections of the state. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, the president of the state and national organizations, will be present. Mrs. Boole has lectured in this city and will be heard again with interest by many even though not interested directly in the temperance issue.

The convention will open on Friday evening at 8 o'clock at the First Methodist church. Mrs. Maude B. Perkins will preside and an orchestra will provide the music. Mrs. Charles Kelley, Oswego County Y. P. B. Secretary, will offer prayer and Daniel Poling, chairman of the Christian Citizenship Committee, National Christian Endeavor Union, will give an address. Following the program an informal reception will be given the delegates and visitors. Mrs. Edna Moore is in charge of arrangements.

Monday afternoon, July 5th, at 3 o'clock the grand parade will be held. Mrs. M. L. Barstow, of Ithaca, will act as grand marshal. A mass meeting will be held following the parade, and Monday at 7:30 o'clock the "Demonstration Night" program will be given as follows:

Orchestra and Song Service; Prayer—Miss Minnie Wilson, Portville, N. Y.; "Wind the Ribbon 'Round the Nations"—Broome County delegation; "Aunt Columbia's Wash Day"—Yates County delegation; "National Funds"—Mrs. Fannie Danser, Promoter of National Y. P. B. Funds; "Anti-Narcotics"—Tompkins County delegation; Mrs. Walter Hanford, chairman; "Franchise Leaders". Mrs. E. T. DeSilva, Eastwood, and Dr. H. M. Doane, Fulton; Offering—Milton Scripture, Kenwood, N. Y.; Announcements.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorportated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

Thursday, June 24, 1915

45–PHONE NEWS ITEMS–45

In former times when war was the chief business of mankind it used to be said that silver was the one essential sinew to keep the thing going. It sometimes looks in Europe as though things most wanted, such as guns and shells and bullets, could not be had for money. However, in the long run "you can't beat money." That makes it interesting to know the national wealth of the countries involved or possibly to be involved in the world war. Estimates of the wealth of the principal nations, as gathered from the latest sources available at the present time, are as follows: United States, $187,000,000,000; Great Britain and Ireland, $85,000,000,000; Germany, $80,000,000,000; France, $65,000,000,000; Russia, $40,000,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $25,000,000,000; Italy, $20,000,000,000; Belgium, $9,000,000,000. These figures of national wealth are based upon the true valuation of real and personal property.

A government bulletin recently issued shows that the American farm laborer is paid from four to six times the wages of his class in Europe. Well, he possibly and probably earns four to six times as much for his employer. Leaving out the relative difference in the market values of farm products here and in Europe, there is the question of methods of work. In most European countries women work in the fields, and where women work wages are low. But the European man laborer does not work like the American farmhand. In comparison American farm work is one continuous hustle, with longer hours and more physical wear and tear. Supply and demand regulate the price of farm labor, and the supply is often cut into by the demand for hands in the higher paid public and corporation work of construction, which in this era seems to be endless.

A mere schoolboy in the prairie country has proved that farming pays better than clerking if it is only done the right way. Last year this lad made a record which has just found its way into farming statistics. On a half acre he reaped a profit of $141 for a little less than one month's actual labor. Even if he lost a month's time by bad weather, sickness, etc., he still made big wages. It would not be wise for every ambitious boy to turn farmer, but no boy whose ambition runs that way should be deterred by the cry of the croakers that "Farming doesn't pay."

The figures recently issued showing the wealth of the United States are significant. American money is now the soundest and most desirable in the world. Of perhaps greater significance is the fact that this wealth, amounting to $187,739,000,000 is almost twenty-five times as large as it was two generations ago. While our population was growing five times the wealth was growing twenty-five times. And there is no falling off in sight.

It must be "America first," without so much as a mental reservation, else the loyalty given to this nation would not be pure and unadulterated. Without this unity of thought and allegiance among all the citizens of this nation the very foundations would be in danger, and if wreck should come to Europe the ruins would engulf all alike.

The president of Johns Hopkins university says that a large percentage of students nowadays do not aim at a "well defined career or profession." What, then, would he call the aim to be "a college graduate?"

While nineteen American countries were discussing the best means for establishing closer relationships nearly as many European countries were shooting their old relationships to pieces.

Statistics show that the wealth of the United States amounts to $1,965 for each man, woman and child in the land. Those who've not "got theirs" need no statistics to prove it.

An optimist might recognise possibilities in Mexico just now, but to recognise any such thing as government there would require a high power dose of diplomatic hasheesh.

GOOD TIMBER NEEDED

It is fair to assume that before long the political megaphones will be pressed into service to sound the praises of mayoralty candidates, and then will come the issues or planks upon which the candidates may stand and the reasons why the candidates should be elected. It was ever thus, and in the meantime and before the campaign opens it is well for the people to bear in mind that they have a right to make an issue of at least one point—a vital point to the progress and prosperity of the city, which is, the tax rate.

Without a doubt Fulton should have a lower tax rate unless it is to suffer in industry and trade. The city's tax rate, among the highest in the country, is a drawback in more ways than one. Combined with rentals that are not high in comparison with other towns of the same size, the tax rate has a depressing effect upon real estate and upon the men who have the means at hand to increase their holdings by building new and modern homes as investments. While it is not recorded that this city's tax rate has had the effect of scaring away industries that might have been acquired, without a doubt if a reduction of four or five dollars per thousand could be realized, Fulton would be placed fairly abreast of the average New York State city, and then an industry seeking admission would have little to offer in the way of an excuse for not coming here.

It is unfair, perhaps, to make comparisons with the larger cities of the State, for instance in Syracuse where the tax rate in 1914 was $17.20, because the same argument holds good in the matter of conducting a city government under the old or present plan as in the conduct of a large and a small manufacturing plant, which is that it costs proportionately less to make goods in a large than a small plant. To a certain extent the prosecution of improvements in a large and a small town will work out to the same end. Economists tell us that large public plants may be maintained at a lower rate per capita, because there are more people, than small public plants, as a general rule.

If Fulton could have a tax rate of about $24 on one side of the river and $25 on the other, and the ability to get efficiency for the money expended in public improvements and public works, there would be little left in the way of argument against the desirability of the town in normal times as a place for making investments.

It should make little difference to the average Fultonian whether the next mayoralty candidate is Republican or Democrat, but it should concern him whether the man he is to vote for has the foresight that is necessary to back up what is to be learned by hindsight—that one thing standing in the way of progress is the high tax rate prevailing in this city.

THE PENALTY

The moment you begin to rise, you will find a lot of little men with toy guns, taking a shot at you. It was so in the very beginning, and it will always be so. Ah, men! You are a funny bunch.

The very instant the world begins to recognize something of substantial worth in your business, in your trademark product, in you, yourself, every pushcart, every sweatshop on both sides of Broadway, will begin to imitate this article of value—will try to steal your prominence.

The very fact that men make an attempt to destroy or discount, the mere truth that would-be competitors try to substitute nothing for something, should be proof of the presence of superiority.

Competition never attempts to counterfeit a failure.

When men fail to equal or to excel other men in methods, they resort to the trick of the regular robber: they throw the light in the innocent victim's eyes, and get away with it. They advertise so persistently and so cleverly that people are actually fooled for a time. But only for a time.

There is always a price you must pay for being the best, and this price is envy, slander, abuse.

It's a commercial compliment to be the target of competition—to be the measure for all other estimates.

The booster of any business is usually rated as one who has a reason to boost. The knocker of any business is known to have a reason, and in this reason lies the real boost.—Silent Partner.

STATE POLITICAL COMMENT

Two plans now before the constitutional convention seek to secure the unification of the State's diverse system of public institutions. One introduced by Mr. Mandeville provides for a board of nine members to be appointed by the Governor and another by Mr. Hinman provides for a board of nine to be elected by the Legislature as are the members of the state board of regents. Both plans contemplate the selection of a single administrative head, like the commissioner of education, to follow out the general plan that has worked successfully in the state's educational system. It is argued that such a board would prevent political interference with state institutions and put an end to existing conflicts of authority among the numerous administrative boards and departments, now charged with this work by abolishing them.

* * *

Money, time and labor will be saved by every factory, mine and quarry proprietor in the state by the consolidation of the workmen's compensation commission and the state department of labor into the new industrial commission. This consolidation obviates the necessity for duplicate reports on all accidents which were required under the old system. Last year about 6000 employers were required to make two reports on 90,000 accidents. From now one one report will suffice.

* * *

A proposal before the committee on state finance of the constitutional convention authorizes the Legislature to bond the state to the amount of not more than $3,000,000 in any one year for charitable and correctional institutions, without requiring the submission of the question to the people. Homer Folks who appeared in favor of the proposal said that $23,700,000 was needed for these institutions to relieve overcrowding. There is opposition to the convention to permitting the legislature to issue bonds without the referendum now required by the constitution and, a year ago, a bill submitted by Senator Frawley to bond the State for $25,000,000 for state institutions was defeated in the Assembly chiefly on the ground that the state's system of institution control was distributed among so many departments that most of the money would be wasted without accomplishing the purposes for which it was intended.

* * *

George W. Wickersham, former United States Attorney General, Hon. D. Cady Herrick, former Justice of the Supreme Court and William D. Guthrie of New York, one of the best authorities on constitutional law in the state appeared before the suffrage committee of the constitutional convention and argued in favor of the restoration of the party convention for the nomination of state officers. Messrs. Wickersham and Guthrie are Republicans and Judge Herrick is an up-state Democrat. General Wickersham declared that there never was any reason why the right of the people to assemble in convention should have been impaired and said that the legislature had responded to "a momentary, mistaken sentiment due to a misconception of certain wrongs." Mr. Guthrie said: "In New York city certainly nominations under the direct primary plan with its secret methods are frequently the result of whispers over a telephone or political wire pulling and there is no way of fixing responsibility for the bosses shift this readily to the people's shoulders under the system now in vogue." No one appeared in opposition.

* * *

There is an increasingly large number of people who find lucrative occupation telling other people how to live and how to spend their money, particularly how to spend their money.

Opinions

Extend It

The movement for the "safe and sane 4th," which seems to have gotten the country pretty well under control, might now be left to take care of itself, for it is one of those movements that will make its own way once it is understood and the people realize what a saving of life and limb it provides.

Why not turn attention now to a safe and sane Sunday? This day has come to be the great accident day of each week, and the toll of death and injury the country over on any summer Sunday probably would not fall below that of the most insanely celebrated 4th of July ever recorded. Public highways are strewn with Sunday wrecks, and to keep them company are tales of drownings, boat disasters and similar occurences.—Utica Observer.

Submarine Torpedoes Submarine

With the announcement by the Italian admiralty that the submarine Medusa has been torpedoed by an Austrian submarine no details are given. A submarine on the surface of the sea presents a target that would tempt the commander of an enemy boat who was looking through his periscope for a victim. The submarine on the surface can be seen from a distance of several miles, although she is not as high out of the water as a destroyer. It may be supposed that the Medusa was caught napping, in which case she could not submerge in time to escape a torpedo travelling through the water from any range at which one can be used effectively.

The attack may have been made when the Medusa was proceeding slowly or was almost stationary. A torpedo launched at a range of 7000 yards moves toward its target at the rate of 45 knots an hour, so that it is not necessary to be very close to a submarine lying on the surface to hit and sink it. In a calm sea, such as may often be found in the Adriatic, a successful attack upon one submarine by another should be practicable. But we fancy that there will not be many Medusas put out of action by other undersea boats in the war in Europe. There is plenty of room even in the Adriatic for the hide and seek tactics of submarine warfare.—N.Y. Sun.

The Work of the Advertising Clubs

Ten thousand advertising men, swarming into Chicago, filling the hotel lobbies with their presence and the pulpits with their oratory, make up an impressive exhibit of an industry still in its youth.

The world has learned that "it pays to advertise," and it is the United States that has taught the lesson. For modern advertising, systematic, attractive, persistent, efficint and truthful had its origin in this country and has reached its highest development here.

So thorough has it been demonstrated that no good proposition properly advertised can possibly fail, that there has been created a belief that any business proposition can be made a success by advertising, however worthless the article offered, or the business involved.

Unhappily in too many instances this immoral and indefensible theory has been upheld by the facts. The laughable play, which has held the stage for nearly a year, depicting the success of a pair of adventurers in creating, by advertising, a demand for soap at a dollar a cake which cost five cents, and is worth no more, is not so far from the truth as to arouse disbelief. But it is far, indeed, from the ethics of the new advertising which demands honesty and good faith of the advertiser.

It is already apparent that the Associated Advertising clubs, now in session in Chicago, intend to emphasize the fact that the higher the ethics of the advertising profession the better the results it may promise its clients.

CONTAINERS DO NOT COMPLY WITH LAW

Watertown.—City Sealer Frank E. Martell has discovered that a number of local dealers have been selling commodities in containers, which were not marked in accordance with the Brooks net weight container law. Practically all of these were put up by local manufacturers and while they bore a contents mark, the amount was qualified with the words "when packed."

The matter was taken up with the state superintendent of weights and measures, who has notified these manufacturers that the contents mark must bear no qualification, but must state the contents specifically.

On June 1 the section of the Brooks net weight law relative to wines, malt, spirituous and carbonated commodities became effective, making it necessary for all dealers in beverages and patent medicines containing these things to mark the net weight or measure of contents on the outside of the container. Sealer Martell will soon start an examination of the stocks of the drug stores, hotels, saloons and soda fountains to ascertain whether or not the law is being complied with. He stated that most of the local liquor dealers who bottled their own goods had not waited for the law to become effective, but had complied several months ago.

BUSINESS AND SHOPPERS
GUIDE

HARDWARE, ROOFING and JOBBING, FURNACES
Agent for Celebrated
Howard Furnace
J. H. MURPHY, W. Broadway

TAXI, AUTO TRANSFER AND TOURING CAR HIRE
Prompt Service, Night or Day
CHAS. MORRELL
Headquarters—The Clark
Phone 2597 Phone 15

PLAIN AND FANCY BAKESTUFFS
Try our Bakings
J. A. BORT BAKERY
219 Cayuga St.

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
Amateur Developing & Printing
Roll of 6 films and 6 prints, 30c.
Flash-Lights & Home Portraits
E. E. HENRY 210 Oak St.

TAXICAB AND TOURING CAR SERVICE
Small and large cars, careful drivers.
Fishing & outing parties a specialty.
WILSON & SCOTT
PHONE 4246
Stand at corner Cayuga and Second Streets

BYRON NEWTON
teacher of flute and piccolo.
Boehm and ordinary systems.
Phone Mrs. N. H. Haviland

WHEN YOU WANT
to move get
Hookway's Warehouse Van
of Syracuse; charges reasonable. Work guaranteed.
Phone 1114. 159c

SODA AND MINERAL WATERS
Made in Fulton. Best Extracts. Purity Guaranteed.
Delivery to any part of town.
A. J. THOMPSON
Phone 1542 112 Pratt St.

TIRE VULCANIZING
by Standard Steam Process
All Work Guaranteed.
B. L. COLE
Phone 2307 22 S. 1st St.

FOLEY'S RESTAURANT
"The Place to Eat."
Dinner 25c Supper Special 15c
Breakfast to order.
Sunday
Chicken Dinner a Specialty 35c

FORD TRACTOR TO BRING DOWN COST OF LIVING

Detroit.—Henry Ford has announced that after more than thirty years of toil he had perfected a motor tractor that will give the high cost of living its hardest blow yet.

"A tractor has been my ideal for many years," said Mr. Ford. "I have worked at it constantly. It is now ready and it means much."

The inventor asserts that the new farm implement, which will cost $200 or less, will reduce at least one-third the present cost of tilling the soil, will keep young men on the farms who will produce a greater amount of food, will give work to 25,000 men and will mean a boom in lake shipping.

Mr. Ford plans to build 1,000,000 tractors and 4,000,000 engines yearly. He says that operations on the buildings for the manufacture of the new machine will start at once and he expects to employ about 20,000 men when operations begin.

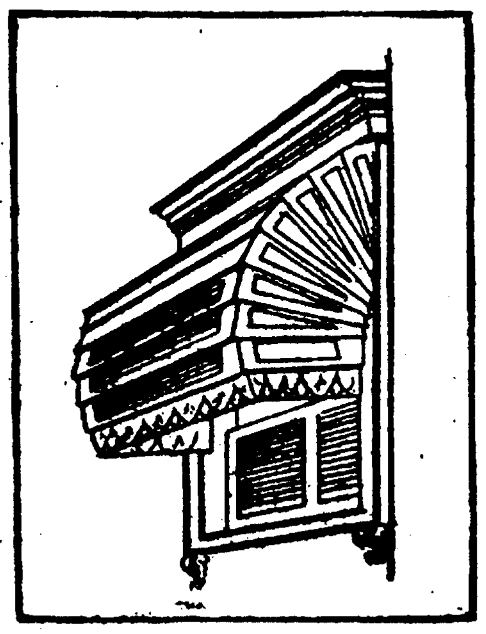
RICH BABIES TO HELP POOR LITTLE BROTHERS

New York.—John Jacob Astor, 6th, Cornelius N. Bliss, 3d, Adeline Havemeyer and others have issued an invitation to all babies who have a dollar to spare to become members of the New York Diet Kitchen Association, 1 West Thirty-fourth street. Their contributions will go toward helping children who are not so fortunate financially.

The organization seeks 1000 members, the $1000 received to be used to pay the salary for a year of one nurse, who will watch over the health of hundreds of babies. Contributions will be accepted by Miss Helen Wade, president of the Babies' Auxiliary, which now has 103 members.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Collapsible Metal Awning For Doors and Windows.



The disappearing awning for doors and windows, herewith illustrated, is designed as a more serviceable and durable substitute for those in general use. An additional advantage claimed is that when the new style awning is raised it entirely disappears and leaves the full opening of the door or window for the passage of air. With the use of awnings of fabric there is always a certain amount of the opening blocked off with the loose fabric of the shade. The new idea consists of metal forms shaped to collapse one within the other and all pivotally mounted at either side. Small perforations and slots made in the metal permit of the passage of the air without admitting the sunshine.

Chili Sauce, Oregon Style.

Five pounds ripe tomatoes, five medium sized onions, three large tart apples, one bunch celery, three green sweet peppers, one chili pepper, one-fourth tablespoonful each cloves, cinnamon, allspice, ginger; one tablespoonful ground mustard, one heaping tablespoonful salt, two tablespoonfuls brown sugar, one pint cider vinegar. Cook the tomatoes, run through a sieve or ricer to remove seeds; chop the onions, apples, celery and peppers fine, or, better yet, run them through the food grinder; add to the tomatoes, cook until well done. When nearly done add the other ingredients. Seal while hot.

Washing Knitted Shawls.

To wash knitted or crocheted shawls fold them as flat as possible and lay carefully in a pillow case, run through at intervals with basting thread to keep flat. Then they should be handled like other flannel or woolen goods. If washed separately observe the usual precautions for woolen goods, gently squeezing through the hands and keeping the suds and rinsing water of the same lukewarm temperature. Take out of pillow case, but do not hang knitted goods up to dry. Lay on a clean cloth in the sunshine.

Chocolate Pie.

Two eggs, one-half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate and two tablespoonfuls of flour. Mix together the flour, chocolate and sugar; then add the eggs and, lastly, one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water. Cook the mixture until thick, pour into a baked pastry shell and cover with a meringue made of the stiffly beaten white of an egg, one tablespoonful of sugar and a few drops of any preferred flavoring.

Rice and Pimentos.

A small can of pimentos, a cupful of rice, a cupful of grated cheese, two eggs, one and a half cupfuls of milk, salt and pepper to taste. Wash the rice and boil it in boiling salted water, then drain. Add the cheese, the pimentos, first having cut them in small pieces, the eggs which have been well beaten, the milk and the seasonings. Turn into a buttered fireproof dish and bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

Shaker Codfish.

Pare six medium sized potatoes and boil till soft with one-half pound of salt fish that has been soaked twelve hours or overnight. Drain off the water. Cut the potatoes into slices and pick the fish into small pieces. Add one cupful of thin cream and a piece of butter the size of an egg and let simmer. Season with salt to taste. Slice hard boiled eggs on top of the fish and potato, and over all pour a white sauce before serving.

Creamed Parsnips.

Select five good sized parsnips; pare and slice in half inch slices. Cook in plain water until tender; remove to a vegetable dish. Make a dressing of one-half cupful of milk, one-half cupful of cream, one level tablespoonful of butter, season with salt and paprika, pour over parsnips and serve.

Carrot Croquettes.

Boil until tender young carrots, put through the ricer. Add salt, a beaten egg and about half a cupful of breadcrumbs to two carrots, roll in beaten egg, then in breadcrumbs and fry in hot lard. Let drain on brown paper.

Mud Stains on Clothing.

Carbonate of soda will remove the most obstinate mud stains. Rub garment with a cloth or flannel dipped in the soda, then press well on the wrong side of the material with a warm iron.

YOUNG FOLKS CORNER

The Golden Touch.

Do you remember old King Midas, who was given the golden touch? And do you remember how he hurried into the garden and touched all the flowers, turning them to pure gold? And how happy he was till he tried to swallow a potato and it turned into a hot lump of gold in his throat? And until he kissed his little daughter and turned her into a golden image? Well, wasn't the golden touch hateful to him then? He cried and moaned till the fairy stranger told him how he might rid himself of it. I guess you remember how he plunged in the stream at the bottom of the garden as the fairy had told him to; how he filled his vase with its pure water and sprinkled it over his little daughter Marigold, so that she turned to warm flesh and blood again. Then you remember how he ran into the garden and sprinkled the rest upon the flowers, so that they turned from gold to their natural colors again.

But I don't believe anybody ever told you that he didn't have enough water for all of them, and in the corner of the garden he had to leave a whole cluster of them gold. And from that day to this that particular flower has always been golden. You can see it now, gleaming in the lanes and fields, and when you see the goldenrod just remember that it is King Midas' flower and that it has been gold ever since he touched it, years and thousands of years ago.

Soap Bubble Mixture.

A very great improvement over the ordinary soap and water suds for blowing bubbles is obtained by adding gum arabic and glycerin to the mixture. By so doing bubbles of greater beauty and durability are obtained, and they can also be blown to a much larger size. The glycerin increases the brilliancy of the bubbles as well as assisting in dislodging them from the pipe or tube, and the gum arabic gives them elasticity. In making this solution proceed as follows:

Into a pint of warm water shave finely a piece of strong brown laundry soap about an inch square. When this has thoroughly dissolved add a tablespoonful of gum arabic and stir until melted. Then put in a tablespoonful of glycerin and lastly a quart of cold water. Hot water is necessary to dissolve the various ingredients, but unless cold water is added the bubbles expand too rapidly in the blowing and thus break. Shake the completed solution well, strain through a fine cloth and it is ready for use, though suds that stand for a day or two are usually better than those freshly made.

A Wise Emperor.

It is related of a Chinese emperor that on being told that his enemies had revolted in one of his distant provinces he said to his officers, "Come; follow me, and we will quickly destroy them."

He marched forward, and when they saw him and his great army the rebels submitted and laid down their arms.

His army expected him to have all the rebels put to death, but instead he treated the captives with the greatest kindness and humanity and in many cases set them free. Great indignation with his conduct was felt in court circles, and at last his chief officer approached him and said:

"Sire, is this the way your majesty fulfills your promise? Your royal word was given that you would destroy all your enemies, and instead you have pardoned them and even set some free."

"But I have kept my word," said the emperor. "I promised to destroy my enemies. Do you not see that these men are no longer my enemies? I have made them my friends."

The One Day Hike.

There is no troop or patrol of scouts which cannot get somewhere worth hiking to, wherever it may be located. If you don't know where to go the interest is all the more. Make a hike of exploration. For the one day trip you need not give much attention to outfitting and such matters as occupy so much space in the manuals and handbooks. The most important thing of all is a comfortable pair of shoes, no matter how old, and enough clothes to keep you warm. Also the first day out in the season don't try for any records. A gait of about two and a half or three miles an hour will be plenty and take you anywhere you want to go. Sore feet and aching muscles tend to discourage novitiate scouts.

Hidden Sewing Articles.

You will need less eggs the more you beat the cake.

Charles plays pool as well as billiards.

You look chic, Otto, notwithstanding your negligee shirt.

You must look sharp in shooting game.

Say "ta-ta," Percy, and I'll know you'll mean thank you.

Answer.—Needles, spool, cotton, pin, tape.

Riddle and Answer.

Why is a woman deformed when she is mending her stockings? Because her hands are where her feet should be.

I Love Little Robin.

I love little Robin,
His breast is so red;
He sings me a song
When I wake in my bed.

He sings me a song
When it's time for goodnight,
And that's when I hurry
My candle to light.
—Philadelphia Record.

Appropriate Veil For the June Bride

INSTEAD of the usual long veil covering the face and worn with a bridal wreath of orange blossoms the veil here pictured is one which is appropriate for the June bride and one which will become any youthful face. It is a small veil hanging from a dainty Dutch cap of silk voile and shadow lace. The absence of the long veil is replaced by the bride's train, which hangs from the shoulders and is made of long, sweeping folds of silk voile edged with shadow lace. It is also caught here and there with small white silk roses. The gown proper is developed in white nocturn satin, the skirt arranged in draperies across the front and lifted bustle fashion in back, revealing a petticoat of lace falling gracefully about the ankles. The corsage and short tunic are of net and lace, and white silk roses finish the sleeves and outline the corsage.

• • •

The color schemes that are interesting milliners this season are very lovely. The dress artists of today strive—and with much success—to create models which will enhance the natural beauty of the wearers.

ANNA MAY.

SUMMER HATS.

This Season's Girl Will Wear Flimsy and Perishable Creations.

"Trifles light as air," the new hats of the summer girl might be designated. Very pretty and becoming, they are trimmed gayly with fruits and roses and other flowers. The ones shown

TWO DAINTY HATS.

